De'ta Upsilon Fraternity brothers were pleased with the large turn-out and response for the organizational meeting of the fraternity's Sisterhood, now making plans for activities and projects. Coordinator for the group is Charles Gainey.

Into their second week as pledges, the Iota Pledge Class inducted an additional prospective brother, Steven Warren, alias "Keg", on Sunday, Sept. 26. During the next six weeks, the pledge class will be preparing themselves for the responsibilities of a brother.

Activities for the future include a costume party scheduled for Saturday, Oct. 30, at alumnus Will Hebben's house, with first prize being awarded for most original costume. Several brothers will be leaving Friday, Oct. 8, for the Georgia Tech/Tennessee football game to be held at Georgia Tech on Saturday.

Regular meetings of Delta Upsilon Fraternity are held on Sunday nights at 8:00 p.m. either in the university library or at one of the brother's homes. Contact Hidy McEachern or Frank Wallenwaber, 256-2797.

Rowing Club Makes Ready to Cast Off

"Get Ready! Ready all ROW!" One these sharp commands, the crews burst from the starting line pulling their twelve-foot oars through the water at the rate of forty or more strokes per minute. The sixty-foot boat is brought from a dead stop to better than twelve miles and hour in less than half a minute.

With the coxswain shouting for more power and each oarsman straining at the limit of his strength, the nine-man crew propels the sleek craft over the middle-distance of the 200 meters at a rate of 30 to 35 strokes per minute. At the finish line (about six minutes later) the smoothly synchronized boatload of athletes collapses into disarray as they yield to exhaustion. That is the crew race--one of the oldest intercollegiate athletic events.

To prepare for that six-minute race, an oarsman must train for months. He must train to drive himself to the outer edge of his endurance; he must train to master the skills required to handle the oar effectively; and he must train to cope with the uncertainty of the weather. Then, boated with seven other oarsmen and a coxswain, he gives up his identity and merges with them to form the crew. It is the crew that rows the race and wins or loses, not the individual.

The UNC-W rowing club is about to begin its training after several years of struggling to acquire the necessary facilities and equipment. Its 900 sq. ft. boathouse is nearing completion on the Intracoastal Waterway. Donated materials from local businesses, time from friends and members of the club, and funds from the Student Government have gone into its construction.

Club members swing their hammers and push their paint rollers feverishly to complete the boathouse in time for the October arrival of their new needlenosed racing shell. As a result of a special grant from the SGA, the club will soon have its first new boat. Ordered from George Pocock Racing Shells, Inc. of Seattle, Washington, the shell is just over 60 feet long, less than two feet wide, and is hand-built with cedar framing and a tough Kevlar skin. Developed by DuPont, the Kevlar fibers are used in bullet-proof vests. Used with epoxy they are now molded to form a light, yet durable seamless skin for racing shells.

Training will begin ashore with meetings to discuss the tradition, terminology, and equipment of rowing. The fundamental rowing skills will be developed in a rowing simulator on land, and in a barge on the water. Once the fundamentals have been developed, the oarsmen will step into the eight-oared racing shell and begin the task of building a competitive crew.

Officers of the club include Tom Raines, President; Clay Fairley, vice-president; Tom Massingale, secretary-treasurer; Phil Rackley, Chuck Ballow, and Bob Browning, crew leaders. Advisor and coach of the club is John Anderson. If you are looking for a club with a purpose, the Rowing Club invites you to join.

Pi Kappa Phi Sponsors Bloodmobile

Kenan Auditorium has always been known for the performances which have graced its stages in years past.

The Pi Kappa Phi fraternity at UNC-W has also always been known for its performances--though of a slightly different variety.

On October 6, these two local institutions will come together in what will be a new experience for UNC-W and the Wilmington community. The Red Cross bloodmobile will hold its first of three college visits this academic year at Kenan Auditorium October 6, from 9:30 a.m. until 3:00 p.m. sponsored by the Pi Kappa Phi fraternity.

Phil Hargrove, Pi Kappa Phi coordinator for the bloodmobile visit, is excited about the fraternity sponsorship of an event which benefits the community more than the college.

"We've been competing with the other frats on campus for recognition, and doing this kind of project is a good way to gain that recognition and also get into the public eye," Phil stated.

The fraternity members and their little sisters are taking the responsibility for recruiting the majority of donors from the UNC-W community. Phil and others are canvassing the students, faculty, and administration, taking donor pledges and making up a master appointment schedule for the bloodmobile visit.

Leslie Emerson, Associate Regional Director of Donor Resources Development for the Red Cross in Wilmington, is very pleased with the cooperation of the fraternity.

"College bloodmobiles have been just great in recruiting all been just great in recruiting well over 100 donors for this drive; their work is an indication of the changing emphasis among college fraternities towards working in the local community."

Mrs. Emerson and the Pi Kappas stressed that this visit, although primarily for college donors, is definitely open to the public. "We've had many, many people coming by our office on South 16th Street ready to donate blood. Since our donor room there won't be ready until next April due to necessary renovations, we hope that those who can find time on October 6, will come out to this bloodmobile and donate.

Many different products have trod the boards at Kenan Auditorium bringing enjoyment to many. On October 6, the sound of blood donors lining up to give the gift of life will be heard for the first time. As Phil Hargrove concluded,

"Most people are kind of chicken about giving blood when you first approach them, but when you tell them about the coverage they receive and the good their donation can do . . . well, they line right up." Mike Alward Pi Kappa Phi

S*E*X

S*E*X had its first meeting Thursday, Sept. 23 where it was decided that all future meetings would be held on Sundays at 7:00 p.m. at the Good Wood Tavern. The next meeting will be at 7:00 p.m. Sunday, October 10. All people interested in The Supernatural, Science-Fiction, or anything not strictly everyday are welcome to attend.

WEEKLY SPECIAL

Doctors Give $ Transfusion to Congress

by Jack Anderson
with Joe Spear

Copyright 1976, United Feature Syndicate, Inc.

WASHINGTON—The nation's doctors have raised a million-dollar campaign chest and they are passing out contributions to key members of Congress who will help them fight national health insurance.

The maximum contribution that the law allows is $5,000. The doctors have given $5,000 donations to Sens. Lloyd Bentsen, a Texas Democrat; James Buckley, the New York conservative; Harry Byrd, the Virginia independent; and Robert Taft, an Ohio Republican.

The doctors would also like to defeat senators who support health insurance programs. The doctors have contributed $5,000, for example, to Republican candidate S.I. Hayakawa, who is running against Sen. John Tunney in California.

On the House side, the doctors have passed out $5,000 contributions to three conservative Republicans, Reps. Don Clancy of Ohio, Steve Symms of Idaho and William Wampler of Virginia. Slightly smaller $4,900 contributions have gone to two New York Republicans, Norman Lent and John Wyder.

In some places, the local doctors have given additional money, which adds up to more than the $5,000 limit. The American Medical Association contends that its local chapters are independent and, therefore, may make independent contributions. But the Federal Elections Commission is quietly examining this practice.

One final note. Among all these fat contributions, our reporters came across one paltry $25 contribution from the doctors. This miserly donation was made by Rep. Wayne Hays. The date on the contribution forms was May 28, 1976. That was just five days after the Elizabeth Ray scandal broke.

AFRICAN REPORT: The Central Intelligence Agency has reported that only U.S. intervention can save the white Rhodesian regime in Africa. The secret CIA assessment warns that bloodshed would mount and that the black insurgent forces would prevail.

The CIA predicts that by 1978 the situation would be "totally hopeless" for the white regime. There is also a danger that Cuban troops, operating out of Mozambique, would join in the fighting.

These were the harsh facts that Secretary of State Henry Kissinger laid before Rhodesia's Prime Minister Ian Smith. Our sources say that after the formal discussions Kissinger took Smith aside for a private, ten-minute talk. Kissinger reportedly told him bluntly that his white regime would be overthrown within two years.

Presumably, this was the reason that Smith agreed to a voluntary transfer of power to the black majority.

CUSTERS' PARDON: Six weeks ago, we told the story of Peter Custers in this column. He is a Dutch newsman who studied in this country. He was arrested by the Bangladesh government and secluded for nine months in a jail cell. His family and friends feared for his life.

They told us that the Bangladesh authorities were trying to force him to identify his news sources and to testify against them. The authorities insisted, however, that he had been conspiring with left-wing elements to overthrow the government.

Custers' friends asked us to intervene to save his life. They thought we might have some influence with the authorities because our reporting helped win Bangladesh its independence in 1971. So we made a quiet, personal appeal to the Bangladesh government to free the imprisoned newsman.

Later, we were depressed to learn that Custers had been convicted and sentenced to a long prison term. But then a top Bangladesh official called to inform us that Custers had received a pardon. Our direct appeal, he said, had swung the decision.

CAMPAIGN STRATEGY: In the Carter camp, strategists are considering a ploy that could make Watergate a major campaign issue. They may call upon President Ford to release all the White House tapes of his private conversations with his predecessor, Richard Nixon.

Ford could hardly refuse without leaving the impression that he had something to hide. The private conversations between Richard Nixon and Gerald Ford, on the other hand, could be embarrassing.

The Democrats, therefore, may soon be demanding the Ford-Nixon tapes. They think there is a way to force the tapes into the open. They might raise the possibility that Ford made an advance deal to pardon Nixon.

on. The President has strongly denied this. But the Democrats might argue that the best evidence would be the Ford-Nixon tapes.

ISLAND DISPUTE: For years now, Great Britain and Argentina have been fighting over possession of a small group of islands off the Argentine coast. The English call them the Falkland Islands. The Argentines refer to them as the Malvinas Islands.

It's a sensitive subject among the Argentines. One day, the Argentine Ambassador visited the State Department and saw a map referring to the islands by their British name, the Falklands. So he pulled out a pen, scratched out the name, and changed them to the Malvinas Islands.

DULL DEBATES: The first Gerald Ford-Jimmy Carter debate is past. The reactions are in. The debate was dull. The public was bored.

The White House debate supervisor, Mike Duval, has met with President Ford to discuss the strategy for the next debate. Our White House sources tell us that Duval will advise the President to ignore the reverts and stick to the same strategy.

Duval doesn't want the President to be fiery or flashy. He would rather that the President project a solid, substantive image. In short, Duval would like Ford to appear like the President, not like a candidate.

SHORTS FROM CPS

COLLEGE

IMITATIONS DON'T MAKE IT: CADAVERS MUST BE REAL

(CPS)—Those who are uncertain about what to do with their bodies after they have been used and abused can now rest in peace. The University of Nebraska Medical Center and Omaha's Creighton University needs about 110 cadavers a year and feel that they do not get as much mileage on an imitation as they do with the real thing.

Their shortage of cadavers has forced five or six students to use one body at a time. The corpses are used for the same things at both the dental and medical schools.

To donate one's body, the donor's signature and the signatures of two witnesses are required. Donors are assured that their corpses will be treated with respect.

DO CO-ED DORMS LEAD TO IMPULSIVE-DEVIANT BEHAVIOR?

(CPS)—Does co-ed dorm living mess up your head? Yes, no and sort of, according to two Stanford University psychiatrists who reported their findings in Human Behavior magazine.

The pair quizzed 900 freshmen students at a large public school in a small town where most students live in university housing. They found that overall, co-ed dorms are more pleasant, relaxed, friendly, enjoyable and that the atmosphere promotes greater personal growth than single sex living arrangements.

They discovered men who opt for co-ed living have higher academic and career goals, who like to drink beer and who think of themselves as easy going and "on top of the world."

Women in co-ed housing, however, were found to be quite different than their female classmates stuck in women-only dorms. Women who lived under the same roof as men had higher academic aspirations, took part in more social and cultural activities and engaged in more of what the psychiatrists call "impulsive-deviant behavior," which means they occasionally break the school rules and drink hard liquor.

These women also had a better self image than other university first year women, they described themselves as "easygoing", they were less likely to view themselves as cautious and they placed more emphasis on friendship, independence and variety in new activities. They also placed less emphasis on traditional heterosexual dating.

One year later the biggest change for students living in co-ed dorms was a drop in career goals. Fewer students still wanted to get that doctorate degree that had seemed so important several months earlier and they looked with more disfavor on demanding careers than did other students who didn't live in co-ed housing.

The two psychiatrists also report that students from co-ed dorms made more trips to the student health center, indicating higher levels of stress in co-ed living. For the women, however, it might not have been all that stressful; 21 percent of them said they were visiting the health center for birth control information.

A New Face - A New Service

By Charlie Suppler

In room 205-G of the Alderman Building, there is a desk behind which sits a lady named Sandra Harkin. Mrs. Harkin directs the Department of Career Planning and Placement and she works with great dedication.

The office itself deals with students planning their careers and finding work in their chosen fields after graduation. In fact, the service is open to everyone whether they be present students or past graduates of UNC-W. The office also carries a listing of part time positions available in various fields and is in the process of developing a Career Information Resource Center so that students may study the varieties and descriptions of positions in their chosen career. Mrs. Harkin urges the students to take advantage of both the Career Information Resource Center, when it is completed, and the part-time job listings because she believes that it is important for a student to be aware ahead of time of what his (of her) major entails and part-time work in that field is a good start.

Mrs. Harkin, herself, comes to us from Chapel Hill with training as a sociologist, with her major interests being in occupations and Professions and Organizational Theory. This also includes work in Medical Sociology.

Prior to Chapel Hill, Mrs.

Harkin lived in Southern California and, before that, Indiana, where she was born.

She has a husband, Roy, who is the Chairman of the Education Department here at UNC-W; two children, Andrea, and Michael; and a multitude of pets, the more permanent ones being two dogs, a cat and a quantity of fish.

In spite of the rigors of having a family and pets, Mrs. Harkin manages to keep the Career Planning and Placement Office open from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m.

She considers her work a worthwhile challenge and, with an air of intense eagerness, says she is looking forward to building on what has been begun.

a column of consumer protection

SUCCESS STORIES FROM THE STOMACH FRONT

In the beginning there were no meal tickets. Socrates called Plato in for dinner when they had finished with the problem of evil, apprentice and blacksmith sat down to mutton together after a hard day at the forge and, in many traditions, food accepted from the hand of the spiritual master carried a special blessing. For those students, part of the learning was in the eating; when you could not only think, but work, sleep and eat like a philosopher or smith, then you had learned a real secret.

Today's student faces a different problem of evil as she stares down the jaws of the third BLT in a week as it sits grinning in unison with its brothers on a stainless steel counter. If you've experienced one of these hypnotic interludes, you've probably tried everything except clicking your heels together and repeating "There's no place like home" in the hope of conjuring a decent meal. (This doesn't work either, by the way.) Sometimes the food isn't even so bad, it's just that you don't have much to say about it.

More and more students across the country, however, have begun to demand some say in where their cafeteria food dollars go and more freedom of choice than the ability to pick red jello instead of green. We've visited this particular peristalsis of student consumer protection several times only to find the groaning deep but disorganized.

Help is on the way. In the next few months, the Food Action Center in Washington will publish the most complete and useful guide to relieving cafeteria indigestion ever produced: Food On Campus: A Recipe for Action. The group, which is a project of the National Student Association Foundation, has worked on the book for almost a year, researching the food service scene, developing practical strategies for students and ferreting out success stories from schools across the country. The prepublication draft I saw contains inspiring tales of students turning the tables on their self-proclaimed feeders.

For instance, Glassboro State in New Jersey found that it had just built a half million dollar cafeteria but could only get one-seventh of its students to eat there. After a parade of outside food service contractors put the campus stomach in knots, the student government took over operation of the service itself this fall with a pledge to offer unlimited seconds and accommodate students' special needs.

Another student-run food venture at the University of Maryland has already been through the wringer of resistance in the two years since it was started. First the student food collective started an outdoor lunch co-op that provided low-cost sandwiches. Worried that the co-op would jeopardize cafeteria sales, the administration outlawed it and the co-op went underground, appearing in different locations each day to sell food, just one step ahead of the campus police.

The next year, under student pressure, the administration allowed the group to set up a legal lunch "counter" in the student union, but with the restriction that it could only sell snack food in order not to compete with the cafeteria. As the co-op began to draw 600-800 students per day, the group then waged a pitched battle to offer a full line of inexpensive groceries. After petitions failed to move the powers that be, the students staged a number of mass rallies and demonstrations. Finally, the co-op began to plot a building takeover with the knowledge that the administration had planted a spy in the group. With a flare for the dramatic, the "tactical committee" secretly met and, for the benefit of the spy, began to talk about seige equipment and gas masks. The next day the Chancellor called to say, "I think we'll be able to come to an agreement." This fall the co-op reopened with all the groceries it wanted to offer.

In contrast to the turmoil over student stomach control in Maryland, Oberlin College in Ohio has operated student-run housing and dining co-ops since 1950. The co-ops are cheaper than traditional dorms, the food is better, and this year there are special natural foods and kosher dining co-ops. Similar enterprises have been running without a fuss for several years at Purdue, Brown and the University of Michigan.

Another successful project at the State University of New York at Albany dealt with the other end of the feeding chain; wasted food. There students developed a mass composting scheme that, when operating at peak capacity, will produce 150 tons of soil conditioner a year and greatly reduce the university's dependence on expensive commercial fertilizers.

But somehow, no matter how well students do at feeding themselves, they still encounter opposition from those who want to spoon-feed them—either physically or mentally. For instance, at Case Western Reserve in Ohio, the contract between the university and the food service contractor stipulates that no student will ever see a copy of the document.

And, notes the Food Action Center's book, student cafeteria workers at most schools take home the minimum wage while their full-time counterparts often make twice as much per hour with a full boat of paid vacations, insurance and other fringe benefits.

Beyond reporting the good news and the bad news, the center's book will provide

"how-to" tools to help students evaluate their own diet, check the nutritional content of their cafeteria's meal plan, initiate vegetarian and other special options, put better snacks in vending machines and start their own "fast food" alternatives to a deadening diet of Big Macs.

The book even provides tips on negotiating a food service contract along with corporate profiles of the largest food service companies to start enterprising reporters on their way. (For instance, a student newspaper at Georgetown University in Washington discovered that the chairman and vice chairman of the food service contractor were donating heavily to the school; not exactly an incentive to open the contract bidding.)

For more information about A Recipe For Action and the Food Action Center's other work (including their free newsletter), send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to the group c/o USNSA, 2115 'S' St., NW, Washington, DC 20008.

CHIP CARTER VISITS UNC-W

By Bobby Parker

James Earl (Chip) Carter, III, son of Democratic presidential candidate Jimmy Carter, visited the UNC-W campus last Tuesday with an appearance in King Auditorium at approximately 1:50 p.m. Carter answered questions from local news media and students about his father's campaign and later went on a handshaking walk through the campus. A 26-year-old student at Georgia State University in Atlanta, Carter is working toward a triple major in political science, history and sociology. He has campaigned in 48 states across the nation.

The younger Carter reflects much of his father, the former governor of Georgia, in speaking style and mannerisms. He befriended the audience with several lighthearted jokes about the campaign while defending his father's proposals for the presidential office. Carter was flanked on the podium by several local Democratic candidates and office holders, including Wilmington Mayor Ben Halterman, New Hanover County Commission Chairman Peter Davis, state senator Bill Smith, and UNC-W student body president, Duffy Robinson. Robinson introduced Carter to the audience. In his opening statement, Carter cited that "it's time for an openness in Washington." He charged his father's Republican opponent, President Gerald Ford, with holding few press conferences since he took office, noting that the last such conference was closed to cameras and audio equipment. "I think my father has proven that he'll give an interview to anybody," Carter said to a round of laughter. This was an apparent reference to Jimmy Carter's highly publicized interview with Playboy magazine which created considerable objections from many quarters about the frankness of the candidate's answers. Chip Carter went on to say that the president who his father most admires was Harry Truman, because of that president's honesty. Carter also said that Truman was the last president to balance the federal budget and pledged that his father "will be the next president to balance the budget."

Carter proclaimed that "the candidate who works the hardest is going to win," and accused President Ford of failing to take his campaign to the people.

In response to one reporter's question about his father's alleged "fuzziness" on many issues, the younger Carter stated, "I don't think it's an issue anymore," adding that the televised presidential debates have clarified and will continue to clarify his father's positions on the major issues.

Carter also said that when he began campaigning on behalf of his father, he was "given a seven-inch thick stack of issue papers" to support his denial of the "fuzziness" allegations.

When asked if his father had supported Senator George McGovern, the 1972 Democratic nominee, Carter replied that Governor Carter had worked for the senator. But when one questioner asked if the Governor's commitment to full employment did not parallel with McGovern's guaranteed annual income plan, Carter said that the two concepts were somewhat different.

Dole Campaigns in Wilmington; Helms, Holshouser at His Side

By Bobby Parker

Republican vice-presidential candidate Robert Dole campaigned in Wilmington last Wednesday, opening the local county headquarters of the Republican Party and speaking before a meeting of the Wilmington Civitan Club. Dole arrived in the city shortly before 12:00 noon and was greeted at the downtown headquarters by approximately 200 supporters. Several local and state Republican politicians arrived before Dole at the headquarters and were on hand to share the podium with the Kansas senator. Senator Jessie Helms and Governor Jim Holshouser, who were on opposite ends of the Ford-Reagan intra-party struggle only months earlier, were among those who gave remarks to the crowd before Dole's arrival. Republican gubernatorial nominee David Flaherty was also present. Governor Holshouser criticized Democratic presidential nominee Jimmy Carter as a man who "unfortunately comes from our part of the country" but who is not in line with the political beliefs of most of the people of the South. He declared that "people are waking up and realizing that they have a choice" and cited that Carter was tied to the liberal Democratic platform.

Senator Helms introduced his legislative colleague, describing Dole as "one of my best friends in the . . . Senate . . . and one of the most able senators . . . (who) understands the value of faith." Helms also labeled Dole a "great American" and said "his word is his bond."

As Dole took the microphone, he answered Helms' compliment by saying that "I married a girl from North Carolina. That's what makes me a great American." He then set out to claim that Carter was falling behind in southern states and that the Ford-Dole ticket was running ahead of the Democrats in many other states.

Dole cited a poll which he said had been reported to him by Sen. Helms that gave the President a 53-37 per cent advantage in North Carolina over Carter. Helms later

Are You the Next Mr. UNC-W?

Feeling down and depressed? Are you caught in a rut and need a bit of change and excitement? Have we got something for you! It's the second Mr. UNC-W contest. That's right, just what you want and need.

We know all you handsome guys out there are just dying to enter. It's a secret wish, right? Well, now's your chance. Entry forms must be turned into the Seahawk office by November 1, so you don't have much time.

All contestants will be required to appear in dress suits, bathing suits, and to participate in a talent and interview segment. There's nothing hard about it, and nothing special required of you. It's all for a good time and a pleasurable evening.

Oh—you're worried about that talent. Have you ever tried playing a tune with a comb and a piece of paper? How about the old chewing gum-walking trick? Now there's a few ideas for you. Of course, there's always those special few who can sing, tap dance, or play an instrument—that's great—we'd love to have you.

The pageant will be held on Thursday, Nov. 11. It's at Kenan Auditorium at 7:30 p.m. If you can't be a contestant, you're still welcome to come by and enjoy the evening.

Prizes are numerous. They include: 2 kegs of beer from J.W. Jackson, dinner for two at Angelo's, a wall clock from Maxwell Home Furnishings, a gift from the UNC-W bookstore, men's clothing, free hair styling, and much more.

You can either enter independently or be sponsored by your club, fraternity, department, or whatever. Just think what it would be like to snuggle up to two kegs of Budweiser. Oh, joy . . .

Fill out the entry form on page 10.

Only UNC-W students, faculty and staff, please.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

"NOT THE PHYSICAL EDUCATION DEPARTMENT"

To: Editor of the SEAHAWK
As a member of the Physical Education Department and Faculty Advisor to the Cheerleaders, I would like to express the views of the Physical Education Department regarding the recent advertisement in the Seahawk concerning male cheerleaders. These views are as follows:

1. The ad was composed by a student interested in promoting cheerleading on our campus--NOT THE PHYSICAL EDUCATION DEPT.

2. This ad was not seen by anyone in the Physical Education Department before it was printed in the SEAHAWK.

3. The ad WAS NOT APPROVED by the cheerleader advisor. Departmental approval is required for any correspondence.

After having spoken with the student who wrote the ad, it is my opinion that no offense was intended in any way. However,

I do believe that this very unfortunate situation could have easily been avoided had the wording of the ad been more carefully chosen, and the policy of Departmental approval been adhered to. Mrs. Jane F. Batson, Assistant Professor, Dept. of Physical Education

Editor's Note: The ad in question was repeated in the last issue simply as an editorial cartoon and was not submitted or approved by Mrs. Batson.

"My Ideals Are My Ideals"

To The Editor:

Printed words, pictures and drawings do not affect my attitude. My ideals are my ideals.

I feel sorrow for the poor, superimpressible people whose minds are so malleable that their ideals are reversed or radically changed by what they see. I realize that in a learning situation, as attending school is, people's minds must be very open which makes them susceptible to ideas and thoughts not their own, which are alien to their ideals. However, they should perceive that everything a person is exposed to is subject to their discretion, regardless of the area covered by the material viewed.

Intelligence is, partly, the ability to view and understand the thoughts and ideas of others even though they are contrary to the viewer's opinions.

Pub Policy

This week the Pub initiated a late afternoon and evening checkout procedure on all games in the recreation area. This move was taken in order to insure that all students will have equal access to these games at certain periods. Throughout the late afternoon and evening, an attendant will man the checkout counter located at the southern entrance to the recreation area. Persons desiring to use the foosball, billiards or ping-pong tables may do so by presenting their validated UNC-W I.D. to the counter attendant. If the games are already in use, students may sign the waiting list at the checkout counter. There is a thirty minute time limit on all tables when the waiting list is in effect.

In the past, students have been able to use the tables only by challenging the winner of the previous game. The challenge system discourages amateurs from using the facilities, allows the better players to monopolize the tables and offers non-students access to a service provided by student funds. Under the checkout system, non-students may use the facilities only as guests of UNC-W students.

The challenge system will continue during the day and on weekends. The checkout counter is presently operating from 5:30 p.m. until 10:30 p.m. Monday through Thursday and 5:30 p.m. until 11:30 p.m. on Fridays. By October 25, these hours will be extended to begin at 2:30 p.m. daily Monday through Friday.

All of the games in the Pub are provided by student fees and are available at no charge. This includes a variety of games that may be used within the Pub or checked out over night from the checkout counter. So if you've wanted to shoot a little pool, but didn't feel like challenging Minnesota Fats to get a table, grab your I.D. and a friend and mosey on up to the checkout counter!

The Seahawk

The SEAHAWK, the official newspaper of UNC-W students, is published weekly for Wednesday distribution. All articles should be in the Seahawk office by five on Friday.

Graduate Fellowships

WASHINGTON, D.C.--The National Research Council has again been called upon to advise the National Science Foundation in the selection of candidates for the Foundation's program of Graduate Fellowships. Panels of eminent scientists appointed by the National Research Council will evaluate qualifications of applicants. Final selection will be made by the Foundation, with awards to be announced on March 15, 1977.

Initial NSF Graduate Fellowship awards are intended for students at or near the beginning of their graduate study. Those eligible to apply will be college seniors or first-year graduate students this Fall. Subject to the availability of funds, new fellowships awarded in the Spring of 1977 will be for periods of three years, the second and third years contingent on certification to the Foundation by the fellowship institution of the student's satisfactory progress toward an advanced degree in science.

These fellowships will be awarded for study or work leading to master's or doctoral degrees in the mathematical, physical, medical, biological, engineering, and social sciences, and in the history and philosophy of science. Awards will not be made in clinical, education, or business fields, in history or social work, for work leading to medical, dental, law, or public health degrees, or for study in joint science-professional degree programs. Applicants must be citizens of the United States, and will be judged solely on the basis of ability. The annual stipend for Graduate Fellowships will be $3,900 for a twelve-month tenure with no dependency allowances.

Applicants will be required to take the Graduate Record Examinations designed to test aptitude and scientific achievement. The examinations, administered by the Educational Testing Service, will be given on December 11, 1976 at designated centers throughout the United States and in certain foreign countries.

The deadline date for the submission of applications for NSF Graduate Fellowships is December 1, 1976. Further information and application materials may be obtained from the Fellowship Office, National Research Council, 2101 Constitution Avenue, Washington, D.C., 20418.

Dole Makes You Realize It's Time for a Change

The national media has been telling us all along; but since I am accustomed to taking only about half of what I hear seriously, I never would have believed it. But I found out for myself last week when Bob Dole visited Wilmington. I'm no great fan of the senator from Kansas, as our own Jesse Helms professed to be when introducing the lower half of the ticket he so admantly fought against in August. I don't collect autographs or handshakes, so I didn't go for that reason. Actually, I thought I just might get on the tube next to Barbara Walters that night. (I didn't.) Ms. Walters or no, I did listen to the man while I was there. What I heard was a lot of partisan rhetoric that one might expect at a gathering at the local Republican headquarters.

What I didn't believe that I've heard so much about these past weeks is the size and frequency of Mr. Dole's hatchet.

Dole was slashing at Carter and the Democrats from start to finish using carefully selected issues that were no doubt chosen for this North Carolina audience, such as the right-to-work laws. Our state has such a law, which says that workers can not be required to join labor unions.

Dole charged that Carter supports the repeal of the section of the Taft-Hartley Act which allows states to implement right-to-work laws. Actually Carter has said that he will leave that decision to the Congress, pledging to sign a legislative repeal, but not actively seeking a repeal.

Dole furthered his allegations on the labor "issue" by claiming that George Meany, of all persons, was "running" the Democratic campaign. I would have liked to hear his explanation of that out-of-the-blue charge; I doubt he would have had a valid one.

Watching Mr. Ford on camera and reading about him in the press, he sometimes comes across as a more moderate politician than he really is. But Dole's rhetoric is a frontal reminder of just how extremely conservative a Ford-Dole Administration would be.

Calling for an above-all commitment of military strength, absolutely no consideration of a pardon for draft evaders, and a strong stand against gun control, Dole puts the Republican ticket in the mainstream of conservative philosophy.

But our country needs a commitment to the betterment of the lives of our people without the defense zealots who would put our every resource into the Pentagon budget. We need to finally heal the scars of Vietnam nightmare with a pardon of draft evaders. And we most urgently need to reduce the stockpile of firearms that is building up within the nation's citizenry by the day.

These are only three needs that the Republican conservatism does not meet. Unemployment relief, health care, law reform and executive reorganization are others that the Democrats have targeted. Robert Dole is not very far from the extremity of Ronald Reagan and Jesse Helms. That's where conservatism becomes dangerous in a national leader. If Dole's rhetoric is indeed indicative of another four years of Republican leadership, the it is truly time for a change.

DEBATE SCORECARD

By Bobby Parker

The second of the Great(?) Debates is now over, and it has proved a much more revealing and exciting round than the first. Both candidates came out swinging, and when it was all over, Gerald Ford had not achieved the big success that had been expected.

In fact, Mr. Ford gave perhaps the biggest blow to his campaign since Ronald Reagan. Defending the Helsinki Agreement, which critics say acknowledges the Soviet dominance of Eastern Europe, Ford stated that the nations of that region are not dominated by the Soviet Union.

"There is no Soviet domination of Eastern Europe, and there never will be under a Ford administration," the President flatly declared.

It is unbelievable that an American president could have made such a statement that is by all known accounts erroneous. For sanity's sake, we must believe that Mr. Ford knows better. But how could he be so wrapped up in the debate as to make such a catastrophic blunder?

That wasn't Ford's only mistake, either. Defending his policy toward U.S. firms who have participated in the Arab boycott against Israel, Mr. Ford announced that the Commerce Department would release a list of those companies. No one was more surprised to hear this than Commerce officials, who later "clarified" the statement to apply to future reports of such participation.

Democrat Jimmy Carter had Ford on the defensive most of the night—not surprising since it was Mr. Ford's policies they were arguing about. Carter's strongest points were made when he urged a return to the strong ties with our allies rather than the two-way arms race between the US and the USSR, and when he attacked our widespread sale of arms around the world.

Carter's big fumbles were his attack of our intervention in world problems that don't directly concern us (he couldn't argue with the success of Kissinger's mediations) and on the Mayaguez incident (he had not read the recent Congressional report).

Here is my analysis on the debate:
(points given on a 10-point scale).

On Ford-Kissinger Policies Carter - 9; Ford - 8

Ford cited the good results of his (Kissinger's) policies, such as the Middle East statement and moves toward arms agreements with the Soviet Union.

Carter's main objection—the style of Kissinger—was a well-presented point that sits well with a large segment of Americans. He called for the involvement of Congress and less secrecy.

On Relations with the Soviet Union Carter - 7; Ford - 0

Ford couldn't resist a political jab when he tried to make Carter look anti-Catholic by saying that since the Democrat criticized the Helsinki agreement, he was also criticizing the Pope since the Vatican City had signed the document.

This was the area of Ford's big blunder, saying that the Soviet Union did not dominate Eastern Europe. He did not defend the Helsinki agreement very well (though he did note that 35 nations had signed it), but defended his progress on the arms limitation agreement with the USSR quite well.

Carter said that we should not be so concerned about the two-way balance of power as with our relations with our traditional allies. However, when questioned about SALT progress, Carter erroneously charged that Ford had made "absolutely no progress." He seemed to avoid any direct comment on the USSR.

On Oil Embargo and Arab Boycott Carter - 8; Ford - 6

Carter took a firm position on an oil embargo, saying he would use economic power against Arab nations in the event of another embargo. He was adamant in his support for Israel against the Arab boycott.

Ford made his second big blunder, promising to release the names of US firms that are participating in the boycott, but later having to back down from that stand. However, he did score when he cited that the boycott had begun in 1952 and that he had first taken action toward fighting it.

On Defense Spending

Ford presented a good attack of Carter's proposed defense budget cuts, and Carter failed to effectively defend them. More debate about this issue was needed.

Carter - 5; Ford - 6

On Our Role in the World

Carter did well to cite a weakening of our world respect, but Ford countered well by saying that we had taken the lead in world peace, pointing out "case by case" intervention when asked to step in. However, Ford failed to cite the African situation which would have illustrated his point well since South Africa trusted the US to mediate the situation.

Carter slipped when he tried to link Ford with the secret intervention in Chile, which Ford had nothing to do with. Both men presented their ideas well about our relations with our traditional allies, Ford defending his past performance and Carter urging even more cooperation with a revitalized NATO. Carter scored when he cited that the US was becoming the "arsenal of the world."

He declared that a resolving of our domestic economic troubles would yield greater world respect, but when Ford cited that unemployment was always higher during peacetime, Carter blundered by saying that this conclusion was in line with Karl Marx's views on the capitalist system.

Carter - 3; Ford - 5

On the Mayaguez Incident

Carter showed poorly when he had to admit that he had not read the recent GAO report of the incident. Ford defended his actions and charged political motives behind the report, but with little support. Carter failed, however, to counter that the National Security Council had blocked publication of the report five months ago, which would have cancelled Ford's charge.

Carter - 4; Ford - 5

The Closing Remarks

Again this week, Carter made his best pitch in the closing remarks. He went back to the issue of our world respect, and related his vision for Africa. He reminded me of a preacher delivering an invocation, which can't hurt him.

Ford was much better than last time, citing his "experience and results" as his major attributes. He generally did well projecting a knowledgeable image, despite his previous errors.

Carter - 9; Ford - 8

Total Scores - Carter - 45; Ford - 38

Hawks Begin Comeback

Last issue, soccer coach Calvin Lane, commenting on his team's poor showing at that point, said "We still have the skill and the talent; all we need to do is put it all together." This past week, the Seahawks put it all together.

Exactly one week ago today, the UNC-W soccer team was 1-5 and facing a tough N.C. State team. To the surprise of everyone, the Wolfpack were upset 1-0 by a fired-up Seahawk squad.

"This was the best game we've played all year," stated Coach Lane, adding, "This was a big win. It gave our team the confidence it needed."

The Hawks goal was scored by Lenny Branson on a penalty kick with 25 minutes left. After this, the squad switched into a strong defensive pattern to protect their lead.

Branson. Vince Lindenschmidt, and Steve Paul played exceptionally well, controlling the middle of the field for most of the match. Tim Willette at goalie had a great afternoon, holding the powerful Wolfpack squad scoreless. Gene Borowski, an All-American selection last year at fullback, played, in the words of Coach Lane, "his best game of the year."

Next game for the Hawks was last Saturday, when they traveled to a very wet and very cold High Point. They took an early 1-0 lead on 25 yard shot by Gonzalo Rada. Ashley Dixon assisted on the play.

High Point tied it up with 10 minutes left in the half when a High Point player got the ball one-on-one against goalie Tim Willette. High Point scored again early in the second half when Willette slipped on the wet ground trying to block a shot.

Suddenly, the Seahawks came alive, and for the last 25 minutes of the game completely and totally dominated the event. Rada scored his second goal of the day at the 25:35 mark with an assist by Lenny Branson. The winning goal was scored by Gil Castella with 11 minutes left. Tom Buffington was credited with the assist. The Hawks also had several near scores during this period. "We could have had four or five goals," said Coach Lane.

Castella, coming off the bench to score the winning goal, was cited by Coach Lane as being a key factor in the win. Also playing extremely good were wings Jerry Rebert Tom Buffington, and Tim Grubbin. "Our halfback play was extremely well," commented Coach Lane. "In the High Point game, our forwards also began playing very aggressive ball."

The team, 3-5 at this writing, faced Pembroke yesterday at Brooks Field. Results of the match are not available at this writing. The Hawks travel to Durham next Tuesday to face Duke, then return UNC-W the 23rd to face ST. Andrews.

Sportlite: Rugby

Rugby is, in a word, different.

Everyone has their own various connotations of the sport. Some see it as a game of finesse and agility. Others see it as a knock-down drag-out brawl with no holds barred. Still others see it as a combination of soccer and football. Everyone would agree, though, that there's no other sport quite like rugby.

The legend of its beginning is in itself quite different from usual sports creations. In 1823, a soccer match was being played at Rugby School in England. One player became so frustrated at his inability to kick the ball that he picked up the soccer ball and began running downfield with it. Players on both sides tried to stop him, and thus the sport of rugby was born. Since then, rugby has grown into an international sport.

Rugby is also an amateur sport, despite pressures to do otherwise. There are only two places in the entire world where rugby is played professionally, and there it's just on a semi-pro basis.

Representing rugby in the Port City is the Cape Fear Rugby Club. Though only a year old, the club sponsors two male teams and one women's team. "We have many quality players," stated Junious Andrews, club secretary. "I think it's only a matter of time before we become one of the top teams in the state."

Many people are confused about the club and its teams. "The Cape Fear Rugby Club is a social club—just like a golf club or a tennis club," stated Andrews. "The club then sponsors the rugby teams, but no one has to play on the team to be a member of the club."

The club is a community organization, not a university one as some believe. This false belief occurs because all the club's matches are played at Brooks Field and almost a third of the club attends UNC-W.

According to Andrews, there are two types of players in the club; the veterans who always play well and the newcomers who have the skill but not the potential. Under the Veterans' Category Andrews placed Ray Funderburk and Mike Gowens, an art professor here at UNC-W. Strong newcomers include Jim Fisk and Gurney Huffman.

Anyone who has ever seen a rugby match will tell you it's a truly unique sports experience that is unforgettable. Check out the next rugby match (their schedule is posted all over campus and you'll see what we mean).

Lady Seahawks Score

Women's volleyball appears once again headed for the state playoffs.

Last week, the team faced N.C. Wesleyan and Atlantic Christian College in a trip-match, and downed both schools. The squad, however, did run into some problems. "Atlantic Christian wouldn't set up or spike the ball or anything," stated Coach Anne Kraft. "They'd just bump it back over the net to us." The Seahawks won the first game easily but were defeated by Atlantic Christian in the second game by their "bump routine." UNCW then went on to win the rubber game of the match to defeat Atlantic Christian.

Against Wesleyan, the Hawks ran into somewhat the same problem. Wesleyan used the same bumping method and this, combined with their strong serves, defeated Wilmington in the first game of the match. Undaunted, the Seahawks quickly made a change in their strategy taking the match with the final two games victorious.

While injuries have proved a problem with other sports squads, they been a major factor with volleyball. "We do have some injuries," said Coach Kraft, "but they're not so serious as to sideline any of the players."

Last night the squad traveled to Fayetteville to face Methodist in both jayvee and varsity matches.

Women's tennis scored their first win of the season here Friday against Atlantic Christian College, defeating them 6-3.

The Lady Seahawks impressively downed Atlantic Christian, winning two of the three matches and four of the six singles matches. Those winners in the singles matches were: Martha Richardson, number three seed; Brenda Kalevas, number four seed; Kim Canter, number five seed; and Patty Canter, number six seed. Number one seed Theresa Hege, even though losing her match, played exceptionally well, according to Coach Jane Batson.

Doubles play has always been somewhat of a minor problem for the Seahawks, up until now that is. The doubles team of Theresa Hege/Brenda Kalevas and Terry Kirby/Kim Canter both scored impressive victories in their matches.

Despite this victory, Coach Batson still remains cautious about the rest of the season. "We still have our toughest games ahead of us," said Coach Batson, "including Methodist who's got a super tennis program, on Friday."

As the season progresses, though, the team should become better. "Each game we play adds that experience to the team," continued Coach Batson. "We've got the potential, but are just lacking inter-collegiate experience."

Intramurals Open

The intramural program for the 1976-77 school year has gotten off to a fairly good start. Flag Football, the traditional opener for the intramural program, received 6 team entries this year. They include the Savages, Jocks, TKE, Dog Eyes, SAB and the Dormites, with the Jocks in command of a 3-0 record.

The Women's Flag Football program was to be a new addition to the activities offered for women this year, but it seemed to end before it began. Not enough interest was shown this year to form a league, but next year may be different.

Intramural Tennis has gotten a much greater response this year than in the past. There are 9 women participants and 33 men.

Winners' names will be posted on the intramural bulletin boards.

Any student carrying 5 or more semester hours may participate in the intramural program without cost. Please be sure to check the intramural bulletin boards located on the second floor of Hoggard Hall and in the gym for all notices concerning intramural information. If you have any questions stop by H-226 or call ext. 337 and talk with Mr. Dave Warner. Please be sure to notice the registration dates.

Math Problem

PROBLEM NO. 8

Suppose we have an ordinary checkerboard and a supply of dominoes, each of which is just the right size to cover two adjacent squares of the checkerboard. Then it is easy to cover the 64 squares of the checkerboard with 32 dominoes. Suppose we cut off two squares at diagonally opposite corners of the checkerboard. Is it possible to cover the remaining 62 squares with 31 dominoes? Why or why not?

RULES

1. First correct solution wins a prize.
2. Anyone who has not yet received a bachelor's degree is eligible to participate.
3. Solutions must be legibly written on 8 1/2" x 11" paper and must contain name and mailing address of solver.

4. Submit solutions to Math Department secretary and have her mark it with the time and date of submission.
5. All entries become the property of Pi Mu Epsilon.
6. As soon as winner is determined, announcement will be made by posting the winning solution in this space.
7. New contest begins two weeks from date on current problem sheet.

Frederic Storaska Returns With Program on Rape

The Student Union Program Board is proud to present Frederic Storaska and his program, "How To Say No To A Rapist And Survive." Mr. Storaska is a dynamic speaker, who presents an excellent program. The program will be held at 8:00 p.m. on October 22, 1976 in Kenan Auditorium. It is free to the public. The program is sponsored by the Student Union Program Board and the Campus Ministry.

SCHEDULE

Monday, October 18, 1976

1:07 p.m. - Arrival New Hanover Airport
2:30 - 4:00 p.m. - Seminar on Child Molestation, Room TBA
4:30 - 5:30 p.m. - Interview with W.C.N.U.
8:00 p.m. - Program Kenan Auditorium
Free to All

Frederic Storaska

Rape and assault are problems which we fail to talk about because realistically they are often gruesome and frightening when dealt with seriously. Unfortunately comments are often relegated to horrified gasps to chuckles of ininvolvement.

Mr. Storaska's approach is different. While stressing that rape is a horrendous crime, and that nothing justifies it, he abhors the usual dispensing of "quick tricks" (i.e., tear gas pens, keys between the fingers, blowing whistles, knee to the groin) that sometimes work, but often put the woman in even greater danger. Basic to his program is recognition of the human element, understanding the emotional make-up of both victim and assailant. His aim is the reduction of violence from the attacker.

Mr. Storaska has presented his rape-prevention program to literally hundreds of colleges, universities, and communities and has been asked to return by nearly 55 per cent of his sponsors. In addition more than 275 cases have been reported in which his program has prevented serious assault and even saved lives. Mr. Storaska established the National Rape and Assault Prevention Center in 1972 and from that successful venture organized the National Organization for the Prevention of Rape and Assault (NOPRA) inc. in 1974. He was the exclusive speaker on rape-prevention at the World Congress of Crime Prevention in May 1975. Storaska has also produced a film entitled "How to Say No to a Rapist and Survive" which is being shown in this area by the Wilmington Police Department and has been approved by the New Hanover Board of Education to be viewed by students in high schools on a voluntary basis with opportunity provided for parents to preview the film. He has also written a book by the same title.

People from every segment of the community are invited and urged to attend because the crime of rape and assault are not respectful of race, creed, social, economic, or intellectual status. Students are urged to come early since this program is open and free to the general public.

"The Prisoner"

Each week, V.I.C.E. presents a different episode of "The Prisoner" from 11:30 to 12:30 in the snack bar. This week's episode is "Checkmate."

Chess is a game of subtle moves, and the Prisoner wonders just what they are aimed at when invited to take part in an unusual game being played in the village.

The "Board" covers the whole of a courtyard. The chess pieces are human beings, their moves indicated by two men in charge, and the Prisoner takes his position as the Queen's pawn.

In such close proximity to the Queen, he is able to speak to her without attracting attention and, as the game progresses, he talks about the possibilities of escape.

Stars of Magic Revue

The fabulous Del Ray, along with five other outstanding magicians will star in a gigantic stage show, "Stars of Magic Revue," Friday, October 22, 1976, in Kenan Auditorium.

Curtain time is 8:00 p.m. for this extravaganza, and it promises fun, mystery and excitement for everyone.

Del Ray is an outstanding performer from the Cabaret and Nite club circuits of Las Vegas. He will be joined by Earl Canapp, "The Worlds Oldest Magician", who hails from Baltimore, Maryland, and Lynn Covey & Michelle, Wilmington's own Mr. Magic. The grandeur of stage illusions will be presented by Franklin & Company, from Winston-Salem, N.C., along with some expert manipulation of Conjurer Ron Conley of Myrtle Beach, and the Comedy antics of Raleigh's George Boivin. Magicians Teddy Mathews and William Faulkner fill out this star-studded lineup of talent.

The show is sponsored by the Lower Cape Fear Council for the Arts in cooperation with the Coastal Carolina Conjurers, and honors the Great American Mystifier, Harry Houdini, who died on October 21, 1926, and who is considered to have been one of the world's greatest magicians.

Tickets for this performance are available at Belk's, McGrath's, Henriksen's, Dolphin Book Store, and your Community Arts Center, Tree

Frog Records and Record World. Admission is $3 for adults, $2 for children.

Free magic wand certificates will be awarded to the first 200 children in attendance. There will also be a drawing for several magic kits by the Coastal Carolina Conjurers magic club.

STEELEYE SPAN

STEELEYE SPAN

ROCKET COTTAGE

CHRYSLIS CHR - 1123

For those of you who have never heard a Steeleye Span album, all I can say is that you do not know what you have missed. This band began in 1970 (in this country) by taking traditional ENGLISH FOLK songs and re-arranging them with a slight hint at rock.

Gradually, they have added more and more rock until their albums over the past three years have been as much of one as the other. That is why I call them the best folk-rock group from England.

Their popularity has boomed over the last three years to the point where their style of music has been picked up by several other groups. JACK THE LAD is one such group as is its forerunner, LINDISFARNE. But their biggest achievement is that they have taken many old traditional folk songs, which were slowly dying and fading away, and are bringing them back to life and to the ears of the new generations.

Steeleye Span's last album, ALL AROUND MY HAT gained them even more popularity in this country and rode high in the charts for several months. ROCKET COTTAGE is as good as MY HAT and with some luck will do even better. All but one cut on the album are traditional folk songs, done in a semi-rock style.

"London" opens the album and is about all the fine things the city has to offer. This puts the point of view of the album almost opposite that of MY HAT, for there we had "all the hard times of Old England."

Here we find "all the streets are paved with gold." As for the performance on the cut, all is fine but the end which gets a bit muted. It could be a little too heavy at the end.

A touch of the humor the group has is shown in the next cut, "The Bosnian Hornpipes." This is done with the vocals being the musical instruments. Quite well done.

"Orfeo" follows and continues with the elfish theme Steeleye Span often add to their albums. This cut is very well done and drifts from passage to passage. The excellent way the group works together is evident in cuts such as this one. The true magic of England's little people are in this cut.

Ending the side is a very interesting cut called "The Brown Girl." Maddy Prior makes the cut what it is due to her very good vocals. The song is a very good one too as it uses the old idea that fair skin was purity and darker skin was of an evil woman. This comes to light as the brown girl swears to dance on her lover's grave.

"Fighting For Strangers" opens side two and brings back the fears America is presently out of, war. The cut is the strangest song I have heard on a Steeleye Span album in the instruments used on the cut. This cut stands out more than any on the LP and is really haunting in its idea.

Following this is another very well done jig, for a Steeleye Span album is lost without one. It is at this point that it is known exactly how good the group's musicians are. "Sir James the Rose" is next and is a good cut in many ways, yet, it seems too long and repetitious.

Next is an American folk song, "Do Da" (is that the name of that song?) which is the most comical of any cut I have ever heard the group do. It begins with a German translation and ends with Maddy Prior as a old western saloon-gal.

Ending the album is a beautiful slow ballad, "The Drunkard." The music and vocals on this cut make it as unforgettable as "Fighting For Strangers" or "Orfeo" or any other Steeleye Span song. Yet, it stands out as one of the best ending cuts as I have heard on any album, as if it were written just for this spot.

To sum up: This is another great STEELEYE SPAN album. It is the type album you sit down and listen to and listen to and listen to. What more can I say but God save the Queen, and . . . thank you for STEELEYE SPAN. J.W.

FAITHFUL
TODD RUNDGREN
BEARSVILLE

There are two different groups of material on this latest recording by Philly's wonder-kind Todd. The first side is six songs from the 1965 to 1967 period of rock. On the other side is a new collection of Rundgren tunes more akin to his earlier material than the sonic drones that he has been composing of late.

You can't accuse Todd of not being ambitious. Almost note for note he has recreated some of the Sixties most technical tunes. We get two Beate numbers steeped in electronic maneuvering. It is interesting that Rundgren can record Strawberry Fields Forever by himself when the Beatles had to rely on Gorge Martin to record most of the original version. Beate fanatics will be amused with Todd's rendition of Rain. At the very end of the tune, Todd overdubs "I know what it is like to be dead," thus representing a third Beate tune. SHE SAID SHE SAID is Todd's reworking of Good Vibrations which has met with Brian Wilson's approval, who wrote the tune originally. There is a Hendrix, Dylan, and Yardbird number to round out side one. Only one problem exists with recording such faithful (get it?) versions. The originals still have the edge over the new ones so who wants them?

On the second side, most of the material is self-indulgent. Two cuts, Love Of The Common Man and Same Old Cliché stand out. Both are solid tunes in the Rock style that made I Saw The Light a hit. Overall, the album is a welcome change from Rundgren's cosmic noodling. Maybe next time, we will get an album full of just Rundgren originals like he used to do.

SPANISH CLUB

Come and live another life! All in one night! The Spanish Club invites prospective members to the first annual "Fiesta de la Luna, Luna" Saturday night, October 16, at 8:00. There will be Spanish food, drink and music. For information contact: Dr. Mount in the Dept. of Modern Languages, Patricio Morillo at 791-6084, or Dan Montanari in 419 Gallo-way Hall. The party is being held in order to promote Spanish and to attract new members to the Spanish Club. The Spanish Club met Thursday, October 7. Club officers were elected: Patricio A.

Professor Peter Caws of Hunter College, C.U.N.Y., will address a dinner meeting of the B.F. Hall Philosophy Society on Monday, October 18. The society will meet at Tuesday's Restaurant at 5:15 p.m. for dinner and the guest lecture afterwards. Students and faculty are cordially invited to attend.

Dr. Caws taught physics at Wilmington College during the summer of 1956 and the society is honored to invite him to return to UNC-W. He studied at London University (England) and Yale (Ph.D., 1956) and received a Guggenheim Fellowship and numerous awards. Dr. Caws is chairman of the philosophy department at Hunter College and chairman of the International Affairs Committee of the American Philosophical Association.

His contributions to scholarship have been very extensive. He has authored a book in the philosophy of science and was invited to write the article on scientific method for the Encyclopedia of Philosophy. He has served on two seminars on higher education sponsored by the National Academy of Arts and Sciences (published in Daedalus). Recently, he has published on structuralism in anthropology in the American Anthropologist (1974 and June 1976). His publications also include articles on semiotics (theory of signs) and literary theory.

Alpha Phi Omega

Hi, folks! We had a great picnic at Old Brunswick Town this past weekend. The picnic included Fun (playing throw the frisbees at some unlucky soul or girls keep the frisbees away from the guys), Food (fried chicken with all the fixings) and Fellowship (having ice fights and just being with good friends). As far as we know there were no casualties (except one torn shirt maybe!)

The Haunted House (next to the Wilmington Museum on Market Street) is still running strong. However, more volunteers can be used Tuesday through Thursday from 6 - 9 p.m. If you are interested see Steve Martin in room 112 Belk Hall.

The pledge class is in full swing now. They have finished their first test and are beginning plans for their project.

And speaking of projects, we've got a new one on the drawing board! Be at the meeting tonight.

See ya there!

Student Nurses

The local SNA held a meeting Monday, Oct. 4, 1976, to discuss plans for attending the state convention to be held in Asheville. There was a great turnout of freshmen nursing students, which we were very glad to see.

Plans were made to hold a Bake Sale at Long Leaf Mall, on Saturday, Oct. 16, 1976 at 10:00 a.m. until, to raise money to help us go to the state convention. We will be selling all kinds of home baked goodies, so if you dorm students miss your mom's brownies, come try ours!

Last Saturday, Oct. 9, 1976, Nancy Jackson, Bek Gibson, and Debra Lewis attended the State Board Meeting in Raleigh. The senior nursing students were interested in hearing about what goes on as they will be taking their state Board Examinations next year after graduation to become Registered Nurses.

The next SNA meeting will be Oct. 18, 1976. Meanwhile, come out to the Mall on the 16th and help us get to the State Convention.

Fledgling

TO ALL FLEDGLING ADVERTISING STAFF: There will be an important meeting on Thursday, Oct. 14 at 10:30 a.m. in the Fledgling Office.

ANYONE ELSE interested in advertising for the yearbook should attend this meeting or contact Eric McLamb or Linda Houghton in the Fledgling office.

Republicans Meeting

Republicans unite! There will be an organizational meeting for the purpose of forming a campus Republican club tonight (Wednesday) at 6:30 p.m. in the Good Wood Tavern. The tavern is located downstairs in the student services building (the pub.)

Formation of the club will allow students to become actively involved in the fall campaign, learn about practical politics, and gain a voice in the future of the party. As a member of the Young Republican Federation, our chapter will be able to send a delegation to the YFR convention.

All full time students who are members of the Republican party are invited. Come on out and work for your party and your nation.

Interested students who cannot come to tonight's meeting should contact Ray Warren (791-6263) or Greta Lint (791-2989).

Senate Votes on Charters, Discusses Consumer Office

by Bobby Parker

The Student Senate met in regular session on Thursday night with only 10 of the 17 senators present, barely exceeding a quorum of 9 members necessary for the legislative body to conduct business. Several matters were discussed, including charters for new campus organizations and a proposed SGA office of consumer affairs.

The newly elected Freshman senators were present but were not inaugurated because student courts Chief Justice Leonard Hutchins failed to appear at the meeting. The chief justice has by tradition sworn in all new senators but several senators, as well as Associate Justice Frances Jackson and SGA President Duffy Robinson, offered the opinion that this duty could be performed by any member of the student court system. Vice-president Paul Laird, presiding over the meeting, decided to defer the inaugurations to check the legitimacy of that opinion.

President Robinson was recognized for his president's report and immediately expressed his displeasure at the low voter turnout in the recent SGA elections. Robinson solicited that this was the lowest election turnout that he had ever heard of at any of the other campuses of the UNC system.

"I think it's apparent to everyone... that this voting is absolutely horrendous," Robinson stated. "We (SGA leaders) have to get out and educate the people... that they have a privilege and responsibility" to vote.

Robinson then criticized the Senate for failing to act directly on the proposed executive salary, which the Senate had sent as a referendum to the students. He said that the Senate, which represents "100 percent of the students" had allowed a "small segment" of the student body decide the matter, and indicated that this was not consistent with the best interest of the student body.

Sophomore Vice-president Ray Warren was then called upon to report on his committee's investigation into the feasibility of the creation of a campus office of consumer affairs. Warren stated that the committee had asked students at random, discussed the matter with Student Affairs Director

Dr. William Malloy and the Wilmington Police Department, and had placed an article in the SEAHAWK requesting comment, but that the investigation had not revealed a sufficient need for the consumer office.

However, several students present indicated a desire for further investigation of the matter. Among them was Sophomore President Karin Whaley who suggested that a consumer office on campus that could be used by townspeople as well as students might serve to bring the University closer to the citizens of Wilmington.

Senator Carol Raines then reported on her investigation of the proposed disposal of typing equipment in the SEAHAWK office that is no longer use. She said the most feasible solution would be to sell the machines as scrap, but several senators wished to add the stipulation that all university departments would be given access to the equipment before it is sold.

Senator Clay Fairley presented five club requests for charters which included the Computing Club, Recreation Majors Club, Bahai Club, Senter Sidis Society and Latter Day Saints Student Association. The Computing Club and the Senter Sidis Society were approved with little debate. However the Recreation Majors Club was contested because of a provision in the club's constitution which calls for closed meetings. President Robinson said that this may be a direct violation of the SGA constitution. The request for charter was rejected.

The other two clubs, Bahai Club and Latter Day Saints Student Association, were the focus of much debate over the question of whether the Senate should become involved in chartering religious organizations. In the end, a roll call vote on these requests rejected the charters for the two clubs.

Senator Fairley read a letter from Julius Metts which pointed out that the provisions for religious freedom in the US Constitution should set an example for the Student Senate to charter these groups and all other religious organizations. Sophomore Vice-president Warren, however, noted that these groups promote one specific religion and, argued the separation of church and state as a basis for rejecting the charters.

A representative of the Bahai Club, Austin Bowden, appealed to the Senate to recognize his club, comparing it to the existing B. Frank Hall Philosophy and Religion Society which is recognized by the Senate. He stated that the purpose of the organization was the "examination of human values" and that their intent was "not to get money from student government."

Fairley moved that the request for charter of the Bahai Club be approved and Warren asked for a roll call vote. The vote was yes-Bobby McQueen, Tom Raines, Joanne Gentry, and Clay Fairley; no- Scott Olson, Karin Whaley, Ray Warren, Carol Raines, Tommy Wiggins, and Mark Hedrick.

Operating on the same arguments, the Senate also rejected a request for charter from the Latter Day Saints Student Association. A motion was made to reject the charter and a roll call vote was tallied thus:

yes-McQueen, Wiggins, C. Raines, Hedrick, Olson, Whaley, and Warren; Fairley, T. Raines, and Gentry.

Sophomore Vice-President W Warren also offered a constitutional amendment that would provide for weekly Senate meetings rather than meetings every two weeks. Warren was advised that any constitutional change would have to go before the student body in the form of a referendum.

Those senators who were absent from Thursday's meeting: Greta Lint (excused), Cindy Buxton, Dawn Brickley (excused), Terese Hege, Tommy Koonitz, Bob Browning, and Leonard Sibley.

A special session was called by Vice-Pres. Laird for next Thurs. at 7:30 in room 218 of the Chemistry Building. All students who are interested are invited to attend this and all Senate meetings.

Vampire: The body of a dead person believed to come from the grave at night and suck the blood of persons asleep.

Well, that's how Daniel Webster (c/o Webster's Seventh New Collegiate Dictionary) describes a creature that has managed to wriggle into almost every culture known. Vampires have been found everywhere. As a matter of fact, they existed even in the days of Adam. The vampire of whom I speak is Lilith, supposedly Adam's first wife. Legend has it that when God created Eve, Lilith, for the purpose of revenging Eve to conceive Cain, brother and murderer of Abel. Lilith then vanished, to return later as a cat which drew the breath from small children and preyed on those who travelled lonely roads. When she chooses a woman's form, she is tall, silent, and lovely with long, dark hair worn loosely. Even though vampires are a part of our culture (Barnabas Collins, for example), people can be quite surprised to see one that looks authentic. I know I was surprised.

I was rummaging around in my refrigerator and happened to glance up through my window at the basketball court and woods beyond.

What I saw was either a vampire or somebody with a very odd taste in clothing. He was standing beside a tree at the edge of the woods, dressed in nineteenth century formal and looking as natural as could be. Well, I shook my head, looked again, and of course he was gone. I knew I was sober and I was wearing my glasses so there were two explanations I couldn't use. I was a trifle shaken.

Looking back, though, I think it was only the light playing tricks on me.

I hope it was.

By the way, if you have any questions about imaginary creatures, strange occurrences, or anything else along those lines, I'll be glad to try and answer them.

Just send your questions to this newspaper.

(This article is a new idea for a regular column in the SEAHAWK. Interested? Let us know your comments.)

YEARBOOK PICTURES

Attention, Students! Student pictures will be taken Monday, November 8 through Friday, November 19. In order to ensure a more efficient process, appointments will be required this year. Appointments can be made in the Fledgling Office (upstairs in the Pub) Monday through Friday in the afternoons. At that time, those persons (seniors, commuters, etc.) who will need their yearbooks mailed to them can fill out mailing labels and prospective graduates can fill out Senior Information forms. Subscriptions will also be taken. It will be necessary this year to charge a subscription rate of $3.00 per book. This not only provides an accurate number of yearbooks to order but also contributes to a finer edition.

welfare and work" a Carter administration would place more emphasis on putting people back to work rather than adding to welfare payrolls, Carter added. He said that any program to reduce unemployment must be targeted at the most depressed segments of the population such as youth and urban dwellers, and noted that the Humphrey-Hawkins full employment bill endorsed by the Democratic platform has been revised from its original form to include such provisions.

As to his father's plans for a reorganization of the executive branch of the federal government, Carter stated that in order to put such a plan into effect, all government agencies would be required to justify their function to continue in existence.

Questioned about his father's proposal to create two new federal agencies—a separate department of education and a national consumer agency—Carter said that these plans were not inconsistent with his father's proposed reduction of government bureaucracy. He added that the government needs these two new agencies to make its services more efficient.

Carter was asked whether his father's proposal for a balanced budget coupled with provisions in the Democratic platform that would seem to necessitate an increase in government spending was an inconsistent pairing. He conceded that "you can't have a balanced budget while increasing spending," and said that any new programs would be phased in gradually as the budget permits.

He added that with the planned increase of employment, more tax revenues would be generated to cover the increased spending.

After leaving Wilmington, Carter headed for Tuscon, Arizona, to continue his campaign effort. The question and answer session ended at 2:15 p.m.

stated that this poll was conducted by the same firm which predicted his victory of a traditionally Democratic senate seat in 1972.

The vice-presidential aspirant then moved to attack Carter's "waffly" position on America's defense posture. He said that the Democrat's proposed defense spending cuts would dangerously weaken our defense program.

"We've got to be number one in the world for one reason—that reason is peace," Dole proclaimed.

A former chairman of the Republican National Committee during the Nixon administration, Dole accused Carter of trying to "appease" the liberals of his party with "good politics." He said that the Democrat was "trying to have it both ways," citing Carter's stand on Amnesty for draft evaders.

Dole emphatically announced that under a Ford-Dole administration, "there will be no blanket amnesty, no blanket pardon, (and) no blanket clemency." He also declared that "we've got to get our priorities right in this country" and not open negotiations with the government of Vietnam until we are guaranteed information about those still missing in action.

Dole accused Carter and his vice-presidential running mate, Senator Walter Mondale, of "getting out their hatchets" in the campaign and said that Carter puts his ambition "ahead of everything else."

Citing Carter's lack of experience in foreign policy, Dole said the former Georgia governor can make mistakes about anything that affects his family, but that foreign affairs "is one place he can't make a mistake."

Dole elaborated that Carter could apologize for comments about former President Lyndon Johnson and the Rev. Billy Graham (referring to remarks made by Carter's son, Jeff, about Mr. Graham) and for the frankness of Carter's recent interview with Playboy magazine. But Dole added that he could not call a country and apologize for erroneous remarks, saying that "America will pay for his (foreign policy) mistakes."

Furthering his remarks about Carter's criticism of Johnson, Dole said "I doubt a man's judgement... who can always judge somebody else."

Dole then tied the interests of big labor to the Democratic ticket, asserting that Carter, Mondale, and AFL-CIO President George Meany were sharing that ticket. Meany "runs that campaign," Dole said, as

SWINE FLU VACCINE

The Student Affairs Office has recently been informed that the swine flu vaccine will not be available through the Student Health Services on campus. Instead, all students, faculty and staff who desire to participate in the vaccine program should secure the vaccination at the New Hanover County Health Department or through private physicians.

The vaccination is administered completely free of charge at the Health Department; however, some local physicians have indicated that while the vaccine itself is free there is a charge for an office visit or for administering the shot.

he pointed to their proposal to repeal the law that allows right-to-work laws in several states, including North Carolina.

The Democratic platform's provision for the registration and control of all handguns also came under attack from Dole. He noted that Sen. Mondale had been a leading spokesman for gun control.

Summing up the contrasts of the two candidates, Dole called for a "balance in government" and declared that "we're talking about a philosophy," rather than a party. He called North Carolina and Kansas "philosophical neighbors" and urged Democrats and Independents as well to join behind the Republican ticket.

Of President Ford, Dole said he "projects the leadership that America needs," and added "let's look ahead with President Ford."

Dole walked through the streets of downtown Wilmington shaking hands and later toured the battleship USS North Carolina. He spoke to the Civitan Club at the Wilmington Hilton and was scheduled to depart at 2:45 p.m.

"WHO'S WHO" NOMINATIONS

Nominations for the 1976-77 publication of Who's Who Among Students in American Universities and Colleges are now being solicited.

Qualifications include upperclassmen whose academic standing, participation in extracurricular activities and campus and community service are decidedly above average.

Nominations may be submitted by students, faculty or administrators. Each name submitted should be accompanied by a brief biographical sketch emphasizing especially the qualifications of leadership, scholarship and service.

Time is of the utmost importance. The nominations should be turned in to the Office of Student Affairs by Friday, October 15, 1976.

ARTIST COMPETITION

RALEIGH, N.C.—The North Carolina Symphony, the nation's newest major orchestra, announces its 1977 Young Artist Competition to be held January 7-9, 1977. Violinists, cellists, and pianists are invited to compete for prizes totaling $3200 which will be awarded in the names of Kathleen and Joseph M. Bryan of Greensboro. The top award in each division (i.e. strings-violin and cello-and piano) is $1000 in cash the opportunity to perform as soloist with the North Carolina Symphony during its 1977-78 season.

Auditions are open to young instrumentalists who have not reached the age of 30 by January 7, 1977. Each must be a citizen of the United States or be a foreign student studying here. Special cash awards also will be given to the best entrant in each division from North Carolina.

A panel of distinguished musicians, headed by John Gosling, Artistic Director and Conductor of the North Carolina Symphony, will serve as judges.

Preliminary auditions are scheduled for January 7 and 8 in Hill Hall on the campus of the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. Final auditions, which are open to the public at 7:30 p.m. on January 9, will be held in Raleigh Memorial Auditorium, the Symphony's permanent home.

Application deadline for the Bryan Awards is November 15, 1976.

For complete details and application forms, contact Charles Horton, Director of Education, North Carolina Symphony, P.O. Box 28026, Raleigh, N.C., 27611, or phone (919)829-2750.

Pin Back Your Ears and Shed Those Pounds

(CPS)—Got an unusual craving you want stopped? Dr. Lester Sacks can help you and all he wants to do is staple your ear.

Sacks, a general practitioner from Los Angeles who has studied acupuncture, fires the staples into patients' ears with a special gun. When the patients start feeling the need for that certain fix, he or she just give the staple a little wriggle. Presto! The need disappears.

In the three years Sacks has been stapling ears, various patients have shed countless pounds of needless flab, cut dozens of cigarettes from their daily intake and halt their drug abuse. Of 200 heroin addicts who took his treatment, Sacks reports 100 kicked the habit and none suffered the ugly pains of withdrawal.

Like acupuncture, "staple-puncture" has so far eluded all attempts to figure it out. Sacks says "staple-puncture" works best for people wishing to lose 15 to 25 pounds and adds patients must be prepared to work for themselves. "If you're doing it for fun and not really need it, you can't expect it to work," he warns.

Student Bikers End 10,000 Mile Trek

(CPS)—They fought off thieves, hepatitis, fascists and 54 flat tires, but at long last, two Chicago students have reached Buenos Aires—by bicycle.

The two, Jack Foreman, 25, and Grant Wagner, 23, both English Lit majors at the University of Chicago, rolled out the Windy City nearly three years ago and recently pulled into the Argentine capital after peddling 10,000 miles. "We did it because we wanted to see the world," they said after the trip was over.

Their journey was largely uneventful, they say, despite the bout with hepatitis and a run-in with Argentina's steel-booted army who took the pair for leftist guerrillas.

Their strangest encounter came in Vera Cruz, Mexico, where they were resting at the home of a local cafe owner. There Wagner's $240 French bike mysteriously vanished from

DEAN BANS FRITZ AND MARLON

(CPS)—The banning of two popular X-rated films is causing the Boyce Campus of Allegheny County Community College in Pennsylvania to split into two camps. The dean of students has taken a rock-hard stand against the wishes of the student body who wish to view the films.

The films in question, LAST TANGO IN PARIS and FRITZ THE CAT, were released in 1972 with an X-rating. Many students and some faculty members feel that dean is equating 'X' with hard-core pornography. The dean said of her decision, "In my judgement, the showing of X-rated movies on campus is not part of our function as an educational institution supported by tax dollars."

Petitions signed by more than 300 students disagree with that decision. The petition requests that the movies, picked by the student union board and paid for by student fees, be shown without any further interference by administrators.

PASS / FAIL CLASSES

by Bobby Parker
There are many arguments for and against the idea of pass/fail courses. Proponents of this concept usually cite that it would encourage students to venture from courses that are required for a degree in their chosen major. Opponents generally argue that a multi-grade system (i.e., A, B, C, D, F) more precisely reflects the performance of a student.

According to Dr. Daniel Plyler, Dean of Academic Affairs, the question of pass/fail courses came before the UNC-W curriculum committee only a few years ago. At that time, however, Dr. Plyler said that there was very vocal opposition within that committee and the faculty as a whole.

The curriculum committee is comprised of faculty members and two student representatives.

The proposal that was brought before the committee at that time was particularly concerned with the pass/fail option for basic studies requirements. Plyler said that when, a few years ago, the basic studies program was revised, the curriculum committee was presented with a proposal advocating a pass/fail procedure would first have to be approved by the curriculum committee and then sent to the entire faculty to be approved by majority vote.

"This would be the type of thing that these student representatives (on the curriculum committee) could take to the committee," Plyler suggested. Asked about the advantages and disadvantages of a pass/fail system, Plyler said that there are usually mixed feelings.

"In a pass/fail system the grade more accurately reflects performance or achievement of students," Plyler stated. He pointed out that borderline students (for instance, those with high "C" averages who don't receive a "B") would mostly benefit from pass/fail courses.

One student said that students would probably see more value in the pass/fail system as they progress through college. She indicated that she would be interested in taking a course outside her departmental major, but that she was reluctant because a low grade would bring her quality point average down.

In a pass/fail system, generally a passing grade does not count in the QPA whether it would be the equivalent of an A or D. However, a failing grade would be averaged as part of the QPA.

On the other hand, the pass/fail option does not give credit to those students who excel in a class above passing. Many institutions also do not allow transfer credit for courses taken under the pass/fail system.

Almost always, institutions which allow pass/fail courses towards a degree have certain time restrictions on completing the degree program. Dr. Plyler indicated that this type of restriction might lend " more merit" to the pass/fail concept to weaken critics' opposition.

A check of several colleges and universities in North Carolina revealed that those institutions which do offer a pass/fail option have a very limited number of courses available as pass/fail grading. Of thirteen schools, only five had some program for the pass/fail system. These were generally the larger institutions: UNC-CH, UNC-Charlotte, UNC-Greensboro, Appalachian, State and Duke University.

Chapel Hill restrictions included not more than 24 hours of total pass/fail credit; not more than 7 hours per semester; no summer courses; no courses in the major or any specifically required for the major; and not English 1 and 2, or divisional electives.

At Appalachian, one must be a new entering student or have a 1.75 QPA and no more than one course per semester or two courses in the major. Duke requires the consent of the instructor and advisor, and the student must have declared his major with no more than one pass/fail course per semester.

UNC-Charlotte allowed four pass/fail courses over four years with one course per year, excepting those in the major and basic studies. UNC-Greensboro students may have one pass/fail course per semester with a maximum of eight. Pass/fail courses are permitted in the major with the approval of the department chairman.

UNC-Asheville, N.C. A&T State, N.C. Central, Western Carolina, East Carolina, Atlantic Christian, Campbell, and N.C. State have no provisions for pass/fail courses.

Dr. Plyler also said that no students had contacted him recently to request pass/fail courses on this campus. If they do come, however, it is likely that they will carry similar restrictions as those of other institutions in the state.

Student Protest Surfaces Over Food Service and Contracts

by Bobby Parker

Indications of student dissatisfaction with the service and quality of the campus cafeteria surfaced last week with a boycott of the evening meal or Thursday night and the formation of a Student Senate committee to investigate the situation. However, as of late Friday, no formal complaints had been filed with either the cafeteria management or the Student Affairs Office.

The boycott, apparently a hastily organized protest, was only mildly successful, as cafeteria manager Ron Osborn reported only a 72 person decrease from the 473 meals served last week on the same night. Attempts by this reporter to identify the organizers of the boycott were unsuccessful, and, therefore, no information about the motives or goals of the effort was available.

The senate investigating committee was appointed at the request of Sophomore Vice-President Ray Warren on Thursday night. It was reported that this committee has scheduled a meeting with cafeteria officials and administrators within the Office of Student Affairs.

A search for complaints revealed that many students felt there was a lack of variety in the menus, particularly vegetables. Osborn, who plans the menus himself, listed more than twenty vegetables which the cafeteria serves on a rotating basis, and said that there were always two vegetables offered at each meal.

As for meat, Osborn pointed out that there are only four basic meat groups from which to plan fourteen meals per week. (Two choices are offered at each lunch and dinner meal.) Asked about complaints that chicken and turkey were not served often enough, Osborn stated that he serves chicken three out of every four weeks.

Another complaint was that the cafeteria seldom serves fresh fruit. Osborn said that fruit is served at every breakfast, but conceded that it was not served at lunch or dinner.

Another area of complaint is not concerned with the food service but is centered around the food contracts offered by the university. "This is the main stimulus behind the formation of the senate committee. In question is the practice of requiring dormitory students to purchase meal plans, offered on a five-day, three-meal basis, or seven-day, three-meal basis.

Director of Auxiliary Services Jim Clark said that this system was implemented as a means of "guaranteed participation" for the company that bids for the university's food service contract. Current holder of the contract who now operates the cafeteria is Interstate United of Chicago. All cafeteria employees are paid by the company which was one of several companies to bid on the contract.

Clark stated that the "guaranteed participation" was vital before companies would bid on the contract because the company must be assured of a reasonable income. He said that the university's decision to offer a dormitory room in conjunction with a meal plan was made in the interest of all students.

Clark pointed out that the university had a basic choice of whether to offer a food service or not. He said that the present system was almost necessary to ensure good food service at economical prices and noted that the students did in fact have a choice in the matter: whether to accept the room and board plan as offered.

Absentee Ballots Are Now Available

Students who are registered to vote in their home voting precinct may apply for absentee ballots between October 4 and October 27 if they will be away from their home on election day, November 2. This application must be made at the Board of Elections office in the county in which the voter is registered.

Only those who have registered before October 4 will be eligible to vote in the November election.

Applications may be made by mail or by a member of the applicant's immediate family. All students who wish to vote in the upcoming national and state elections are urged to obtain their absentee ballot as soon as possible.

LETTERS

"Put Your Life in His Hands"

To the Students,

Let's face it! For you and a lot of other people, to become religious is a waste of time. The thing that's important to you is pleasure. Truly to become a religious person is an unnecessary hardship.

Sure, there are lots of so-called religious people in the world today, but there are many who take a more realistic approach to life.

The drug addict says, "As soon as I take this fix, all will be well again!" Meanwhile the drug eats away at his body like a cancer.

The alcoholic says, "These next few drinks will bring release for awhile," and yet his character is cheapened, and his home divided, and his money wasted.

Many say, "Sex brings the only real satisfaction," and while their hearts burn with lust, they cheapen girl friends, destroy marriages, abuse themselves and still, unsatisfied, long for more.

Even among the religious, earnest Jews have said, "I still have no peace." Devoted Catholics have said, "I still fear death." Active Protestants have said, "I'm trying the best I can and yet it all seems so empty."

We said religion is a drag, and it is. Going to church is boring and reading the Bible and praying is a chore if God isn't real to you. After all, what's the use of "playing church" when your heart wants other things? Many realize this and have tried other means to find the answers. Yet they have failed.

Some have pursued fame and in the end have said, "What's it all for?" Some have tried fortune and have had breakdowns because of the pressures.

What's the path of your life going to be? Don't make it formal, empty religion—that's a drag, a waste of time. By the way, it's also a waste of God's time. God doesn't want you going off in a hundred different directions. Instead God wants to give you something, and it is not a counterfeit life; it is reality. He doesn't want you to trust a set of laws, but a Person. He wants you to know His Son, Jesus.

He is alive right now. He came to earth and died on the cross to save you from a wasted life. He wants to come into your heart and life and fill the empty place. That is why you haven't been able to find the answers in all those things you've been trying. You were made to know God personally, living within your heart and controlling your life. Jesus loves you. Sin has kept you from Him. Stop going in that direction in which you are heading. Instead, turn things over to Him. Tell Him you need Him. Let Him come into your life so that you may learn what it means to have reality.

Jesus said, "Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest." Jesus is the One to come to—no one else. Will you come? Jesus also said, "I am the way, the truth, and the life; no man cometh unto the Father but by me." There is no other way. He is waiting. Right now put your life into His hands.

Boycott is the Wrong Way

The situation that recently surfaced concerning food service of the campus cafeteria has been made more complicated than need be.

Some unidentified students took it upon themselves to organize a rather unorganized boycott of last Thursday's evening meal by slapping a few posters up in the dorms signing them with a questionable "concerned students."

What were the motives and goals behind the boycott? Apparently to protest the quality of the food served in the cafeteria, and probably to seek some sort of change.

But no complaints have been expressed either to the cafeteria manager or with anyone in the Student Affairs Office. These people are not only ready to hear student complaints, but they are in fact quite concerned—hurt, if I may—that the unsatisfied students have not bothered to discuss the situation with them.

As the reporter who covered the story for this newspaper, I was frankly very surprised, and quite disappointed, to find out that neither Mr. Osburn, Dr. Malloy, Dean Cheek, Dean Parker or Col. Clark had received any communication as to specific complaints about the cafeteria.

They are helpless to remedy the situation, if indeed it needs remedy, until the complainants air their griefs. In short, they can't solve the problem if they don't know what the problem is.

It is very likely that some students are not satisfied with the present food service. It is also quite possible that the cafeteria could bear improvement—most everything can. But it is absolutely certain that both cafeteria management and university administrators are willing to discuss the matter with any student who has a legitimate complaint.

The recent boycott was evidently impulsive and definitely unsuccessful. Let us hope that today's meeting between student representatives and Student Affairs officials proves a more responsible representation of student complaints.

UNC-W, Wilmington, North Carolina, and our entire nation will have the opportunity to vote for a President who stands for honest, open, and compassionate government. To quote Franklin Delano Roosevelt, "America is on the threshold of destiny." On November 2, we have a choice between a man who can offer us the realization of our hopes, our dreams, our aspirations for the future, and a man who has obviously displayed his ineptitude in implementing the

As our nation's third century begins, we can see that our government has not been responsive to our needs. Instead, an inefficient Republican administration has brought about inflation, unemployment, and a budget deficit greater than that of all Democratic administrations combined. America is in desperate need of a strong, honest, energetic chief executive to lead us out of the governmental maze that was created by the Republican administration. The only candidate from which that leadership will emerge is Jimmy Carter.

The cumbersome bureaucracy that has stagnated Washington for the past eight years is apparent to us all. The secrecy that surrounds the governmental process today divorces the American citizen from participation in honest and efficient government. Jimmy Carter says, "It is time for us to take a new look at our government, to strip away the secrecy, to expose the lobbyists, to eliminate waste, to release our civil servants from bureaucratic chaos, to provide tough management." Strong executive control over the bureaucracy by the chief executive, which Jimmy Carter will provide, is the only solution to this problem. In Georgia he eliminated 278 of the state's overlapping, wasteful agencies and cut administration costs by 50 percent.

The United States' federal budget deficit, which amounted to more during the past eight years of Republican administration than in the one hundred and ninety-two years previous to it, is one of the greatest problems facing America today. Jimmy Carter will work, as he did in Georgia, to balance the federal budget. In Georgia he turned a budget deficit into a surplus in just four years. America needs this kind of man running the country.

Jimmy Carter and a Democratic administration will boost the economy by working to provide a job for every American who wants to work. This will boost the economy because it will remove workers from unemployment and welfare lines and put them back to work.

Jimmy Carter thinks we must stop treating our allies as if they were our enemies and make it clear to the U.S.S.R. that detente is a two-way street. Surely these ideas place him far ahead of President Ford, who still thinks Eastern Europe is "autonomous from Soviet domination."

Mr. Carter will work to reform the federal tax code, which is so tangled that the head of the Internal Revenue Service has openly admitted he does not completely understand all of the complex rules and regulations.

Jimmy Carter will work with the Democratic Congress to institute "truly progressive and simplified tax rates for the average American."

November 2, 1976 is a crucial day in American history. If we make a logical, intelligent decision, Jimmy Carter will be elected President of the United States. Any other decision could be a very dangerous one.

... and The Case for Ford

by Ray Warren

During the gloomies days of Watergate (when many were eager to criticize, but few to lead), Gerald Ford took the helm of a disorganized and dispirited nation. Today, thanks largely to his firm and decisive leadership, America has emerged from the gloomy depths of scandal and recession. On November 2, President Ford will face Jimmy Carter, the candidate of "love, justice" and limited leadership. I am confident that the American people will choose action over platitudes and keep President Ford in the White House.

Jimmy Carter has, like the proverbial medicine man, attempted to be all things to all people. Behind the smiling facade, however, lies program of the kind of neo-socialism and big government the American people soundly rejected in 1972. The package may be wrapped differently, but the contents are the same.

Carter has made the claim that he owes political debts to nobody. In order to buy the support of the powerful labor unions, however, he has reversed the stand he took as governor of Georgia, and now advocates repeal of the section of the Taft-Hartley Act which allows states to pass right-to-work laws. These laws protect the right of a worker to be employed without being forced to join a union. They have been freely enacted in nearly one-third of the states, including North Carolina.

Mr. Carter obviously feels, however, that big labor bosses know what is best for North Carolina better than do the people of North Carolina. This seems to me to be an insult to this state and to the cause of democracy. Another example of Carter's philosophy of government is his support of the Humphrey-Hawkins employment bill. This bill would begin the process of socialization in earnest by creating government "make-work" jobs. Apparently the Democratic nominee feels that every person has a "right" to a job whether he is willing to work or not. The slogan "work, not welfare" is a fraud. It is the position of President Ford that no able-bodied person deserves either welfare or a "phony" job, but should have the right to a useful productive job in the free market economy.

As a taxpayer (yes, I do pay taxes) I feel I have a right to ask who will hire people for these fictitious jobs. Bureaucrats, no doubt. And who will pay the massive cost of this program? Uh huh, you guessed it—you and I. If Mr. Carter is so concerned I suggest he gather his rich, liberal friends together and utilize their money to hire people they don't need.

I would like to briefly remind the reader of another Carter plan to socialize this country. Over the objections of the American Medical Association, he supports a program of mandatory national health insurance. That's right, the government will sign you up and dutifully extract more taxes from your paycheck. And of course if you decide to use it there will be forms to fill out... and regulations from Washington... and more bureaucrats to administer the program.

Carter frequently attempts to portray himself as the candidate of tax reform. The plain fact is, however, that Mr. Carter has heavily utilized tax loopholes and has escaped with less than half the percentage of income tax paid by President Ford. The real effect of Carter's plans would be to increase the burden on the working middle class and to destroy tax incentives for business. This will have the interesting effect of crippling business expansion and creating the need for more public jobs (for which the rest of us will pay).

President Ford does not believe that the American people need this kind of "big brother" in Washington to spend their money and regulate their lives. He also recognizes the need for fiscal responsibility. Time and time again he has courageously vetoed irresponsible spending bills sent him by Congress.

Thanks to President Ford's vetoes, the rate of inflation has come down from a record high to one of the lowest in the world.

There are of course other issues which concern voters this year, such as defense (the president believes in strength, Carter proposes crippling budget cuts and the closing of bases vital to the North Carolina economy), amnesty, and bussing. To me, however, the real issue is freedom. Freedom from big government and high taxes. America is the last great country on earth where men and women can rise to whatever heights they desire and where the fruits of one's labor belong to the individual and not the state. I believe in the American dream because I am part of that dream.

I could have spoken more about President Ford, but I feel his accomplishments are self-evident in the pride of the Mayaguez, the low rate of inflation, the expanding economy and the rising hopes of our people. My greatest fear is that we, as a people, could be decided by a man whose campaign is built around "trust me." Yes, I too would like a southerner in the White House, but if we are going to give the nation a leader, let's wait until we have a man who can lead. Neither Carter nor Lester Maddox (another famous Southerner) are the best the south has to offer. In the meantime, President Ford offers every region of the country a chance for continued peace and prosperity. So faced with the choice "why not the best?"

When it rains, it pours. That phrase seems to typify the kind of season the UNC-W soccer team has been having. After a very optimistic pre-season outlook, the Hawks started what after a while looked like a very dismal season. Then, while staring at a 1-5 record, the Seahawks suddenly turned the season around, winning their last three in a row against formidable opponents.

The question that seems to be on everyone's mind now is how did they manage the big switch. What happened to suddenly start the Seahawks on the winning track? Two things really occurred—winning the big one and getting on the good side of Lady Luck. When it appeared the Seahawks were headed for the cellar, soccer coach Calvin Lane maintained his team had the potential and skill to win. All the squad needed was a big win; a major victory over a top-rated opponent. That win came on October 6, when UNC-W upset the heavily favored N.C. State Wolfpack 1-0. This victory gave the relatively young soccer team the confidence it needed to play first-class soccer, which it has been doing the past few weeks. The bad luck which plagued the Seahawks at the start of the season has now vanished.

(Reporter's Note: Carolina's soccer team is currently ranked among the top ten in the south.)

Florida, where UNC-W played Citadel, Rollins, and Stetson. Citadel and top-ten ranked Rollins downed the Hawks.

lowness. Everything that could go wrong was going wrong.

Then came the turning point: the game that was to decide the rest of the season for the Seahawks. UNC-W Seahawks versus N.C. State Wolfpack at Brooks Field. Final score: UNC-W 1 N.C. State 0. The Seahawks had won. They had proven to the rest of the world, and to themselves, that they were not a 1-5 team as their record showed. They were winners.

The State match began a string of victories for the Seahawks, including a 16-0 rout of rival Pembroke State University. They now remind fans of past UNC-W soccer squads; squads that dominated season competition, squads that proved awesome in past-season play.

This is the 1976 UNC-W soccer team. It's like a machine which is a little hard to get started, but once it does it can run with the best of them.

And when I say plagued, I mean plagued.

Unable to schedule a scrimmage against an outside opponent, the Seahawk soccer squad, half of which is composed of newcomers to UNC-W, were forced to play their opening match in Chapel Hill against the powerful Tarheels.

After the opening loss, the team returned to Wilmington to face Florida Technical Institute, a very physical and aggressive team. UNC-W lost by one point in overtime in a very frustrating match for the Hawks.

Next on the schedule was a grueling six-day road trip into while UNC-W downed Stetson in their final road match of the series.

If all this sounds gloomy, that's because it was. Injuries were becoming a serious problem. Losses were mounting rapidly. The team was extremely disappointed, and morale was hitting new depths of

Sportlite: Surfing

Now you're probably asking yourself "What are those fools doing writing a story on surfing when winter's setting in?"

This just shows how ignorant the general public is concerning surfing. It's a year-round sport, not one just for lazy summer days. In fact, this time of year is probably one of the best for surfing. It's in the fall that most northeasterners' (storms coming out of the northeast) hit, bringing with them strong winds and high waves.

Late fall is the perfect time for surfers. Most fishermen have packed it up for the winter, and it's getting a little too cold to do much swimming. The towsters (those whose surfing ability is about equal to Donald Duck's) who clutter up the beach during the summer have gone into hibernation. Surfers are free to surf the entire beach, wherever the waves are good.

As far as equipment goes, the only item needed specifically for winter surfing is a wet suit. Again, public ignorance begins to show. For most surfers, a wet suit is no one single piece covering the surfer from head to toe. It consists of several pieces, including hood, vest, pants, and booties.

Winter surfers of course need a surfboard. New ones can be bought from $150 on up. Used ones are much cheaper, with price varying as the condition of the board does. Custommade boards may also be purchased in the Wilmington area, but at considerably higher prices.

Hawks Rout Pembroke 16-0

UNC-W-16 Pembroke-0. That's the way the score read Tuesday a week ago as the Seahawks outscored, outpassed, and outplayed a shocked Pembroke squad. The victory gives the Hawks three straight wins and a 4-5 record for the season.

Needless to say, Coach Calvin Lane is very happy about the win. "We played an excellent game," said Coach Lane. "Our passing, especially in the first 15 minutes, was very good." He added that he didn't like to embarrass anyone, but his team's emotions kept getting higher and higher while the Pembroke squad seemed to be just going through the motions by the end of the first half.

Coach Lane also reports that the team feels it is "reaching it's peak" for the season. They now feel that, if they had this strong at the first of the season, their record would be much better than 4-5.

Forward Gil Castella put in his best game of the season for the Seahawks, scoring five goals in the contest. "Gil played an outstanding game, even not including the five goals", said Coach Lane. "He is giving us the forward play we so badly needed at the first of the year."

Gene Borowski lead the scoring drive with a corner kick into the goal very early into the game. After 10 minutes, Pembroke found themselves down 3-0, and by the half they were on the opposite end of an 8-0 score. The Seahawks in the second half virtually scored at will, making the final score 16-0.

With a score as high as this, it's not surprising that 10 players on the Seahawk squad scored at least one goal. Castella leads the list with five, followed by Gonzalo Rada and Eddie Brock with two goals apiece.

Gene Borowski, Steve Paul, Nino Fleri, Rod Becker, Chi Chi Mercado, Ashley Dixon, and Larry Agnew each contributed one goal to the Seahawk effort.

In the assists department, Eddie Brock led with three. Rada and Jerry Rebbert each had two assists, with Dixon, Becker, Vince Lindenschmidt, Paul, and Borowski all assisting on one goal.

Statistically, Castella and Brock led the game with 5 points each. Rada and Rebbert follow with four points and two points, respectively.

Ric Hayes and Tom Buffington, both veterans who have been sidelined the better part of the season on the injured list played well despite their injuries. Freshman Rod Becker also put in a fine game, displaying superb passing.

Yesterday, the Seahawks played at Duke in what Coach Lane called a "tough game".

"We beat them last year," said Coach Lane, "and I'm sure they're just waiting to meet us up in Durham."

Taste has come to light.

96 calories, approximately one third fewer calories than our other fine quality beer, but all the taste you'd expect from Schlitz.

Pianist at Kenan Auditorium

Ruth Laredo, pianist, will perform in Kenan Auditorium on Thursday, October 21, at 8:00 p.m. All UNC-W students will be admitted free with I.D.s because of the contribution by the UNC-W Fine Arts Committee. The program consists of Beethoven, Scriabin, Rachmaninoff, and Favel; Ruth Laredo's sensational debut with Boulez and the New York Philharmonic last season was greeted with raves: "Astounding!" New York Times, "Total triumph!" Nyon Belt, "Smashing, sensational!" New York Post. The Newhouse Newspapers remarked that she is "one of today's dream keyboard artists" and her appearance was "dynamite"

New York Post. Miss Laredo has been soloist with major U.S. Orchestras including those of New York, Cleveland, Detroit, Philadelphia, the National and American Symphonies and has performed at the Aspen, Marlboro, Spoleto, Israel and Caramoor Festivals. Miss Laredo also has a brilliant recording career. As an exclusive Columbia Records artist, her recording of Ravel's La Valse is universally acclaimed as a tour de force and is her signature piece. She blazed the trail for Alexander Scriabin, championing his music, and making history with the world's first performances of the complete solo piano works of Rachmaninoff and the first two releases of the set have received outstanding critical acclaim.

With her highly successful and diversified career, Miss Laredo is a unique American phenomenon. Born and raised in Detroit, Mich., she grew up listening to Vladimir Horowitz, whose legendary recitals she attended as a small child. She studied with the famed Rudolf Serkin at the Curtis Institute of Music, and made her New York orchestral debut with Leopold Stokowski and the American Symphony, and prizewinning recordings of his piano sonatas in their entirety. Miss Laredo is currently engaged to record

The Prisoner Presented in Snack Bar

Episode 7: "THE CHIMES OF BIG BEN"

In brief: The Prisoner learns that it is only a matter of time that foils a dramatic attempt to trap him.

To Amplify: A helicopter brings in a new arrival. This time, there is a name: Nadia. She is unconscious when lifted from a helicopter, and still unconscious when taken to her house. And the Prisoner finds himself with a new neighbour.

They meet. Her story is curiously akin to his own. All she has done is to resign.

He tries to find more about her, but she is suspicious and indignant, intimating that she believes he may be one of Number Two's assistants. She is, apparently, as rebellious as the Prisoner himself. She makes an escape bid by swimming out to sea, but is caught by Rover, taken to hospital and put through a rigorous interrogation which Number Two allows the Prisoner to watch.

The interrogation turns to torture, which is brought to a stop by the Prisoner's interception and agreement to give partial cooperation in that he agrees to contribute to an exhibition of arts and crafts. It is the first sign of a break on his past... his first-ever cooperation.

Nadia is assigned to him as a personal maid, and she helps him to cut wood for the exhibit he intends to enter. It seems now that Nadia is ready to trust him completely, and she reveals that she knows where the Village is situated. They are on the Baltic Coast, in Lithuania, and only thirty miles from the Polish border.

An ingenious escape plan forms in the Prisoner's mind. The three carvings he enters for the exhibition, and which win him first prize, can be adapted to make a boat. A weaving is used as a sail, and they put out to sea. Success seems to be within their grasp.

RICHMAN,

POORMAN

Jonathan Richman & The Modern Lovers

Beserkley

At the moment Jonathan Richman is represented on three different Beserkley records. Besides this one there is The Modern Lovers and Beserkley Charibusters. The Modern Lovers were a Boston group that received much favorable press, but never quite made it. They signed with a major label and some tunes were produced by Ex-Velvet Undergrounder John Cale. For some reason no album was released and in the process the Modern Lovers broke up. Except for one Richman tune on one of Cale's albums, there was no more mention of Richman. When Beserkley released an album of various artists (Beserkley Charibusters), Richman resurfaced with four cuts. Jonathan then recorded a solo album with a new set of Modern Lovers retaining only the original drummer. The lost tapes produced by Cale were combined with material from various sources to form The Modern Lovers album. Ya got it straight?

Chances are that you will never hear Jonathan Richman on your local station. His singing is such that despite his cult status many progressive FM stations will probably shy away from playing his records. In short Richman's voice makes Lou Reed's sound like Sinatra.

What makes Richman so interesting is his sense of humor and knack of turning the ordinary into good song-writing material. With a professional sounding band in the background Richman's voice sounds only more ridiculous. Still Jonathan keeps on singing oblivious to any criticism. It's his show and no amount of bad mouthing is going to convince him that his voice is not perfect. Knock him down and he still comes up smiling.

Not since Randy Newman has anyone come up with such a weird bunch of subjects to write about. In Hey There Little Insect we get a plea from Jonathan to various winged things not to sting him. Citizens from the Red Planet are viewed as tourists in Here Comes the Martian Martians. Jonathan turns a usually drab bunch of stores into a Rockin' Shopping Center and throws an Abominable Snowman In The Market in two different numbers. There is even an ode to Jonathan's homeland New England. The two covers of Back In The U.S.A. and Amazing Grace are only more proof of Richman's poor voice. He should stick to originals. All in all, Richman deserves a listen to more than a lot of other people do. His kind come only once in awhile. Steve Harvey

VAN DER GRAAF GENERATOR

WORLD RECORD

MERCURY - SRM - 1 - 1116

Although this is one of the best groups around these days their music is the hardest to explain of any I have come across in a long time. Their best quality is the way they do rock music with a force and power unequal to any group of its kind.

If you had to describe their sound, I guess you could say that it is similar to the type music coming out of Germany during the 1970's. Their songs tend to contain vocals and music but each has its own place and both are not done at the same time. For this, their songs seem quite sporadic yet work very as individual cuts.

The group is English and shows how German music has affected music in that country. WORLD RECORD is the second album they have released in this country this year.

Opening the album is "When She Comes". This cut demonstrates all the group's good qualities and sounds very similar to GONG at the beginning of the sax work. Here we find the group can write excellent lyrics and music but never let one get in the way of the other. In fact, when the group sings the lyrics you almost naturally block out the music. For this reason, I think their music is a little weak. Then, when there are no vocals, the music is very powerful.

This is continued in the next cut, "A Place To Survive." Here you find the vocals are very strong and really drive the theme of the song in, the theme being that is your place to survive in this world.

Stand straight looking into the future, walk on—we've each got our own lives.

Don't wait for a guru or tutor, be strong—it's your place to survive.

Stand straight looking over your shoulder, walk on: though it hurts, you're alive.

Don't wait—if you wait it's all over, be strong—it's your right to survive.

The next cut is "Masks" and is really a nice rock cut. This cut again shows the group's ability to write excellent material. The lyrics on the song are very well written and are very deep and mysterious. The music and lyrics work better here yet the lyrics still dominate. This is one of the best cuts on the album.

Opening side two is "Meurglys III, The Songwriter's Guild." This cut is 20 minutes of nothing but space filler. "Wondering" follows and another very well done cut. Like "Masks", the song is one of the better on the album.

To sum up: Van Der Graaf Generator is not a group for everyone, for their way of doing music is so different. Their songs tend to be long, making them hard to like if you cannot take the time to sit and listen to them. I took the time and found the group interesting and good. Maybe you will too. Till then, rock-out. J.W.

SHORTS FROM CPS

Wrr, Click, Beep, Beep, I am Programmed to Kiss

(CPS)—Will "systematic desensitization" cure a student's dating hang-ups?

Three University of Oregon professors and 60 students thought that it would so last spring they began a program designed to increase one's confidence with the opposite sex. In addition to systematic desensitization (a psychological device), the group engaged in such things as behavior rehearsal and feedback as well as pulse and body response measurement. They also subjected themselves to the "treatment" of six practice dates.

The results? The students, who had previously averaged one date per month, found themselves progressively more at ease and more skillful in their dating encounters. When the researchers tried to call them back in for a three month follow-up, only 15 of the original subjects showed up. The researchers figure they were too busy dating.

This Student Government Ain't No Trash

(CPS)—Students at Syracuse University have elected a garbage disposer to their student assembly.

The disposer, called Hector Eastein, received 23 votes and finished 11th in the balloting for 15 assembly seats after collecting the required number of signatures for his nomination. Incumbent student assembly officials didn't get the

for Cold Cars

(CPS)—Students whose cars suffer from engine whooping cough, non-meshing gears, turn signals that don't flash or any other common auto maladies may now dial up some mechanical advice.

The toll-free number is (800) 424-9393 and the friendly voices at the other end will offer callers all sorts of advice on what to do with problem cars. Sponsored by the National Highway Traffic Safety Council, the hot line is not designed to be "a magic solution" a spokesman said, but added the line was especially helpful in recognizing known lemons with inherent problems that plague owners everywhere.

joke, however, and promptly nixed Eastein and named a replacement of the human persuasion.

A spokesman for Hector's political sponsor, the Zeta Psi fraternity, said Hector could probably not have attended Monday night assembly meetings anyway because he's usually busy chomping the house's trash.

Better Than Pet Rocks:

(CPS)—Anybody for a six-pack of genuine Oregon rain? Well, it should be on the market soon if two young college students from Oregon get their way. Partners Jim Maass and Randy Hermens have plunked down an initial investment of $150 for a shipment of ten ounce jars and labels. They reason that the hustle "could net millions." "Rain seemed the most likely thing to sell, since that's what Oregon is famous for," Maass said. Hermens added, "If you feel happy, good-looking and dry, pour a bottle of Official Oregon Rain over your head. Now you feel as many Oregonians feel: Depressed, ugly and wet."

Charlie Suppler

Q: What is a banshee?
-K.W.

A: The best way to describe a banshee would be as a female presence, even though she is considered by some to be a true ghost of a woman. Nobody has really seen one of these women "of the fairies" nor is one likely to, since the banshee is more a mournful wailing than a form of any sort.

Her wail, called keening, tells the death of someone of Celtic blood in Ireland or the Scottish Highlands. Even though it has also been heard in Wales and in Brittany, and can be heard either as a low, sweet cry, foretelling a gentle death, or as a shrill, angry cry, giving warning of a violent, gruesome death.

The banshee is quite capable of inducing fear and is, even at the best of times, a very malevolent presence.

Q: What is a poltergeist?
-B.R.

A: The literal translation from the German means "Spirit who makes noises" and that seems to be a fairly accurate description of that creature.

Now a poltergeist can manifest itself in a great many fashions such as making various types of noises, throwing stones, levitation of objects (often followed by their breaking), and causing various and sundry accidents and fires. I believe that there is even a case of a poltergeist, warning its "adopted" family (via crashes and other noises) of a fire in their home in time for them to get to safety. The little fellow was never heard from again after that.

A great deal of the poltergeist phenomena occur in the presence of children or hysterical young girls and this leads some experts to believe the phenomena are psychic extensions of these people's personalities.

If you would like to find out more, the UNC-W library has some information on the subject and there might be some books about it in the Dolphin Bookshop at Longleaf Mall.

Got a question about the supernatural or the unusual? Drop it by the SEAHAWK office. I'll be glad to answer it.

Student Senate Discusses Cafeteria Food

by Darlene Pearsall

A special Senate meeting was called to order on Thursday, Oct. 14 at 7:45 p.m. Normal rules of order were suspended.

Absent for the meeting were: Bobby McQueen, Tom Raines (excused for track meet), Jo Anne Gentry (excused for volleyball game), Leonard Sibley (excused for work), Tommy Long, Clint Myers, and Tommy Koonce (excused for work).

Ray Warren, Vice-President of the Sophomore class, requested the special session in order to discuss cafeteria food policies. Greta Lint, a sophomore Senator, said that a petition revealed 301 concerned students who felt that there should not be a contract binding dorm students to cafeteria food.

Ray Warren suggested that he study the food service contract and that a student committee be formed to meet with the cafeteria staff and discuss complaints. He stated that the company does not presently seem to be listening to student complaints.

Carol Raines, a junior Senator, mentioned that there was a committee last year that talked with Mr. Osborn, the food service director. Total food revenue averages to be only $2.04 per person daily. She agreed, however, that something should be done about the food presently served.

Ray Warren then made two motions. The first motion was to find out the conditions of the food service contract. Cindy Buxton questioned as to whether this action was interfering with administrative powers. Warren stated that they were simply trying to represent the students. The motion was then placed to a vote and passed unanimously.

Warren's second motion said, "The student Senate, in behalf of UNC-W dorm residents, request that in the future, students not be required to purchase a meal contract."

Karin Whaley, sophomore President, agreed that there was a need for this separation but felt that if it occurred, "the cafeteria is going to go down. Many people would go off campus and spend $4 or $5 a day on food." She stated that "we need a little foresight into the future."

Greta Lint added that if the motion was passed, dorm students may end up paying four or five times what they are presently paying for cafeteria food since there would be less students eating there.

Cindy Buxton, sophomore class Secretary, said that specifics for improvements should be the issue and not the fact that dorm students are required to get food service contracts.

Ray Warren defended his motion by saying that it was "a matter of freedom." All dorm students shouldn't be forced to pay for a food service contract simply to provide lower prices for students who do want to eat at the cafeteria. "Putting the issue off just means not taking a stand."

Paul Laird, SGA Vice-President, agreed with the importance of an investigative committee, and stated that a Senate referendum may not be effective in solving the problem.

Motion No. 2 was then placed to a vote and was passed 7 to 5. Those voting for the motion were: Ray Warren, Carol Raines, Greta Lint, Scott Olsen, Keith Hendricks, Glenn Downs and Clay Fairley. Those against were: Cindy Buxton, Karin Whaley, Teresa Hege, Bob Browning, and Dawn Brickley. Out of the fourteen voting members present, only twelve voted.

As senior class President,

Clay Fairley is responsible for appointing replacements to Senate vacancies. He recommended Paul Walker to assume a Senate position, but since Paul had not yet taken the constitution test, he could not be officially approved.

Rusty Walker, assistant manager of WCNU, was the next to speak. He requested $264 from the Senate to allow six members of the campus radio station to attend a national college radio conference in Chicago on Nov. 5.

He projected that by January, WCNU would be broadcasting FM. The purpose of the conference would be to give these six members background in broadcasting an educational FM station.

Total costs for the trip would include registration fees, room and board, plus money for gas. Rusty felt that $200 of the necessary funds would be raised by Nov. 5. The Senate appropriations was needed to pay for gas.

Dawn Brickley approved of the idea, stating that it would probably improve the quality of the station as well as provide the staff a chance to meet people from other areas.

The motion could not be voted on, however, since Mark Wax, the Treasurer, was not present with a Treasury report.

The matter was tabled until the next meeting.

Ray Warren mentioned that the "attendance at Senate meetings was horrendous" and that people needed to be encouraged to attend.

The meeting ended within an hour. The next Senate meeting is Thursday at 7:30 in Room 218 of the Chemistry-Physics Building.

Parnell Gets Study Contract

Dr. James F. Parnell of the biology faculty has recently received a $95,000 contract to study plant succession and bird utilization on diked dredge islands in eastern N.C. Diking is a new facet of coastal dredging whereby dredged material is deposited behind dikes which prevent or slow their return to the estuary.

ed or make other housing arrangements.

Asked if other plans, such as one in which the student would receive tickets to use over the week as he chooses, would not be more satisfactory, Clark said that the relatively low price of the meal plan was in part based upon a "missed meal factor" determined by the management company. This factor takes into account that all students will not eat every meal during the course of a week. Clark said that the student pays for "the right" to eat 15 or 21 meals a week, but that in reality he has not paid the costs to cover 15 or 21 meals. If the company expected every student to eat every meal, the cost of the meal plan would necessarily be higher.

Clark also said that the food service must be satisfactory to students or an "escape" clause in the contract would allow the university to contract with another company. In the event that the quality of service declined, Clark said that Student Affairs administrators would discuss the situation and make a recommendation to the Chancellor, who would make the final decision.

Response of cafeteria management to past student requests has been very cooperative, Clark noted. He cited that students had requested the serving of peanut butter, skim milk, and honey, and that now these were served regularly. He indicated that specific complaints can be dealt with, but that general protests such as a boycott would not lead to a settlement.

"The appropriate way to make the food service program more responsive," Clark said, "... is for students first to form their food committee ... and meet with Mr. Osborn."

He recalled that such a committee had existed in the past and that generally "anything within reason" could be resolved to the students' satisfaction.

Deans of Students Helena Cheek and Ralph Parker also indicated a readiness to discuss any student complaints and to seek a resolution of any problem. Each expressed hope that students would bring their complaints out in the open where the problem could be identified and some type of solution reached.

Lance Smith:

Working With A Growing Magazine

Lance Smith leaned back in the swivel chair, hands clasped behind his head. He seemed comfortable and enthusiastic discussing his position as editor for the Atlantis. "I guess my interest in writing began in Junior High School. I had a really good English teacher that stressed creative writing."

Lance took two creative writing courses offered here at UNC-W. In the spring of '75, he won second place in the Jessie Rehder Short Story Contest.

The following semester Lance worked with the Atlantis as Prose Editor.

Lance sees the purpose of the Atlantis as providing an outlet for student fiction and poetry writers. "Seeing your own writing in print is an impetus for further writing."

And so it would seem. Eighty percent of the students that have written novels in directive study at the university have had stories previously published in the Atlantis.

In fact, Lance himself is among that 80 percent. Last fall Lance's story "Captain Eddie" was published in the Atlantis. That semester he began writing a novel he has now completed.

His novel, The Son of Man, is now in a rewriting phase which Lance expects to take another year. The setting is a beach (Wrightsville) and a college campus (UNC-W). The story deals with the evolving of a human into the second Christ.

The main character is a college student unaware of and frustrated by his divinity. He is not a docile Christ, but a revolutionary one, full of passion. The book is heavily symbolic but is not dependent upon its symbolism for enjoyable reading.

Lance is a senior this year majoring in Philosophy and Religion. In his spare time he enjoys fishing and boating. To submit stories or poems to the Atlantis, Lance explained one need only give a copy to the English department.

Bill Rapp, Prose Editor, will distribute the stories to his committee where they will be read anonymously and rated independently.

In the same manner John Bartlett, Poetry Editor, will work with his committee to select the poems for the magazine.

Next both the poems and stories chosen will be turned over to the art staff, headed by Carol Collier and Mark Rybus, for the artwork, lettering, and layouts.

Finally it will all be sent to the printer, returned as the completed magazine. Lance hopes to have the magazines out by the first week of December.

Lance went on to talk about the other publications by the Atlantis. All the school calendars were distributed in three days this fall. The student Poetry Brochure is published in the fall as well.

The next publication to come

out will be the Apparition under the direction of Cindy Shell, Associate Editor for the Atlantis.

It will contain several stories in the Halloween tradition. Last year every copy of the Apparition was gone in two hours.

If additional funds are obtained, the Siren, a collection of freshman essays, will be published in the spring. (The Atlantis is funded by the SGA)

Over 40 students have signed up to work with the Atlantis this year but volunteers are always wanted. Anyone interested in working with the magazine should get in touch with one of the editors on the advisers, Dr. Collier or, Dr. Corbett, in the English department.

As Lance says, "We can always use more people. The more volunteers, the better the magazine."

Tryouts for "The Dance of Death"

The University Theatre will hold tryouts for its second production of the year, "The Dance of Death" by August Strindberg. Tryouts will be held in the S.R.O. Theatre and are especially open to all University students. There is one major male role and two minor female roles to be cast for this play.

This year the Department is offering for the first time senior projects in theatre. These projects are a culmination of each student's study. In this particular play, there will be two senior projects in acting.

There is also a great need for any student who wishes to participate in the backstage work that is necessary for the success of the play. We readily welcome all students who wish to work in any capacity. You do not need experience—we will gladly teach you what you need to know. We want to provide many theatrical opportunities to our students in our production as well as wanting audience participation.

The tryout for "Dance of Death" will be at 8:00 tonight and all students are invited to drop in even if it's only for a look.

Why I Love My Pen

No way can we believe that students from Maine to California are storming the stores in search of the rare elusive Pilot pen, which, according to the manufacturer has started a cult on campuses around the country.

To support its cult theory, Pilot has spread some t-shirts around with the thought-provoking slogan (based on its national ad campaign), "Is It Sick to Love a Pen?"

The company says it will send a free shirt, and a box of pens to the writers of the best 100 letters on "Why I Love My Pen."

Okay, you weirdos out there, here's your chance to develop that meaningful relationship at last.

Pilot Pen Corporation is located at 41-15 36th Street, Long Island City, N.Y. 11101. Write to Ron Shaw. He loves to get mail, almost as much as he loves his pen.

FLAHERTY ON CAMPUS

By Bobby Parker

Republican gubernatorial candidate David Flaherty spoke to an audience of approximately 50 persons in King Auditorium last Thursday afternoon at 1:00. Flaherty, a former state senator from Lenior, gave a brief opening statement and then answered questions from the audience.

Greta Lint and Ray Warren, who have been active in establishing a Campus Young Republican club here, accompanied Flaherty into the auditorium. Ms. Lint gave brief remarks about the Young Republicans club and Warren introduced the candidate.

Flaherty distinguished himself from other candidates who he said were spreading political rhetoric to be elected. He criticized the current practice of many politicians of conducting polls before the campaign begins to find out what issues the people were most concerned about, saying that this would lead the candidate to speak only to a few of the many important issues.

"I think it's important," Flaherty said, "that you recognize in a political campaign... that candidates are going to see the things people want to hear."

Flaherty went on to say that he was a "businessman and not a professional politician" and referred to state government as "the largest business in the state." This was an apparent reference to Flaherty's Democratic opponent, Jim Hunt, who has been frequently cast by his opponents as a "professional" politician.

The Republican candidate also charged that Hunt "uses the Democratic platform where it helps him" and dissociates himself from it when it hurts him. Flaherty urged voters to examine Hunt's record as lieutenant governor and questioned whether Hunt had kept his promises that he made when running for lieutenant governor.

Flaherty also outlined his reading program for the state's schools, which he made public at a news conference only the day before. His plan would call for a reduction of class size from 26 to 20 students as an average for elementary grades. The program also provides for "reading specialists" for grades one through six, and a requirement for reading training for teacher certification.

Hunt's program basically calls for a teacher's aide in each classroom with a projected cost of $60 million. Flaherty's price tag was $72 million, but he emphasized that $26 million of that total would come from savings from cuts within the present school budget. Therefore, Flaherty said, his reading program would cost about $14 million less than Hunt's.

Flaherty alleged that Hunt and House Speaker Jimmy Green, the Democratic candidate for lieutenant governor, did not work well together as leaders of the two chambers of the state legislature. He noted that the two did not even meet personally to discuss legislation but communicated through emissaries.

He noted that only those who are unable to work, are 65 years of age or older, or children can receive welfare benefits, and that many people mistake unemployment and pension recipients for welfare recipients. Flaherty stated that most people misunderstand the state welfare system, and said that many office-seekers use this issue as "a political game to get elected." He cited the main problem is the heavy case load of most social workers, and said that welfare cheaters should be prosecuted by eliminating the stipulation in state law that requires proof of "willful intent" in lying on welfare applications. Flaherty said that this would not lead to prosecution of those who make honest mistakes, but added that the responsibility for honest applications would then be placed on the applicants rather than social workers.

Advocating the implementation of a "sunset law" which would automatically end a state-funded program after a set number of years and open it for re-funding or elimination, Flaherty said this would lead to more efficient government. He added that "the most difficult thing in government is to eliminate something that already exists" because of pressure to continue ongoing programs. He also endorsed the idea of zero-based budgeting, but said this should work in supplement to a sunset law.

On crime, the Republican candidate said that law enforcement should become more concerned with the rights of the victim instead of the rights of the criminal. He indicated that the state judicial system was not entirely equitable, saying that "justice is not blind" and that if you are black or poor "you're going to jail." He expressed support (See Flaherty, Page 11)

Student Representatives Discuss Cafeteria Complaints

By Bobby Parker

A meeting between student representatives and Student Affairs officials last Wednesday yielded considerable progress toward settling the recent controversy that has arisen over the food service in the campus cafeteria, according to representatives of both groups. The meeting was requested by the student group to air specific student complaints and suggestions for the cafeteria.

Fifteen students attended the meeting and discussed the situation with Student Affairs Director William Malloy, Director of Auxiliary Services Jim Clark, and Deans of Students Helena Cheek and Ralph Parker.

As the main spokesman for the student group, Joel Rector read a list of specific complaints that had been drawn up. Rector said, at a meeting the night before of concerned students. There was also a list of specific suggestions for improvement from the student representatives.

One of the major complaints was the "continuous repetition" of meat entrees. Rector reported that it was "not so much the quality (of food served), but the repetition of the meats" that students were concerned about. He pointed out that he had personally taken note that either roast beef or pork roast was served three times per week.

Clark, who has direct responsibility to oversee the food operation for the university, responded that he reviews the menus and could not recall roast beef being served "twice in a four day span." He cited that the menus are planned over a one month cycle through Interstate United of Chicago, who holds the university food service contract. These menus are also adjusted to fit local tastes, Clark added. Clark said that the most effective way to handle this complaint is to decide "who will help us review the menus" to insure some student input. He asked for volunteer students to form a committee for this purpose, to which Helen Pantazis quickly responded, "I volunteer right now."

A committee was later formed to meet with cafeteria manager Ron Osborn to represent student concerns, with Ms. Pantazis as chairman. Other members are: Pam Rogers, Greta Lint, Ray Warren, and Tom Hunt.

One of the more vocalized complaints at the meeting concerned roast beef which was served green-colored. Several students said they had witnessed this and that it is "not very appetizing."

Many students reported that they had complained to the manager about the green-tinted beef, and one stated that the manager had commented, "I don't see how you can eat anything like this" when presented with the beef. The student added that the manager took the meat to the cook who explained that the machine used to slice the beef had left the green color and that this was not an extraordinary occurrence.

Another major complaint was finding foreign objects in food, such as hair, paper, and even bits of brick. Greta Lint presented a tiny piece of brick to the Student Affairs officials that she said was found in some veal in the cafeteria. Rector told the administrators that "it's not occasionally, it's frequent" that students find such objects in food.

Perhaps the most reports were of finding hair in food, with students charging that some of the cafeteria personnel were not wearing hairnets. Clark and Malloy, however, repeatedly assured the students of the high health standards of the cafeteria management. Clark said, "you only get top grade food" and grade A choice meat, and Malloy stated that health officials drops in totally unannounced for inspections.

Another major area of complaint was the requirement of dormitory students to purchase a meal plan as part of a "room and board" offering from the university. Several students suggested that a plan wherein a student would choose his own plan separate from the room contract would be fairer to the student.

The suggestion was also made that instead of the present 15 meals or 21 meals (See Students, Page 8)

letters to the editor

"Get Into Action and VOTE!"

Letter to the Editor:

Why should students vote in the election this year? Many have given the following excuses why they should not vote, instead:

1. Absentee ballots are burdensome.
2. None of the candidates are "any good".
3. "The better of two evils" why bother?

This country is one of the very few countries in the world that permits people to vote for the candidates of their choice. So what, I ask, if Mr. Carter or President Ford are not the entire nation's choice this year? They both were somebody's choice. Because they were first elected on a local level, they used that step as a platform to run for higher offices—all the way to the highest office in the land. However, that office is not so separated from the people that students cannot have a voice in our own government. We as students—citizens of this land—are not separated from the rest of the voting citizens in the United States; we are part of those citizens. If we are to be a land "of the people, by the people and for the people," why do we not get out and fulfill that statement? Our land is for us, so why don't we ALL get into action and vote? Thank you, Greta Lint

"The Choice Is Obvious"

Editor:

I would like to take this opportunity to respond to last week's articles about the two major political candidates for president.

As the author of the article in favor of President Ford, I would like to clarify one point. I have been informed that Mr. Carter does not actually favor repeal of the section of the Taft Hartley act which allows the states to pass "right-to-work" laws. His stated position is that if the Congress passes a repeal bill, he will sign it. This indicates one of two things.

Either:

a) Mr Carter does not know how he feels about the right to work law, which shows an alarming lack of decisiveness. or:

b) Carter is once again trying to run from an issue. Whether Mr. Carter favors the right of the people of this state to pass a right to work law, or opposes this right, the people have a right to expect him to state his position clearly. Saying in effect, "whatever Congress decides, is fine with me" is certainly not my idea of firm decisive leadership.

I would also like to point out that Carter's position on Taft-Hartley is absolutely opposed to the position he took when running for Governor of Georgia. Of course Carter has a right to change his mind, but how convenient that this particular change brought him the support of one of the largest special interest groups in America!

In his pro-Carter article, Victor Morgan made some surprising statements. He blames the Republicans for the large budget deficit. As President Ford stated in the first debate, "You can't have it both ways" I fail to understand why Mr. Carter attacks the President for vetoing reckless spending measures passed by Congress, and class for a balanced budget. I shudder to think what kind of deficit the Democratic Congress would have produced this year without the restraints imposed by the President through his vetoes. The plain fact is, that the present budget mess is a direct result of the social programs initiated by Lyndon Johnson's "Great Society" and continued by the Democratic dominated Congress.

Mr Carter claims he can initiate more costly federal programs, balance the budget, and yet not raise taxes! Oh really? He is going to have to be more specific if he expects me to believe in that kind of miracle.

Gerald Ford is a firm decisive leader who does not run from the issues. Jimmy Carter is an untied politician who cannot seem to take a stand. Action versus platitudes. I think the choice is obvious.

BYLINE: The Storm Has Settled, Jerry; It's Time to Move On

by Bobby Parker

One of the most extraordinary elections in our nation's history is about to come to a close, and it's going to be a race to the wire. An unelected incumbent who had trouble securing his own party's nomination is facing a Southern governor who captured his party from the outside.

The closest thing to this election in modern history is probably the Truman-Dewey battle of 1948, in which an unelected incumbent (Truman) surprised everyone up to and including the assumed victor (Dewey). Though our own incumbent has made significant inroads into his challenger's lead, I cannot foresee a recurrence of 1948 in 1976.

To start with, Gerald Ford, try as he might to convince us otherwise, is not Harry Truman. Ford has shown none of the stubborn leadership of Truman, though he comes as close as any modern president to Truman's political coverage.

This is to Mr. Ford's credit—he is not an all-consuming politician. (If he was, he wouldn't be behind in the election today.) It is also to his credit that he has overseen the transfer of a government in disarray back to the level of decency it was before Watergate.

Mr. Ford's tenure has been the calm after the storm. The storm was caused when the disgraces of Watergate collided with the sputtering economy. It was good that Ford was there to step in, because he didn't attempt anything dramatic. Sure, he passed out a few WIN buttons and a few pardons (to Nixon and maybe a couple to Vietnam evaders). But the best thing that President Ford has done is simply nothing.

He didn't try very rigorously to doctor the economy—but that's all right, because it was due to take an upturn. He didn't make any new ventures with foreign policy—but that's okay because he might have upset Henry Kissinger's apple cart. He hasn't attempted any significant government reforms—but that's fine, too, because he would have probably botched it up good fashioned.

What it all boils down to is that Gerald Ford has been the most caretaking of caretaker presidents we've ever had—sort of like Cal Coolidge in the extreme. And if Mr. Ford had been thinking rightly, he would have borrowed a phrase from old Cal: "I do not choose to run."

We needed Ford's passive leadership to recover from Vietnam and Watergate. But now that we have recovered, it's time to step out with new vigor, new leadership, and, most importantly, new vision in the White House. And that's where Jimmy Carter comes in.

Mr. Carter is certainly not the perfect solution—but if you can find that, please tell me where. He still refuses to be explicit on his promises, and he's still a relatively unknown quantity. But we already know what Jerry Ford is going to do—stand back and watch the parade. A man with as much vision and promise for government as Carter is far better than another four years of inactive, stalemate government.

The fault for stalemate government lies as much with the Democratic Congress as with President Ford. But the Democratic Congress is a fact of life in modern America. There's no way the Republicans are going to gain a majority in either House for years to come.

Ford complains about the "free-spending" Democrats in Congress, but he has done little to keep his end of the lawmaking bargain. He has only vetoed almost every constructive bill passed, and has failed to take any initiative on his own. What this means for the American people is that when it does agree on some legislation, it is blocked by the rubber stamp vetoes of a president who has not pursued an active course toward getting something done.

The argument that it is better to stick with a "known quantity" in Ford than to take a "risk" with Carter is about the most asinine reason to vote for Ford as any yet. We are taking a risk on any candidate for any office that we ever vote for. The question that comes down to us is not whether we are taking a risk, but how great a risk.

There is no reason to doubt the promises of one candidate more than another simply because one has been in office and the other has not. What we must look at in this election is not the "safety" of Ford's record but the adequacy of it in contrast to the proposals of his challenger, and the feasibility of those proposals. Where would we be today is we had not put our trust in Franklin Roosevelt?

Carter would revitalize the Cabinet that Nixon demeaned and Ford plays with. Take for instance Ford's undermining of his former Secretary of Labor, John Dunlop, who wrote a bill, sent it to Congress, had it passed, only to have it vetoed by his own superior.

Confessions of a Misinformed Voter

By Bobby Parker

The trouble with absentee ballots is you never know what's going to happen between the time you send it in and election day. There's always the chance that you might just change your mind, or get some new information that alters the whole decision of whom to vote for.

Such is my dilemma. I thought I had listened and read carefully about each candidate so that I knew absolutely whom I wanted to vote for. But when David Flaherty, the Republican candidate for governor, appeared at UNC-W last week, I found myself wishing he had come a few days earlier, before I sent my ballot in.

I thought I knew where Mr. Flaherty stood on the issues. But as he spoke last week, I discovered that (unlike most of his Republican comrades) he is quite an intelligent man—in fact, one of the brightest I have seen this political year.

Brown, Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, who has recently criticized such traditional American allies as Great Britain and Israel as "military burdens." And take Earl Butz—please! Who can believe that Ford would keep the former Agriculture Secretary in light of his coarse slurs at the Pope and at American blacks, when Butz wasn't worth the trouble to begin with. Butz finally had to step down by his own accord.

I must admit that some of Ford's appointments have been very good, such as Carla Hills as Secretary of Housing and Urban Development, an able administrator who is a hard worker as well, and Transportation Secretary William Coleman, considered one of the most intelligent men in Washington. Associate Supreme Court Justice John Paul Stevens, Vice-President Nelson Rockefeller, and HEW Secretary David Matthews are also good appointments.

But perhaps the most horrendous appointment is his choice for a vice-presidential running

I think Mr. Flaherty is unusually unknown to be a gubernatorial candidate. I didn't know he supported a constitutional convention; I didn't half believe the $50 million savings he claimed for the State Dept. of Human Resources, and I didn't know his superior plan for education as opposed to Jim Hunt's. I just didn't know.

Mr. Flaherty displayed such candor and honesty, and a genuine interest to answer questions, that I was most astoundingly impressed. Oh, that I could retrieve my ballot.

Well, it's all done now. I can only apologize to Mr. Flaherty and the Republican Party. I didn't think that party was capable of such an outstanding nominee. I'll know better next time.

Don't make the same mistake with your vote. Though I am sure of a Hunt victory, I most strongly urge you to vote for David Flaherty on November 2. I'm just sorry that I can't.

mate, Robert Dole. You may recall that I said earlier in this column that Dole was a positive political choice. That's still true. In fact, it's so true that it is about all Dole has contributed to the campaign-politics. He is proving himself a politician through and through, and is raising serious questions about his capacity to lead our nation, should that need ever arise.

During the vice-presidential debate, Dole committed as ghastly a blunder as Ford did on East Europe, though it hasn't received as much attention. But when a man who may one day have to step forward to lead our nation tries to pin the Democratic party with responsibility for 1.6 million war deaths, it is a legitimate question to ask just how far Mr. Dole's political ethics extend.

Conservative columnist George F. Will put it best: "People who lie about history deserve to be forgotten by it."

Ford wants two constitutional amendments—one reserving the abortion issue to the states, one putting school prayer back on a voluntary basis. Carter says that an amendment is not needed, and history proves him right. Just look at prohibition, implemented by constitutional amendment, but it later had to be repealed by constitutional amendment. This should indicate that the constitution is no place to deal with such emotional issues because of the broad reach an amendment implies.

By contrast, Jimmy Carter has proven himself as undoubtedly a better talent scout than his opponent. The best example is Carter's unprecedented process of choosing a vice-presidential running mate. It was completely open and extremely thorough, and he came out with one of the best choices available. Walter Mondale is one of the most effective, energetic senators in Washington. There is no doubt that he is well qualified to be president.

It is also time for a national health insurance policy, which is exploited by demagogic Republicans as some sort of socialist plot. The Republicans enjoy tossing about the "mandatory" health plan, saying that it gives workers no choice. The insurance plan is "mandatory," but that's not the full story. Carter's program would merely take over existing health plans, so there would not be any new employee taxes. This will only insure those workers who are not provided with health plans by their employer adequate protection for rising medical costs.

The Republicans have also distorted Carter's jobs program. Ford says he wants to deal with unemployment by providing incentives in the private sector. This is also a provision of the Democrats jobs program—but they are realistic enough to realize that this can't solve the problem alone, and so they add meaningful public service jobs as

SEAHAWK SPORTS

Seahawks Dominate Duke, St. Andrews

Scores can be misleading. Never was that statement more evident than the Seahawk soccer team's 2-1 loss to Duke last Tuesday. Until two minutes left in the game, UNC-W was riding comfortable with a 1-0 lead. They had dominated the match in nearly every aspect, and now were just waiting for the clock to run out. Suddenly, Duke scored on a corner kick, tying the game and sending it into overtime.

"We had several good scoring opportunities, as did Duke", stated Coach Lane. The Blue Devils won the match, however, on a goal with six minutes left in the overtime. "This was a very disappointing and frustrating loss", said Coach Lane. "We played real well - well enough to win."

Jerry Rebbert scored the Seahawks only goal with 15 minutes left in the first half. Tom Buffington assisted in the play. Others putting in an exceptional performance were Tim Willette at goalie, Gene Borowski at fullback, Steve Paul at halfback, and Gonzalo Rada providing good control up front as forward.

There was no mistake in the score, though, against St. Andrews on Saturday. The Seahawks scored five goals in the second half for a 6-0 victory. Their only score in the first half came when Borowski centered the ball to Eddie Brock, who made a diving head shot into the goal. Lenny Branson started the scoring off in the second half on a shot 20 yards out with an assist by Brock. Rada scored two goals, (one a penalty kick), and Rebbert and Nino Fleri each added a score to the Seahawk effort. Vince Linden-schmidt had two assists, with Eddie Brock getting another on the Rada goal.

Coach Lane cited Borowski, Brock, Branson, and Rod Becker as playing exceptionally well. Branson and Becker deserve a special note, for they're coming off injuries which kept them out of the Duke match.

This next week Coach Lane called "the most important week of the season". The Seahawks face two colleges who have a strong reputation for good soccer programs, East Carolina University and Campbell College. ECU is having a great season, beating many highly ranked opponents. "They're out for blood against UNC-W, who beat them here last year. Campbell has always had a successful soccer team, winning the NAIA national championship a few years back.

Statistically for the year, the Seahawks look impressive with a total of 36 goals to their opponents' twenty. Gonzalo Rada leads the individual statistics with 13 points, coming from seven goals and six assists. Eddie Brock's three goals and six assists give him nine points for second, with Gil Castella following behind with eight goals for eight points at third.

Runners Show Improvement

How would you like to be at school at 6:30 every morning to run three or four miles, then be ready again by the end of the day to run several more miles?

No, this is not training for PE101. This is practice for members of UNC-W's cross-country team, who average running about 70-90 miles apiece per week. "Cross country takes guts-probably more than any other sport", stated David Warner, the man who brought cross-country to UNC-W last year and is serving in his second year as head coach.

The team is showing a very definite improvement over last year's rookie season. In a recent match against Francis Marion College, three Seahawk runners ran the five mile course in under thirty minutes. Tom Carrella led the Seahawks effort with a time of 26:27, just 27 seconds behind the leader. Clark Butler, running with three stitches in his feet, came in next for the Hawks at 28:35, with Wayne Barbee next at 29:32. Don Kernodde just missed the thirty minute mark with a time of 30:59, his best time ever.

In a cross country meet, seven runners from each team run over a five mile course which is, as the name implies, cross-country. There are no basic regulations concerning the course: its condition varies from school to school. As an example of this, Coach Warner described the differences between the courses here and at Campbell College. "Here we run over loose sand, field, and asphalt," he said, "while at Campbell, its steep hills, gravel, and a golf-course!"

Strategy plays a key role in cross-country meets. While seven team members can run, only five can score. The last two runners serve as "bumpers", trying to knock other team's runners into lower finishing positions. "This means", said Coach Warner, "that having the top runner doesn't mean that much in points. Its getting as many finishers as possible between fourth and eighth."

Cross-country runners seem to be a different breed from our usual student-athlete. For one, there is a pretty even distribution between years, with one class not dominating the squad. There is also a wide range of majors, ranging from pre-med and history to marine biology.

With running 70-90 miles, some of you may be wondering how the runners can keep their grades at an acceptable level. Surprisingly, some cross-country members maintain running helps in their studies. "One member", commented Coach Warner, "said if it wasn't cross-country he knew his grades would fall.

Doubles Play Highlights Tennis

Doubles play has saved the Women's Tennis Team from disgrace and brought an air of respectability to the squad.

This is surprising, because doubles competition is probably the hardest for a young team like the Seahawks to win.

It's very hard to keep a successful doubles pair together, with injuries and conflicting classes and everything else happening.

In the team's last two matches, against Methodist College and East Carolina, all its points were scored by the doubles teams. The number one seeded team of Theresa Hege and Theresa Richardson won both of their matches, while the second seeded team of Cheri Cousins and Patti Canter defeated their ECU opponents.

Head Coach Jane Batson feels the team has the potential for top play. "We just haven't been able to get it all together", she added. "If we play to our potential, I'd like to think we'll break even. I'll be satisfied, though, if we play as well as we should."

The team now has four matches left for the winter season, including meetings with St. Mary's College and Chapel Hill jayvee squad. Both schools are well known for their tennis programs.

She also complimented team on its attitude. "They're all real dedicated", she commented. "Everyone has a good attitude and a real desire to win."

"Sports For All"

"Intramurals are sports for all."

That's what the comment by David Warner, Intramural Director for UNC-W concerning the school's intramural program. "We are here strictly for the students", he added.

At this point, the school is in the middle of the fall intramural calendar. Flag football, a traditional opening season sport, has just ended, with the Jocks finishing an undefeated season. The Dog-Eyes were second with a 4-1 record, with Sigma Alpha Beta finishing third. Other fall favorites (volleyball, tennis, and punt, pass, and kick competition) all finish their seasons by the end of the month. Archery is about to get started, with seven-member squad soccer beginning this week.

For the month of November, intramural activities already fill the calendar. Included this year are one-on-one contests, free-throw shooting, and a Superstars competition similar to the one seen on ABC during the winter. Basketball begins with a pre-season tournament starting November 8, with the regular season getting underway around November 15. Coach Warner emphasized the fact that intramurals are designed for the student's interests. Last spring, a questionnaire was circulated among campus, with the results helping to determine what sports the intramural program would sponsor this year.

The governing body of the intramural program according to Coach Warner, is the class PE 436. This class acts as a council which plans, organizes, and runs all intramural events here at UNC-W. Suggestions also come from this class as to intramural activities for that semester.

In the past the intramural department has offered a varied range of sports from which to choose. One year, for example, a frisbee tournament was sponsored. This tournament was such a success it was even written up in the National Frisbee Group's club magazine. Coach Warner hinted that a frisbee tournament may be sponsored this spring if enough students express a desire to have one. The intramural program is open to all students regardless of standing. They must, however, carry at least five hours and hold a valid I.D. card.

For information on your favorite intramural activity, check the bulletin boards in the gym or the second floor of Hoggard Hall. If you have any suggestions for sports for the spring semester, come by Coach Warner's office (H226) or call extension 337 and let him know. After all, the intramural program is yours and yours alone.

MATH PROBLEM No. 9 STEALING THE CASTLE TREASURE

The ingenious manner in which a box of treasure, consisting principally of jewels and precious stones, was stolen from Gloomhurst Castle has been handed down as a tradition in the DeGourney family. The thieves consisted of a man, a youth, and a small boy, whose only mode of escape with the box of treasure was by means of a high window. Outside the window was fixed a pulley, over which ran a rope with a basket at each end. When one basket was on the ground the other was at the window. The rope was so disposed that the persons in the basket could neither help themselves by means of it nor receive help from others. In short, the only way the baskets could be used was by placing a heavier weight in one than in the other.

Now the man weighed 195 lbs., the youth 105 lbs., the boy 90 lbs., and the box of treasure 75 lbs. The weight in the descending basket could not exceed that in the other by more than 15 lbs. without causing a descent so rapid as to be most dangerous to a human being, though it would not injure the stolen property.

Math Problem

Only two persons, or one person and the treasure, could be placed in the same basket at one time. How did they all manage to escape and take the box of treasure with them?

RULES

1. First correct solution wins a prize.
2. Anyone who has not yet received a bachelor's degree is eligible to participate.
3. Solutions must be legibly written on 8 1/2" x 11" paper and must contain name and mailing address of solver.
4. Submit solutions to Math Department secretary and have her mark it with the time and date of submission.
5. All entries become the property of Pi Mu Epsilon.
6. As soon as winner is determined, announcement will be made by posting the winning solution in this space.
7. New contest begins two weeks from date on current problem sheet.

SOLUTION TO MATH PROBLEM NUMBER 8

The checkerboard contains 64 squares, alternately black and white. Any two adjacent squares, therefore, are of different colors, one black and one white. There are 32 black squares and 32 white squares.

If two squares are removed from diagonally opposite corners of the board then they must be of the same color: either both black or both white. Therefore, there are 32 squares of one color (let's call that color square C1) and (32-2) or 30 squares (call these C2) of the same color as the missing corner squares. Now, if one domino covers 2 adjacent squares and adjacent squares are of opposite colors then the first 30 of the 31 dominoes will cover 30 C1 squares and 30 C2 squares. Thus: (32 C1 plus 30 C2) - (30 C1 plus 30 C2) = 2C1

Thus there are two squares of like colors left to be covered by one domino. Since squares of like colors can not be adjacent, the 31st domino can not cover the last of the squares.

Questions About Sexuality to Be Discussed

"Everything you always wanted to know about sex and were afraid to ask," with apologies to Dr. David Rubin, could be the title of the Human Sexuality Symposium currently offered at the King Hall Auditorium, UNC-W, 7 p.m., Thursday night.

Two programs have been presented already.

The first presentation, October 14th, was "Sexuality and Communication". The program consisted of a 55 minute color film featuring two doctors, Avinoam B. Chernick, M.D., FRCS, and his wife, Beryl Chernick, M.D., Ph.D. The doctors explored the subject of sex and communication using the technique of acting-out both the doctor/patient relationship and the husband/wife relationship. The Chernicks presented both the physiology of sex and how attitudes and feelings affect sexual performance.

The second program, held on October 21st, was conducted by Dr. Mike Manus, and OB GYN at New Hanover Memorial Hospital. The subject of the lecture was "Anatomy, Physiology, Contraception and VD". That topic was vividly described by a colored slides presentation.

This coming Thursday night, October 28th, Kay Tibbler, of the Sociology Department at UNC-W, and her class will explore sexual roles. The demonstration will involve the role-playing technique. Tibbler and her class have concentrated study on sexual role stereotypes and will share their information with the audience.

By having a diversity of professional participation, the Human Sexuality Symposium is designed to share the most sophisticated data now available on human sexuality and its ramifications. The Symposium is sponsored by the UNC-W Counseling Service, the Student Health Center, and Region "O" Family Resources, Inc.

Future programs will include "Psychology and Sexuality", "Ethics, Morality and Sexual Behavior", and "Problems in Human Sexuality". You are strongly urged to attend. Admission is free.

The Prisoner Presented in Snack Bar

"THE PRISONER" Episode 8: "THE GENERAL" In Brief: Who is the General? Only when he can discover the identity of this mysterious, unseen figure can the Prisoner prove that knowledge is not wisdom.

To Amplify: The Prisoner is the only member of the Village community to rebel against the latest orders from Number Two.

The orders are to attend sensational lecture classes introducing a new kind of schooling which promises a university degree level in three minutes. Success is guaranteed and the classes are held by the Professor.

The Prisoner has one ally in his stand, a young man who apparently sympathizes with his point of view. He is No. 12.

But can he be trusted? The crash course method, the Prisoner discovers, is a marriage of science and mass communication, using a subliminal process by which information is projected through a subliminator at a speed thousands of times faster than the eye can record. It is imposed directly on to the cortex of the brain. Whatever the tutor chooses to teach can therefore be mastered, and remembered, by his pupils in a matter of moments.

The Prisoner sees the danger of this. It is a new way of controlling men's minds. They will gain knowledge but lose the ability to think for themselves.

The Prisoner discovers through the Professor's wife that the Professor himself is rebelling, but his attempts to escape are thwarted. His knowledge is being used, but the controlling power is a mysterious, unseen General. The whole scheme is controlled by the General. But who is he and where is he?

In a daring attempt to get at the identity of this unknown figure, the Prisoner breaks into a session being held by Number Two and his assistants. No. 2 is on a hot line to the General, and the Prisoner demands to see him.

Number two assures him that the General can answer anything, and the Prisoner forces him to the point of being allowed to put on question. Just one question. It is, he believes, the one and only question the General will be unable to answer....

Royal Flash Comes to Kenan

The David P. Picker presentation for 20th Century-Fox release was directed by Richard Lester from the screenplay by Fraser. It stars Malcom McDowell as the Victorian rake and adventurer Harry Flashman who is equally famed for his duels in the boudoir and battlefield.

Romantically enmeshed with McDowell are Britt Ekland as the Duchess of Irma and international star Florida Balkan as 19th century courtesan Lola Montez.

The dashing Flashman's friends and foes include Oliver Reed as the Machiavellian manipulator Count Otto von Bismark; Alan Bates as villain's villain Rudi von Sternberg; Lionel Jeffries as a steel-armed assassin; and A-lastair Sim as a British lawyer so proper he wears a frock coat to a Turkish bath.

Guiding the action is director Richard Lester who previously teamed with author Fraser for "The Three Musketeers" and the follow up "Four..."

The story of "Royal Flash" takes up Captain Harry's misadventures some time after being booted out of Rugby, Britain's most elite boys school. The setting is a middle European principality where political intrigue is a way of life, alliances are cemented in the boudoir and the mortality rate form dueling wounds is staggering.

Royal Flash

"Royal Flash", a rousing comedy adventure based on George MacDonald Fraser's international best selling "Flashman" novels premieres Tuesday, Nov. 2 at 8:00 p.m. at the Kenan Auditorium. Admission is 50 cents.

part of the solution. Carter also targets his program at the hardest hit areas—urban dwellers, minorities, and youth—which Ford says nothing about.

Ford is running on his record, and it's not very illustrious.

He hasn't moved ahead on such vital issues as unemployment, government reform, tax reform, welfare reform, health care, foreign policy—and many more. He has restored trust in the White House; he is a decent, honest man. But the storm has settled, and it's time to move on.

Ford doesn't hold promise for progress; he seems content to let things stand still, despite the problems of America's people. Our country has lost its vision; our people are apathetic and indifferent to the direction of our government. And Gerald Ford, as the one man who must bear the responsibility for our unmet needs, does not hold a promise of hope.

Sure he didn't cause all the problems and all the apathy. That is shared by those who have been in Washington as leaders and those there now as leaders. But Ford has failed to be anything more than adequate. We need a leader; it's time for a change.

Jimmy Carter offers leadership; he offers change; he offers most importantly, he offers direction. We must have vision and goals for our country to move ahead with the needs of our time.

Someone has said of this election: "The lesser of two evils is evil." In this case, the lesser of two evils is essential.

FEARLESS

FORECAST

By Bobby Parker

Carter-Mondale

Ford-Dole

Who's going to win the presidential election? It's a tight race, but I'm betting on the leader in the polls, Democrat Jimmy Carter. Though an incumbent has never failed to win re-election, I believe that Jerry Ford is going to claim that distinction on November 3. It is an extremely hard election to call, especially in many of the big states. A change in two or three of these could turn the whole election around.

States such as Illinois, Ohio and Texas can really go either way. Nevertheless, I go with Mr. Carter by a slim popular vote margin, and a 311-227 electoral margin.

White states indicate Carter carries it; black indicate Ford carries it.

Students Air Complaints

per week plans, the students be given tickets to spend as they see fit.

Clark countered this suggestion, saying "if we go to a ticket plan... then the cost of the board plan will inevitably go up." He added that the company who contracts for the food service must have some idea of "guaranteed participation" that will insure them a reasonable income.

Clark explained that this would eliminate the "missed meal factor" which the contracting company takes into account when bidding on the contract. That factor considers the fact that all students will probably miss some meals, and the meal contract can thus be offered at a lower price. Clark said that the company "bids accordingly" with this consideration, and the university then "charges accordingly" to the students. Without the "missed meal factor", prices would be higher, Clark added.

Other complaints, suggestions and questions raised by students included:

- * Too much grease was used in cooking. Ms. Lint said that she had complained this year and last, particularly about the grilled sandwiches, but had received no results. Clark assured the group that this would be looked into.

- * A sandwich bar at lunch. Instead of two meal choices, students suggested that bread and cold cuts be available several times each week. Clark indicated that this could be experimented with right away.

- * Fruit juice. Students requested that a pure fruit juice be available for all meals.

- * Preparation of eggs for breakfast. A question was raised as to why fried eggs were no longer available on request, and Clark said that this was to keep the line moving to accommodate an increased clientele.

- * Days of premium, or special, meals. Students suggested that these meals not be served on Friday nights as many students were not in town on weekends.

- * More ingredients in the tossed salads. Students also requested that raw vegetables such as carrots and cucumbers be served without dressings in place of a second salad course on some nights.

In an interview Friday, Col. Clark said that he had already met with Mr. Osburn and that he had visited the cafeteria kitchen Wednesday night. He also explained that the reason Mr. Osburn did not attend Wednesday's meeting was that the administrators had anticipated more discussion on food contracts than service, and that it was felt that students would be more open in their criticism.

Clark said that he had discussed many of the complaints and suggestions with Osburn. He said that it was agreed that the premium meals would no longer be served on Friday nights, and that raw vegetables would be offered 2 or 3 times each week. He said that more ingredients would be in tossed salads, hairnets and uniforms would be required of all cafeteria personnel, pure fruit juice would soon be offered, and a sandwich bar will be implemented 2 or 3 times per week. He added that the problem of too much grease was also carefully discussed.

By Bobby Parker

The Student Senate met in regular session Thursday night at 7:30 in room 218 of the Chemistry building. There were only a few matters discussed, including an allocation for WCNU and a proposed constitutional amendment. Vice-president Paul Laird called the meeting to order, and in the absence of Secretary Tracy Miller, he called the roll. Eight senators were absent: Bob Browning, Tom Raines, Carol Raines, Joanne Gentry, Leonard Sibley, Teresa Hege, Clay Fairley, and Kent Wiggins. SGA Treasurer Mark Wax gave a brief financial report which stated that 30 per cent of the total SGA funds had already been spent. Wax reported that there were sufficient funds to cover a proposed allocation to WCNU of $264.

That allocation is for a trip to Chicago to a national conference of college radio station workers that the WCNU staff hopes to make. The motion to allocate that amount was passed without debate.

Sophomore Vice-president Ray Warren gave a report from his committee which was appointed to investigate complaints over the food service and contracts. He stated that the committee had met with Student Affairs officials and that the student complaints were received cooperatively.

Paul Walker was confirmed as senior class vice-president to fill a vacancy in that position

Senate Meets Thursday

Walker was nominated by Senator Clay Fairley. The constitutional amendment that has been proposed would provide weekly senate meetings instead of the present provision for meetings every two weeks. It was originally offered by Warren, who requested at Thursday's meeting that the student referendum to approve the amendment be held before Saturday, November 6. This stipulation was agreed upon by the full Senate.

The meeting adjourned at approximately 8:15. Laird called a special meeting for tomorrow night at 7:30 in C 218. All interested students are welcome to attend.

Academic Honor Code to Be Considered

This is a proposal from the AD HOC Honor Code Committee which the faculty will consider as a possible recommendation to the Chancellor. ACADEMIC HONOR CODE

The University of North Carolina at Wilmington is committed to the proposition that the pursuit of truth requires the presence of honesty among all involved. It is therefore this institution's stated policy that no form of dishonesty among its faculty or students will be tolerated. Although all members of the university community are encouraged to report occurrences of dishonesty, each individual is principally responsible for his own honesty. The following definitions and procedures are provided in the interest of helping all to realize the high value that is placed on academic integrity and the means that will be employed to ensure its preservation.

I. Academic Dishonesty Offenses

Many forms of academic dishonesty are too obvious to require definition. Cheating on tests, providing or receiving unauthorized assistance, tampering with grades and records, stealing exams, and other similar misdeeds are patently dishonest and need no further discussion.

There is, however, one offense that has not always been subjected to the full disapproval it deserves, and that is plagiarism. Therefore, the following description is provided so that the policy of this institution is clear.

Plagiarism is the act of taking the work of someone else and passing it off as one's own. It is doubly unethical, since it deprives the true author of his rightful credit and then gives that credit to one to whom it is not due. It is thus a form of thievery as well as fraud, and is thus totally out of place in an institution of higher learning.

Since in stealing the work of another one can use it in different ways, there are different kinds of plagiarism. The following three kinds are described by Harold C. Martin and Richard M. Ohmann in their book, THE LOGIC AND RHETORIC OF EXPOSITION (1963):

A. Word-for-Word Copying. Whenever someone else is directly quoted, honesty and courtesy require acknowledgement of the source. The text should be placed in quotation marks and its exact location should be indicated either in the text itself or in a footnote.

B. The Mosaic. To intersperse a few words of one's own here, and there while basically copying the work of another is obviously unethical, unless one clearly acknowledges that this is being done. Should there be a valid reason for doing so, then quotation marks or a general footnote should be used to show what belongs to the source and what is one's own contribution.

C. The Paraphrase. Once more the crucial point is acknowledgement. Sometimes one can paraphrase in order to simplify, abbreviate, or improve upon an original, but the reader deserves to know what is being presented to him and whose work it represents. Therefore, acknowledgement of the source is required within the text or by a footnote.

In summary, the stated policy of the University of North Carolina at Wilmington on all these forms of plagiarism is clear: conscious use of sources is always to be acknowledged.

II. Judicial System

In order to enforce the policy of academic integrity, a mechanism for handling violations is provided. To ensure justice and protect individual rights, a two court system is employed.

A. Academic Court

The Academic Court consists of two students (elected by the Student Senate), two faculty members (appointed by the Chancellor for one-year terms following recommendations by the Committee on Committees), and the Vice-Chancellor for Student Affairs. The Vice-Chancellor for Student Affairs presides over this court.

An Attorney General and a Defense Attorney are appointed by the President of the SGA. A defendant may choose his own defense attorney, so long as that person selected is not a member of the court system.

B. Court of Appeals

The Court of Appeals is composed of the Academic Dean, a Dean of Students, the chairman of the Faculty, the President of the SGA, and the President of the Senior Class. The Academic Dean presides over this court.

C. General Court Rules

1. No individual can serve as a member of both of these courts.

2. The presiding officer of each court is responsible for maintaining records of each proceeding. The records are filed in the Student Affairs Office.

3. The courts shall function in such a way as to ensure the right of due process and fair hearing to every defendant, including the presumption of innocence until found guilty, the right to know the evidence and to face witnesses testifying against him, and the right to advice and assistance in his own defense.

4. The presiding officer will appoint replacements in cases of conflicts of interest or unavoidable absence.

5. The five judges decide by majority vote on the innocence or guilt of the defendant, and also on the suggested penalty.

6. The defendant may appeal a decision of the Court of Appeals; but if he is found innocent by any one of these courts, the case is at that point automatically closed, and the student cleared unless additional evidence is disclosed.

7. An appeal by the plaintiff may be heard in the Court of Appeals only if the presiding officer of that court agrees that sufficient new evidence is available to warrant a new trial.

III. Judicial Procedure

A. Out-of-court Settlement. When an instructor suspects a student of academic dishonesty, the first avenue of resolution may be private. If the penalty proposed by the instructor is acceptable to the student, the incident can be dropped; the instructor must, however, be sure the student is aware of his option to go through the courts. The instructor may let the court decide the case, at his discretion.

B. Initiating Court Action

1. The Student Attorney General is contacted by either party; he is then responsible for gathering data pertinent to the case.

2. After meeting with both parties, the Attorney General determines a mutually agreeable date for their appearance before the Academic Court.

3. The defendant must be allowed a reasonable time to prepare for his defense. However, all cases should be handled expeditiously so that court proceedings should be underway within two weeks of the initial charge.

C. Suggested Penalties for

Proven Offenses

1. If the court finds a student innocent of the charge, the instructor involved must acknowledge the student's legal innocence and ensure fair treatment of the student.

2. If the defendant is found guilty of the charge, the court suggests a penalty, considering all circumstances in the case. Either failure in the course or suspension for the remainder of the semester is generally appropriate for an offense of academic dishonesty.

D. Implementation

1. Following settlement of a case, notification of the outcome of the case and the suggested penalty, if appropriate, is sent to the defendant, the faculty member involved, the Academic Dean, and the Chancellor. A copy of this notification is placed on file in the Student Affairs office along with the other records of the proceeding.

2. The authority to determine the course grade resides with the instructor, subject to the existing grade appeal process.

3. The authority to suspend or expel resides with the Chancellor.

Q: What is Satanism? -D.P.

A: The shortest, most direct response to that question would be to say, "The worship of Satan", but I imagine you're looking for more of an answer, something along the lines of what Satanism is about.

Satanism is a religion, a real religion, and its followers treat it as such, honoring their god in the manner they think best befits him. The typical religious service is, at least in some churches, fairly long. Too long, I'm afraid, to include in this column.

However, one of the beliefs of those who practice Satanism is that while one is on earth one is opposed to engage in all earthly pleasures possible. In other words, "The rules are there ain't no rules."

Satanism, though, should never be confused with Witch craft because Witches and Satanists believe in two separate, distinct, and totally different gods and so are completely unrelated.

Q: What is a Succubus? -C.A.

A: A succubus (plural succubi) is a female demon which tries to seduce young men, and she will stop at nothing to do so.

A particularly rotten trick of hers is to animate a body she has stolen from a tomb or grave and then go seek company. The young man whom she has seduced, upon awakening, find himself lying snuggled up to, not a beautiful woman, but rather a decaying corpse.

Strangely, succubi, demons though they are, are sometimes possessed of a romantic nature and have been known to fall in love with the men they sought after.

WEEKLY SPECIAL

World Watching U.S. Election Closely

by Jack Anderson
with Joe Spear

WASHINGTON - The president of the Philippines, Ferdinand Marcos, placed a telephone call the other day to Indonesia's Foreign Minister Adam Malik. Malik had learned that Malik was visiting the United States. Malik took the call in his suite in New York City's Waldorf Astoria Hotel.

The Filipino leader called all the way from Manila to ask about the U.S. election. Malik said it looked as if it would be a close election. Marcos then asked what Malik thought of the candidates.

Perhaps the Indonesian foreign minister was unsure whether his phone was monitored. But he responded very cautiously. He mentioned no names. But finally, he said that he thought world interests would be best served by an experienced American president.

The telephone conversation between the two Asian leaders shows how closely the world is watching the U.S. election. Intelligence reports also indicate that most world leaders, like Malik, would prefer to see safe, predictable Gerald Ford win.

They are apprehensive about the inexperienced, untested Jimmy Carter. Not that they have anything against him. They simply prefer the known Ford rather than the unknown Carter.

Even America's adversaries would rather see Ford elected than take a chance on Carter. Secret intelligence documents, in fact, suggest that the Soviets have deliberately sought to avoid a crisis in Africa or the Middle East. They didn't want to embarrass Ford during the presidential campaign.

They have also been more cooperative in the secret disarmament negotiations. They have made several pre-election concessions without giving up any major points. There is reason to believe that they were trying to offer Ford a pre-election arms limitation agreement - a political bonus to help him win the election.

An intelligence analysis points out that the Soviets made a similar effort to put Richard Nixon in a good light during the 1972 campaign. They place great stock in personal diplomacy. They have established a personal rapport with both Gerald Ford and Henry Kissinger. And the Soviets prefer to deal with adversaries they know.

CRUDE DIPLOMACY: A vulgar crack about the blacks cost Agriculture Secretary Earl Buttz his job. We recently learned about another vulgar crack by a high official. This one was made by an ambassador to Yugoslavia. Laurence Silberman. He even put it in writing. Silberman is known for his hair-trigger tongue. His intemperate remarks about the Yugoslavian leadership have caused an uproar in Belgrade. They also offended a Yugoslavian restaurant captain in Toronto named Muradin Debranja.

The emotional Debranja wrote an angry letter to the American ambassador. Debranja urged Silberman to get out of Yugoslavia before he found himself in trouble.

Silberman fired back a highly unusual aide memoire. It is written on the official letterhead of the U.S. embassy.

"Dear Mr. Debranja," it says. "I have received your letter of August 4. Kiss my A-." It is signed Laurence H. Silberman, Ambassador.

We reached Debranja in Toronto. He wants an apology. "We also reached Silberman in Belgrade. He is still prickly over the incident. He said the restaurant captain had threatened him."

BASHFUL BETTORS: Federal law requires professional gamblers - or anyone else who earns more than $500 a year from wagers - to apply for a special occupational tax stamp.

The list of registered gamblers is kept confidential. But we've obtained a breakdown. In all of Nevada, only 120 gamblers are registered. In New Jersey, where organized crime abounds, no gamblers at all are registered. There are also no gamblers in Arizona, Colorado, Connecticut and Hawaii. And there are only three gamblers in Florida and three in New York.

The state of Washington, apparently, has the most honest gamblers. There, 347 of them are registered.

The FBI claims that gambling is the single largest industry in the United States. It rakes in an estimated $67 billion a year. Yet only 1,297 gamblers in the entire country admit they make more than $500 a year from gambling.

It looks as if a lot of gamblers are violating federal law. Yet there has been no federal crackdown.

HENRY'S BEST FRIEND: Some government officials take their secretaries on official trips. But our redoubtable Secretary of State Henry Kissinger, takes his dog, Tyler. Tyler is a yellow Labrador, a birthday present from Kissinger's wife Nancy.

Kissinger takes Tyler not only on official trips but on vacations. The Kissingers, for example, are planning a post-election vacation in the Virgin Islands. They have gone there before. The last time, Tyler chewed up a $300 rug.

But the Kissingers can't stay angry at Tyler. They intend to take him again.

PEANUT COMEBACK: This is the year of the peanut, politically speaking. Jimmy Carter has given the lowly peanut a whole new image.

The Georgia Peanut Commission told us that business is booming. Inquiries about peanuts have doubled. The commission is increasing the number of samples this year from two to three million peanuts.

Of course, everyone wants peanuts from Jimmy Carter's farm. But Carter, ironically, isn't a big peanut producer. The peanuts from his farm in Plains, Georgia, also aren't sold to supermarkets. Carter grows "seed" peanuts. He sells them to other peanut farmers for future crops.

for a guaranteed trial within 90 days, and said that this "sure justice" would help reduce crime. Flaherty also lent his support to the death penalty, though he indicated a need for more discretion in its application.

One of the recurring themes of Flaherty's campaign has been that he saved North Carolina taxpayers $50 million as Secretary of Human Resources. Asked to expand on this claim, Flaherty said that the savings had come in various cuts and reforms, such as in the operation of state hospitals and a reduction of unneeded office space in the Department. He also cited a $22 million savings on the state's Medicaid program by contracting with an outside company to handle the state's applications. He said he had "no apologies" for that decision, which was the center of some controversy when the company cancelled their contract with the state.

Flaherty issued his support for a constitutional convention to consider such amendments to veto power for the governor allowing the governor to succeed himself, recall power for the people, and the appointment rather than election of the state insurance commissioner and superintendent of public instruction. He indicated his support of veto power, succession, and the recall.

Flaherty criticized Democrat Hunt for opposing a constitutional convention, saying that this indicates a contradiction of Hunt's proposal to involve the state's 5.5 million people in government decisions. He continued by saying that though Hunt has endorsed the veto proposal, he has done nothing as president of the state senate to have legislation passed to provide it.

"If he wanted to do something, there's no better place" than the legislature where Hunt has been the past four years, Flaherty said.

Flaherty also expressed support for the repeal of the intangibles tax; pledged to work for programs to aid the handicapped; offered a plan to keep electricity rates low, but said that rates would inevitably go up with inflation; and said he will neither work for nor against liquor by the drink.

Poetry Contest Winners

By Bobby Parker

Awards for the 1976 University Poetry Contest at UNC-W were announced Thursday morning at 11:30 in the SRO Theatre in Kenan Hall on the school's campus. The contest is sponsored each year by the Department of English, and is financed by the North Carolina Junior Sorosis.

Over a hundred poems were entered this year, with prizes given for first, second and third places, $50, $30 and $20 respectively. The contest is open to all UNC-W students, and the winning poems are published in the University's literary magazine, the ATLANTIS.

Mrs. Dorothy Hall won the first place prize with her poem entitled "The Silent One." Mrs. Hall is a junior English major who said that she had entered the contest before, but had never won.

One of the judges for this year's contest, Michael Church, who is a graduate of UNC-W and is currently a graduate student in the creative writing at UNC-Greensboro, gave a brief summary of what impressed the judges about the winning poems in an interview after the presentation ceremony. The other judges were Mrs. Millie Modlin, an English teacher at John T. Hoggard High School in Wilmington, and John Randt, who gave brief remarks about the contest, present, that the judges used.

Church said that the sustained rhythm of Mrs. Hall's poem contributed to its effectiveness. He also noted the "very interesting language" and "imaginative treatment" of the subject.

The second place poem, written by Gerald Cooney, was "The Decay." Cooney is a senior majoring in English and economics. Church said of Cooney's poem that it was a familiar subject treated in an imaginative way, and pointed out that the language used was very well chosen.

Susan Willis' "small talk" won the third place prize, and Church stated that the most impressive facet of this poem was the rhythm that was achieved. He also noted the structure and alliteration as particular strengths of this poem.

Two poems also received honorable mentions: "Modest Modiste" by Joanne Essey, and Katherine Stiles' "The artless, naive stripling." Church said that the sustained imagery and the use of language of "Modest Modiste" were particularly impressive. Miss Stiles' poem, he cited the juxtaposition and the ambiguity of the imagery that allowed different interpretations as its notable qualities.

Miss Essey is a junior majoring in elementary education, and Miss Stiles, a senior in philosophy and religion.

The awards ceremony was attended by approximately 75 people. Dr. James Collier, Associate Professor of English, welcomed the audience and introduced Mr. Randt, who gave brief remarks about the contest, present, that the judges used.

Randt said that he was impressed by the large number of poems dealing with love relationships. He stated that there was a balance in the judging because he looked mainly for the universal theme projected by the poem while Mrs. Modlin and Mr. Church, who both have extensive experience with poetry writing, looked at the structure and rhythm of the poems as well.

Dr. Brooks Dodson, chairman of the UNC-W Department of English, presented the awards to the winning students, and Mrs. Anne Fitzgibbon of the university Department of Drama and Speech read each winning poem. Many of those present commented that the quality of Ms. Fitzgibbon's reading added much to the impact of the poems.

Poetry Winners: Katherine Stiles, Jo Anne Essey, Gerald Cooney, Dorothy Hall.

It was also announced at the ceremony that Mr. Church will present a reading of his own poetry at UNC-W this fall.

After the presentation, refreshments were served by the N.C. Junior Sorosis.

Eat, Children, Eat

(CPS)--For about four bucks, E.R. Yokum's Philadelphia restaurant will write home to tell your mother you're eating well. In addition to dinner, Yokum will dash off a postcard that reads: "Dear Mom, Your brilliant college kid was seen eating a decent meal at E.R. Yokum and Company. Yes, we're sure it was your kid. (Student's name) was eating soup, salad, entree, roll and butter. So stop worrying already! Sincerely, E.R. Yokum and Company." There's also a P.S. at the end of the card. "(Student's name) says to send more money."

Pre-Presidential Cover-Up

Standing naked beside a fountain in a traffic circle, Collins was interrupted by state police officers one minute and 36 seconds after stacking his clothes on the sidewalk and starting his talk.

Cigarette Smoking Is Dangerous to Their Health

(CPS)--Bill Adkins had more than a little pain in his gulliver after he was the victim of a brutally unique disciplinary measure at his high school in Hume, Missouri.

Adkins and a cohort, Terry Weatherman, were nailed with the goods one day last week--cigarettes in their pockets.

Principal Kenneth Hightower offered the teenage rapscallions a choice of punishment. Either two swift swats with a paddle or consumption of the evidence. The boys unwittingly chose the latter.

Later in the day, Adkins was sick and spitting up blood. Weatherman wasn't far behind.

Superintendent Charles Robert Allen conceded the punishment was harsh, but maintained it was necessary to deter the almost 100 students who smoke or chew tobacco on school grounds.

But Mrs. Adkins and Mrs. Weatherman aren't buying that line--both have threatened lawsuits against the administrators.

CARTER EDGES MOCK VOTE

by Bobby Parker

Democratic Party candidates swept all three races in the campus mock election that was held last Thursday and Friday. A significant number of straight-ticket Democratic voters helped put that party's candidates in the winning column.

Jimmy Carter, the former governor of Georgia, who heads the Democratic presidential ticket, defeated incumbent President Gerald Ford by a slim 12-vote margin. Two other candidates on the ballot, Libertarian nominee Roger MacBride and American Party nominee Tom Anderson, also received votes.

There were five candidates listed on the ballot, an exact duplicate of the official North Carolina ballot. No space was provided for write-in candidates, as there is no such provision on the state ballot. However, Californians Jerry Brown, a Democrat, and Ronald Reagan, a Republican, received one write-in vote apiece, though these votes were not tallied in the final totals.

In the presidential race, Carter received 50 per cent of the vote for a total of 116. Ford received 45 per cent with 104 votes, and MacBride collected 5 per cent, or 12 votes. Anderson received only one vote and the fifth candidate on the ballot, U.S. Labor nominee Lyndon LaRouche, received no votes. A total of 233 votes were cast in the presidential race.

The race for governor of North Carolina also yielded a Democrat winner. Lieutenant Governor Jim Hunt polled 55 per cent of the vote to outclass Republican David Flaherty, a former secretary of the state department of human resources, who tallied 41 per cent. The vote totals were 120 for Hunt and 89 for Flaherty. Two other candidates on the ballot were Libertarian nominee Arlan Andrews, who received 7 votes (3 per cent) and American nominee H.F. Sewell, who garnered 2 votes (1 per cent). The number of ballots cast was 218 in the governor's race.

A fifth man received one write-in vote in the gubernatorial race. He is Camden County businessman George Wood, who earlier had challenged Hunt for the Democratic nomination.

Democratic Jimmy Green defeated his Republican opponent, Bill Hiatt, by a 118-76 vote total for the office of lieutenant governor. American party candidate Arlis Pettyjohn captured 4 votes. In percentages, this tally translates 60 per cent for Green, 38 per cent for Hiatt, and 2 per cent for Pettyjohn. A total of 198 students cast ballots in this race.

Former Chapel Hill mayor Howard Lee, who led Green in the initial state primary but lost in a run-off race, received 3 write-in votes.

As stated earlier, the straight ticket voters of the Democratic Party were largely responsible for their candidate's victories. However, it was also noted that President Ford was helped by voters who split their ballots, going for Ford in the presidential race, but voting Democratic in the state races.

It is interesting to note that in all three races, there was a greater voter participation than in the recent Student Government referendum. In that election, only 197 voters turned out. However, faculty members were allowed to participate in the mock election, whereas they couldn't vote in the SGA referendum.

The outcome was not unlike most pre-election polls, which predicted a narrow victory for Carter and wider margins for Hunt and Green. However, since the results of the actual election are now known, you can compare them with the mock election results to gauge how much UNC-W students are in tune with the nation as a whole.

The mock election was sponsored jointly by campus Democrats, the Campus Young Republicans, and the Seahawk.

The Still Point: Seven Myths About the Job Market

Campus Ministry may at least partially be defined at ministering to or helping to meet needs which arise within the campus community. Over the past year one of the most prevalent concerns expressed to me by students has been in the area of jobs. "What am I going to do when I get out of here?" "I just can't find a job!" "There aren't any positions in my field."

These overt statements as well as others in addition to some sense of helplessness and hopelessness have expressed the frustrations felt by current students and graduates as they enter the job-market. Over the next couple weeks, I will attempt to take a whack at some of the myths surrounding the search for a job.

MYTH NO. 1: THERE ARE COMPARATIVELY FEW JOBS 'OUT THERE', ESPECIALLY WHEN THE 'LABOR MARKET' IS 'TIGHT.'

The truth is: there are probably at least two million jobs 'out there' at any given moment. A survey conducted by the National Federation of Independent Business, when the 'job-market' was 'tight', revealed that small businesses alone had one and a half million vacancies (San Francisco Chronicle, December 11, 1974): never mind, big businesses. If you are going to be job-hunting, your problem is not that of canvassing too-few possibilities, but too-many.

MYTH NO. 2: IF YOU CAN'T FIND A JOB, THAT PROVES THAT THERE ARE COMPARATIVELY FEW JOBS 'OUT THERE'.

The truth is: there is a vast difference between existence (on the one hand) and communication (on the other.) YOU exist, for example, but what percentage of the people in your city or town know that? So too with jobs. If you can't find a job, that proves nothing about its existence. It only says something about the rotten Communication 'system' our country has devised, regarding job vacancies. How 'often?' Well, a study done some years ago-allegedly by the Conference Board, and funded by the Ford Foundation-and a study done last year by Toni St. James of the Federal-State Employment Service (in California) both came up with an identical conclusion: between 75-80 per cent of the job-vacancies which exist at any given moment are NOT advertised or otherwise communicated through ANY of the agencies or places that a job-hunter traditionally turns to: viz., newspaper ads, civil service notices, federal/state employment agency, private employment agencies, computer job-banks, etc.

As the new academic year begins, it is well to remind ourselves of some simple truths about the so-called 'job market.' These truths may be obvious to us, but is important to remember that they are anything but obvious to those who are going about job-hunting for the first time.

These myths are taught to all of us, as we 'come of age'. We pick them up from our family, and 'on the street' and wherever people gather together. They are all-pervasive, and compelling just because we meet them everywhere. Yet they are nonetheless 'myths' in the sense of that word-'wife's tales' (or husband's tales), no more to be believed than some of the stuff we pick up from our peers about sex, while we are growing up.

MYTH NO. 3: MOST PEOPLE, WHEN IT IS TIME FOR THEM TO GO JOB-HUNTING, BASICALLY KNOW HOW TO DO IT.

The truth is: there are two basic ways to go about the job-hunt, one of them infinitely more effective than the other. But most people only know about the relatively ineffective way: which depends on resumes, employment agencies, etc. Resumes, on an average, only produce one invitation to come in for an interview, per every 245 resumes that a company receives. Only half these invitations-according to the same survey-were responded to, probably because a few highly-skilled individuals received the bulk

Debate Team Brings Home Silver

The UNC-W Debate Team began its season with a winning start. Two teams, Greta Lint and Ed Stone, and Art McMurtrey and Ray Blackburn, with Mrs. Betty Jo Welch, coach, left at 4:30 Friday morning to attend the University of South Carolina at Columbia Invitational Debate Tournament. When the teams came back home, they had two silver bowls. Both teams had tied for fourth place out of approximately twenty teams. Some of the other competing schools were: Duke, Clemson, Davidson, The Citadel, Carson-Newman (Tenn), Bob Jones, and USC. (It may be noted that at the UNC-W Blockade Runner Invitational Debate Tournament a few weeks ago, Duke and Bob Jones took home trophies for the first three places.)

The national topic this year is Resolved: that the federal government should significantly strengthen the guarantee of consumer product safety required of manufacturers. Such topic encompasses virtually every consumer product; therefore, debaters spend many long hours of researching every possible avenue that other teams might take. Debating is a very time consuming activity; thanks to the SGA who funds the team, it is a very rewarding one.

Wet T-Shirt Contest:

by Ann Sjoerdma
Staff Writer

Reprint from the Daily Tar
Head

When a naive and eager tourist takes to the beaches for a summer sojourn, he has entered a spatial zone beyond the twilight. There he stands, wistfully wondering how to embrace the sordid flavor of habitation peculiar to the coast where the beaches rule the sandy plains.

In the summer of '76, the beaches at Nags Head concocted yet another degenerate evening pastime for the disoriented tourist--the wet T-shirt contest.

"It's not how much you have, ladies," the weasel says, flashing a flesh-eating grin. "It's what you do with it."

It is midnight on any Wednesday at "OZ"--a quasi-discotheque in Nags Head that features, among other things, a 30-minute wait at the bar for a beer and a 45-minute wait at the restroom for whatever.

The weasel, doubling as a master of ceremonies for the prurient affair, stalks his prey. He lures young lovelies into the flesh-devouring den. Twenty-five dollars awaits the winner.

"Fellows, doesn't your lady have mammary glands she and you can be proud of?" the emcee cleverly inquires. "Send her up. Twenty-five dollars for the winner."

Pert cottontails scamper to the dance floor, vying viciously for the precious but few wet T-shirts for contestants.

"Welcome to Nag's Head's famous wet T-shirt contest, folks," the weasel continues. "Famous for... heh, heh, ... T and A."

"Snicker, snicker. Pabst Blue Ribbon dribbles down the chins of the ravenous spectators."

"Where'd ya hide the girls?" "C'mon. I ain't got all night."

The weasel explains the rules.

Rule one: Bras are taboo.

Rule two: The wet T-shirt may be cut and styled in any manner and worn with or without discretion.

Rule three: Contestants must dance to four disco numbers, again, with or without discretion.

Rule four: The bottomless look is NG, a definite "no go." One free-spirited contestant had once brought the contest to a speedy close when the law did not believe she had simply forgotten rule four.

To protect the ladies and the proprietor's reputation, a burly Ursa Major stands on guard, stage right. The scene on the back of his shirt depicts two big-eyed amorous camels below the ominous words, "Let's Hump."

Sashaying to the raucous beats of "Shake Your Booty" the contestants enter the ring. Whole T-shirts have been whittled to wisps of paper-thin cloth, barely covering the essentials, as the case may be. One young woman has hacked at her T-shirt arbitrarily and created the "fringe look."

Another has removed the sleeves and a 6-inch vertical strip of cloth down the center of her garment. She, the rowdies believe, is the lady of the hour.

Needless to say, the Swedes never had it so good in the communal steam baths. The temperature has mounted to a record-breaking level by the power of suggestion. Not a soul lingers by the bar. Beer has become just another four-letter word.

The women in the audience have become sexless, slumping their shoulders into concave-chest oblivion. Ah but the gentlemen--the Wife of Bath would have been ecstatically at home.

Ms. six-inch stripper proves to be the crowd pleaser. Before weasel can say, "All right, girls, let's see a little..." she has shown it. Not so overshadowed by the buxom blonde, the other contestants concentrate on their moves. Music? Dance to the rhythm? Brouhaha. "Honey, we're just doing what comes naturally."

And the spectators relish every moment. The ladies gyrate, clash, rub, sway, contort, wham, bam and shang-a-lang.

The music stops and the audience lights up a satisfying cigarette. A brief repose. Then the next test, another grossly sensuous display. Ms. six-inch has lost her pizzazz and with it, her following. The boisterous audience has mellowed and is now rocking in a boat of boredom.

"Wail, heyull, ya seen two, ya seen 'em all."

Door number one, two, three of four?

The weasel plays applause meter.

"Thanks Y'all," she says, flinging a wisp of hair over her left eye. "Ah really need the money."

Ladies in the audience stand up and the gentleman head for the ninth round. But the beachies have only begun.

"Hey, y'all, let's go to Drafty's Tavern," they beckon. "Free beer and pizza for everybody." Urp.

SEVEN MYTHS ABOUT THE JOB-MARKET*

of the invitations; so, in fact, only one interview actually took place for every 490 resumes that an average company received. Furthermore, the average company conducted three interviews before it made a job-offer, which works out to one job-offer for every 1470 (490 times three) resumes a company receives. That means 1469 disappointed resume-senders, for every resume-sender who did finally secure the offer of a job. Conclusion: resumes are tremendously ineffective ways of digging up a job. But this is all that most job-hunters know about how to go about the job-hunt, because job-hunting is not taught in most high schools and most colleges of this country--so job-hunters are thrown back upon what they've been able to pick up by word of mouth among their peers, or from some of the terrible job-hunting books that bookstores and libraries are filled with. When this 'plan' doesn't work, 99 job-hunters out of 100 have no 'plan B' to fall back on.

MYTH NO. 4: THERE ARE A NUMBER OF PLACES THE JOB-HUNTER CAN TURN TO FOR HELP, THAT HAVE THE JOB-HUNTER'S BEST INTERESTS AT HEART.

The truth is: The quality of help offered by these places is hampered by one minor little detail: they have only a very limited idea about what jobs are available. How limited? Well, an FTC study, released in 1968, revealed that the average private employment agency finds jobs for only 5 out of every 100 people who walk in their doors. A more recent study, this time of newspaper ads, revealed that in two 'typical' cities (San Francisco and Salt Lake) 75-85 per cent of all the employers in those cities did not hire anyone through want-ads, during the entire year. Of course, newspapers continue to publish ads anyway, and private employment agencies continue to make a profit anyway--because there are enough employers who use them both, to permit them to survive (or even thrive). But it is the employers, and not the job-hunters, who support them, and therefore their loyalty is--in the first instance, and the last--to the employers. The basic interest of these places which supposedly have the job-hunter's best interests at heart, is--taking a job-vacancy as The Given--trying the find some job-hunter to match that, even if the job-hunter has to be pushed and shoved into a somewhat different shape, in order to match that Given. What the job-hunter is hoping for, of course, is some place which will take the job-hunter as The Given, and then try to find a job which matches him or her--even if that job has to be pushed and shoved into a somewhat different shape. That sort of place is, needless to say, infinitely more difficult to find. Though college placement offices, and life/work planning such as is springing up all over the country now, does indeed begin by taking the job-hunter as The Given: not to be folded, spindled, or mutilated.

We now have a new office associated with Student Affairs Department. It is called Career Planning and Placement and is run by Mrs. Sandra Harkin. She does have your best interests at heart and if you have questions about careers of life-planning or have generally been "sucked in" by any of the above myths I urge you to go in and talk to her.

Next week we'll look at three more myths that arise once job opportunities come into sight. Till then, happy hunting.

Q: What is a prayer to the Devil? -D.R.

A: I'm sorry to say that I couldn't find very much information on that subject. However, what I did find out was that, at least in a majority of cases, any prayer said backward is deemed a prayer to the Dark one. A Catholic litany said backward is said by some to be an excellent prayer to the Devil, but I don't have the information available to confirm that claim one way or the other.

Q: What is a Griffin? -K.H. A: At last, an animal lover! Griffins (or Gryphons) have been in literature since the time of Herodotus, who spoke of them as winged monsters. Actually, a Griffin is supposed to be quite majestic, not monstrous. These creatures of myth are half Eagle and half Lion, having an Eagle's head, wings, and fore legs, and having a Lion's hindquarters and tail end. One Griffin is larger than eight Lions. Symbolically the Griffin has contradictory meanings. According to an Italian bestiary, it stands for the Devil; yet it is usually represented as an emblem of Christ.

As to the Griffin's personality, well, that has been contradicted a great deal, too. Some say that he is a terrible being that will ruin anything he can, others say that he is graceful and awe-inspiring and that a more noble creature than he cannot be found. Strange, but the same things are often said of man.

cording to an Italian bestiary, it stands for the Devil; yet it is usually represented as an emblem of Christ.

Sexuality Symposium: Psychology and Sexuality

The Symposium on Human Sexuality continues this Thursday evening, November 4, in King Hall Auditorium at 7:00 p.m. The topic for this week is "Psychology and Sexuality" which will be led by Dr. Susan Daniels from George Washington University. Dr. Daniels recently completed her Ph.D. at UNC-Chapel Hill and did extensive research in the areas of sexuality and sexual adjustment. The format of the program will allow for Dr. Daniels' presentation of psychological aspects of sexuality including emotionality and motivation, as well as question-answer and discussion time.

Last week, Kay Tibbler of the UNC-W Sociology faculty and her class in Sex Roles played situations that facilitated exploration and discussion of sex-role stereotyping. The final two sessions, on November 11 and 18 will feature a panel discussion of "Ethics and Values in Sexuality" and Dr. Oliver Bjorksten on "Sexual Problems," respectively.

You are invited to attend any or all of the remaining three sessions at King Hall Auditorium on Thursday evenings at 7:00 p.m. Admission is free.

The Prisoner Presented in Snack Bar

In Brief: The Prisoner is tricked into "discovering" an assassination plot—but who is going to be killed?

To Amplify: Cry wolf often enough, and no one will believe you when the cry is genuine. And this is the simple truth that provides the Establishment with a weapon to use against the Prisoner when an assassination plot is being put in hand.

One man, and one man only, among the villagers is likely to prove a stumbling block in the way of the murder. That is the Prisoner himself. And somehow he has got to be discredited so that no one—not even the intended victim—will believe his warnings.

To prevent his being able to take any action, No. 2 puts into motion a plan which begins when the Prisoner is confronted by a girl who comes to him as a damsel in distress and tells him of an assassination plot which would mean that reprisals would be taken and everyone would suffer.

The Prisoner is wary, but confirmation of her story comes when he is tricked into taking his watch to the watchmaker and sees a miniaturized device which is, in fact, a detonator of explosives, with another device which is the radio operated transmitter.

The watchmaker is the girl's father, and it is clear that he is in the plot; but in spite of the joint appeals made by his daughter and the Prisoner, he refuses to be dissuaded from his course.

The Prisoner does just as No. 2 has anticipated; he goes to No. 2 to warn him that an attempt is to be made on his life. A tape recording of the visit is made which, doctored, can give the impression that this is something the Prisoner does repeatedly.

But on the next visit, the Prisoner finds that another No. 2 is in occupation—an elderly No. 2 who has returned to the village. Is he the potential victim? If so, the method becomes apparent. The attempt will be made at an Appreciation Day ceremony when he will hand over the Great Seal of Office to the younger No. 2.

The Prisoner discovers the method: the explosives will be inside the seal, detonated by remote control. And the Prisoner is the only man who can prevent the killing. To do so, he has got to find the radio operated transmitter before the button can be pressed.

SEAHAWK SPORTS

Hawks Emerge Winners

This year's Seahawk soccer squad has come of age.

In last week's article, soccer coach Calvin Lane acknowledged that this past week would be "the most important one of the season". His team would meet two highly favored opponents in games which would determine whether UNC-W had a winning record this season. The Seahawks met the challenge, downing both East Carolina and Campbell.

Gil Castella scored a "hat trick" (scoring three goals) in the team's 3-0 victory over ECU. "This was a good game for us," said Coach Lane. "We completely dominated it". He also cited their good passing, excellent ball control, and constant attack of the Pirate goal as key elements in the victory.

Castella's first goal came at 15:10 into the first half when a goal shot by Gonzalo Rada bounced out of the goal directly in front of Castella. Rada was credited with the assist. Castella made the halftime score 2-0 on what Coach Lane called "a beautiful shot" thirty yards out. Assisting on the score was Steve Paul. The final score came with twelve minutes left in the game when Castella scored on a pass from Rada.

This game was a big lift for the soccer team. Besides being a decisive victory against a favorable opponent, it also evened the squad's record at 6-6. "This is something", said Coach Lane, "that we've been looking for all season".

Coming off this big win, the Seahawks traveled to Campbell College to face a very physical team. The Hawks controlled virtually the entire game, winning it 2-1. Sophomore Eddie Brock scored both Wilmington goals, the first one coming at twenty minutes into the game. He made the goal after four straight one-touch passes, a picture perfect occurrence in soccer. Jerry Rebbert scored the assist.

In the second half Brock scored again, this time on a poorly blocked goal shot from Gene Borowski. At this point, Coach Lane feels the score should have 4-0 instead of 2-0, as the Seahawks were a much better team than the Campbell squad. Then, on a misplayed ball, Campbell scored with almost ten minutes left in the game. Needless to say, this picked up the Campbell team's morale, and UNC-W had to fall back into a strong defensive pattern to preserve the victory.

The game was a very emotional one, as many Campbell UNC-W matches have been in the past. A rivalry has developed between the two schools in soccer, mainly because in recent years both universities have been contenders for the NAIA playoff berth from this area. That competition was removed this year when the Seahawks moved into NCAA, but the rivalry remains.

The victory over Campbell gave the Seahawks a 7-6 record for the season and a 6-1 record for the month of October. "We haven't really changed that much", said Coach Lane in explaining the comeback. "Mainly, we've developed a confidence in ourselves and our team-mates".

Having met Methodist College yesterday, the Hawks still have one game left. They meet soccer powerhouse Baltimore University here Friday in what has the makings of an excellent soccer match. Game time is 1:00, and Coach Lane urges all students who have supported the team so well this year to come out and watch the match. "We really appreciate your support", he added.

Volleyball Advances to Tourney

Once again, it appears the women's volleyball team will be carrying the Seahawk banner into post-season tournament competition.

Since its beginning, women's volleyball has always been a success here at UNC-WV. This year appears no different, for the team rolled to an impressive 11-2 division record. The two losses came at the hands of Pembroke, whom the seahawks beat earlier in the season, and Guilford. "We should have beat Guilford," said Coach Ann Kraft in explaining the loss.

This weekend, the team travels to Duke University to compete in the state tournament. This tournament, a double elimination affair, will determine the state champion. The Seahawks will meet UNC-Charlotte in the first round and, if they win as expected, face top-seeded Pembroke in the rubber match of their series.

Despite an excellent win-loss record, the squad has not been without its problems. Several starters have missed action due to sickness. Currently, the squad is plagued by the flu, but Coach Kraft feels the team will be ready by tournament time.

Starters for the tournament are Phyllis Creech, Jo Anne Gentry, Carol Ann Moore, Betsy Massari, Melissa Bennett, and Debbie Smith. Others expecting to see action include Pam Bunting, Darlene Treadway, Lynn Blackburn, Cathy Bunn, Kathy Davis, and Gloria Goure.

Jock Talk

Intramural volleyball will be getting into full swing in a couple of weeks. Any interested student who is not participating on the varsity team and is carrying a minimum of 6 hours is eligible to play.

You may register in H-226 from now until Nov. 5. So come out and get involved.

Women's Basketball tryouts will begin November 8 at 4:00 in the gym. Anyone interested in playing varsity-level Women's Basketball is asked to be present. If unable to attend at this time, please contact Coach Ann Kraft in H214-B.

WAYNE ROGERS - ROCK AND ROLL UNIVERSITY

WIZARDO RECORDS

This album is by a former North Carolinian and features almost every form of music found in today's pop sound. To find someone that can make an album of rock, country, disco, reggae, etc. is one thing, but to do an album of it well is another. Rogers seems to fit each category as if he had been playing it all his life.

The first cut, Jon's Green Fonville, is reminiscent of some of the early car songs that the Beach Boys used to turn out. The lyrics read like a script for one of those car films that seem to be coming out like rabbits. Jon inevitably ends up in a crash, but the song does not end there. Wayne assures us that he is still speeding down the highway in the sky. Normally a song like this would come off as a drippy tune, but Wayne's sense of humor carries it off in fine style.

Next is Murphy's Blues and surprise... it's a blues tune. Wayne's voice sounds exactly like he has been hanging around on the delta soaking up the vibrations. With a fine bit of bottlenecking Wayne sings a sad tale of woe about expecting "something everyday" but having "only an empty mailbox to show for it."

For reggae fans we get a spot on the success of Bob Marley and the Wailers. In Pulla Mi Bootleg Wayne makes up rhymes like "wanna parlay?" with "Bob Marley with every line. It can get a little tedious after awhile although the first few times, it is amusing.

The only bummer on the whole album is the disco version of Downtown. It's bad enough having the listen to disco, but to take a song like Downtown and discoize it is a sin. (Downtown you may remember was Petula Clark's first hit.)

The rest of the album runs from rock to country rock and is pleasant. If you are into different forms of music, this album may be what you're after. However if you are a diehard fan of only one type of music, you would do best to avoid it.

ABBA

ATLANTIC SD- 18189

Abba is one of the best pop-rock groups to come about in the 1970's. This two girl two guy group from Sweden has formed a type music which is pop, but contains so many rock elements that it is hard to classify them in either group. I tend to classify them as rock for I find most pop material disgusting. Abba are just the opposite of disgusting.

The one quality the group has which sets them apart from other groups of this type is the way they adopted the disco sound. They are the only group who has added anything to the disco sound since K.C. and The Sunshine Bands started the thing (more or less) over a year ago. Their disco hit "S.O.S." has to go down in music history as one of the best examples of 1970's Disco Music.

"S.O.S." opens the album and is from the group's second album. As I have said, this is the group's blight single and is the song which really put the group up in the ranks. The guitar and moog work make the cut totally different from most disco material in that the music and not just a beat is important. Where Abba is original other groups seem happy to just imitate.

Following this is a very pop type song with a little rock guitar added. The song is "He Is Your Brother" and was written by the group in 1973, before their "Waterloo" days. This cut just can not stand up to their present standards.

ABBA's second single, "Ring, Ring," is next and follows close to the style of "Waterloo". The cut is somewhat weak when compared to that first single but is still a good cut on its own.

"Another Town, Another Train" is next and is from the same period as "He Is Your Brother." This cut too is very pop and a little too sweet but is saved by the group's very well done vocals. "Honey, Honey" from the WATERLOO album follows and has the same illness and cure.

Side One ends with two cuts from the second album, "So Long" and "Mamma Mia." "Mamma Mia" was the follow up single to "S.O.S." and is really a well written and performed cut. This song shows how well the group does work as a whole.

Opening side two is another cut from the second album, "I Do I Do I Do I Do I Do." This was another single but the cut did not do very well on the charts. It also is a little too pop. "People Need Love" follows and is another cut from 1973. By the time you hear one you wonder why they bothered to put this early junk on an otherwise good album.

"Waterloo" is the next cut and was the group's first big single back in 1974. Then, once again, there is another stupid little cut of their early work entitled "Nina Pretty Ballerina." This cut is sickening at its best.

Following this "let's see how pop we can get" cut is another good cut from the second album, "Bang A Boomarang." Then there is "Dance from the WATERLOO album. Both cuts bring the album near a mellow sound.

"Fernando" ends the album and is the only new cut on the album. This cut is one of the most unusual rock songs out today. It has already made top 10 and could make it to the top spot. It makes you wonder how a group from Sweden could sing about the Mexican Revolution yet the vocals and music are so well done that your question is easily forgotten. This goes to show that Abba has a truly universal sound.

All in all, ABBA'S GREATEST HITS is a very well put together album. With the exception of the bad early material, all the songs are great hits. If the group could get a rock freak like me to take notice, you know something special must be in their music. Till Then, Rock-Out. J.W.

SHORTS FROM CPS

Man From Stasafran

(CPS)--A 19-year-old man in Bay City, Michigan was found a long way from his alleged home, Stasafran, a planet he said was located off route Earth, north of the orange Milky Way.

The police questioned the man who was sleeping in a motel doorway, who claimed to fleeing nuclear holocaust on his home planet. The man gave "A-1-B-2 Proton Street" as his home address and offered as proof of his identity the letters "TS" tattooed on his arm, standing for "Travel Spaceman."

Travel Spaceman spent the day in the Bay County jail drunk tank and under further questioning said the "TS" actually stood for Terry Spencer. Captain Spencer was charged with public intoxication and held for trial.

Swearing In Style

(CPS)--What the hell! How can you swear without using dirty words.

Pat Morriss, a freshman at North Dakota State University in Fargo could tell you how to do it. Morriss proved his ability to blaspheme creatively early this month when he won a cussing contest held during NDSU's Wild West Days celebration.

Barraging a friend with his foulst laundered language,

Morriss said, "You are the biggest, low-down, four-flushin', penny-ante, yellow-bellied, lame-brain, scum-of-the-earth, inept, wishy-washy, filthy, rotten, indiscriminate, low-riding, baby-rapin', no-good, lyin', cheatin', horse-thievin', cattle-rustin', bush-wackin', verminous sewer rat and all-around-dirty-varmint I have ever had the misfortune to meet."

You Asked For It . . . Nixon's Greatest Hits

(CPS)--Now you, too, can own the best of Richard Nixon. Posterity Tapes in Illinois has released a 60 minute tape that includes excerpts from Nixon's '52 Checkers speech, '62 last press conference, '73 first Watergate speech, '74 resignation speech and his farewell to the White House Staff.

The tape which promises no fancy deletions costs $5.95. Any takers?

Marriages In Vermont

(CPS)--A recent advertisement in the classifieds of a Vermont college newspaper offered simple marriage ceremonies for just $5. However, the ad offers a special feature.

If the Justice of the Peace's wife makes chicken soup, the ceremony costs $10. For richer or poorer, in sickness and in health, well-fed or undernourished. . .

Science Fiction Comes to UNC-W

Do the names Arthur C. Clarke, Issac Asimov and Ray Bradbury mean anything to you? If not, then you haven't been reading science fiction lately.

What these three men have in common is that they are considered by literary critics to be the top science fiction writers of today. And what's more, you will have the opportunity to read some of their works, plus those of such authors as Kurt Vonnegut, Frank Herbert and Ursula K. LeGuin, and receive three hours credit for it.

Dr. Joanne Corbett of the English Department will be offering in her usual dynamic style, a new and exciting course on science fiction literature beginning the coming spring semester of 1977. The class will be held at 10:30 a.m. on Monday, Wednesday and Friday.

The class will be lecture with discussion and six color film strips will also be included. Some of the themes that will be covered are alien contact, alien and parallel worlds and time travel.

If you're interested in reading provocative literature that is both stimulating and fun, you had better pre-register for this course as soon as possible because there will be a limit of thirty students. Lance Smith especially needed, females are encouraged to join in.

The Northside Neighborhood Center is in need of volunteers for their program on weekday afternoons from 3:30 to 5:00 p.m. Volunteers assist with educational recreation for groups of young children or if they wish, spend time weekly with just one child who needs special attention. These children are chosen for attendance at the center because of their special needs. Services at the center can be expanded to include more children with an increase of volunteers.

If you are interested in either of these programs, or would like further information, contact Al Harris in the Student Activities Office, extension 264.

1977 MR. UNCW PAGEANT

An event unprecedented in the history of UNC-W took place on the campus on December 4, 1975 as James "Boomer" Wishon was crowned the first Mr. UNC-W. Tomorrow night, Boomer will relinquish his throne. On Thursday, November 11, at 7:30 p.m. in Kenan Auditorium, the 1977 Mr. UNC-W will be selected. Each of the contestants will be observed by a panel of seven judges in dress attire, swimsuit, and personality. The judges are: Helena Check, Dean of Women; Ralph Parker, Dean of Men; Lindy Creech, Miss Wilmington, 1975; Shirley Gilbert, from WWAY-TV3; Slim Mills, from WECT-TV6; Charlie King, Assistant Dean of Students for Residence Life; and Beth Hicks, Miss Pleasure Island.

The seven semi-finalists will be judged in a talent competition. The contestants' talents this year include tap dancing, a martial arts demonstration, harmonica playing, mouthing records, singing, and even a strip tease. The five finalists will then be asked an original question.

There is quite a handsome group of men competing, and wait til you catch a view of those bodies. Now, girls, we only ask one thing: don't molest these sex idols before they have a chance to complete the show. After all, who wants an exhausted Mr. UNC-W? Once the pageant is over, they are all yours.

There's something for everyone. The contestants include: P.E., biology, accounting, history, music and political science majors. There's also a university staff member competing.

Come gaze at these men when they appear in suits and ties. Swoom when they present themselves in those "little" bathing suits. (Just don't touch!) Let yourself relax and enjoy entertainment by Steve Shields, the comedy act—"The Mad Flatter"—and Coleen Hines.

Admission is free to all students with their I.D.s and only 50 cents to all non-students. The pageant is coordinated by Darlene Pearsall and will be emceed by Becky Young and Robert Maxey.

Absentees and Lack of Communication Discussed by Senate

By Bobby Parker

The student Senate met in regular session Thursday night at 7:30, discussing so-called breakdown of communications among students and administration and the matter of absences of many senators from meetings that have plagued the student legislative body since the beginning of the academic year.

Four senators were absent for the meeting—Bobby McQueen, Teresa Hege, Leonard Sibley, and Dawn Brickley. A lengthy discussion of the absentee problem centered around the repeated absences of several senators. According to senate rules, a senator may not have more than three unexcused absences before being reprimanded by the Senate.

SGA Secretary Tracy Miller reported that two senators had accumulated the maximum number of absences—Bobby McQueen, and Leonard Sibley. In addition, freshmen senator-elect Joseph Zalkin has not attended any meeting, and thus has not yet been inaugurated.

Sophomore Vice-President Ray Warren urged the impeachment of McQueen and Sibley, saying that this would give them the opportunity to carry their case to the student courts. But Sophomore President Karin Whaley said that the Senate should call the senators before the Senate to explain their absences rather than implementing impeachment proceedings.

"These people don't deserve leniency," Warren said in proposing impeachment.

"These people have had notice. They know what the rules are. This (impeachment) is not harsh."

Whaley, however, countered, "If they're interested enough to go through the court proceedings, they're interested enough to come to the meetings."

Senator Greta Lint joined Warren, saying that it's time "to go ahead and chop heads" of those who have been repeatedly absent.

Whaley made a motion to first contact the absentee senators to give them a chance to explain and a roll call vote passed the motion. Voting yes were Whaley, Tom Raines, Carol Raines, Keith Hedrick, Clint Myers, Francis DeLuca, Clay Fairley, Paul Walker, Scott Olson, Cindy Buxton, Glen Downs, Parks Griffin, and Kent Wiggins. Voting no were Warren, Lint, Bob Browning, and Tommy Long.

Vice-President Paul Laird, presiding over the meeting, appointed Warren, as chairman of the senate investigating committee, to contact the two senators to get a explanation as to their absences.

In an interview after the meeting, Warren expressed his disappointment that the Senate had failed to use its power of impeachment. He stated, "I think the Senate backed down from taking a stand."

David Brickley, former chairman of the videotape committee, addressed the Senate concerning what he termed a "breakdown between students and administration" of communications. He listed several suggestions that he thought might improve communication among students, stating that something must be done "to make them (students) aware of what's going on."

Brickley suggested that senators make themselves more available to the student body, that a bulletin board be set up strictly for SGA-student communications, that administration officials be invited to address Senate meetings, and that the Senate "get on the backs" of campus communications media to insure maximum use of their reach.

Brickley specifically urged that the campus radio station, WCNU, be urged the implementation of newscasts in the operations, and that more use of the reports that are broadcast over Channel 3 television be realized. Senator Lint, who works at WCNU, stated that the station "recognizes the problem" and has "got our foot in the right direction." The broadcasts over Channel 3 are on every other Thursday at approximately 12:15. Brickley supervises their production.

A special committee was appointed to deal with the communications problem with Sophomore President Whaley as chairman. The committee met after Thursday's meeting.

In other action, the Senate confirmed Michael Disher to replace Beth Hicks as chairman of the Fine Arts Committee. Hicks was asked to resign when she became unable to fulfill her obligations on the committee, and Vice-president Laird reported that Disher had been doing much of the actual work on the committee.

Senator Carol Raines reported that the marine sciences publication "Forum" had expressed a desire to obtain some old typesetting equipment that the Senate has been trying to get rid of, and Senior President Clay Fairley moved the recognition of a new club, the Society of Enterprising Xenophiles (S^EX), which was approved.

Sophomore President Whaley presented the proposed honor code that will be discussed more at this week's meeting.

Improvements Noted in Cafeteria Food Service meeting.

By Bobby Parker

Several improvements have been noted recently in the food service of the cafeteria following a presentation of student complaints and the formation of a committee to represent student concerns. The committee has met with administrative officials as well as a representative of Interstate United, Inc., the company which holds the University's food contract.

Helen Pantazis, chairman of the student committee, and Greta Lint, a member of that committee, reported that they had met with the Interstate representative. Director of Auxiliary Services James K. Clark and committee member Tom Hunt also attended that

The most visible of the improvements is the sandwich bar, which offers cold cuts twice a week at lunchtime. Most students are very pleased with the new operation, a random survey indicated.

Ms. Lint pointed out that there was a less greasy taste to the food overall. The salad bar has been supplemented to include tomatoes and occasionally carrots, cucumbers, and celery. Fried eggs are again offered at breakfast, and pure fruit juice will soon be offered at every meal.

All of these improvements were part of the list of suggestions presented by the student committee. Other improvements are also being discussed with cafeteria management.

"Halloween Weekend Destroyed My Faith . . ."

Dear Editor,

I have attended UNC-W for over three years, and in that time none of the school policies ever upset me greatly or disturbed me to any degree. However, Halloween weekend destroyed my faith in the system.

There was a Halloween party Friday evening for UNC-W students. I called the school that night and asked for information concerning the party and learned three things:

1. The gathering was to be held at the Pub.
2. If a costume was worn, admission and beer were free; without a costume, admission was a quarter and beer was free.
3. The party was open to all UNC-W students.

It sounded like a good deal, so I hunted for a costume, dressed up and went to the pub, only to be told that if I wasn't a dorm student I would have to pay $2 for admission. Several other students were told the same thing, so there was a varied assortment of witches, ghosts, clown and animals with nothing to do and nowhere to go.

Needless to say, it was not a happy situation. The party was advertised as a school function, not a dorm function. If discrimination was going to be practiced, the party should have been held at the dorm, and it should have been clear that residency on campus was required. Since this was not done, it was outrageous to have a $2 admission fee for off-campus students.

There is no way I can excuse the inconsiderate people who organized this function. After I took the time to call, I expected the decency of receiving the correct information but no mention was made of the $2 admission fee. To avoid future mix-ups, advertising should clearly state all conditions.

In closing, let me say that I would like to be able to regard this as a misunderstanding, but it's hard to forgive such an incident. Until I can be guaranteed more consideration, I will not return to any more of the school parties. Emily Davis Bridgman

Yearbook Wants Your Mug

Make the yearbook a better book this year—put your picture in it. Out of a student body of approximately 3,000 students, only 400 have made appointments to have their pictures made. The reason for requesting appointments is for the convenience of the student. Hopefully, there will not be waiting periods for either you or the photographer.

However, some of you would rather just drop by the Fledgling office upstairs in the Pub when you have a chance. This is fine provided there are not people being photographed at the time. If so, you will have to wait until the photographer is free. All the yearbook staff wants is for you to have your picture taken—any way we can entice you to do it. We have offered free beer as a prize. This is supposed to move practically any UNC-W student to act, but we concede defeat!

There are many reasons to have your picture made:

1. For your boyfriend.
2. For your girlfriend.
3. For you.
4. It will really please your parents.
5. Christmas presents for all the people you like.
6. Christmas presents for all the people you dislike; especially if the feeling is mutual.
7. To prove to your parents that you really do attend UNC-W.
8. To prove to your friends that you really do attend UNC-W.
9. To prove to your present professors that you attend UNC-W.
10. If you don't especially want your picture taken, don't you want a yearbook to look at 5 of 10 years from now to remember the "good ole' days"?

The portraits are being offered this year at a very reasonable price for the quality. There is no obligation to buy them whether they turn out good or bad. Please do it for us. If you have your picture taken, we will be able to use them in the yearbook. After all what book could be any good at all without a picture of you in it!

Portraits are being taken on Nov. 8, 9, 10 for Seniors. For the other classes, they are being taken Nov. 11, 12, 15, 16, 17, 18 and 19.

Sandwiches and Microwave Get the Ax

By Greta Lint

Well, folks, I suppose you've been wondering what happened to the sandwich/fruit machine for Belk Hall. So has Charlie King. So has Col Clark. So have I.

Remember the petition? We wanted a sandwich/fruit machine and microwave oven. There were 142 names of dorm students who agreed to use the machine. (I didn't have time to contact any more students.) We were told the machine was ours—all we needed were people to use it. It was told that R.A.T. would not have to spend one cent for the oven. Since Canteen has the other machines, the profits made from them would cover the cost of the oven. Sounds nice? We all thought so. However, as with all good things, they must come to an end; it's the same with the sandwich machine.

Canteen decided that R.A.T. would have to buy the oven. Also, a greater number (than told to me before) of sandwiches would have to be purchased. If they were not bought, the machine would be removed. Therefore, I was asked, what would R.A.T. do with a microwave oven? We all know that answer—nothing! So, folks, we'll just have to try again next year.

Random Thoughts in the Election Aftermath

He actually won.

Jimmy Carter, the man from Plains—a peanut farmer, no less—who started out just as obscure as any of his opponents 22 months ago, climbed the ladder step by step and finally made it to the top of the White House portico.

He defied all the myths. Everyone thought you had to start from Washington. Carter didn't. Everyone thought you had to have a political base. Carter didn't. And everyone thought you couldn't come from the South. Carter did.

The choice was as clear as any in recent history—the classic battle between liberal and conservative. In the end, the voters chose a change. Pretty good choice, if I may say so myself.

Nobody hated Jerry Ford. He was a nice guy—only too nice. The country should be grateful for what he did in returning decency to our federal government. But for all his decency, Ford didn't have enough vision to lead his nation forward.

Carter promised a lot during the long campaign. It remains to be seen how much he can deliver. But the important thing is that the voters of this country trusted him enough to give him the chance. It's going to take a while, but America has got to get rolling again. With Carter that's a probability; with Ford, it was an impossibility.

DESPITE THE CONSERVATIVE segments cry all during this election—from Ronald Reagan to Jerry Brown—that their cautious policies were best for America, the voters let it be known which direction they prefer. Though a minute-slim margin put Carter over the top, it was a majority. And what that majority was saying was, "Let's move on."

Carter's margin would have been greater had Ford not been the incumbent. There is still something that holds voters back from voting against a sitting president—something strangely unpatriotic. If Richard Nixon had filled out his term, voters would most likely have been choosing between Carter and John Connally.

Connally would have fared worse than Ford because he would have not had much support in the Northeast and Midwest. Ford was only popular there because of his incumbency.

CONGRESS DIDN'T CHANGE much in this election. There is still a great Democratic majority. But what had changed is the leadership of that body.

House Speaker Carl Albert and Senate Majority Leader Mike Mansfield, both somewhat passive in their leadership, are now gone. Albert will be replaced by Representative Thomas (Tip) O'Neill of Massachusetts and Mansfield will probably be succeeded by Senator Robert Byrd of West Virginia.

Both O'Neill and Byrd are more aggressive politicians, so don't expect Carter to have a free ride through the Congress. Still we can expect a better spirit of cooperation, not the cancelling out effect of the last administration, which used vetoes like toilet paper.

Since both executive and legislature are Democratic, there will be a shared vision of basic goals, though there will necessarily be conflicts over how to reach them. But the end result will be much greater progress toward solving our growing problems that has long been absent from Washington.

WHAT EFFECT DID Bob Dole have on the President's defeat? Many analysts were suggesting that his being on the ticket actually may have been the one reason that the Republicans lost.

Dole is certainly in the mainstream of Republican ideology. He has represented that element in the Senate for a number of years. When Vice-president Nelson Rockefeller became the sacrificial lamb to the Reagan wing, Dole was called on to step in as sort of a no-objections-to-him replacement.

Although he was expected to add a little spunk to the Republican ticket, he ended up overdoing it with his political hatchet. His amazingly idiotic, purely political, and historically inaccurate statement about "Democrat wars" in which he tried to label World War II as a partisan Democratic economic policy caused many voters, not surprisingly, to wonder about this man's executive capabilities. (I just love the way those Republican ideologues refuse to use the word "Democrat" when referring to their opposing party.)

On the other hand, Dole's counterpart, Vice-president-elect Walter Mondale was seen as a plus factor for his ticket. Most analysts agree that Mondale's presence on the ticket helped carry the Northeast and industrial Midwest to the Democrats.

IN THE FINAL ANALYSES to come, I think that it will be found that this election was decided on issues more than one might think. Despite the constant campaigning of the candidates on their personal attributes and less stress of important positions on the issues, the outcome would have been different had the voters been solely influenced by character.

Ford had the decency and honesty on his side; no one denied him that. There were many questions raised about Carter's personality throughout the campaign, up to and including the worst comparison of all—to Nixon. So if there was no question about Ford's character, he wouldn't lose against a questionable opponent in an election decided on character.

What it comes down to is that the majority chose Carter's issues. (Those that still considered character most important joined the conservative zealots in giving Ford his great minority.) The traditional concerns of people as outlined in the Democratic platform drew the voters into the Carter column. Traditional Democrats plus Southerners who voted for the home town boy gave Carter his victory.

EUGENE MCCARTHY was a factor in the election, although not to the extent that had been feared by some Democrats. In the last two states to be called one way or the other (Ohio and Oregon), McCarthy was on the ballot and drawing votes that would undoubtedly have gone to Carter had McCarthy not been on the ballot.

The former Minnesota senator was drawing 2 per cent of Ohio's vote and 4 per cent in Oregon. Carter finally pulled through Ohio's 25 electoral votes, but he lost Oregon's 6 to the President.

McCarthy never really had a chance. The media ignored him, making it impossible to find out where he stood on issues. The only coverage he ever got was in the vein of "Why is he running?"

McCarthy is a poet, an intellectual, and an idealist. He always labeled that the nuclear buildup exactly what it is—ridiculous. He has always been a thorn in the regular politician's side, because he himself is not a practical politician.

MY OWN PRE-ELECTION predictions, published two weeks ago, gave Carter 311 electoral votes to 227 for Ford. The totals were actually 297 to 241. That doesn't appear so bad, but when you look at the individual states, I miscalculated seven of them. I was still satisfied with my performance though, because I only called one of the big states—New Jersey—the wrong way.

Specifically, I predicted Louisiana, South Carolina and Mississippi for Ford, but they actually went to Carter. I should have known better than to put a southern state against Carter. In the end, he carried the entire South except Virginia. Mississippi came extremely close to going for Ford, but South Carolina went safely to Carter. Louisiana was considered the most likely prospect for Ford in the South, but Carter, probably helped by a last minute swing through New Orleans and the heavy support of Governor Edwin Edwards, pulled Louisiana through. Of Carter's 297 electoral votes, 139 came from southern or border states.

I also had put Connecticut, New Jersey, Oklahoma, and Oregon in Carter's column, but they ended up in the President's. Connecticut and New Jersey were Ford's only inroads in the industrial Northeast, and they were extremely close to predict. Oklahoma was also a toss-up, with most polls not being able to determine anything before the election. Oregon would have gone to Carter had not McCarthy's 4 per cent tipped it to Ford. This put the entire country west of Minnesota, except Texas and Hawaii, in Ford's column, but the small populations in the Rocky Mountain states did not yield enough electoral votes to reverse the election.

A CORRECTION MUST BE made from last week's column. In the frenzy of Monday night deadline-is-upon-us, I stated, by reasons still unknown to myself, that Ford would become the first incumbent president to be defeated for re-election. Let me apologize to John Quincy Adams, Martin Van Buren, Grover Cleveland, Benjamin Harrison, William Howard Taft, and of course, Herbert Hoover. President Ford is certainly not the first sitting president to be re-elected—he joins the ranks of the aforementioned company.

Volleyball Nabs Fourth

The UNC-W women's volleyball team, despite being upset in the first round, managed a fourth place finish in the state volleyball tournament.

An upset by UNC-Charlotte put the Seahawks in the loser's bracket of the tourney. From there, they defeated Shaw University, Atlantic Christian College and Methodist College to move up to the semifinals. There they were defeated by Lenoir Rhyne College but due to previous wins earned fourth place. Guilford College took the state crown; followed by Pembroke and Lenoir Rhyne.

Soccer Finishes a Winner

The Seahawk soccer team ended their season last week in a fashion which proved they were much better than their 8-7 record indicates.

Last Tuesday, UNC-W faced a weak Methodist team and downed them 5-0 in a game which head coach Calvin Lane called his team "flat". "We just weren't mentally up for the game," said Coach Lane. "We had just finished a rough week, and were already looking ahead to the game on Friday (against Baltimore University)." He cited poor passing and little teamwork as problems during the first half. The Seahawks corrected these problems by the second half, and went on to win 5-0.

The first three Seahawk goals all came on headers on kicks by Vince Lindenschmidt. Nino Fleri opened the scoring drive, and Gil Castella made it 2-0 at halftime. Gene Borowski scored the last header goal early in the second half. Lindenschmidt was credited with all three assists.

Chi Chi Mercado broke the pattern on a goal shot with Castella assisting. Castella then scored the final goal on a Danny Winters pass to give the team a 5-0 victory and assured them of a winning season.

Baltimore University was the Hawk's opponent Friday in UNC-W's last game of the season. The Seahawks wanted badly to win the game, and were physically and mentally prepared for it. Luck was not with them, though, as Baltimore won 3-1 in a hard-fought contest.

Baltimore opened the scoring on an outstanding play by their All-American candidate Pete Carengi. A wing for Baltimore kicked a weak goal shot to Seahawk goalie Tim Willette. When Willette began to make his move to pick up the ball, Carengi raced in from nowhere and flicked the ball over Willette's head for the score.

A penalty kick gave Baltimore a 2-0 lead at halftime. This lead was a big disappointment for the Seahawks, whom, according to UNC-W coach Lane, "... had controlled the tempo of the game." We had outshot and outplayed Baltimore, but we just couldn't get a score," he added.

The Hawks did get on the scoreboard 19 minutes into the second half. A goal shot by UNC-W bounced out into a crowd of players. After the ball was bounced around for a while, Vince Lindenschmidt rammed it in to give the Seahawks their only score.

After the goal, they squad took a gamble and played all-out offense in hopes of scoring the tying goal. Baltimore had to bring the ball outside of the Seahawk invaders and make a quick dash for the goal to make the game 3-1 and assure them of a victory.

"We hated to see the season end," said Coach Lane.

"We've been playing great the last half of the season, and I think reached our peak about two weeks ago," Coach Lane's comments can be considered more than just opinion, for the team won seven of their last nine games and recorded four shut-outs.

Gonzalo Rada led the points race with 15, coming from seven goals and eight assists. Gil Castella's team-high thirteen goals plus one assist gave him a close second with 14 points. Vince Lindenschmidt and Eddie Brock, each with three goals and six assists, were tied at third with nine points each.

GENE BOROWSKI

"Gene provided valuable team leadership this year. An All-Southern and All-American selection last year, he most certainly is in the running for All-Southern again this year. A four-year starter, he played at center fullback. He's a superior leader, an excellent player, and reads the game very well."

TOM BUFFINGTON

"Tom is the type of player you don't hear too much from and doesn't get too much publicity, but is a great team player. He does the job for you every game. I can't remember one of his four years as a starter that he didn't play without some kind of injury. He's played in pain nearly every year. He's a smart player who reads the game well and is an inspiration to his teammates."

Probably more than ever before, the seniors on the UNC-W soccer team were called upon for leadership. With a team of which half was new to UNC-W, the five seniors on the squad provided the leadership and stability the team needed. "These kids started when our soccer program was mediocre, at best," said Coach Lane. "Through their efforts, we became winners and recognized as one of the finest soccer programs in the south. I appreciate all their efforts and sacrifices, and know all their teammates do also."

In recognition of their outstanding contributions to soccer here at UNC-W, the SEAHAWK takes great pride in honoring the seniors on the 1976 soccer team, and wishes them the best of luck in the future.

TIM WILLETT

"A four-year starter, Tim Willette is without a doubt one of the finest goal keepers in America. I think he will certainly be an outstanding candidate for All-Southern and All-American. He will either be drafted by a pro team or invited to a try-out. A candidate for the Senior Bowl game, he is probably the finest goal-keeper I'll ever have the opportunity to coach."

VINCE LINDENSCHMIDT

"It's hard to describe how much progress Vince has made. He's worked hard since he's been here, and come from a mediocre player to an outstanding one. He's shown great speed and ball control in his three years as a starter, and is capable of being selected All-Southern. Probably he is the best all-around athlete on the team."

CARL STANG

"A transfer from Asheville, Carl was only with us one year, yet he made some valuable contributions. He gave valuable support to us at fullback at a time when injuries hurt us badly at that position. He's a very unselfish team player and like all the seniors, will be sorely missed."

Seahawk Soccer Ends A Frustrating Season

GEORGE BENEDICT

The Seahawk's last soccer match, against Baltimore University, was typical of the season the Hawks have had this year: frustrating.

Though the score was 3-1 in favor of Baltimore (rated fifth in the south), the Seahawks, in the opinion of many, outplayed their favored opponents. Baltimore's two goals in the first half were both unearned, one coming off a penalty kick and the other on a surprise play by their forward.

No better example of how frustrating the season has been for the Hawks is their win-loss record. Of their seven losses, four were by one point. UNC-W was also forced into three overtimes, all of which they were leading until the tying goal. In fact, in nearly every loss the Seahawks were ahead at one point in the game.

"Everything we did wrong hurt us," said Coach Calvin Lane. "Every mistake we made, every penalty we had, every injury, hit us with full force."

No doubt injuries played a key role in the team's season. Seasoned veterans whom Coach Lane had depended on were hurt early in the season.

It was only when the injuries subsided that the team began winning.

Needless to say, the team's payoff hopes have all but vanished. The season isn't over yet, though, as several players are being mentioned as All-Southern and All-American selections. Unfortunately the team's misleading win-loss record could prove to be a stumbling block, as in so many cases it is.

Looking ahead to next year, things look bright. The inexperience which plagued the squad this year will have vanished for all practical purposes. Those nine freshmen who made the team this year will have a year of valuable experience behind them, and it is hoped that they'll fill in the positions of those seniors leaving. It's impossible to name names, since I count eight starters who will be returning.

This season has obviously been a disappointing one for the Seahawks. Some solace may be taken, though, from the words of the Baltimore coach at the end of that game. Speaking to Coach Lane with deep sincerity, he said, "You have a fine team." That we do.

ELECTRIC LIGHT ORCHESTRA

A NEW WORLD RECORD

JET UA - LA679 - G

Once again, the unbeatable Jeff Lynne has pulled another remarkable album from the ELECTRIC LIGHT ORCHESTRA. This makes the third progressive classical-rock album the group has produced in the past three years; beginning with ELDORADO in 1974 and FACE THE MUSIC last year.

The first thing that comes to your mind when you hear the words Electric Light Orchestra is their first hit "Roll Over Beethoven" or their last two hits, "Evil Woman" and "Strange Magic." However, the music on A NEW WORLD RECORD is much better than that on the album before it and much more progressive than the early work. This album is close to the material of ELDORADO but is not written as a mini-opera.

"Tightrope" opens the album with the group's usual classical riffs blending into rock. It is a good example of the group style yet does not contain the ELO magic.

The magic is found in the next cut, "Telephone Line." This cut begins with a ringing telephone with Lynne talking over the unanswered line.

The song is very well done and has a very unique sound in its 1950s type doo-waas when blended in with the group's progressive tendencies.

Following this is another very well-written cut, "Rockaria!" This cut is the same type song as "Roll Over Beethoven" in that its entire point is to convert a female opera singer to rock 'n roll. It opens with the great opera singer doing her thing; then ELO do their thing and then everyone does their thing. The beat is basic 50's with the usual classical riffs.

Closing side one is "Mission" and is quite different than most ELO material. Now, like most English groups these days, Electric Light Orchestra have found themselves living in the space age. The song is based on how beautiful the Earth looks from space yet how ugly it is in reality. Food for thought from "the mission of the sacred heart."

"So Fine" opens side two and is followed by the current single "Livin' Thing." "So Fine" is a fair cut with the music being its best feature. As the cut ends, it is blended into "Livin' Thing" which is a far superior cut to its forerunners, "Evil Woman" and

"Strange Magic." The cut works very well on the album and is one of the top choices for a single.

"Above the Clouds" is next and is a very clearly recorded song. It has a clear crisp sound whereas much ELO material gets cluttered.

Ending the album are "Do Ya" and "Shangri-La". The first of these was borrowed by Electric Light Orchestra from one of their old members Roy Wood. "Shangri-La" follows and ends the album with a very well done ELO love song. Here again we have a clear crisp sound uncluttered by the clash which usually takes place when so much is going on at one time. The ending of the cut is really impressive as our opera singer returns.

All in all, A NEW WORLD RECORD is a much better album than the one ELO did before it. Their style remains fresh although they do tend to get a little complicated at times. The song and material are up to par in that they are again making music similar to that on ELDORADO. If you liked that album as much as I did, A NEW WORLD RECORD is right up your alley. Till then, Rock-out. J.W.

The Prisoner Presented in Snack Bar

In Brief: The Prisoner, seeking to avenge the death of a persecuted girl, plays a cat-and-mouse game with No. 2 and tricks him into believing that he is a decoy, placed there to spy on him.

To Amplify: The Prisoner swears to avenge the death of a girl whose appeals for help when being persecuted by Number Two are just too late for him to save her life.

In a community in which no one can be trusted, Number Two is vulnerable to implanted suggestions that the Prisoner has, in fact, been brought to the Village to spy on him on behalf of his superiors.

The Prisoner brings Number Two to a state of increasing terror as he pursues his relentless policy. The one man he has need to fear for the success of his plan is Number Two's assistant, No. 14 who, if he had his way, would take sadistic relish in disposing of him. But Number Two is scared of allowing his aide to take this drastic step.

The Prisoner gradually builds up the impression that he is in touch with the outside world. He does it with gramophone records which may, or may not, contain coded messages.

He inserts a strange advertisement in the village newspaper. This may be a coded message. He uses a carrier pigeon for another message and many other means of indicating that he is reporting on Number Two.

In doing so, he puts suspicion on each of Number Two's most trusted servants, each of them is dismissed in turn, eventually No. 14 himself. And as he does so, Number Two becomes even more hysterical until he is finally in a state of complete mental and physical collapse. Every man has his breaking point. . . .

PROBLEM 10

Three men--A, B and C--were in separate cells under sentence of death when the governor decided to pardon one of them. He wrote their names on three slips of paper, shook the slips in a hat, drew one out and telephoned the warden, requesting that the name of the lucky man be kept secret for several days. Rumor of this reached prisoner A. When the warden made his morning rounds, A tried to persuade the warden to tell him who had been pardoned. The warden refused.

"Then tell me," said A, "the name of one of the others who will be executed. If B is to be pardoned, give me C's name. If C is to be pardoned, give me B's name. And if I'm to be pardoned, flip a coin to decide whether to name B or C."

"But if you see me flip the coin," replied the warden, "you'll know that you're the one pardoned. And if you see that I don't flip a coin, you'll know it's either you or the person I don't name."

"Then don't tell me now," said A. "Tell me tomorrow morning."

The warden, who knew nothing about probability theory, thought it over that night and decided that if he followed the procedure suggested by A, it would give A no help whatever in estimating his survival chances. So next morning he told A that B was going to be executed.

After the warden left, A smiled to himself at the warden's stupidity. There were now only two equally probable elements in what mathematicians like to call the "sample space" of the problem. Either C would be pardoned or himself, so by all the laws of conditional probability, his chances of survival had gone up from 1/3 to 1/2.

The warden did not know that A could communicate with C, in an adjacent cell, by tapping in code on a water pipe. This A proceeded to do, explaining to C exactly what he had said to the warden and what the warden had said to him. C was equally overjoyed with the news because he figured, by the same reasoning used by A, that his own survival chances had also risen to 1/2.

Did the two men reason correctly? If not, how should each have calculated his chances of being pardoned?

MYTH NO. 5: EMPLOYERS ARE IN THE DRIVER'S SEAT SO FAR AS THE WHOLE JOB-HUNTING PROCESS IS CONCERNED.

The truth is: admittedly, employers have a vast amount of power. Namely, the power to hire and the power to fire. What they are unhappy about, as you will discover if you talk to them at length, is how often they have to use these two powers. In a word, they have high employee-turnover because it is so hard for employers to find dedicated competent employees who can really do the job and love to do the job. Without such employees, every employee "is going to fall—because he or she can't possibly run the whole business, factory, organization, or whatever (in most cases) by himself or herself. And most employers are as perplexed about how to find such employees as job-hunters are perplexed about how to find good employers. In other words, employers are as much a victim of the communication problem cited in Myth No. 2, above, as job-hunters are. When a job-interview finally takes place—i.e., when employer and would-be-employee meet, both are equally desperate (in most cases). The employer only has the illusion that he or she is in the driver's seat.

MYTH NO. 6: JOB-HUNTERS MUST PASS EMPLOYERS' SCREENING (OF THE JOB-HUNTER'S RESUME, APPLICATION BLANK, TEST AND/OR INTERVIEW) AND THE JOB-HUNTER'S ONLY HOPE IS EITHER EXPERIENCE OR CREDENTIALS.

The truth is: it is equally a part of the whole job-hunt process, that an employer must pass the job-hunter's screening. The trouble is that while almost all employers do this screening (mentally, or process-wise) before they hire, most job-hunters postpone this screening until after they have been hired. Proof of this is to be found in a survey which revealed that of all those placed in a job by the Federal/State employment agency in that area, 57 per cent were not to be found in that job within one month following. Obviously, job-hunters don't know how to conduct their screening before getting hired so they do it afterwards ("this is a lousy job; I think I'll quit"). Admittedly, these are people without college training and probably blue-collar jobs. The mark of a college graduate is that he or she usually takes five years to do the screening, i.e., to make up his or her mind that "this is a lousy job; I think I'll quit."

Employers' screening, of course, is not that much more accurate. Employers keep concentrating on the job-hunter's past (his or her experience or credentials)—whereas obviously the only thing that can possibly be of interest is the job-hunter's present and future.

MYTH NO. 7: THE PERSON WHO GETS HIRED IS THE ONE WHO CAN DO THE JOB BEST.

The truth is: we received a letter from a man who applied for a particular vacancy, and was hired. He reported that, due to an organizational fuke, he found in his files all the applications for that vacancy—and as he studied them, he realized that a lot of the applicants were much better qualified for the job than he was. But he knew how to get hired; and they did not. This is absolutely typical, throughout the world of work—as you have good cause to know. If you will only reflect upon some of the people you have seen in certain jobs, and the thoughts you had at the time about their incompetency. Yet they got hired. In the world of work then, this is the truth: the person who gets hired is not necessarily the one who can do the job best, but the one who knows the most about how to get hired. Moral: If you don't know how to identify your skills, decide where you want to use them, and how to identify such places and then get hired there, NOW would be a good time to enroll in a job-hunting class—taught by someone who knows these myths, and how to get around them.

These myths do not offer a whole lot of solutions to the problem but they do help to offer some perspective. If these articles have aroused your curiosity or raised some questions, I urge you to pay a visit to Mrs. Harkin in Career Planning and Placement. Her office is in room 205 in the Administration Building or you can reach her on ext. 223 through the university switchboard.

Things That Go Bump in the Night

By Charlie Suppler

Q: What is a Centaur?—E.B.

A: The centaur is supposedly the most harmonious creature of myth ever to have inhabited this planet. As far as appearance goes, he has the body of a horse with the torso of a man springing from the place where the horse's neck should start. A centaur, on the average, is about the size of a normal horse.

There are many stories as to the origin of the centaurs. One says that they were the children of Ixion, king of Thessaly, and a cloud to which Zeus had given the shape of Hera; another says that they were the offspring of Apollo's son, Centaurus, and Stibbia; yet another story, this time from Vedic myth, describes them as the descendants of Gandharvas, minor gods who drive the horses of the sun.

Centaur was supposedly rude and barbaric yet Chiron, described in the Iliad as "the most righteous of the Centaurs", allegedly was the teacher of Achilles and Aesculapius, instructing them in the arts of hunting, war, music, surgery, and medicine.

Q: What is a Unicorn?—C.L.

A: Well, there are two types.

First there is the standard, garden variety Unicorn, which I imagine is the type that you want to know about, and then there is the Chinese Unicorn, or K'i-jin, which looks a great deal like the other type Unicorn and is so gentle that it is careful not to tread on any tiny creatures and will not eat any living grass, but rather that which is dead.

The first type Unicorn, returning to the subject, is generally depicted as a small, white horse having the forelegs of an antelope, sometimes a goat's beard, and always the spiral horn projecting straight from its forehead. This is also pretty much the way one was described four centuries ago.

The Unicorn has, at one time or another, stood for the Holy Ghost, Jesus Christ, mercury (the element) and evil.

One of these creatures is quite capable of killing a lion and yet it may be caught single-handedly by an unarmed maiden. All that is necessary is for the young lady a virgin of course, to sit underneath a tree and any nearby Unicorn will spring into her lap.

The only difficulty lies in finding nearby Unicorns.

Error in Catalog

The Calendar of Events printed in the UNC-W catalog erroneously lists Wednesday, December 15, as Reading Day. December 15 is in fact an examination day, and there will be no Reading Day during the examination period. The final examination period for fall semester will begin on Monday, December 13, and conclude on Tuesday, December 21.

Jimmy Carter's Game Plan

by Jack Anderson
with Joe Spear

WASHINGTON — We've checked with sources close to Jimmy Carter to find out what to expect after he takes over the White House.

They say he'll give urgent priority to developing new energy sources. He is worried about our dependence on overseas oil. He is also nervous about nuclear energy. He's afraid of radioactive leakage.

He'll put immediate emphasis, therefore, on coal production. But for the long term, he will develop solar energy, shale oil, hydrogen power and other energy possibilities.

As President, Carter will also press for tax reforms next year. We talked to House Ways and Means Chairman Al Ullman, who is in charge of writing tax legislation. He said he'll move at once to strip the corporations of their special tax privileges.

Our sources say Carter is also determined to cut military spending. He believes this can be done without impairing America's power. He will most likely cut back B-1 bombers, flying command posts and the Defense Intelligence Agency.

Another of Carter's top priorities is government reorganization. This may not turn out to be as easy as he had hoped. Some private studies by the Brookings Institution indicate that the President's authority to restructure the executive branch may have expired. This could mean a battle on Capitol Hill just to get his authority back.

Carter won't find Congress easy to manage. Their common Democratic bond won't necessarily unite them. For example, he won't have House Speaker Carl Albert and Senate leader Mike Mansfield. They have been pleasant, placid leaders who would rather accommodate than fight.

Their places are likely to be taken by Rep. Thomas "Tip" O'Neill in the House and Sen. Robert Byrd in the Senate. They'll be more difficult to get along with. Sen. Hubert Humphrey, a power in the Senate, also told us that he intends to bring pressure on Carter to consider Humphrey's views.

On the House side, Rep. Mo Udall, who gave Carter a close race in the presidential primaries, told us the same thing. Udall said he'll pressure Carter to break up the Big Oil companies and other conglomerates. As Udall put it, "I'm going to use all the influence I have in the Carter Administration."

Our sources say that Carter won't forget his debt to the blacks who voted so heavily for him. He'll definitely appoint blacks to his cabinet. The two most likely possibilities are Rep. Barbara Jordan of Texas and Rep. Andy Young of Georgia.

But Andy Young said he'd prefer to stay in the House. Meanwhile, "Bellowing" Bella Abzug, the Congresswoman from New York, has let it be known she wants to be Secretary of Transportation. But she probably won't get the job. She's considered too abrasive for the Carter people.

PESTICIDE PERIL: There are 45,000 pesticide products now on the market. Most of them effectively kill insects. But scientific studies have also linked some commercial pesticides to cancer, birth defects and gene mutation.

Yet the government has relied on the chemical industry's own tests to determine the safety of pesticide products. Some of these tests have turned out to be inaccurate and unsound. This has disturbed Congress, which has now called for a thorough re-regulation of pesticides.

It will take trained pathologists to analyze the effects of these chemical compounds on animal tissue. There are more than 200 employees in the Pesticide Division of the Environmental Protection Agency. Yet only two of them are pathologists, and one will soon be leaving.

The review of dangerous pesticides, meanwhile, has been suspended. The government doesn't seem to be serious about it. Otherwise, it would be hiring a few less bureaucrats and a few more scientists.

MAGIC ACT: Rep. J. Herbert Burke has learned how to be in two places at the same time.

In addition to being a congressman, the Florida Republican is also a delegate to the United Nations. Miraculously, he sometimes manages to be in both places at once.

Take Oct. 2, 1975, as a typical day. The Congressional Record shows that Burke voted seven times that day on the floor of the House. A congressman must cast his votes in person.

Yet he also claimed pay for attending the United Nations on the same day. He submitted a voucher for $24. Between November 10th and 18th, Burke claimed $204 in expenses for attending the United Nations. Yet during the same eight days, he voted on the House floor 20 times.

The congressman explained to us that he did some fast shuttling back and forth between Washington and New York. But he refused to produce the records of his flights. Actually, the attendance records show that he missed two-thirds of the UN meetings and that he was chronically absent from the House floor.

PLAIN JERRY: President Ford will exit the White House as unaffected by power as the day he entered it. A good illustration is the day his dog made a mess on the Executive Mansion floor.

During a Christmas dinner, the Presidential pooch, Liberty, had an accident on the White House rug. A dozen stewards rushed to clean up the mess.

But Ford waved them aside. He said no one should have to clean up after another man's dog. Then the President of the United States got up from his Christmas dinner and cleaned up the mess himself.

Department of English Offers Sea Literature

By Lance Smith

Did you know that the two statements "on your decision depend the lives of property of men" and "lost at sea with all hands" are directly related?

The former statement was and still is the very real responsibility of those men who design and build ships. The latter statement is the judgment of the sea where no excuses will serve the designers and builders of ships.

If you didn't know this, then Warren Tucker of the English Department is the teacher you will want to see.

Beginning this coming spring semester on Wednesdays at 19:00-21:45, Warren will be teaching "Literature of the Sea" a two-hundred level English course. The course will be lecture and discussion on such topics as nautical terms, the sailing vessels of the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries and stories about the sea.

Some of the stories will be fiction by authors such as Joseph Conrad and C.S. Forester. There will also be non-fiction stories from the anthologies GREAT ADVENTURES IN SMALL BOATS AND SEA QUESTS.

If Warren's enthusiasm about the sea serves as any indication, this is one English course you will not want to miss. Be sure to pre-register.

Women's De-Liberation on in Mississippi

(CPS)--Women are still into sugar and spice at Muscatine Community College in Mississippi. A student newspaper poll of men and women at the college revealed some interesting ideas about masculinity and femininity. Said one female student, "I think femininity is being dainty and submissive to guys' wants. Masculinity means being able to take care of problems and being able to take care of someone."

As if that wasn't enough to set the women's movement back one hundred years, one male student said of masculinity, "I see muscles and think of a deeper voice." The same person's idea of femininity dealt with words like refined, contained, and personable.

Shoulder to shoulder, women.

Hamburgers Called Redder, Whiter and Bluer Than Hot Dogs

(CPS)--Hamburgers have passed hotdogs as the all-American piece of meat. THE WALL STREET JOURNAL reports.

Americans will gobble 50 billion hamburgers this year both in homes and burger emporiums, according to the American Meat Institute, nearly three times the number of hot dogs. Other industry spokesmen say ground beef will account for over 40 per cent of this year's record U.S. beef consumption of 125 pounds a person. If current estimates are accurate, ground beef will make up over 60 per cent of all beef consumed in this country by 1980. "We have become a hamburger society," one beef feeder told THE JOURNAL as he licked his chops.

Storm Clouds Gathering on Horizon--It's In Stars

(CPS)--If you think things are bad now, just wait until the next decade--it looks worse, as a well-known group of stargazers is warning.

"A lot of astrologers are worried about the 1980s," says Robert Hand, a member of the National Council for Geocosmic Research. "We don't know what is going to happen."

The problem, it seems, is that the planets are heading into an unusual alignment starting in 1980 that is similar to the alignment they were in during World War Two. This alignment, which occurs every 20 years, also bodes ill for presidents since it is during this astro arrangement that the chief executives have been kicking the bucket in office.

The National Council for Geocosmic Research claims it is trying to remove "mumbo-jumbo" from the ancient craft of astrology.

Ford Captures Big Prize on T.P. Issue

(CPS)--He ran on a platform of "continuous toilet paper" nobody asked him about his golfing buddies and Eastern Europe wasn't an issue, but Gerry Ford has been elected president nonetheless of the Pine Hall Residence Council at Benidji State University in Minnesota.

Ford, 18, a business major, told dorm residents he'd provide toilet paper rolls instead of individual sheets and the promise swept him easily into the top office. Many of his friends have started calling him "Mr. President," but it doesn't bother Gerry. "Nothing is in bad taste," he says.

Ford, whose full name is Gerard Alexander Ford, is an avid reader who keeps a topographic map collection, five calendars and the slogan, "Don't stare at me, you may be nuts yourself someday" all in his tiny dorm room.

S*E*X Provides Seance and Search for "Mako Light"

By D. Hope

The lights of the Good Wood Tavern were turned down to the lowest degree. The chairs were arranged in a spiral around a trio of tables, and in the center of the tables was a real human skull with a black candle attached. Such was the setting for the first Halloween Seance of the Society of Enterprising Xenophiles.

Then seven, obviously a legendary lucky number, members of the S*E*X filed into the room with hopes for a successful experiment. Taking seats around the trio of tables they joined hands and began to relax, concentrating on the candle flame atop Seymour, the skull owned by Ron Tetter, one of the participants. Then all was hushed as they concentrated on contacting the spirit world.

Tau Kappa Epsilon

Dear Students:

This past month was quite busy for TKE. Our camping weekend was an overwhelming success. The weather couldn't have been better and the times couldn't have been finer. And I'm sure those who went would surely agree. The State was next on the agenda and it too was full of exciting times. There is still some controversy over our new house, but we are most assured of moving in within the next six weeks. Coming up soon TKE will be sponsoring a push-a-thon with all the proceeds being given to the March of Dimes. Details of this event will be given in a later issue. If you are interested in TKE and have any questions please contact me or any other brother on campus, we'll be glad to answer them.

Thank you,

SNCAE Memberships

There will be a second membership drive on Nov. 8-12. Join at the Education Building. The cost is $7.50.

Whether or not they were successful, totally or partially depends on the personal opinion of the individual participants. The seance was broken up at 11:00 p.m. after about an hour of attempts to pass the barrier into the next world, the participants then going to Galloway Hall to secure warm clothing. Though the seance was over, the night was not and the members of the society joined by a friend, were off to pursue the infamous "Mako Light".

For those not familiar with the ghost of Joe Baldwin, an employee of the railway who lost his head, literally, in a train accident. It is said that he hunts for his head with a red lantern. The light is said to travel up the track towards the observer then mysteriously disappear.

After several times of thinking they were lost the members of the society finally arrived at the site. The cars were parked along the road then they, Seymour included, began to travel by boat up the tracks to the trestle where the accident took place. A sense of tingly excitement was in the air. Crossing the trestle, Seymour was carried a little ways up the track and lit, then all returned to the trestle to wait and watch.

Volunteers Needed Now

The Brooklyn Day Care Center has an immediate need for volunteers to aid children with play activities on the playground, arts and crafts, meal-times, or field trips and special activities during holidays. The center is located in the Taylor Homes Community Building near the intersection of Fourth and Nixon Streets. If you are interested in working with children this is an excellent opportunity to gain some practical experience in that area. The center operates from 8:00 a.m. to 4:00 p.m. Monday through Friday. Any amount of

The wait was neither long nor unwarranted for within the span of ten minutes, the first sighting took place. Then after about another minute's delay, all could see the reddish light approach from a distance of about one hundred yards. A taped on the scene interview with John Woods, one of the members of the expedition stated:

"I... really there is something on the track. It's a red light, it's, from here it took like to be, you know, the height of a man, swinging back and forth it is actually swinging back and forth."

The lighted phenomenon was observed through a small pair of field glasses. There could be nothing seen suspending it at all. It approached swinging back and forth to a distance of about 65-50 yards then mysteriously as it came, it disappeared.

After waiting around for about ten more minutes without any further sightings, the expedition packed up and left, all possessing mixed feelings about the eerie phenomenon they had just witnessed.

The next afternoon, three members of the expedition returned to the site to search for a pair of glasses lost by Charlie Supplier the previous night. Charlie gave his account of the previous night's incident. "Well, a lot of us obviously thought we saw what might have been Joe Baldwin. We definitely did see a red light of some kind, no idea what it was in particular. But it might just as soon have been Joe Baldwin as anything else."

Then Charlie went on to discuss the previous night's events.

Cynthia Ann Johnson, another member of the expedition, gave us her memories. "I did happen to see something unusual, I don't know whether it was Joe Baldwin or not but it was a red light and it was moving back and forth. But still, the question still runs through my mind, was it Joe Baldwin?"

Was it really Joe Baldwin? Indeed a truly provocative question to ask. The S*E*X plans for more expeditions to the Mako Light in the future. Being a club dedicated to the strange and unusual, they should like to clear up in their minds, and everyone else's exactly what that red light is that haunts a railroad track in the woods outside Wilmington.

If you are interested in strange phenomenon, I suggest you drop by at a meeting of the S*E*X. They meet every Sunday night at 7:00 p.m. in the Good Wood Tavern. Happy Hunting, or should that be Haunting.

BRON IS 1977 MR. UNCW

A crowd of approximately 700 people gathered in Kenan Auditorium Thursday night to watch the 1977 Mr. UNCW pageant. After 2½ hours of competition, amongst nine other contestants, Johannes Bron received the coveted title. Each of the contestants were observed by a panel of seven judges in swimsuit and dress attire. The judges were Helena Cheek, Dean of Women; Ralph Parker, Dean of Men; Lindy Creech, Miss Wilmington, 1975; Shirley Gilbert, from WWAY-TV3; Slim Mims, from WECT-TV6; Charlie King, Assistant Dean of Students for Residence Life; and Beth Hicks, Miss Pleasure Island.

The seven semi-finalists were judged in a talent competition. Then, the five finalists were each asked a question to assess their personalities.

After the votes were tallied, Bron, a 23 year old senior Music Education Major, was announced the winner. The audience seemed pleased with the choice. Almost the entire crowd gave him a standing ovation during the talent competition when he flawlessly sang "My Way." They laughed when he was asked "what do girls consider your most attractive physical feature?" and he responded that it was his hair.

Johannes, also known as "Johnny", was sponsored by the Music Department. He received an assortment of gifts including two kegs of beer from J.W. Jackson, dinner for two at Angelo's, a wall clock from Maxwell Home Furnishings, clothing from A and G Outlet, hairstyling from Gerald's House of Styles, cuff links from Kingoffs, and beer mug from the UNC-W Bookstore, and free admission and free drinks for two at the Time Tunnel.

Johannes' court consisted of first runner-up Jim Busby who also received the titled of Mr. Congeniality. Jim, a senior criminal justice major, received a free night at the Patio and a picnic cooler from Pepsi Cola.

Second runner-up was Timothy Clay Smith. He was sponsored by the Fledgling.

During the judges deliberations, entertainment was provided by Steve Shields, Colleen Hines, and Leila Henderson.

The pageant was sponsored by The Seahawk and coordinated by Darlene Pearsall. The emcees were Robert Maxey and Becky Young, two alumni.

The votes were tabulated by Robert Appleton and Lawrence Clark, accounting professors at UNC-W.

Road Sign Damage Creates Hazards

A rash of larcenies and damages of traffic signs has increasingly infected campus roads and has run replacement costs to an unprecedented $600 so far this semester. According to Security Chief C.N. Long, a crackdown is in the offing that will eventually lead to criminal prosecution of those involved.

Traffic signs, such as curve and speed limit signs, have been ripped from posts and removed completely—post and all. Chief Long cited one incident when a truck was seen backing up to several signs and completely removing them from the ground at about 1:00 in the morning. The witness, however, failed to report the incident immediately, and the culprit escaped with his bounty.

Though Chief Long indicated that the security force has been lenient in handling such cases in the past, he said that the current outbreak is "pushing us into action."

"Anybody found with these signs in their possession," Long states, "or... tampering with them, or if evidence points to them," will be subject to criminal court.

"I will not handle it administratively; I will handle it as a criminal matter," Long continued. He called the actions "total disregard for the rights and safety of other students."

Although similar larcenies and damages have occurred in the past, Chief Long said that they have occurred more so this semester than ever before. Over just one weekend damages ran close to $400, with nine signs being stolen in one night. Chief Long emphasized that mere possession of these signs is a violation of state law.

Most of the damages have been reported on Reiglewood extension. Chief Long reiterated that the security force has not automatically assumed that students are responsible, but that evidence has been compiled which indicates that students are involved in most of the activity.

Because it has happened in past years, it is suspected that students are taking the signs to decorate dorm rooms or apartments. Chief Long said that he is trying to give students a chance by warning them before it comes down to searching dorm rooms. He added that two or three signs have been returned, usually by means of leaving the stolen property in a conspicuous location overnight.

"If evidence points toward any one person, I guarantee he's going to go to court," Long said.

Though he indicated a desire to settle these matters without criminal prosecution, he said that the situation has reached a point of such seriousness that firm action will be needed to deal with it.

WHO'S WHO Chosen

Forty University of North Carolina at Wilmington students have been approved for inclusion in the 1977 edition of WHO'S WHO AMONG STUDENTS IN AMERICAN UNIVERSITIES AND COLLEGES.

Wilmingtonians selected for inclusion are Robert Wayne Barbee, Paula Burbey Browder, Margaret Cheryle Brown, James Ellis Busby, Carol Jean Collier, Paul Wesley Dempsey, Michael Whitney Good, Jimmy Hickman, Kenneth Christopher Hufham, Wanda Ann Little, John Craig McCue, Guy Allen Milliken, Jr., Kenneth Mills, Thomas Parham Raines, William Hoke Robinson, Luann Ruffy, Robert Ashley Russell, Jr., Cynthia Matthews Shell, Roger Dean Shew, Gary Keith Shipman, Gregory Wayne Steele, Robert Charles Strand, Nena Scott Strickland, Richard Torre Toblissen, Paul Douglas Walker, Charles Edward Wall, Elizabeth Ann Walton, Timothy M. Hon Wesner, Gerald Kent Wiggins and Kelvin Leon Wright.

Out-of-town residents cited for the publication are Jacqueline Jeanne Adams, Edward Dugan Cahill, Jr., and Darlene Angela Pearsall, all of Jacksonville; Garry A. Garris of Watha; L'Tanya Webb Sloan of Leland; Charles Andrew Baker, Jr., of Carolina Beach; and Gene N. Borowski, Joseph Lansing Smith, Jr., Jimmy Eugene Spivey, and James Timothy Willette, all of Wrightsville Beach.

LETTERS

Halloween Party

To The Editor:

Last week I submitted a letter to the editor concerning the JNC-W Halloween party.

Since then, it has been brought to my attention that not everyone understood my letter and the point I was trying to make; therefore, I would like to clarify myself and restate my main objectives.

1) The party was advertised by word-of-mouth. Some people have told me that this is not true advertising, but according to Funk and Wagnall's Standard College Dictionary, advertising is "the practice of attracting public notice...by any system or method."

2) In order to be certain that the information I received was correct, my roommate, Liz Hess, and I called Galloway Hall (799-4320) around 8:00 the night of the party. We were not given the name of the answering party, but we assumed the dorm was the most sensible place to call at that time of night.

3) The informant who answered our call did not mention that there would be a $2.00 admission fee for off-campus students.

4) We were told that if attired in costume, admittance and beer would be free. (Without a costume, 25 cents admittance fee was required.)

For anyone who is still confused, I will once again state my point. If either a $2.00 admission fee or dorm residency was required, this fact should have been stated. Since no mention was made of an admission fee for off-campus residents, there should not have been a charge.

Thank you for hearing me out again.

Rather Safe Than Sorry

Notice to all bicycle riders: Please be careful when riding your bike. I learned the hard way so please heed my advice. Girls-do NOT ride with your pocketbook, book bag or whatever hanging from your shoulder. The results can be fatal. Racing fans and tardy students-learn where the loose sand and gravel are and SLOW

Sure, I know we all think we need not try to be careful: after all, riding a bike is so easy. However, there are those for you whom I have seen who need to heed my advice. Don't forget, Edmund Galloway used to ride a bike, too. Greta Anita Lint

WEEKLY SPECIAL

What Carter Will Be Told About Nuclear War Potential

by Jack Anderson
with Joe Spear

WASHINGTON -- Jimmy Carter will soon begin his presidential briefings. The most sobering will be on nuclear war.

Carter will be given the best estimate that U.S. intelligence can produce. He'll be told that nuclear war is unlikely. But the world isn't as safe as its masses may think.

The president-elect will be warned that a breakdown in relations between Russia and China could lead to nuclear warfare. The Russians might decide to strike before China builds up a nuclear counterforce.

Carter will also be told that nuclear weapons may appear in the Middle East, in the event of a prolonged Arab-Israeli war. The Israelis already have nuclear warheads and the Egyptians are developing them.

In the past, the president was shadowed wherever he went by a warrant officer, who was ready to spring instantly to his side with a slim black case. This was called "The Football." It contained the world's most secret codes and battleplans, which only the president could use to order a nuclear attack.

The omnipresent warrant officer is now considered overly dramatic. Instead, the locked black case is kept in the custody of the president's military aides. They no longer are required to remain at his side. The present rule is that they must never be more than five minutes away from him.

The Football also has a new nickname. Now it's called simply "the black briefcase."

Carter will be told that he may get as little as 15 to 18 minutes warning of a nuclear attack. He will then open the locked briefcase and follow the coded procedures.

If the terrible order should ever come, it would be flashed to a central command post 45 feet underground near Omaha, Neb. Coded instructions are ready in a red box to send B-52 bombers and intercontinental missiles thundering into action.

Even before the president's signal, the military would be following one of five "defcons." That's short for defense conditions. They're numbered one through five, with "defcon one" the most urgent alert.

The president and the military could also shift their command centers to a number of fortified alternate centers. The exact number and equipment are extremely secret. But we can tell you this much: One is located about 70 miles northwest of Washington near Fort Ritchie, Md. It has steel blast-proof doors and the world's most sophisticated communications system.

Three mammoth planes are also standing by to lift the president above the nuclear destruction. Each plane is also a self-contained command center. The president could run the country -- and the war -- from one of these planes.

But the bottom line is the casualty estimate. The latest estimate, Carter will be told, is that a nuclear attack will kill 130 million to 135 million Americans. And these figures don't take into account the people who would fail to survive in the stone-age, radioactive chaos following the war.

CAPITOL CHANGE-OVER: On Capitol Hill, the newcomers should have more influence in the next House. Of the 98 freshmen who ran for reelection, only three were defeated. They will be joined by 60 new members. This means almost a third of the House will be in their first or second terms.

They are congressmen from the post-Watergate era and, hopefully, they may infect the House with the post-Watergate morality.

There is already a move to strip Rep. Robert Sikes of Florida of his chairmanship. He heads the military construction subcommittee. He used his chairmanship to benefit Fairchild Aviation, which in turn did favors for him. He was censured by his colleagues for conflicts of interest.

Our sources say that House leaders, under pressure from the young idealists, will take away Sikes' chairmanship. A spokesman for Sikes told us the congressman would fight any such attempt.

FREER'S FOLLY: Twenty months ago, Duane Freer took the controls of a DC-3 aircraft in Dubois, Pa. He had never flown one. But he wanted to chalk up some flight time. So he urged the pilot to turn the controls over to him.

The pilot could hardly refuse Duane Freer. He was regional director of the Federal Aviation Administration, in charge of enforcing air safety in the East.

The DC-3, with Freer at the controls, crashed on take-off. Eleven people were hurt, four seriously. The plane was destroyed.

The official report on the accident said the occupants were lucky. The crash could have easily caused a fire, which would have killed most of them. The report also charged that the crash probably occurred because of Freer's inexperience.

What did the Federal Aviation Administration do with Freer? He was transferred to Washington. Associates describe it as a promotion. He is now a policymaker, helping to set future safety standards for the aviation industry.

OTHER CANDIDATES: The voters in the Washington, D.C., metropolitan area are among the most politically astute in the nation. But even many of them were apathetic about Carter and Ford.

So numerous voters substituted write-in candidates. One voter chose Dracula's father as president and Dracula's son as vice president. Another wanted to give the top job to Captain Kangaroo and he picked Oswald the Rabbit as his man for the vice presidency.

PILE OF PAPER: Americans have sensed for some time that they are being buried under an avalanche of paper from the federal government. But it's still startling to hear the actual facts and figures. According to a confidential White House study, Uncle Sam spends $20 billion a year to push paper. Government agencies print 10 billion sheets of paper a year. Stack it all up and you would have a mountain with a volume of 4.25 million cubic feet.

Placement Tests for Spring Semester

The Office of Counseling and Testing will administer the College-Level and Advanced Placement Examinations just before and during spring registration, January 10-11, 1977.

Students planning to take any of the tests must register with the Office of Counseling and Testing, Alderman Building, Room 217 by December 1, 1976.

Any incoming freshman or currently enrolled student seeking course exemption, college credit, or both, may register for the tests. The Advanced Placement Examinations are, however, intended for students who have had college-level instruction in high school.

The Advanced Placement Examinations are available in 16 areas, including American History, Biology, Calculus AB, Calculus BC, Chemistry, Classics, English, European History, French Language, French Literature, German, History of Art, Music, Physics B, Physics C and Spanish.

The CLEP General Examinations will be offered in English Composition, Humanities, Natural Sciences and Social Studies.

There is a $5.00 service charge for each Advanced Placement Test or for one CLEP test. A student may register for two to four of the CLEP tests for $10.00. Service charges must be paid at the time of registration.

If you plan to take any of these examinations, be sure to register with the Counseling and Testing Center by December 1, 1976.

BYLINE: Kissinger and Carter Together? Good Idea, Not Likely

by Bobby Parker

Abraham Ribicoff, U.S. Senator from New Jersey, came forth with a suggestion last week for President-elect Carter. His idea deserves more consideration than most of the suggestions that Mr. Carter is likely to receive in the next few weeks.

Ribicoff was part of an expedition of senators who went exploring in the Middle East on one of those so-called "fact finding" tours. His suggestion dealt with a delicate area that may become susceptible to disarray during the upcoming White House transition. That fragile area is foreign policy.

Specifically, Senator Ribicoff suggested that Secretary of State Henry Kissinger be kept on after Mr. Carter's inauguration as a special envoy from America to help mediate the Middle East situation. One wonders why such genuinely sound ideas come so far and far between in the Senate chambers.

As Ribicoff pointed out, the Arab leaders have developed a certain amount of trust of Kissinger and have been willing to negotiate for a permanent peace settlement when the Secretary is at the helm. This is particularly true of Egyptian President Anwar Sadat, who has, due to Kissinger's efforts, come forward in a spirit of cooperation that often surpasses the Israeli leaders.

Similarly, Kissinger has managed to bring the leaders of Israel down a few notches, though no one has yet convinced them that the Palestinians need human rights too. It's impossible to know whether Kissinger's efforts have averted war, but it's safe to say that his presence has indeed reduced tensions in the area.

It would be out of the question for Mr. Carter to retain Kissinger as secretary of state. Carter criticized Kissinger directly during the campaign, speaking against his "lone ranger" style and "secret diplomacy" as the main bugs in our foreign policy.

But if Carter's ability to hunt out the best talent for administrative positions is all it's supposed to be, the President-elect can certainly put aside political concerns to use Kissinger's talents towards world peace.

Kissinger himself will probably have reservations about staying on under Carter's wing, even as a "special envoy." He is accustomed to doing as he pleases, as he did under both Nixon and Ford. He publicly says that he's ready to leave, but before the election when Ford had a chance to return to office, the Secretary was dropping hints that he might decide to stay.

It is undeniable that Kissinger's reign as the chief executive of foreign policy has been good for America. He got us out of Vietnam and our prisoners home. He opened doors to China, and he kept good relations with Moscow. The Mideast has of course occupied much of Kissinger's diplomatic chores, and he has successfully, to the extent that success is possible in that region, worked out solutions to crisis often crisis.

Though Carter claimed that America's respect abroad has diminished partially due to Kissinger's "secret diplomacy," it was South Africa who offered judgement on Kissinger's abilities when that nation called for the Secretary to help mediate the current African crisis.

It is to Kissinger's credit that he has not provided Congress with every detail of every move he tries to make.

Foreign policy does not often wait for consultation and debate. A strong decisive secretary of state is needed to work in conjunction with a strong, decisive president on matters of foreign policy.

But Kissinger has indeed carried his authority over the limit. His personal arrogance has allowed him to often act as if he really is the president where foreign policy is concerned. His "I'll-take-my-ball-and-go-home" performance before the press in Europe last year was a little too much in the way of vanity.

Whatever Kissinger's personal drawbacks, he is undoubtedly a most knowledgeable man in the ways of diplomacy. In the particular case of the Mideast, it would be a waste to scratch the personal trust that he has built with the leaders there and begin anew with a completely different man.

If Richard Nixon gave us nothing else, he gave us a progressive foreign policy. This was due mainly to the man who advised him on foreign affairs.

Kissinger has always remained above the storm of domestic politics. He should not be considered a Republican to get rid of by the incoming Democrats. His abstinence from domestic politics should allow him the privilege of not being judged within political bounds. Jimmy Carter can prove that he places the concerns of world peace and of America's welfare above political and stylistic differences by retaining the services of a knowledgeable and talented man. At least it's worth a try, because Carter will always have the option of changing his mind.

The same goes for Henry Kissinger. He can take his ball and go home, or he can lend his service to his own government. The American public can anxiously wait to see if these two men can put their personal differences aside and come to an agreement that is beneficial to all concerned.

'The Return of the Pink Panther' Stars Peter Sellers

The Return of the Pink Panther... the title says it all. You know who's making it, who's starring in it, who's writing the music, and that it will be a very funny movie. Not even the names have been changed to protect the innocent, primarily, because they are all guilty.

Blake Edwards who conceived and constructed Pink Pantherdom from bricks of his own heart and humor in both "The Pink Panther" and "A Shot in The Dark" repeats his triple function as producer-director-co-writer for "The Return of the Pink Panther."

Oddly enough, this new film was not his idea. Britain's famed TV impresario, Sir Lew Grade, complained to Blake about the current death of good comedies and after relishing the merry moments he had watching the director's past Panther pictures, offhandedly suggested a third. Like the previous two, "The Return of the Pink Panther" is released by United Artists, and entertainment service of Transamerica Corporation. It opens Dec. 7 at Kenan Aud. at 8:00 P.M.

The chat became a serious conversation, and the conversation was soon translated into a screenplay by Frank Waldman and Edwards.

The next step was determining Peter Sellers' interest and availability. He was! The only part he has ever repeated, Inspector Jacques Clouseau is Peter and Peter is Clouseau, from his deadpan mayhem to his athletic awkwardness. Other constant citizens of Pantherdom include Herbert Lom repeating as the put-upon Inspector Dreyfus, Burt Kwouk as the manic karate "expert" and Graham Stark Christopher Plummer and Catherine Schell co-star as Sir Charles and Claudine Litton.

Music is a key element in the world of the Pink Panther, and fortunately and naturally Henry Mancini once again came through with a highly original score. His previous connections with the oddly colored felix have netted him an Oscar nomination, three Grammys and a gold record.

The story line of "The Return of the Pink Panther" involves the mysterious theft of the PP (the world's largest and most famous diamond from its resting place at the Lugash national Museum. A religious symbol of extraordinary importance, it must be recovered, and who better than the man who recovered it the last time. Inspector Jacques Clouseau.

Want to Win a Turkey?

Want a chance to win a Thanksgiving-size Turkey? Well, Monday, Nov. 22 the UNC-W Concerts Committee will have a drawing for 3 turkeys in the Pub, at 8:00 p.m. But you will also find much more going on Monday night if you decide to attend. There will be FREE BEER (while it lasts!!!) and country-rock music provided by the "Sutter's Gold Streak Band" from Tennessee. This 6 piece Band (including pedal steel Guitar will bring to UNC-W campus a quality of music and stage show like no other act that has performed here. Call it country-rock or ---- kicking music, or whatever! But their dynamic sound has pleased audiences all over North Carolina and surrounding states. Also appearing Monday night will be a Wilmington native, Johnny Glover. He is a delight to listen to and his skill on acoustic guitar is hard to match.

So if you're waiting to take off for Thanksgiving vacation, come get down in the Pub with some cold frosties and some dynamite music from "Sutter's Gold Streak Band". And if you're lucky, you'll take home a turkey!!!

Women's Tennis Finishes Fall Season

Inexperience and a tough schedule proved to be awesome for this year's Women's Tennis Team.

"We really had a hard schedule," said head coach Jane Batson. "We learned a lot, though. All our opponents had strong tennis program."

Doubles play seemed to be the saving grace for the team. Martha Richardson and Theresa Hege led the pairs competition, staying as a doubles team the entire year. Several other players switched around to make up the second pairs team.

Coach Batson cited Hege as one of the team's outstanding players this year. "She was our number one seed, and played in every match. She always had very tough opponents, and yet always managed to play her game."

Coach Batson also mentioned Kim Kanter and Terry Kirby as good players. "Kim didn't get to play in every game, but when she did play she played well," said Coach Batson, adding, "Terry's our most aggressive player. She's also very steady and improved greatly over the season."

In explaining the team's poor record, Coach Batson commented, "We just couldn't put it all together." Lack of aggressiveness and competitive spirit was also mentioned as a key factor.

The season isn't over yet for the women's team. They play a 5-7 game schedule in the spring along with the state tournament. "I'm really looking forward to spring," said Coach Batson. "Towards the end of the fall season, the kids were really making an effort. They were sorry to see it end."

BENCHED

GEORGE BENEDICT

As I am writing this column, the temperature is bouncing around 45 degrees, the sky is dark and overcast, and the question of the day is "Will it snow?" I guess it's safe to say that the fall sports season is over.

While some would argue

otherwise, I think it's been a fine fall for sports here at UNC-W. Getting the first glimpse of what competition is really like in NCAA's top division, our four sports this fall proved themselves worthy of the promotion.

No one can argue with the success of this year's Women's Volleyball team. Nabbing a fourth-place finish in the state tournament was a fine way for Coach Ann Kraft's squad to end their season.

Skeptics would point out that women's volleyball has always been strong here, and a fourth-place finish isn't that great compared to previous years. One must remember, however, that this was a brand-new coach unfamiliar with inter-collegiate volleyball in this area. The team managed to put it all together, though, and play exceptional volleyball. A fourth-place finish in the state tournament is nothing to look down upon, and all Seahawks congratulate the team for an exceptional season.

Seahawk soccer underwent the most disappointing and frustrating season start I have ever seen. After their first six games, they were 1-5 with several of those losses coming in overtime defeats. Rated highly in pre-season polls, the hawks were now struggling to keep their heads above water. Things were looking pretty bad, till their surprise upset of N.C. State and the subsequent mauling of Pembroke gave the team the boost it needed to carry them into an 8-7 finish. Perhaps the best opinion of the season was made by the team itself. Coach Calvin Lane told me his squad wished they could go back and replay those first six games and finish the season with a record which truly showed the team's ability. Inexperience proved costly for the Women's Tennis Team. The team win-loss record was not impressive, but several players were. Coach Jane Batson feels this year gave her young squad the experience it needed to be successful in years to come. There are high hopes for women's tennis at UNC-W in the future.

Cross-country, only two years old, already is showing signs of greatness. Give it a few more years to get going good, and I'm sure you'll see a top-rated cross-country program here.

Campus Radio Station Undergoes Current Changes

On the weekend of Nov. 5-7 staff members from WCNU Radio attended the 7th Annual Loyola National College Radio Conference in Chicago. The conference was sponsored by stations WLT and WLUC of Loyola College.

College stations from all over the country participated. WCNU was the only North Carolina station to attend.

According to station manager Greg Larrimore, one of the participants, the staff obtained "valuable information concerning programming, management, music, FCC Rules" and about running a radio station in general.

Other staff members attending were Bill Pratt, Gary Mason, Chip Plyler, Rusty Walker and Al Sudeum. The seminars included topics such as FCC Rules and Regulations, Programming, Copyright Laws, and News and Newscoverage among many others.

Record companies had representatives and some recording artists were those including Patti Smith, Toni Byrd and the Ozark Mountain Daredevils.

The WCNU staff hopes to make further use of this experience when the station goes FM. Commenting of the FM license Larrimore stated, "The situation is not in our hands. It's presently going through red tape in Washington. We should have our construction permit (to install the new equipment) around the first of Jan." When completed the new broadcast tower will be located on top of Galloway Hall and have a total height of 90 ft. giving the station a broad cast of 3-7 miles.

A contest will be held to select new call letter for the station which will be located at 91.3 on the FM dial.

The station has received a trailer for use as studios and offices but about $1,200 are needed to remodel WCNU's half of the trailer space. "We're seeking outside help in the form of grants or donations," Larrimore stated, "WCNU will remain a noncommercial station."

At present, WCNU's biggest problem is obtaining new music. Record companies present at the Chicago convention should begin sending more material to the station soon, according to program manager Bill Pratt. A new format, resulting from the convention, began today. It will include more freedom of selection for DJ's and more variety of music forms, including Jazz and classical music.

Pratt commented on the new for nat, "WCNU welcomes an comments concerning music and programming. We're in the process of reorganizing so please bear with us for a while."

According to Pratt, "WCNU is an alternative station "to the local top 40 or easy listening stations and needs student support to continue broadcasting.

The Baha'i Club

In the early sixties, despite the repeated warnings of informed and concerned individuals, the governments on the World remained relatively unaware of the seriousness and magnitude of the pressing global problems of over-population and pollution. Governmental leaders generally viewed this concern as an exaggeration and over-reaction. A group of these concerned individuals (prominent industrialists, scientists, etc.) finally met together in Rome. This 'Club of Rome' subsequently published comprehensive reports on both population and pollution, resulting in the governments of the world taking these problems seriously for the first time. Action, however meager, began to be taken.

Earlier this year, the Club of Rome came out with a rather gloomy report. In this report, they conclude that civilization will not survive another century in any recognizable form unless there is a drastic change in the values of humanity. The report goes on to identify these values, and even goes so far as to name the handful of systems and institutions which contain and have best promoted these values necessary for the very survival of Mankind. Among the listed were: Christianity for its brotherly love, Communism for its concern for the poor, Islam for its community life, and the Baha'i Faith for its world-mindedness.

What the Club of Rome is saying is that any action short of a change in human values will be treating the symptoms and not the source of all our problems.

The Baha'i Club is holding an informal and a hopefully clear, concise, and factual meeting for those interested in finding out about the history and teachings of the Baha'i Faith. This meeting will be held on Friday at 8 p.m. in Business, Room 112. A filmstrip, short summary, and question-and-answer session will be the basic content.

Berkeley Girl's Brain Waits Coldly for New Owner

(CPS)—Patricia Wilson is dead, but her brain lies deep frozen in Oakland, California awaiting the day it might be plopped into another head in order to create another Patricia.

That, at least, was the bizarre request of Patricia's parents following the 15-year-old's violent murder in early October. They asked the Oakland coroner to turn the girl's brain over to a cyronic (body preserving) organization in the hope that it can someday be "cloned" into a person exactly like their late daughter.

Cloning is the process in which scientists reconstruct an entire body through the duplication of a single cell. Since scientists have not yet perfected this technique, Patricia's brain is kept at a temperature of minus 310 degrees Fahrenheit until that scientific milestone is reached.

The girl was found on the first Sunday in October bound and beaten in a Berkeley apartment.

Things That Go Bump in the Night

Q: What is a ghost?
-L.P.

A: The textbook definition (or one of them) describes a ghost as the visible form of a formerly living person. Actually, a ghost, while still being a manifestation of someone who has shuffled off his mortal coil, can occur in forms other than the visible or semi-visible representation of the actual person. The ghost of Joe Baldwin, the switchman who was decapitated in a train accident near Wilmington, appears as a bobbing greenish-yellow light which has a tendency to rush directly down the tracks at whoever might be watching. There have been records of ghosts, on the other hand, that have made their presences known by sounds. Not the typical moaning and chain-rattling one associates with ghosts, but rather whistling, laughter, and (of all things), sometimes sneezing.

Q: What is a ghoul?
-C.M.

A: A ghoul is the worst creatures from the other side of that it can be a man's misfortune to meet. They have been described, and rightfully so, as the most dangerous species of demon-period. One tends to wonder how they got such a bad reputation in the first place. The answer to that lies in a ghoul's eating habits. Ghouls like to eat the entrails and hearts of people, preferably men. They are not fussy but they prefer their men alive, or reasonably so. This does not make them too popular with anybody and most people, especially when sober, prefer to avoid them.

Another facet of a ghoul's behavior is the fact that it is not restricted to night life. In other words according to one source, a ghoul can stand sunlight. As to a ghoul's appearance, well no one really knows for sure what one looks like. Number five hundred in series of comforting thoughts.

Grades For Sex? Hard to Verify

According to the president of the University of Delaware, there have been thirty to forty instances of "sexual harassment" which have occurred in the past year. Speaking before the faculty senate at the school, President E.A. Trabant said that these incidents have happened between "Man and woman, woman and man, man and man, and woman and woman." He said that most of these cases come to the school's attention through letters or phone calls from parents.

Faculty Senate President Dr. John Pikulski said that the faculty is "very concerned" with charges and is attempting to get a "more complete and thorough picture" of the scope of the problem.

Claiming that incidents of this nature are dealt with in a quiet, effective and straightforward manner, vice president of student affairs, Dr. John Worthen did admit "it is very difficult" to legally substantiate anonymous letters or phone calls that complain about sexual harassment. He declined to comment on whether or not any university employee has been reprimanded or fired because of the charges.

Meanwhile, the Commission on the Status of Women is calling for the issue to be aired publicly. Also, they are now in the preliminary stages of developing a plan of action for the entire university population.

HONOR CODE IS APPROVED

by Bobby Parker

UNC-W at last has an official academic honor code. Assembled by an ad hoc committee headed by Dr. Ned Martin of the chemistry department, the document is now in effect to govern cases of academic dishonesty.

The Honor Code was given a vote of confidence by the Student Senate on Nov. 11 and was approved by the faculty on Nov. 18. Chancellor William Wagoner added his approval of the code to make it official.

Until this time, the university had no uniform honor code policy, but Dr. Martin stated that the need for one led to the creation of the committee which was composed of students, faculty, and administration officials. Those who served on the committee besides Dr. Martin were Dean Ralph Parker, Dr. Sayed Ahmad, Dr. Haskell Hart, Dr. Jim Megiverns, Dr. Jim Collier, and students Steve Hobbs, Carol Roddy Hobbs, Gary Shipman, and Kevin Beard.

Dr. Martin reported that "quite a bit of input from both faculty and students" had led to the final proposal, noting that open hearings had been held on the document last May after the faculty failed to approve it because of several questions. After a few changes, the proposal was resubmitted this year and received approval.

Dr. Martin also noted that his committee "had no legal need... to go either the Student Senate or the faculty," but that the committee "wanted to hear as many different peoples opinion as we could."

The changes from the original document included revision of the court system, reducing from three to two the number of courts that could hear an individual case. The courts are both comprised of students, faculty, and administrators to guard against what Martin termed a "student versus student" situation.

Another change was to "encourage" rather than require "all members of the university community" to report any incident of academic dishonesty. Martin also noted that the penalties outlined in the Honor Code were only suggested and were not binding in any specific case.

The Honor Code itself provides a description of all forms of cheating except those which are "too obvious" which include, according to the Code, "cheating on tests, providing or receiving unauthorized assistance, tampering with grades and records, stealing exams and other similar misdeeds."

Plagiarism, however, is specifically defined as "the act of taking the work of someone else and passing it off as one's own." The Code continues to say that plagiarism is "doubly unethical, since it deprives the true author of his rightful credit and then gives that credit to one to whom it is not due."

The judicial system is described by the Code as "a mechanism for handling violations," and is outlined to include an Academic Court and a Court of Appeals. The academic court consists of two students (elected by the Student Senate), two faculty members (appointed by the Chancellor...), and the Vice-Chancellor for Student Affairs, the document states. The Academic Dean, a Dean of Students, the chairman of the faculty, the SGA President, and the Senior Class President compose the Court of Appeals.

No one person can be a member of both courts.

The judges decide by majority vote on the defendant's guilt or innocence and suggest a penalty for a guilty verdict. A verdict of innocent by either court automatically closes the case unless additional evidence arises. If an innocent verdict is reached, the incident is not recorded in the student's records.

As to penalties, the code states that "either failure in the course or suspension for the remainder of the semester is generally appropriate for an offense of academic dishonesty." The instructor, however, is not bound to the penalty suggested by the courts.

Dr. William M. Malloy, vice chancellor for student affairs, indicated that the procedure for handling actions of academic dishonesty has been long overdue on this campus. "I am gratified that the faculty approved the Academic Honor Code and that it has been put together with the best interests of the students and institution in mind. The student-faculty committee which drafted the document is to be commended."

Senate Guidelines for Club Funds

By Bobby Parker

The Student Senate met in regular session Thursday, November 18 with SGA Vice-President Paul Laird presiding. The student legislators heard a financial report and discussed a proposal that would govern club charters as the main business of the evening.

The Senate was again plagued by a significant number of absences with six of twenty-two members not present. The absentees were Senators Bobby McQueen, Carol Raines, Dawn Brickley, Teresa Hege, Greta Lint, and Clay Fairley. Senator Karin Whaley reported that Senator Hege, who has missed at least four meetings this semester, would soon tender her resignation due to her involvement in the women's tennis team. SGA President Duffy Robinson also did not attend the meeting.

SGA Treasurer Mark Wax presented a financial statement which outlined current allocations, expenditures, and balances of all SGA-funded organizations. The statement showed total expenditures thus far this year at just under $38,500, with about $50,750 already allocated but not yet spent.

An overall surplus of SGA funds exists in the approximate amount of $29,900 with about $10,000 of that in unencumbered funds. A reallocation of about $90 was approved to cover additional costs of the Student Handbook, bringing that total cost close to $700.

Senator Ray Warren presented his proposal that would classify campus organizations who desire SGA recognition into two categories: SGA-funded organizations and independent campus organizations.

This proposal, Warren explained, would extend official recognition to those clubs which the Student Senate can not legally fund, such as religious organizations.

This move was apparently brought about as a result of the recent requests for charters by religious organizations such as the Baha'i Club and the Latter Day Saints Students' Association. The Senate rejected those requests because if charters had been granted these clubs could have requested Senate funds as any other chartered campus organization.

The proposal would establish a "Club Bylaws" section of the constitution which would establish specifications for categorizing clubs. Those eligible for SGA funding must practice no form of discrimination, have only student and faculty membership and be subject to Senate financial audits. The Senate would have the power to revoke a charter in the case of financial mismanagement, and also could demand the resignation of any officer of the organization if he fails to follow SGA guidelines.

The independent campus organizations would not be eligible for any SGA funds, but their club must be a non-profit one that fills a "positive need" for the university. Presumably, this would include religious organizations and political groups.

A provision which would have required at least ten active members in any independent campus organization was dropped after objections were raised by several senators.

Senator Karin Whaley supported the proposal, saying, "I think that's a very good way to have it organized... It's there in black and white." If any questions arise about future charters, such as the two religious groups.

Senior Senator Paul Walker, however, spoke against the classification system. "I don't believe," Walker stated, "we should make categories in the constitution itself" to govern Senate funding of organizations.

Freshman Senator Francis DeLuca also opposed the proposal. He supported Walker's argument, stating "we should handle each (charter request) separately because each one has separate circumstances."

Student Activities Director Al Harris, who has attended several Senate meetings this year and was present Thursday night, spoke in favor of the proposition, but cautioned the senators that along with this new power they would be accepting new responsibility to oversee the chartered organizations with the student body's interest in mind. He joined Senator Whaley in opposing the 10-member limit for independent clubs.

The motion to accept Senator Warren's proposal was approved by a 12-4 vote.

Senator Warren also made a request to call all SGA-funded organizations before the Senate to give a financial report. In requesting the reports, he specifically called for "statements from the VICE Squad (videotape committee) and WCNU radio, indicating that he had questions about their financial management." Representatives of all the organizations will be called to appear before the Senate at either the December 2 or December 9 meeting.

The Music Committee is trying to get Charlie Daniels to perform on campus for Homecoming, Jan. 30.

LETTERS

The following is an editorial which appeared in a recent issue of the Campbell College newspaper. It was submitted to the Seahawk by a UNC-W student in order to get students' reactions.

Who Needs Them

The straw that broke the camel's back has finally fallen into place. The situation in question is the conduct of the UNC-Wilmington soccer team while they were guests of Campbell College.

While here last weekend, the "Seahawks" barged into the cafeteria ahead of Campbell parents and students. The real burner is that after they had so rudely broken into the cafeteria line they were irrelevant while grace was being said and some even made four letter remarks out loud for parents and students alike to hear! And then they all laughed at their deeds!

This is not the first incident in which those people from Wilmington have shown their childish immaturity. Last year they painted obscene phrases on a Campbell bus used to transport students to a basketball game at UNC-W.

It seems that obscenities are the extent of learning knowledge at UNC-W. In any case, as guests of another school, mature students should conduct themselves as adults and respect the rights and privileges of others. But then state schools aren't like that.

Regardless of how good a team they are, the "Seahawks" obviously think they are Joe Coals by such behavior. One would think that a free steak and vegetables is payment enough for reverence and respect, wouldn't he? If they are men enough to accept hospitality, then they can abide by our rules and beliefs or not come at all. Who needs them?

I suggest that from now on, UNC-W be made to pay for their meals and to wait just like anyone else. In fact, why invite them here again? After all, people who act like children should be treated accordingly. And to you, Wilmington fans, Campbell may be "just a college" but it outranks a second rate state school any time.

WEEKLY SPECIAL

Carter Scores on Capitol Hill

by Jack Anderson
with Joe Spear

WASHINGTON -- President-elect Jimmy Carter's first meeting with congressional leaders was a triumph. He promised that Pennsylvania Avenue would be a two-way street, and the leaders returned to Capitol Hill with a favorable impression of the president-elect.

But Carter would be making a mistake if he thinks he has Congress under control. In private, Rep. Thomas O'Neill, D-Mass., has told colleagues that he doesn't intend to be a waterboy for the White House next year. O'Neill is expected to be elected the next Speaker of the House. And those who know him agree he'll be harder to get along with than retiring Speaker Carl Albert.

It's the same story on the Senate side. The two top candidates for Senate Democratic Leader are Robert Byrd, D-W.Va. and Hubert Humphrey, D-Minn. Neither senator is likely to let Carter tell him what to do. Humphrey has 200 friends, for example, that he has his own views -- which don't entirely coincide with Carter's.

The president-elect, meanwhile, has promised to appoint women to important posts in his administration, and the women intend to hold him to his word.

Recently, the Congressional Clearinghouse on Women's Rights met with 55 top women leaders. The group will establish a special monitoring system to watch Carter's appointments.

Many women leaders are suspicious of Carter. They have a detailed list of all the promises he made to women during the campaign. And they intend to see that he keeps them.

Middle East Mystery: One of the mysteries of foreign affairs is how the shah of Iran is able to manipulate the United States. It has become the watchword in Washington that whatever the shah wants, the shah gets.

The shah wanted to transform Iran into a modern military power. The United States immediately began shipping military equipment to Iran faster than the shah's armed forces could assimilate them.

For five years, sophisticated weapons have been pouring into Iran at the rate of $2 billion worth a year. Three months ago, Secretary of State Henry Kissinger discussed another $10 billion arms pact with the shah.

Government auditors, according to a secret report, have complained that we have sent so many military advisors to Iran that technical skills are in "critically short supply in U.S. military units."

The shah also wanted to crack down on Iranian dissidents who embarrass him here in the United States. So our Central Intelligence Agency arranged for the shah's secret police to operate with impunity in this country.

There is evidence that the shah's agents violate our laws. We have obtained secret papers from their files. One, for example, contains instructions on copying keys for illegal break-ins.

In return, the CIA is permitted to operate in Iran. The CIA is so close to the shah, according to our sources, that he has actually paid for CIA projects out of the Iranian treasury when the CIA's own budget has run dry.

The shah also wanted higher prices for his oil. In fact, none of the oil-producing countries clamored louder for higher prices than did Iran. The United States could have silenced the shah merely by shutting off his military supplies. But no one in Washington would talk back to the shah.

Meanwhile, the love affair between the shah and Washington officials continues. Kissinger and the shah exchange frequent warm messages. And the U.S. embassy in Iran sends cables to Washington that are positively lyrical.

One classified cable, for example, refers to Iran euphorically as "this friendly and progressive country of considerable strategic importance to the U.S."

Everybody seems to love the shah. The multi-million-dollar question is, "Why?"

Home for the Holidays: As many as 200 American prisoners may soon be released from their Mexican jails.

This has nothing to do with the prisoner exchange program that has been reported in the press. The plan is to exchange Americans in Mexican jails for Mexicans in U.S. jails. The agreement has to be ratified, however, by the Mexican legislature and the U.S. Congress. This will take some time.

But meanwhile, the Mexicans are considering a parole program. This would authorize the release of drug offenders who have completed three-fifths of their sentences. It would affect approximately 200 of the 600 Americans now stuck in Mexican jails.

The Mexican legislature is still considering the parole program. But it has the strong backing of Mexican President Luis Echeverria, who will complete his six-year term in a few weeks. Our sources expect him to push through the parole program before he leaves office.

So a couple hundred Americans, who don't expect it, may be home in time for Christmas.

THE DENVER POST '76

BYLINE:

A column of personal comment

by Bobby Parker

The constitutionality of the death penalty has been one of the most troubling questions of the last decade. Not since 1967 has there been an execution in the United States, despite hundreds of sentences of capital punishment that have been handed down to convicts still waiting on death row.

'North Carolina has a special interest in this question since we have more prisoners awaiting execution than any other state in the union. I quite frankly don't know the exact number because I've stopped counting. But it is well over one hundred and significantly more than the state with the second highest total.

The U.S. Supreme Court has passed down several rulings on the question, but it is by no means settled. Not too many years ago, capital punishment was declared outrightly illegal by means of the "cruel and unusual punishment" clause in the Constitution.

The most recent ruling from the Court declared that those capital punishment laws which provide mandatory sentences upon conviction (such as North Carolina) are illegal because they provide no room for leniency in any specific case. Some states (Texas and Louisiana, for example) have legitimate laws in the Court's view but as yet that opinion hasn't speeded the execution of any prisoner.

The case of Gary Gilmore in Utah-the man who asked for a prompt execution in accordance with his conviction and sentence for murder-has focused new attention on the death penalty issue. And what it has really brought into focus is the thing that should have been evident all along - that the death penalty is an ineffective anachronism which has made a mockery of our judicial system.

The question is by means simple. But a careful weighing of all arguments pro and con shows that there is no substantial justification for capital punishment, especially if it's not going to be carried out. And what rational, civilized government can possibly take upon its shoulders the role of having power of life or death over any human being? The main argument for the death penalty is that it is a deterrent to crime. On the contrary, in some cases, it can be an incentive to carry one's criminal act to the final step. I am arguing here to the absurdity of the death penalty for any crime other than murder - such as in North Carolina where the penalty extends to rape.

Certainly rape is the most horrible and inhumane crime. But if the rapist knows he is going to receive the death sentence anyway, what is to stop him from killing the only witness - his victim-when he knows that he'll get no worse punishment for the murder?

The threat of the death penalty does not serve to deter murder, premeditated or otherwise. The premeditated murder is supposedly so carefully planned that the criminal is not thinking of being caught and thus not thinking about his own death as a result of his act. Similarly, the murder that is committed in a fit of rage does not allow time to contemplate the results.

When Utah officials refused to execute Gilmore at his own request, they made the right decision but for the wrong reasons. What they were thinking about was the possibility that they might indeed be executing the man under illegal authority. This action reinforces the argument against capital punishment which holds that it is cruel and inhumane. It proves that even those who are enforcing the law are not sure of the legitimacy of the death penalty. A choice between life and death leaves little room for doubt.

Those officials should have rejected Gilmore's death wish simply because the man is quite obviously emotionally or mentally inept. The very nature of his crime tells us this - he killed two men in separate robberies for no apparent reason. But his recent suicide attempt should really convince the Utah officials that he is not capable of making his own decisions.

The entire Gilmore episode should point out the absurdity of the death penalty. One would think that life imprisonment is enough to satisfy the vindictive instinct in human beings. After all, the only reason for execution is to satisfy those that the victim left behind; it certainly doesn't undo the crime.

The death penalty is only another result of our society's inability - in this case, inability to find methods of crime prevention; inability to rid ourselves of the greed that lies at the root of all crime; and inability to forgive a fellow human being for a gross mistake.

I'm certainly not saying that we should forgive and forget murder. But isn't it rational that instead of concentrating on punishment, we should be improving ways of prevention?

The best way to work at prevention is by getting to the roots of our social ills - ills in education, family planning, rehabilitation, and social and economic opportunity.

The "eye for an eye" doctrine may have been appropriate for ancient Babylon, but twentieth century America should be moving away from the ignorant simplicity of that theory. Capital punishment is a crutch that society uses in the absence of moral values.

Like so many things today, it's the easy way out. Grow up, America, and face the real problem-prevention, not punishment. Gary Gilmore may have contributed more to society than he realizes. He has proven the outrageousness of an archaic system of justice which its proponents cannot doubtfully defend. And that's where the pro-death forces lose their argument.

Senate Armbands

Armbands have been used in many ways. They have been used as a form of protest and mourning. They will now also be used as a form of communication between students and the SGA. On the Wednesday before and Thursday of a Senate meeting, all senators will be wearing green and yellow armbands.

So if you happen to have a gripe or maybe a suggestion for something you want done, grab a senator and tell him; you'll finally know who they are. Don't let it end there, senate meetings are Thursdays at 7:30 upstairs in the chemistry building and are open to everyone.

The meeting this week will have the representatives of seven groups that receive money from the SGA giving reports. This includes WCNU, Seahawk, Fledgling, and others, so if you have an interest in any of these or just want to come, come.

Claude Kipnis Mime Theatre

The Claude Kipnis Mime Theatre will be presented on December 1 at 8:00 p.m. in Kenan Auditorium. Admission is free to UNC-W students with IDs.

The internationally famous mime, Claude Kipnis, was born in Paris and educated at the Sorbonne. One of his chief mentors in mime was the famous Marcel Marceau with whom he studied. In 1959 Kipnis left Paris and went to Israel where he established a mime studio in Tel Aviv and in addition, toured that country in solo performances. During that time he also taught with the deaf and mute children at the Helen Keller Center in Tel Aviv.

His fame grew throughout Europe when he appeared at the International Festival in Helsinki, Finland in 1962 and later that same year premiered a work which he both conceived and staged, "Men and Dreams." Mr. Kipnis went on to tour Scandinavia, Belgium and Holland and in London was asked to appear on the BBC-TV.

Mr. Kipnis and his mime company received a signal honor in 1974 when they were invited to perform at the White House before President Ford and honored guests.

Claude Kipnis Mime Theatre has made national tours every year with an ever-widening repertoire.

Poet Mike Church to Appear in Goodwood

The Department of English will present poet Mike Church tomorrow night at 8:00 in the Good Wood Tavern for a reading of his poems. Church is a graduate of UNCW and is currently a student in the graduate program in creative writing at UNC-Greensboro.

A native of Surf City, Church won many literary awards while a student in Wilmington for both his poetry and prose. He served as an editor for Atlantis, and many of his works were published in that literary magazine.

Church was recently one of the judges for the 1976 University Poetry Contest, and has since visited this campus to receive coaching from drama instructor Anne Fitzgibbon to prepare for tomorrow's reading.

During that visit, Church related some of his thoughts on poetry, including the influences and interests that have affected his writing.

"Poetry should span the gap between concrete experience and abstract concepts," Church stated. "It should-and interests were 'everything,' sum of its parts. Like music does with notes, sounds,(and) tones, poetry does with words so that not only reason but emotion and imagination are caught in that mystery of enchantment," Church continued.

Church said that his outside interests were "everything," and added that "a writer who has limited interests is a limited writer."

Those poets who have most influenced Church's writing are T.S. Eliot, Robert Frost, Lawrence Ferlinghetti, and W.H. Auden.

Everyone is cordially invited to attend the poetry reading which sponsors have promised will be a very enjoyable evening. Refreshments will be served by the English Club at the conclusion of the program.

"Dance of Death" Presented By University Theatre

The University Theatre now has in production its third presentation of the current semester August Strindberg's "The Dance of Death". This play will be presented in the S.R.O. Theatre December 3-6 with an 8:15 p.m. curtain.

The University Theatre is an educational theatre dedicated to the advancement of theatre art. We endeavor to produce the finest world drama for the student body and our academic community. We also wish to share our theatre with the surrounding communities in our region but feel that the student body is our first concern. Our theatre is of and for the students and because of this the productions are free to all University students. We want students to participate both on stage and in the audience.

"The Dance of Death" on the surface produces the battle of the sexes. It depicts both the male and the female in need of the other. They are bound to the necessity of this need while producing a mutual hatred. Their condition is a love-hate situation which produces a masterpiece of horror. Strindberg does not take sides in fact, the husband is portrayed as more destructive than the wife. The mystery and horror of this play stem from Strindberg's own experience; in his own words: "life was so alien, so contrary, so cruel, right from my childhood, and people were so cruel that I became so too". From a deeper level it is the story of a man working through his psyche to discover the meaning of his existence and the destination of his soul.

Appearing in the play is Aurelia Huff as the wife, Alice, and Ed Danilowicz as the husband. Mark Barefoot plays the old friend who helped bring about the marriage. Sharon Pierson and Debby Anderson play the maid and an old woman.

The play is under the direction of W. Terry Rogers with Hal Knowles serving as scenic designer and technical director. The lighting design is by Tim Wesner with assistance by Sheryl Moore. The stage manager is Randy Mercer. Mrs. Anne Fitzgibbon and Mrs. Dorothy Hall are designing original costumes. Mean Wesner and Connie Liles are in charge of properties. Debra Arntsen is the house manager and publicity is under the direction of Mark Barefoot. Bobby Russell is in charge of music while Penny pride-more will handle sound.

Reservations can be made by calling the Department of Drama/Speech 791-4300, Ext. 332 between the hours of 8:00a.m. to 5:00 p.m. Monday through Friday of the production week. You may come by the office personally to make your reservation.

The S.R.O. Theatre has limited seating and in order to assure a place in the theatre, reservations are advisable.

Christmas Concert

To enhance the observance of the Christmas season, the UNC-W Concert Choir and Chamber Singers will join forces with the UNC-W/Community Orchestra in concert on Monday, December 6, 1976 at 8:00 p.m. in Kenan Auditorium. Highlighting the concert will be the presentation of the Coronation Mass in C major by Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart. Featured soloists for this work will be: Beth Bell, soprano; Sheila Brooks, alto; Bill Newberry, tenor; and Johannes Bron, baritone.

The orchestra will perform four selections, including: "Toccata" by Frescobaldi, "Tobaggon" by Nestico, "Sleepers Awake" by Bach, and Leroy Anderson's "A Christmas Festival."

The remainder of the program will consist of seasonal music dating from Renaissance through the modern periods as performed by the Concert Choir. Selections include "Cantate Domine" by Schutz and "A Hymn to the Virgin" by Britten. The Chamber Singers will sing a group of traditional carols including the "Wassail Song," and "The Holly and the Ivy." Adding the warmth and nostalgia of the Christmas season.

FRESH

SERVICE

Hold the Pickles, Hold the Dorm Swill, Hold the Meal Card

(CPS)—Students holding their stomachs and moaning and groaning about the alleged food served in their dorms will be heartened by Terry Fisher's new cookbook.

Fisher, 21, a student at the University of Virginia, has written a cookbook aimed at dorm dwellers. Its title is "The International Student's Guide to Cooking Without Getting Caught." In it, she outlines handy methods for preparing dorm room cuisine with only a thermos, an iron, and a hot pot for boiling water.

Fisher says it is possible to grill a cheese sandwich with the iron, cook macaroni in the thermos, and to make fruit punches, bread and casseroles in the hot pot.

To make grilled cheese sandwiches, Fisher advises students to wrap the sandwich in foil, set the iron on "cotton" and place the sandwich on top of the sandwich as if it was a handkerchief, being careful not to squeeze the sandwich. For macaroni, put boiling water and pasta in the thermos and let it sit for an hour. As for casseroles, desserts, and breads, Fisher says cook them by placing the ingredients in a tin can, covering it with foil, and putting it in the hot pot with boiling water and steaming it for an hour or more. Voilà! A repast unmatched in any two-bit college cafeteria.

Further Education

Mrs. Jean Piner, the friendly face in the registrar's office, has left. She had been serving the students here for seven years. Mrs. Piner said that he really misses working with the students; however, like most of us students, she is going to further her education. Being a student, Mrs. Piner realizes the various traumatic experiences that many of us students go through during registration, drop/add, and the process of transferring grades. She has experienced time on both sides of the glass with the little round hole.

We shall all miss her. When we needed a friend over in that office, she was a friend indeed.

North Carolina Divers' Handbook Published

WRECK! The North Carolina Diver's Handbook is now available. The 76-page book is loaded with information on one of the United States' most unusual but least known diving areas: North Carolina's Graveyard of the Atlantic.

WRECK! is liberally illustrated with full-color and black and white underwater photographs. About a fourth of the handbook deals with history of the area and the many reasons for the great number of ships sunk here. Included in this section is a discussion of the Gulf Stream and the role it plays in providing clear water and marine life. Another fourth of the book is devoted to the business of diving this coast, that is dealing with dive shops, charter captains and the dozens of other "eccentricities" you'll find here. The diver still is a relative curiosity here and this section will give you some tips on how to become an outcast.

Finally, about half the book is devoted to descriptions of many of the great wrecks that are regularly dived in the "GRAVEYARD". Four of the best are discussed in detail. A line drawing of the wreck as it lays on the bottom is included along with a complete description of what the diver will find and both topside (pre-sinking) and underwater photographs of the ships. An additional thirty wrecks are discussed giving history, location, how-to-get-there information and in many cases a photograph. Two charts are included which will show relative positions of these wrecks.

To round out the handbook a special section on the problems of North Carolina underwater photography is included plus sections on marine life and preservation of relics from the sea. A complete appendix lists all pro-dive shops in the state plus many charter boats. North Carolina salvage law is discussed as it applies to the diver and more information on German U-boat operations off this coast is contained in this manual than in any other source.

WRECK! The North Carolina Diver's Handbook is available through many East Coast pro-dive shops and bookstores or directly from the publisher for $4.50 which includes shipping. Write: Maine Graphics, Box 2242, Chapel Hill, NC 27514.

Two Aspen Funsters Invent a College

(CPS)—With its gaggles of Hollywood hotshots who sometimes shoot each other, four stunning ski mountains and its dozens of luminaries of the literary ilk, you'd think Aspen, Colorado has everything a city could ask for.

Not so, thought Al Pendorf and Marc Demmon, two Aspenites who decided what Aspen needed was a college—so they started one—Aspen State is its name, and it really doesn't exist. But ever since last December, when they came up with the idea, the pair has been pulling in between $500 and $1,000 a week by pushing such items as Aspen State: handbooks, T-shirts, pennants, mugs, decals, "I.D. cards, baseball caps and parking stickers. They dubbed Aspen State the "Brooms," and even issued an imaginary school emblem that pictures crossed skis with a broom in the center.

"At first it was a real joke," explains Pendorf, a University of Michigan grad. "We wrote a college handbook and gave away copies to friends. Then requests started coming in. In February, we launched our enterprise with T-shirts."

In the Aspen State handbook, Pendorf assumes the title of Dean of Women and Equipment manager. The handbook features a course which explains how to hit all the Saturday morning garage sales. Another course, Bar-hopping 303, "provides students with a comprehensive study of many campus taverns," the handbook states.

Things That Go Bump in the Night

By Charlie Suppler

Q: What is exorcism? A.A.
A: This is the process by which a demon or any undesirable presence is expelled from a person said to be inhabited by, or rather possessed by, this presence.

I'm not sure if this holds true for today, but the rites of exorcism used to be included with other Roman Catholic services and a priest could perform these rites.

Even though there have been actual cases of possession, usually the person was possessed by the ghost of another person rather than a demon, many supposed cases of possession were probably schizophrenia and, especially in ancient times, epilepsy.

Q: What are Harpies? - P.A.
A: The Harpies were vultures with women's faces, sharp curved claws, filthy underparts, and an evil disposition accompanied by an equally evil smell.

They were quite invulnerable and would gorge themselves on food set at tables laid for a feast. What they couldn't eat they would contaminate with excrement, and that certainly didn't lend an air of gaiety to the occasion.

Strangely, for such wicked creatures as they were, they had rather good beginnings in myth. It seems they started out as goddesses, wind goddesses to be exact. How they degenerated into the shrieking hateful things they became is anybody's guess.

Atlantis Publishes Last Magazine of Semester

By Cindy Shell

Will you be in the Kenan Building, library, or cafeteria this week? Well, make a point of it! In those three buildings, and in several others, there will be stacks of superb reading material. You guessed it (or did you?)—the Atlantis!

And you're in for a treat. The cover is in color. Not just blue or just green but several different colors.

And the cover's illustration even has a title. True, the magazine has always had a title, but this year the cover, too, has a title. Carol Collier calls her work of art "A Bird is But a Feathered Reptile."

Rather catchy, wouldn't you say? That title wasn't printed on the magazine, however. (After all, someone might mistake the Atlantis for a geology lab manual.) But we all know and that's what counts.

And what about the stuff between the covers? As always there will be several stories. Through three "filtering" sessions Bill Rapp and his prose staff selected four of the twenty stories submitted.

"Standing Tiptoe on a Baptist Hymnal" by Laura Hales deals with a little girl's relationship to her grandfather and how she accepts and adjusts to his death.

"The Jug" by Lance Smith involves a boy who chooses to bury his father at sea and becomes a man in the process.

"Old Hearts Not Wanted. Do Not Apply Within" depicts a little girl taken away from her alcoholic grandmother. Written by Joani Reese, the story is told from the grandmother's point of view.

The fourth story, "Very Easy" by Steve Harvey is a horror story set in third class of a dimly lit train.

Of course the bonus in this semester's issue is the winning poems from the poetry contest. John Bartlett working with his poetry staff chose for the magazine from over forty poems also submitted to the contest.

Dorothy Hall's first place poem, "The Silent One" shows a writer who lives to write.

"Irony" by Laura Hales involves a riot and how one person gets carried away in the crowd without realizing it.

"Joe's Bar and Common Cathedral" by Anne Morris takes a very unusual view of a bar room.

"Itinerant Syntax" by Bill

Gymnastics Club

Gymnastics club needs your bounce of support. No experience is necessary. Just your presence on Tuesday nights at 6:30 in the gym.

Rapp is a satire on the type of poetry that uses extremely long words that few people understand.

Themes among the poems were extremely varied but common to most was the extensive use of imagery.

The magazine has yet another bonus! This issue will have more artwork than ever before. The work was done by Carol Collier and six people in the art department. (In the future, the Atlantis hopes to have even more participation from the art students.)

Finally the three editors met with the main editor Lance Smith and Associate Editor Cindy Shell to put together the thirty-two page magazine.

It was hard work but the staff feels the finished magazine will be well worth it. So it's certainly worth your time to read.

Go by and pick up your copy. (No charge, of course!) And if it inspires you, come by the English department and join the staff!

Campus Young Republicans Club

During the recent election, a volunteer at Democratic headquarters made a comment about UNC-W. "There ain't nothing but damned Republicans out there," snapped the unhappy worker. While this particular person may have exaggerated a bit, his comment reflects an outstanding degree of success enjoyed by the campus Republican Club in organization and ability to publicize its positions.

Now that liberal Democrats are in control of three branches of the federal government, the duty of Young Republicans to sound the defense of free enterprise and limited government is extremely important. In order to achieve this goal, a meeting of the Campus Young Republicans Club will be held tonight (Wednesday) at 6:30 in the Goodwood Tavern. This meeting is of the greatest importance as the club will officially adopt a new constitution and elect officers. These officers will journey to Raleigh Sunday to officially apply with the State Federation of College Republicans for recognition. Upon acceptance by the State Federation, UNC-W will gain votes in the state convention and a voice in the party.

Remember, the government of our nation requires strong party competition and a defense of free enterprise is urgently needed. All students who support the party platform and have not registered with an opposition party are invited to this important meeting.

Advisor Needed

The Wilmington New-Hanover Museum is looking for a history buff to act as advisor for a History Club for Junior High School aged students. The club will work on projects and take field trips one or two Saturday mornings per month. Interested persons may contact the museum at 763-0852 or Al Harris in the Student Activities Office, ext. 264.

SENATE REVIEWS SPENDING

by Bobby Parker

The Student Senate met in regular session on Thursday night, hearing financial reports from representatives of several SGA-funded organizations. Vice-president Paul Laird presided over the meeting at which 19 of the 22 senators were present.

Kent Wiggins, Dawn Brickley, and Mike Broom were the absent senators. SGA President Duffy Robinson was also not present, but a resolution offered by Sophomore Vice-President Ray Warren was approved by the Senate requesting Robinson's attendance at tomorrow night's meeting.

The rules of order were suspended for the evening to accommodate the financial reports. SGA Attorney General Roger Wiggs first addressed the Senate to request that the legislature nominate two students to serve on the Academic Court which is provided by the recently approved Honor Code. Wiggs cited the urgency of the appointments because a case is presently being prepared to go to the Courts.

Wiggs stated that a student will be challenging a failing grade which he received in summer school after a charge of academic dishonesty from the instructor. The case will not be made public, Wiggs said, but will be tried before the Court as provided in the Honor Code.

Sophomore President Karin Whaley nominated Senior President Clay Fairley and Vice-President Laird for the two positions. Laird was nominated at his own request, saying he had a "special interest" in the appointment. Senator Greta Lint nominated Joanne Gentry, but a roll call vote confirmed Fairley and Laird unanimously, with one abstention.

The financial reports began with Lance Smith, editor of Atlantis, who presented his budget and received few questions. Darlene Pearsall's report for the Seahawk also met few questions from the senators.

The most extensive questions came from Vice-President Warren when WCNU Business Manager Mark Sanchez and Station manager Greg Larrimore presented their financial statement. The radio station is in the process of obtaining an FCC license to broadcast on FM, and has incurred substantial expenses in the process. With a budget of $9499.88, the station has spent $6233.08 this year.

The station also gave notice to the Senate that it would request a reallocation of $1870 to cover cost of moving into new offices to accommodate the change to FM broadcast. Larrimore noted that a mobile unit is being prepared for the station headquarters, and said that the station would have its FM license probably in early March. He cited government red tape as the obstacle saying the matter "is out of our hands."

Warren, however, questioned the delay, saying "when you're asking for money I wish you'd present a realistic picture" of what you can do. He cited that last year, WCNU had requested funds for the FM transfer with a fall target date to begin FM broadcasting. This was later changed to a January target and has now been moved to March.

Larrimore defended the station's progress by saying "we're doing the best we can... with the facilities we've got." He stated that WCNU will become the most vital link between university and community when it begins FM broadcast. He continued, "we take it as being offensive when students stand off to the side and complain" about WCNU's operations without bringing legitimate complaints to the staff.

Warren continued his attack on the station representatives, however, when he proclaimed that the SGA is "pouring a lot of money in (the station's budget) with no return". This prompted President Whaley to state, "I don't think we should be giving these people (from WCNU) such a hard time." because, she added, they are working hard and doing a good job in a difficult situation.

A rather heated exchange between Warren and Whaley resulted when Warren defended his questions as being in the students' interests. Vice-president Laird interceded to prevent an argument and closed the discussion of WCNU's report.

VICE Squad Chairman Carson Benson reported the financial situation of his group, explaining that most of the expenses were for new equipment and syndicated programming. Warren charged that "the VICE Squad has produced absolutely zero" to improve campus communications. He added that the original intention of VICE was to aid communications, and stated that most of the group's presentations were of entertainment value rather than directed at the communications problem.

Senator Greta Lint questioned whether VICE was providing ample coverage of student activities.

Benson stated that VICE will be moving away from total entertainment programs in the coming semester and plans to provide more coverage of campus activities.

All other SGA-funded committees and organizations will be called to report at tomorrow's meeting, the last of this semester. The meetings are open to all interested persons, and are held each Thursday night at 7:30 in room 218 of the Chemistry Building.

Indian Activist to Speak to Sociology Class

An Indian Activist, Wayne Roberson, Chawetaw Indian member of the American Indian Movement (AIM) from San Francisco, will be lecturing Dr. Dixon's urban Sociology Class on Friday, Dec 10, in Room 109 of Hoggard Hall. Wayne is 39 and has been an activist for 6 yrs. He is co-founder of the native American Student Union NESU at Contra Costa College in San Pablo California. The NESU established the native American Studies program at the college. It was the first Native American Studies program in Contra Costa County.

Roberson is also a consultant to the Society for California Archeology, Speaker Pro-Tem for the California Assembly and Aim Representative to the Holy Places in California. Wayne will be discussing Why And How Indians get into the cities. The problems facing Indians in the Urban Area and how they overcome their problems, and the interaction between Urban Indians and velocuted Indian peoples.

The purpose of the lecture is to make people aware of the tremendous social problems faced by Indians in an Urban setting. All interested students and community members are invited to attend.

Soccer Team is Innocent of Charges: Harmony Re-Established

To the Editor:

In last week's issue of The Seahawk a copy of an editorial from the Campbell College Creek Pebbles appeared. This editorial was one of the worst examples of journalism I have ever had the displeasure of seeing. It was vindictive and totally untrue. This type of reporting has no place in our society where freedom of the press carries with it certain principles of honor, truth, and discipline. People who use an influential position as editor of a newspaper to print unfounded attacks on groups against whom they have grudges cannot be tolerated. Efforts should be made to guard against this type of person's being in such a responsible position.

I want to reassure the alumni, students, staff, and people of Wilmington that our soccer team members have always conducted, and will continue to conduct, themselves in a first-rate manner that should bring pride to everyone. We respect each other and our opponents. We realize that winning is our ultimate goal, but that playing within the spirit of the game is vital. How you win is as important as winning, and if you do not have the respect of others, your program is not worth continuing.

I would have appreciated the opportunity of commenting on the aforementioned editorial in the issue of The Seahawk the same time that it appeared. Then our soccer program would not have been condemnned unjustly, as it has been, for the past week. The following letter from Mr. Wendall Carr, Campbell athletic director, I think, explains the situation and exonerates us of any wrong doing. As he states, we were invited to the front of the cafeteria line and asked to go through as a group. We were not aware of grace being given, and obviously others were not, as they were talking and eating continuously while we were there.

It is with great pride that I have watched our soccer program over the past three years become recognized and respected throughout the eastern United States. This has been accomplished mainly through the efforts of the fine student-athletes who represent our program and who have here been unfairly subjected to criticism.

I would like to thank The Seahawk for the excellent coverage our soccer program has received the past few years, and the support our student body and faculty have given us is greatly appreciated. I respect Mr. Carr and the Campbell athletic program. Hopefully, we will have many years of friendly competition.

Calvin L. Lane
Soccer Coach

Dear Dr. Wagoner:

Our article written in our own Creek Pebbles on Tuesday, November 9, 1976, was brought to my attention yesterday afternoon. The reason for the delay in my reading the article was that I was out of town on Tuesday thru Sunday on college business. Otherwise, this letter would have been written last Wednesday.

At the outset, let me convey to you that the Athletic Department at Campbell College has the utmost respect for Calvin Lane and his fine soccer team. They have always conducted themselves as gentlemen in our presence. We have enjoyed a very competitive but harmonious relationship with UNC-Wilmington over the years and we hope that it will continue to be a competitive experience. At the same time, we want our students to have the same respect for the opponent as due our team members. You can rest assured that we will make every effort to get this point across to our student body in the future.

As to the source of the article, we can only visualize this young man as a frustrated loser on October 31, 1976.

We make it a standard policy to allow visiting teams to go to the head of the line in our cafeteria. From what I understand, the Wilmington Soccer Team was escorted to the front of the line by the cafeteria manager. This is usual procedure. It is quite possible that the soccer team was not aware of the cafeteria procedure in offering grace. We hope that you as a university president understands the possible behavior of a student who has just observed his team in a losing cause.

With every best wish, I remain
Sincerely yours,
Wendell L. Carr
Athletic Director

A column of personal comment

by Bobby Parker

There is a change brewing in the U.S. Senate comparable to that coming to the White House next January. Both party leaders have retired, and the race to replace each of them has developed into a contest featuring some of the most distinct personalities in that legislative body.

After years as the Democratic majority leader, Mike Mansfield, the gentle giant from Montana, is quietly stepping down. A man to whom aggression is a stranger, Mansfield guided his colleagues through Camelot, Vietnam, and Watergate with a consistently steady hand. He has no enemies, and is very much suspect that he has few companions who can claim that distinction.

Some may criticize Mansfield as a passive leader who did not initiate action within the Senate. That may be true, but that kind of leadership—partisan, yet open-minded—is far better than the "bossism" of a Lyndon Johnson.

(It has been said, with much credibility, that John Kennedy chose Johnson as his running mate in 1960 for precisely the reason of removing him from the Senate leadership.)

The battle to capture Mansfield's position has shaped into a standoff between Mr. Democrat, Hubert Humphrey, and the majority whip of the Senate (the assistant leader), Robert Byrd. Byrd got an early start while Humphrey was playing presidential sweepstakes and is generally considered the leader in the race at this point.

What can be said about Hubert Humphrey that hasn't already been said? The Minnesotan has been in national politics since 1948 when as major of Minneapolis he played an important role at the national convention. He's been dangling for the national ticket in every election since 1956, and has made it twice. He has been in the Senate since 1948 except while Vice-president under Johnson.

West Virginia's Byrd has a lengthy line of legislative service that began on the national level in 1952 as a congressman. He was elected to the Senate in 1958 and has been reelected by huge margins. He is a self-made man who defeated the luminescent Senator Ted Kennedy for the assistant leadership post that he now holds. He has many political IOU's, and he plans to collect.

Byrd's aggressive personality is straight from the mold of Lyndon Johnson. He's a through-and-through politician who would use his position as majority leader to his own personal whims. Hollings would make an excellent leader, but his chances are doubtful. He would add experience, as well as freshness to the job, and would work well with President Carter.

There is a third candidate for the position who could produce a deadlock when the Democrats vote in January. He is South Carolina Senator Ernest Hollings, a liberal by southern standards, a moderate in national terms. At 54, he is younger than Humphrey and Byrd. Elected to the Senate in 1966, he claims the support of about a dozen senators, and his main attribute is that he is a fresh face. But the nation may not be ready to accept two southerners in one year.

But Hubert Humphrey IS the Democratic Party. Some may argue that he is merely a sentimental favorite; others would say—and rightly so—that Humphrey has earned the job. Despite his age—65—he is still seen in the progressive, active wing of the party. His health may play a factor in his chances, and Byrd's IOU's may be too difficult to overcome.

The race is likely to come down to a Humphrey-Byrd dead heat, with Hollings' vote dividing between the two. Or perhaps Hollings will become a compromise. Anything is better than Byrd winning—but Humphrey deserves to win one last battle; the Party owes him that.

On the Republicans' side, the leadership post will also be changing hands with the retirement of Hugh Scott. The Pennsylvania senator is completing a rather dull term as minority leader and is exiting at a time when the Republicans need a change of guard.

Like the Democrats, the Republicans' whip is seeking the top post. Michigan's Robert Griffin was considered the shoo-in until the surprise announcement of Mr. Republican—Arizona's Barry Goldwater. Youthful Tennesseean Howard Baker has also made plans to enter the race, making this a three-way struggle as well.

Griffin is of the moderate wing of the party and deserves serious consideration for that reason. In the Senate since 1966, he has been minority whip since 1969. Like Byrd, he has been orchestrating his ascension, but unlike Byrd, he is not an aggressive politician.

The party would benefit enormously from moving toward the center with Griffin, but it's doubtful that the right-wing extremists will approve.

Goldwater has been in the Senate almost as long as Humphrey—since 1952—with a break to run for president in 1964. At 67 he represents the right wing of the party (he's an ideologue) and it is hard to forget how he tore the party apart in '64 by fighting bitterly with Nelson Rockefeller for control. But in recent years, he has mellowed his extremism. He supported Gerald Ford this year over the conservatives' baby doll, Ronald Reagan. He is the most honest and frank politician in office today.

In the Senate for ten years, 51 year-old Howard Baker is a very popular figure who was one of the few Republicans to benefit from Watergate. But Baker has already hinted his intention to seek the party's presidential nomination in 1980, and the Senate leadership post can only be a stepping stone to that bid.

The Republicans should steer clear of him for exactly the same reason they should avoid Reagan or John Connally as party chairman. The party cannot afford to commit itself to one of these three men so soon—it has a lot of growing to do to rebuild itself into a competitive national force before 1980.

If my use of the terms "Mr. Democrat" and "Mr. Republican" annoys you, I did not apply these titles myself. It's just that Humphrey and Goldwater have earned these titles, and they belong to no one else. It is ironic that both of them are stepping forth simultaneously to seek leadership roles in their party.

Humphrey and Goldwater have been called losers of the past, but they are two of the biggest winners in public life today. Their respect spans ideological and party labels, and their legislative genius is unsurpassed.

I can think of nothing more fitting than for these two old war horses leading their respective party in the Senate chambers. It's a bit exciting to think that the two senators may finally transfer their party influence—already a recognized fact—into a title. Hollings and Griffin will have their day; the Senate should give this one to the good old boys.

ENTERTAINMENT

Fred Hubbard Appears in Good Wood

When Fred Hubbard appears on the stage you can expect... well, almost anything...but definitely entertainment. Each performance offers a spontaneous program of music and comedy that appeals to the college-age audience. Included are some original songs and some favorites from such artists as Jimmy Buffett, Steve Goodman, John Sebastian, and others. Original songs are built upon meaningful lyrics and a folk-jazz guitar style. Some will make you laugh, some will provoke your thoughts. All of them are designed to entertain.

In his guitar playing, Fred shows influences of folk and jazz, as well as country and classical. Since he first picked up a guitar at age eleven, Fred has performed in folk, rock, and jazz groups; the Wake Forest Jazz Ensemble; the Jazz Mobile; and as a solo performer. His experience ranges from work behind Mame Van Doren to bass back-ups for a Chuck Berry Concert.

Fred has worked behind the scenes also with four years of college union activity and announcing at WFDD-FM.

Wake Forest University. As sound flight technician at Winston Salem's Hub Pub Club he has worked with such artists as Doc Watson, Jimmy Buffett, Gamble Rogers, and others.

Since Graduating from Wake Forest, Fred has performed in coffeehouses and clubs and worked in commercial sessions at a Winston, Salem recording studio. He will be appearing this Wednesday, Thursday and Friday night in the Goodwood Tavern. Fred will perform two forty-five minute sets every night beginning at 8:00 P.M. Admission is only 50 cents and you can bring your own brew.

Fred will also conduct an afternoon workshop on songwriting and guitar beginning at 2:30 P.M. Thursday in the Tavern. The Workshop is being offered free of charge and all local musicians are encouraged to attend and exchange their songwriting ideas and styles.

Charlie Daniels

The Prisoner

"The Prisoner" is presented Monday thru Thursday in the snack bar. This weeks episode is "Fall Out."

To Amplify: This is the hidden, mysterious world beneath the surface. The trial is being held in a vast, rock cavern. The session has been called in a matter of democratic crisis, and the delegates in attendance represent the Old Fool, the Youngsters, the Activists, pacifists, and every other shade of opinion and activity in the Village. The President announces that the community is at stake: "And we have the means to protect it."

"No. 6" faces the court. He has survived the ultimate test and he must no longer be referred to as "No. 6" or a number of any kind: "He has," the President announces "gloriously vindicated the right of the individual to be individual." The President faces him with his final challenge as "A Man magnificently equipped to lead us... Lead us or go!"

What will he do? Freedom beckons. But freedom is not only a physical thing. It lies within man himself.

Concert Date Confirmed: Welcome Home, Charlie Daniels

You say you heard rumors about Charlie Daniels playing Wilmington? Well, friends and neighbors, the rumors have become fact.

The Concerts Committee has announced that the Charlie Daniels Band will play for the homecoming. After much disappointment, arrangements have been made and the concert is on. Wilmington's own Charlie Daniels will return.

As the final activity for Homecoming, Charlie Daniels will be appearing at Brogden Hall, January 30, 1977 (that's a Sunday night), at 8:00 p.m.

Charlie, a native of the Wilmington area (raised in Leland) has "hit the big time" after years of playing honky tonks and Nashville session work.

His first hit single, "Uncasy Rider" found Charlie with his own band. Now with the Charlie Daniels Band, he has a major proponent of Southern Music with songs like "The South's Gonna Do It Again" and "Texas."

Charlie is quick to point out that he is not country. "We're from Mt. Juliet, Tennessee, not Nashville. Those few miles east make all the difference...Nashville's country; we're not Nashville!"

So, mark your calendars, grab your cowboy hats and get ready for the Charlie Daniels Band, January, 30, 1977 at Brogden Hall. Tickets will be $5.50 and $6.00.

ALL HOME GAMES AT 7:30 P.M.

Hawks Down Baptist in Home Opener

After losing their first two road games, the Seahawk basketball squad bounced back to trounce Baptist College 110-89 here Saturday night.

The Seahawks dominated the entire game, coming out on top in virtually all statistics. The Hawks hit 41 of their 69 shots at the basket, with Baptist putting in only 33 of 76.

UNC-W also won the rebound contest, pulling down 52 to Baptist's 44.

Leading scorer for the Hawks was Bobby Martin with 23 points. His brother Billy followed with 17, with Garry Cooper contributing 15 points to the winning effort.

Cooper also was the Seahawk rebounding leader, grabbing 14. Delaney Jones followed with 12.

While the Seahawks have always played well at home, the same cannot be said of road games. That may be changing this year, though. Despite losing their first two road games, the squad has showed great signs of potential.

In the season opener, the Hawks lost 80-67 to a much taller and more experienced East Tennessee State squad. The game was fairly close till the final six minutes, when a Buccaneer rally put the contest out of reach. Cooper paced the UNC-W effort with 14 points. Billy Martin followed with 12.

It took a late rally and some questionable officiating for the Appalachian State Mountaineers to edge out a 51-49 victory over the Seahawks. Cooper once again proved to be a factor, scoring 16 points and nabbing seven rebounds. Jones followed with 11 points and seven rebounds.

UNC-W has only one game remaining before the holidays, that's this Saturday in Greenville against East Carolina. After Christmas, the squad travels north to face the University of Maine at Orono and Fairleigh Dickinson University in Teaneck, New Jersey.

the group released the PENTHOUSE TAPES which was a follow up to their live album released here last year. PENTHOUSE TAPES is a collection of the most frequently requested songs the group does on stage but which are not on any of the other albums. Most of them were written by other people and are interesting in the way Harvey has adapted them to his style.

Take for example the very well done version of Del Shannon's "Runaway" and Ian Anderson's "Love Story." These two are done as though Harvey had written them with his band in mind. In fact, "Love Story" is one of the best cuts on the album. It contains the band's style very well with Harvey's vocals accented by the very well done guitar work by Zal Cleminson. "Runaway" was a single in England which did well on the charts.

Ending side one is a very well done version of Alice Cooper's "School's Out." As usual Harvey ends the side with a bang.

Side two is a little less hard rock as the band has taken some older songs and rocked them up a little. Opening here is "Goodnight Irene" which is done very SENSATIONAL ALEX HARVEY BAND style. Here again the group shows its very close relationship.

This workmanship continues with Jimmy Roger's "Gambler's Bar Room Blues." This is one of the only old honky tonk songs I have ever heard the group do and it alone is worth a listen. Piano work by Hugh McKenna really makes the song as does the added attraction of Harvey singing country. In Harvey's own words, "It's still a great song from a great country."

As for "Cheek to Cheek," "Haven't I Heard That Song Before," said George Fineglove to Sarah Spinehrust while SAHB were recording live in the New Victoria Theatre in London Christmas 1975. "Yes," said Sarah, "Fred Astaire does it-but he really does it well." So what else can I say.

Although TAPES is a very good and well done album, SAHB STORIES is the better of the two, for it is one of the best progressive rock groups around.

"Dance to Your Daddy" opens the album and is really a good dance number. Although the words are a little dumb in places the music is really good. But then again, what disco music these days has well written lyrics?

Next is another old song revised by SAHB, "Amos Moses." Here again you have the band working very well together to produce a sound of their own. This is one of the best cuts the band has yet produced.

Following this is a very traditional sounding SAHB cut "Jungle Rub Out." It has a very primitive, jazz-rock sound with Harvey's "Me Tarzan, you Jane" type vocals.

"Sirocco" ends the side and is a very unusual song. The melody is very haunting, making the song as interesting as it is unusual. One of the better on the album.

Are you going to the "Boston Tea Party" opens side two and is a very well written and performed cut. Everything seems to work together as the lead and backing vocals play back and forth within themselves and the music. This same idea continues in the next cut, "Sultan's Choice" for here we have disco with a different beat.

"Dogs of War" brings the album to an end and is really a powerful cut. Here we find the usual Harvey type statements instead of clean vocal lines. This to me is one of the group's best points for it is through this style that the listener is able to use his own imagination.

So there you have it, two new albums from one of England's best progressive rock groups. Either album is worth having though SAHB STORIES is the newer of the two. J.W.

When I last did an article on The SENSATIONAL ALEX HARVEY BAND I was unsure of how their LIVE album would be accepted in this country or what the group would be up to next. Well, as expected, the group has now fallen on the list of really great English bands who never seem to cut the cake in the good old U.S. of A. They are, however, as popular as ever in their own country and have come out with two exceptional albums this year alone.

Academic Honor Code Now in Effect

The University of North Carolina at Wilmington is committed to the proposition that the pursuit of truth requires the presence of honesty among all involved. It is therefore this institution's stated policy that no form of dishonesty among its faculty or students will be tolerated. Although all members of the university community are encouraged to report occurrences of dishonesty, each individual is principally responsible for his own honesty. The following definitions and procedures are provided in the interest of helping all to realize the high value that is placed on academic integrity and the means that will be employed to ensure its preservation.

I. Academic Dishonesty Offenses

Many forms of academic dishonesty are too obvious to require definition. Cheating on tests, providing or receiving unauthorized assistance, tampering with grades and records, stealing exams, and other similar misdeeds are patently dishonest and need no further discussion.

There is, however, one offense that has not always been subjected to the full disapproval it deserves, and that is plagiarism. Therefore, the following description is provided so that the policy of this institution is clear.

Plagiarism is the act of taking the work of someone else and passing it off as one's own. It is doubly unethical, since it deprives the true author of his rightful credit and then gives that credit to one to whom it is not due. It is thus a form of theft as well as fraud, and is thus totally out of place in an institution of higher learning.

Since in stealing the work of another one can use it in different ways, there are different kinds of plagiarism. The following three kinds are described by Harold C. Martin and Richard M. Ohmann in their book, THE LOGIC AND RHETORIC OF EXPOSITION (1963):

A. Word-for-Word Copying. Whenever someone else is directly quoted, honesty and courtesy require acknowledgement of the source. The text should be placed in quotation marks and its exact location should be indicated either in the text itself or in a footnote.

B. The Mosaic. To intersperse a few words of one's own here and there while basically copying the work of another is obviously unethical, unless one clearly acknowledges that this is being done. Should there be a valid reason for doing so, then quotation marks or a general footnote should be used to show what belongs to the source and what is one's own contribution.

C. The Paraphrase. Once more the crucial point is acknowledgement. Sometimes one can paraphrase in order to simplify, abbreviate, or improve upon an original, but the reader deserves to know what is being presented to him and whose work it represents. Therefore, acknowledgement of the source is required within the text or by a footnote.

In summary, the stated policy of the University of North Carolina at Wilmington on all these forms of plagiarism is clear: conscious use of sources is always to be acknowledged.

II. Judicial System

In order to enforce the policy of academic integrity, a mechanism for handling violations is provided. To ensure justice and protect individual rights, a two court system is employed.

A. Academic Court

The Academic Court consists of two students (elected by the Student Senate), two faculty members (appointed by the Chancellor for one-year terms following recommendations by the Committee on Committees), and the Vice-Chancellor for Student Affairs. The Vice-Chancellor for Student Affairs presides over this court.

An Attorney General and a Defense Attorney are appointed by the President of the SGA. A defendant may choose his own defense attorney, so long as that person selected is not a member of the court system.

B. Court of Appeals

The Court of Appeals is composed of the Academic Dean, a Dean of Students, the chairman of the Faculty, the President of the SGA, and the President of the Senior Class. The Academic Dean presides over this court.

C. General Court Rules

1. No individual can serve as a member of both of these courts.
2. The presiding officer of each court is responsible for maintaining records of each proceeding. The records are filed in the Student Affairs Office.
3. The courts shall function in such a way as to ensure the right of due process and fair hearing to every defendant, including the presumption of innocence until found guilty, the right to know the evidence and to face witnesses testifying against him, and the right to advice and assistance in his own defense.

4. The presiding officer will appoint replacements in cases of conflicts of interest or unavoidable absence.

5. The five judges decide by majority vote on the innocence or guilt of the defendant, and also on the suggested penalty.

6. The defendant may appeal a decision of the Court of Appeals; but if he is found innocent by any one of these courts, the case is at that point automatically closed, and the student cleared unless additional evidence is disclosed.

7. An appeal by the plaintiff may be heard in the Court of Appeals only if the presiding officer of that court agrees that sufficient new evidence is available to warrant a new trial.

III. Judicial Procedure

A. Out-of-court Settlement.

When an instructor suspects a student of academic dishonesty, the first avenue of resolution may be private. If the penalty proposed by the instructor is acceptable to the student, the incident can be dropped; the instructor must, however, be sure the student is aware of his option to go through the courts. The instructor may let the court decide the case, at his discretion.

B. Initiating Court Action

1. The Student Attorney General is contacted by either party; he is then responsible for gathering data pertinent to the case.

2. After meeting with both parties, the Attorney General determines a mutually agreeable date for their appearance before the Academic Court.

3. The defendant must be allowed a reasonable time to prepare for his defense. However, all cases should be handled expeditiously so that court proceedings should be underway within two weeks of the initial charge.

C. Suggested Penalties

Proven Offenses

1. If the court finds a student innocent of the charge, the instructor involved must acknowledge the student's legal innocence and assure fair treatment of the student.

2. If the defendant is found guilty of the charge, the court suggests a penalty, considering all circumstances in the case. Either failure in the course or suspension for the remainder of the semester is generally appropriate for an offense of academic dishonesty.

D. Implementation

1. Following settlement of a case, notification of the outcome of the case and the suggested penalty, if appropriate, is sent to the defendant, the faculty member involved, the Academic Dean, and the Chancellor. A copy of this notification is placed on file in the Student Affairs office along with the other records of the proceeding.

2. The authority to determine the course grade resides with the instructor, subject to the existing grade appeal process.

3. The authority to suspend or expel resides with the Chancellor.

The fraternity went camping and hang-gliding at Grandfather Mountain this past weekend. Brother Gainey almost flew away, but we finally retrieved him. Brother Sheneman set his tent on fire, and we all generally had a good time.

We initiated three new brothers on Nov. 20. Congrats to Mike McGarvey, "Keg" Warren, and Billy Coleman.

Brother Billy finally made the "list". The "list" is quite an honor in our fraternal circle and we are proud that Brother Coleman inserted himself so quickly.

Astronomy Club

This semester the Astronomy Club has been building up for a bright outlook on the Spring semester. We are still encouraging new membership. If you are interested, please see Mr. Rolla Nelson (Physics Dept.). Along with interesting viewings we had an exciting trip to the Morehead Planetarium and Observatory. This semester we hope to present a film and lecture series. We have a list of many interesting films that should be enjoyable to everyone. Wed. night (Dec. 8) at 7:00 PM the Society of Physics will present the film "The Invisible Universe". There will be a small social gathering afterwards. If you are interested in the Society of Physics of the Astronomy Club please attend. Food and drink will be served after the film. We hope new faces will come. Thank you Another answer, they say, is that smarter kids are simply the ones who try marijuana earlier.

Food Service Expands

by Bobby Parker

Food service has returned to the Good Wood Tavern as part of an expanded meal program that has been developed by university officials and the firm which holds the campus food contract.

Director of Auxiliary Services James K. Clark and Student Activities Director Al Harris, along with Vice Chancellor William Mallov, worked with officials of Interstate United, Inc., to devise the improved facilities.

Under the new plan, residence students may take meals at either of three places: the cafeteria, the snack bar (both located in the cafeteria building) or the Good Wood Tavern (located in the Pub).

The board plan was previously limited to the cafeteria only.

The menu of the Good Wood facility consists of hamburgers, hot dogs, and other sandwiches. These are offered at low prices as compared to similar eating establishments. For example, a quarter-pound cheeseburger is 75 cents in the Good Wood, while the same averages 85 cents at most fast-food restaurants. Boarding students pay through a punch-card system.

Harris indicated this week that patronage at the Good Wood has substantially exceeded expectations. He noted that approximately 1800 people were served in the first week, compared to a conservative estimate of 600 that had initially been anticipated. Harris stated that the traffic is about even for lunch and dinner hours.

The change brought substantial alterations in the terms of Interstate United's contract, but Harris said that officials of that company were very pleas-

The hours of the Good Wood extend from 10:30 a.m. to 10:00p.m. A student may have lunch until 3:00 p.m. at which time the dinner hours begin. Harris figured the approximate night time traffic at 250 in the first week, and said that beginning in February live entertainment will be Any student who protests a course grade shall first attempt to resolve the matter with the instructor involved.

Grade Appeal Procedure Outlined

Failing to reach a satisfactory resolution, the student may appeal the grade in accordance with the procedures outlined below. Such appeal must be made not later than the last day of registration for the next succeeding regular semester.

1. The student shall present the appeal in writing to the chairman of the department within which the protested grade was awarded. By conferring with the student and the instructor, the chairman will seek resolution by mutual agreement.

2. Failing such resolution, the department chairman will transmit the written appeal to the Academic Dean.

3. The Academic Dean will convene the Grade Appeals Committee. The Grade Appeals Committee will consist of the Academic Dean as chairman, the Vice Chancellor for Academic Affairs Advisory Committee, and one additional member appointed by the Academic Dean. In the event a member of the Grade Appeals Committee happens to be the chairman of the department concerned or the faculty member whose grade is being appealed, such member must excuse himself from the appeal process.

4. Final decision will be made by the Grade Appeals Committee. If a decision is made to affirm the original grade, the Academic Dean will notify in writing the faculty member, the student and the department chairman. If a decision is made to change the grade, the Academic Dean will notify in writing the faculty member, the student, department chairman, and the Director of Admissions and Records.

ed with the outcome of the change. As to any possible additional expansion, Harris said that "if the traffic continues at this level, I'm sure they would consider expanding." He added, however, that there are no present plans for expansion.

featured each night. (A separate notice about auditions appears elsewhere in this paper.)

"It's the kind of program we need," Harris said of the new facility. "I want to encourage students to come by and talk to me" about suggestions, complaints, and compliments, Harris continued.

Harris also noted an increase in the use of the recreation facilities in the Pub. An additional pool table has been installed, and a new ring pong table has been ordered.

There has been an upgrading of the food served in the snack bar to coincide with the new Good Wood service. The menus of both places are roughly the same.

This new meal plan, which was instigated on an experimental basis, has proved very successful in its initial stages. From the length of the lines awaiting each meal in the Good Wood Tavern, one can assume that the students are pleased with the new program as well.

Warren Unexpectedly Resigns Senate Position

by Bobby Parker

Sophomore Vice-president Ray Warren, considered by many to be the most influential member of the Student Senate, has submitted his resignation effective immediately, a move which came as a great surprise to many who participate in student government.

A political science major, Warren stated that he decided to resign because of what he termed a "lack of accomplishment" in his legislative efforts. Warren explained that he did not think that the actions of the Senate had any great effect on campus issues. Warren first entered the Senate as a Freshmen class senator in 1975 and was elected vice-president of the Sophomore class last spring. He served as chairman of the senate Investigating Committee also.

Often considered a financial watchdog of SGA funding, Warren was particularly active this year in keeping check on spending by SGA-supported organizations. In November, he called for financial reports from all SGA-funded groups, and vigorously questioned some of those budget reports. SGA Vice-president Paul Laird, who accepted Warren's resignation, indicated that the action came as a total surprise to him. He added that he did not fully understand Warren's reasons for leaving.

"I'm sorry he's resigning," Laird stated. "There are only a handful in the Senate (who are very active). He's one of the few. I hope there will not be any adverse effects. Some other senators will have to be more vocal."

was one of those who worked closely with Warren in the Senate. She stated that, though many students in and out of student government often disagreed with Warren, many things that he said had to be said, and no one else would do it.

"I think it's a... shame that a senator who stands up and states convictions not of himself but of 'his constituents' must resign when three-fourths of the other senators sit on their tails and represent special interest groups... and say nothing until the (senate) meeting is adjourned."

Lint continued, saying that an SGA officer "should get out and talk with people and express their opinions and emotions at the meetings. Ray did that."

Sophomore Senator Dawn Brickley also praised Warren as "a real conscientious senator. He worked hard."

Warren stated that the would not remain inactive in campus affairs, citing an interest in working with the Spirit Club and continuing his role as one of the leaders in the Campus Young Republicans Club. Vice-president Laird also said that Warren had indicated an interest in the Constitution Committee of the SGA which will begin a revision of the student government's constitution this spring.

Perhaps the most important reason leading to Warren's resignation is that the bulk of senate activity is instigated by a very few members. Both Laird and Lint, as well as Warren himself, echoed this sentiment, Warren indicating that it is frustrating to put so much effort into his job when others seem satisfied to remain quiet.

Senator Brickley, however, said that "you can't accuse the Senate" of being a lackluster organization.

But one Senate observer, who declined to be identified, stated that "there are about three or four senators who carry everything for the Senate. The rest of the Senate amounts to little more than dead weight whose only concern seems to be 'how soon can we adjourn.' The source indicated that he had attended most of the senate meetings this year, and has been "astounded by a general lack of legislative activity."

WEEKLY SPECIAL

Cheerful Final Days at Ford White House

by Jack Anderson
with Joe Spear

WASHINGTON -- Richard Nixon's final days in the White House were dismal. The atmosphere in the Oval Office was dark and depressing and Nixon spent most of his time brooding.

In contrast, Gerald Ford is cheerful and relaxed, he laughs frequently and easily and is able to joke with his staff as he prepares to leave the White House later this week.

He has told aides that he will no longer have to be made up constantly for television appearances. The aides used to fuss over his makeup until he threatened to get a facelift and a wig.

President Ford was taken aback by the request from Sen. Phil Hart's widow that he grant amnesty to the Vietnam protesters, deserters and draft dodgers. He promised to consider her request. The White House legal staff has prepared some memos for him on the subject, but Ford is just going through the motions. He doesn't intend to grant general amnesty.

Grim Warning: President-elect Jimmy Carter wants to start off his term by making a good impression. He has asked his transition team to look for some immediate, tangible ways to cut back on government fat.

The staff is preparing reports listing government waste that can be quickly eliminated during Carter's first few months in office. He wants to demonstrate early that he is trying to keep his campaign promises.

Carter has also promised to cut military spending and has set a goal of reducing the military budget by $5 billion to $7 billion.

However, he has received some grim, secret warnings about military cutbacks. The outgoing Secretary of Defense, Donald Rumsfeld, met with Carter for six and a half hours.

Rumsfeld warned Carter that U.S. military strength has been steadily declining while Soviet military strength has been steadily increasing. Rumsfeld acknowledged that today the United States is as powerful as the Soviet Union, but he expressed great alarm over the trend.

He told Carter, in effect, that the Democrats could get away with slashing the military budget and the sky wouldn't fall in. But he strongly indicated that a deep cut would jeopardize the nation's future security. He explained that this year's cuts won't be measured on the military scale for years to come.

The Soviets have been increasing their military might at an annual 3 per cent rate since the 1960s. During the same period, U.S. strength has dropped 14 per cent below the pre-Vietnam War levels.

One of the transition documents furnished to the Carter team shows that the Soviet Union has modernized its intercontinental missiles during the past 15 years. The United States has developed only one new intercontinental missile system since 1965, while the Soviet Union has developed seven.

The transition document states: "The USSR already has the advantage in ICBM (intercontinental missiles) and SLBM (sea-launched missiles) numbers and throwweight. The Soviets continue aggressive ICBM, strategic bomber and SLBM development and deployment."

"Moreover, as the size, number and accuracy of Soviet weapons continues to increase, the survivability of our silo-based ICBM force is increasingly jeopardized."

Incidentally, there was an interesting footnote in the transition papers. The Defense Dept. notified the incoming Democrats that it will deliver missiles to Jordan. Hawk missiles will be shipped to Jordan at 60-day intervals, beginning this year.

The first Vulcan air defense missiles were delivered to Jordan last month and another shipment is scheduled in March.

Expensive Failure: The federal government's "war on drugs" has been an expensive failure. Millions of dollars have been spent and thousands of drug-related arrests have been made. But dangerous narcotics are still flowing into the United States at an alarming rate. Heroin is becoming an epidemic in our nation's cities.

President-elect Carter has said he wants to enlist the aid of the FBI in the battle against narcotics. Right now the Drug Enforcement Administration is in control of the anti-drug effort. Former President Richard Nixon put the DEA in charge of federal narcotics enforcement and the agency, so far, has withstood accusations of inefficiency and corruption.

Our sources say that Carter will not be able to move control away from the DEA, which will resist any effort to be taken out of the anti-drug spotlight. For that matter, the FBI, we've been told, will balk at any attempt to involve its agents in the controversial narcotics field.

Meanwhile, federal investigators have learned that confidential files have been pirated out of the Miami office of the Drug Enforcement Administration. The files on drug trafficking allegedly have been sold to criminals.

The investigators have evidence that a DEA employee slipped the files to a relative, who peddled them to criminals. Details of the investigation have been kept under wraps, but our sources say there is no evidence of any nationwide selling of government files to mobsters. The incident is confined to the Miami area.

Piranhas Are This Man's Best Friend

(CPS)--For some it's a dog, or a cat, or even a pet gerbil. But for Gary Kollm, a resident advisor at the University of Cincinnati, it's a pet piranha. While Gary puts all ten fingers into the aquarium to feed the piranhas, he never loses a single one. Unusual, since piranhas are known to devour animals, men and other fish in a matter of seconds.

The secret? Gary claims that his piranhas know he won't hurt them and they also know not to bite "the hand that feeds them!" Gary's two pets are named Petey and Schizo. Says Gary, "Schizo is really schizoid. He's hyper and won't let anyone near him. As for Petey, he reminds me of my grandfather Peter."

An Arts and Sciences and Biology major, Kollm knows about piranhas. They are carnivorous and whole schools of full-grown piranhas can eat an entire cow in 30 seconds.

Watch That Match If You're Planning to Fly

(CPS)--A fresh warning has been issued by the Federal Aviation Administration to passengers who carry loose luggage of matches in their luggage while on aircraft. They have been warned that they could be liable to fines up to $10,000 or five years in prison, if criminal intent is proved. So far, the F.A.A. is averaging about one or two violations a month. Violators are detected usually by a smoldering suitcase or an odor of smoldering. There have been no fires during the flights from the matches because the lack of oxygen above 12,000 feet inhibits burning.

Senate Holds First Meeting the New Year

by Bobby Parker

In its first regular session of the new year, the Student Senate heard more financial reports from SGA organizations, including a revised budget projection from the Minority Affairs Committee.

Senators Bobby McQueen, Tommy Long, Clint Myers, and Mike Broom were absent. SGA President Duffy Robinson was again absent, as he has been for the last several meetings. Robinson had sent a message to the Dec. 9 Senate meeting stating that he would attend the January 13 meeting, but failed to appear.

Mrs. Betty Jo Welch, advisor to the Debate Team, delivered that group's financial report. Mrs. Welch stated that the team had spent $986 of its original $2000 allocation. The funds were used for travel expenses to two tournaments and a summer workshop. She also said that the Debate Team may bring a request for a reallocation at some point in the spring.

Business Manager Eric McLamb of the Fledgling reported "no foreseeable financial problems" for his organization. He revealed that $500 had been made on student photos, and a discussion followed on ways to increase that revenue.

Mr. Hal Knowles of the drama department gave a report for the University Theatre, showing an approximate expenditure of $500 for each of the three productions of last semester. Almost $1500 remains in that organization's budget to be spent for the spring productions, Knowles explained.

Kelvin Wright represented the Minority Affairs Committee report which had earlier requested a reallocation of $500. That request was tabled by the Senate because several senators objected that the entire budget of the committee was being spent for a series of programs during National Black Week. Wright presented a revised budget which eliminated part of the planned program, setting the total cost proposal at $2600. (The total committee allocation is $3000)

A bit of controversy was created over part of the committee's Black Week budget which allocated $500 for a banquet that would honor Dean of Students Ralph Parker. Wright stated that due to lack of available space, the banquet would be by invitation only and indicated that those invited would include faculty, administration, members of Wuntu Wazuri, and certain community leaders.

Sophomore Vice-President Ray Warren objected to what he termed the use of student money for an activity that is not open to all students. Warren noted that the Senate had allocated funds to the Minority Affairs Committee, not Wuntu Wazuri. A motion offered by Warren stated that money spent by any SGA-funded organization be toward activities open to all students.

Student Activities Director Al Harris reported on the progress of Homecoming preparations. He also stated that WCNW had recently received permission from the Federal Communications Commission to begin construction of FM broadcast facilities.

SGA Vice-president Paul Laird issued a special request for all senators to attend tomorrow night's meeting as the Fledgling photographer will be taking a picture for the yearbook. The meeting will be held at 7:30 in room 218 of the Chemistry Building and is open to all interested persons.

CLUB NEWS

Inter-club Council

The Inter-club Council is in the process of reorganizing with a new president, Greta Lint. Ms. Lint has announced that the first meeting of this group, which serves to improve communications between campus organizations, will be Friday night at 6:30 in room 218 of the Chemistry Building. She has requested that all club and fraternity presidents be at the meeting or send a representative. Bess Maney will serve as ICC's vice-president.

FLEDGLING

There will be a meeting of the annual staff Tuesday afternoon at 5 o'clock. All staff members must attend.

Crisis Line/Open House

The New Hanover Drug Abuse Committee will sponsor a training class for volunteers for Crisis Line/Open House at 7:30 p.m. in the library of St. James Church, 3rd and Dock Sts. For those preferring morning hours, there will be an alternate class beginning at 9:30 a.m. at the New Hanover Drug Abuse Committee, 1002 Grace St. The classes begin on Monday, January 17, but volunteers can still join.

The evening sessions will include 5 Monday evenings and one Saturday, and will finish on February 21, 1977.

The morning sessions will include 5 Tuesday mornings and one Saturday, and will finish on February 22, 1977.

This training will focus on development of listening skills and the use of community resources. We welcome volunteers of all ages and all walks of life, and the requirement for participation in our program is to successfully complete training.

Call 343-0145 or 763-3695 for additional information.

Crisis/Open House depends on people who take time to care for others.

Leave Dogs at Home

The UNC-W Safety Office appreciates the efforts of all who have cooperated with its person to person campaign to leave their dogs and other pets at home rather than bring them on campus. However, during the past six months there has been a steady increase of unleashed dogs appearing on campus. It is realized that a small percentage of these dogs are strays that wander in from homes bordering our campus, but most of them are brought in by their owners who allow them to roam around unattended. Since we have had two serious attacks against children on campus, from unleashed dogs, and many complaints of noise from dogs tied to trees, we are requesting that the pets be left at home.

The Safety Office who elicits your sincere cooperation in this matter is more than willing to provide anyone with additional information relating to this subject.

Film Festival '77

The Student Union Program Board will present "Film Festival" on Jan. 19-21. Three types of films will be shown on three consecutive nights. Cartoons, short subjects and a news parade will also be featured.

Opening night will be Wednesday, January 19, in the Student Union building (Pub.) First will be cartoons, then the wild movie concert "Pink Floyd."

On Thursday, January 20, the films will be shown in Kenan Auditorium. This is comedy night! It will feature shorts with Abbott and Costello, and Laurel and Hardy. The main feature will be "Monkey Business" with the Marx Brothers.

Friday, January 21, is science fiction night in Kenan Auditorium. "The Lost World" and "Silent Running" will be shown. "The Lost World" is a silent film and one of the earliest sci-fi flicks. "Silent Running" is a movie that pits man, machines, and nature in a battle you will not forget. Special effects are by Douglas Trumbull, who worked on "2001, a Space Odyssey."

The fun starts each night at 8:00. Students, faculty and staff are invited. It's free.

WCNU has received its Federal Communication Commission FM Station Construction Permit. The station received a telegram Monday night from the FCC stating that they have been granted a Construction Permit for FM and that they must apply for new call letters. The five choices for call letters in order of preference are: WLOZ, WXKE, WBBG, WBCE, WRKE.

The letters are to correspond with their location on the dial of FM 91.3. If they receive their first choice the station will be known as "91.3". The change over will take approximately two to three months.

WCNU will be holding a meeting at the station for all persons interested in working for the station as a D.J., news or music staff and other jobs. The meeting will be held at the Station Thursday night, Jan. 20, at 7:00 p.m.

Auditions

Star-News Editorial Draws Fire

Two editorials in the January 16 issue of the Wilmington Star-News have drawn criticism from community and university members.

The editorials, which appeared in the sports section of last Sunday's paper, lashed out at two aspects of UNC-W's athletic program. One article dealt with a proposed holiday tournament involving college and high school basketball teams, with the other concerning some alleged poor sports relations practices used by UNC-W.

While an official announcement from the athletic department has not yet been issued, a source within the department says the office has been swamped with calls. A meeting was scheduled late Monday afternoon between university officials and Star-News personnel in hopes of remedying the situation. Due to deadlines, details of the meeting are not available at the writing.

It is hoped that by next issue the Seahawk sports staff will have a full report on the controversy.

Campbell Stops Seahawk Drive

UNC-W's basketball Seahawks suffered a minor setback in their drive for success in NCAA Division I, losing to Campbell College 76-69 here last Saturday night.

Head coach Mel Gibson cited foul trouble as a key factor in the loss. The Hawks were charged with 28 personal fouls, a unusual occurrence because the squad has never had trouble with fouling. Four Seahawks (Delaney Jones, Jim Brogren, Denny Fields, and Bob Martin) fouled out. Again, this is the exception rather than the rule.

In explaining the foul problem at the Campbell game, Coach Gibson pointed out that poor officiating was not the reason. He hinted that perhaps the team was playing with a little bit too much intensity.

The loss not only broke a five-game win streak for the Hawks, but also blurred a five win-loss record at home. Until the Campbell game, the Seahawks had put together a seven game win streak at home and had won 15 of their last 16 home matches.

For those of you who lost track over the holidays, the UNC-W basketball squad is now 6-5, with victories over the University of New Hampshire, North Carolina A and T, (96-62) Mercer University (75-64), and South Carolina State. It should also be pointed out that of the five losses, three were by five points or less. They lost to Fairleigh Dickinson by five points, and were downed by ECU and APPALACHIAN State by two points.

At this point, Coach Gibson is "pleased" with his team's record, especially taking into consideration the tough schedule this year. (Example: on January 31, the Hawks meet UNC-Charlotte at times ranked among the top twenty in the nation.).

Basketball, more than any other sport, has felt the pressure of stepping into NCAA Division I. The squad is required to play Division I opponents in at least 75 percent of their games. This accounts for the scheduling of such teams as UNC-Charlotte and Georgia Southern.

The next two weeks could prove crucial ones for the Seahawks. They have three contests on the road this week, with two powerful opponents (Georgia Southern and Stetson) coming to town the following

As a final note, Coach Gibson praised the student body for their support. "We really appreciate it," he commented.

He added that the crowd should get some of the credit for the Seahawk's victories, especially the excellent home record.

Two Verious ARTIST LPs

All This and World War Two

Various Artists

20th Century Records

This album is from a forthcoming picture which will combine the music of the Beatles with film clips of the Second Great War. Pretty kinky, ain't it? How good the film will be is still up in the air. The idea is quite original, which is more than I can say for this soundtrack. It has all the earmarks of being another Tommy disaster (the Ode remake, not the movie version which was a loser, too.) Like Tommy, this album was produced by Lou Reizner. It also features various stars from all walks of life. We get stars from either side of the Atlantic and even a few from span both America and England. The backing music is provided by The London Symphony Orchestra and The Royal Philharmonic Orchestra. Will Malone did both the arranging and the orchestration. This is the main problem.

What is the sense in getting all these different stars if they have to stick to a smaltzy backing. The music is not that far removed from muzak. Instead of allowing each artist to mold the tunes to his style, they are processed with no plan or emotion. The same results could have been achieved with studio singers at less expense.

The performance on the singers' parts range from good to bad. I can see no reason for David Essex's and Lynsey De Paul's inclusion on this album. It is as if they tried to pick names that would sell rather than talent. You can add to this Frankie Laine and unknown Richard Cocciante. Laine just doesn't fit in with this crowd and seems to have no idea about "Maxwell's Silver Hammer". Cocciante is too emotional to carry off "Michelle".

Two artists have previously recorded the tunes they do now. Elton shows up with his original version of "Lucy in the Sky with Diamonds" slightly altered. Tina Turner does "Come Together" again, but this time without the assistance of Ike.

Both the Bee Gees and Leo Sayer show up on three songs apiece. While on some of the tunes they don't quite cut it, Sayer's version of "Long and Winding Road" and the Gee's "Golden Slumbers" are very good.

Peter Gabriel's (Genesis) "Strawberry Fields Forever" is excellent. The tune seems to fit right in with the mood he conjured up with Genesis. Bryan Ferry makes a solo outing with "She's Leaving Home" and does a fine job of it. Russell's "I'd be skeptical of Helen Reddy doing any Beatle tune, but her rendition of "Fool on the Hill" suits her well.

Jeff Lynne of E.L.O. and Roy Wood of Wizard at one time belonged to The Move. These ex-Movers show up in fine style. Wood's "Lovely Rita" is great although not too long. His "Polythene Pam" has a riff that I swear is the beginning to Lynne's version of "Roll Over Beethoven."

Lynne comes up with a surprise of his own with his Lennonish vocals on "Nowhere Man."

Rod Stewart's "Get Back" is adequate while Henry Gross's "Help" is just awful. Gross's passiveness kills any momentum the original version had. Unfortunately, the album ends on a bad note. Both Lou Reizner and Will Malone gang up on "You Never Give Me Your Money" and finish it off with their singing. I guess they felt it was their album and they were entitled to one tune themselves. 801 LIVE

ISLAND LPS - 9444 (Import)

In the history of rock music there has been very few times when musicians have played together just for the pure enjoyment of playing. In fact, I can only think of a few times when individuals have left their solo career to do a combined concert.

801 LIVE is just such a time for here we have Phil Manzanera, lead guitarist of ROXY MUSIC and soloist with the fine album DIAMONDHEAD, Brian Eno, who was once the synthesizer man for ROXY MUSIC now solo with several unusual albums, and Francis Monkman, one of the original members of CURVER AIR. These three accomplished musicians are joined by Iloy Watson, Simon Phillips and Bill MacCormick.

As for the album itself, it is the best recorded live album I have ever heard. At times you can not tell if it is audio work or live work.

The music is also remarkable, opening the album is a short instrumental, "Igrima", by Manzanera. This is followed by a very well done version of the Beatles' "Tomorrow Never Knows". ENO's vocals on the song make it quite haunting as do the synthesizer work and Manzanera's excellent guitar work.

"East Of Asteroid" and "Rongwrong" are next with the first being another unusual instrumental and the last being a very well done version of that Moody's song.

"Somber Reptiles" ends side one and was written by ENO. The song is very good, even better than when ENO played it on his ANOTHER GREEN WORLD album.

Opening side two is another ENO song, "Baby's On Fire", from his first solo album. Although one of the best songs ENO has written, the live version appears to lack something the original had.

"Diamond Head", the title cut from Manzanera's solo album, is next and is quite a moving instrumental. This is Manzanera at his best and one of the best cut on the album.

Another interesting cut on side two is their version of the KINKS' "You Really Got Me". Here again ENO's vocals take over and make the song something else.

To sum up: 801 LIVE is well recorded and contains some very interesting cuts. With the combined talents of the people on the album, it could not have been less than perfect. J.W.

Homecoming Under Way

Homecoming activities will swing into full gear beginning tonight with concerts, dances, a pep rally, and the Homecoming basketball filling out the schedule. The 1977 Homecoming queen was selected in voting Monday and Tuesday, and she will be crowned at the basketball game Thursday night.

Tonight's activities begin with a concert-dance sponsored by the Concert Committee in the recreation area of the Pub. Sutter's Gold Streak Band will perform for this event which will last from 7:30 to 9:30. Admission to the dance is free.

From 9:30 until 10:30, the Rowing Club will sponsor a pep rally and bonfire to prepare everyone for tomorrow night's basketball match-up. The site for this event is the corner of F Street and Reigle Road.

At 10:30 the action moves back to the Pub with the Poison

Missouri Hoghead Expedition providing bluegrass music until midnight. Admission is again free, and the band is sponsored by the Concert Committee.

Thursday afternoon at 3:00, the Rocky Point Skydivers Club will present a skydiving exhibition on the athletic field.

The Homecoming basketball game begins at 7:30 Thursday night with the Seahawks facing the Hatters of Stetson University. The Homecoming court will be presented at halftime and this year's queen will be announced. In addition, the cheerleaders will sponsor a banner contest for which $25 will be awarded the organization with the best-judged banner.

On Friday at 8:00, the Dance Committee will sponsor this year's Homecoming Dance at Pistol Pete's. The semi-formal dance will feature Poison, whose recent album "Let Me Lay My Funk On You" bears the Roulette label. Poison recently performed at the National Entertainment Conference, and has appeared on the television program, "Soul Train." The dance will be BYOB with a charge for mixers and beer.

Rounding out the Homecoming activities will be Charlie Daniels in concert at Brogden Hall. Tickets will be on sale in the Pub (10:00 to 2:00) through the week for the 8:00 p.m. concert, with student tickets in advance for $4.50. (This price applies only to the on-campus ticket sales.) Non-student tickets will sell for $5.50 in advance, and $6 will buy a ticket at the door. All seats are reserved.

Athletic Complex is on Schedule

by Barry Cooper

UNC-Wilmington's $1 million plus athletic complex is being built on schedule, according to Seahawk athletic director Bill Brooks.

"The recent weather has made things tough for the construction people, but things are going about like we want them," Brooks said in a recent interview. "A lot of the work on the inside of the building has been completed, and it is starting to shape up pretty nice."

When finished, the complex will seat about 6,000 fans for basketball games, but will also include handball courts, two swimming pools, athletic and physical education offices, and several classrooms.

Although the swimming pools are almost finished, Brooks said the building will not open until all of the work is completed.

"The state won't let you open part of it until all of it is finished," he said. "When they come in to inspect and approve it, they will approve and inspect all of it at one time."

According to Brooks, an instructor is being sought to teach swimming and diving classes, which will be added to the curriculum once the building is opened.

Brooks, who recently returned from an NCAA meeting in Miami Beach, didn't say when the building is scheduled to be completed, but he did say it would be ready for the Seahawks' 1977-78 home opener against Atlantic Coast Conference power Wake Forest.

Senate to Consider Impeachment of SGA President

by Bobby Parker

Sophomore class Senator Greta Lint offered a motion of impeachment against SGA President Duffy Robinson at the regular session of the Student Senate Thursday night. However, the motion was tabled until the next senate meeting when objections were raised that Robinson should be given time to defend himself.

Lint cited that Robinson had not attended a senate meeting since the defeat of a referendum which would have provided an executive salary for the SGA president. She further indicated that Robinson was not fulfilling his duties because he had not sent any report to the senate in some time and he has lately not been available in the SGA office on a regular basis.

Freshman Senator Francis DeLuca first brought up the question of Robinson's absence, requesting that something be done to remedy the situation. Sophomore President Karin Whaley added that Robinson had not met with administration officials in several weeks, either.

Carol Moore, who was SGA vice-president last year and attended Thursday's meeting as chairman of the Homecoming Committee, advised the Senate that Robinson could not be held responsible for attending senate meetings because that is not one of his constitutional duties. She added, however, that if Robinson does not keep somewhat regular hours on campus, he can conceivably be guilty of neglecting his duties.

Sophomore Senator Dawn Brickley urged the Senate to move cautiously on this matter and "give him a chance to come before the Senate . . . and explain" his absences. But Whaley noted that "when he took this job . . . he knew what he was getting into," hinting that Robinson should have realized the time necessary to perform his job before accepting it.

Lint then moved to table the motion until the next meeting "with the anticipation that he (Robinson) will be present at the next meeting." Junior Senator Carol Rains was assigned to contact Robinson and inform him of this action.

In his opening comments at the beginning of the meeting, SGA Vice-president Paul Laird stated that he is "sick and tired of certain people not being here." He mentioned by name Robinson and SGA Treasurer Mark Wax. Wax is not required to attend senate meetings either, but he customarily offers a treasurer's report. Wax has, however, attended more recent meetings than Robinson.

On Monday, January 17, Robinson was in the SGA office and informed this reporter that he had been absent from senate meetings due to work. One source within the SGA, who declined to be identified, said that he had not seen Robinson in the SGA office "for three months" prior to Monday. (This time period, of course, includes the Christmas holidays.)

Whaley also addressed the recent reports, notably in last week's Seahawk, that have indicated a general sense of dissatisfaction with the Senate. She cited several quotes of senators and other from recent news stories, and stated that the Senate needed to work for "a better reputation on campus."

Homecoming Committee Chairman Moore gave some details of the progress of that committee's preparations. She stated that the homecoming dance will be semi-formal when asked to clarify this point by several senators.

Senior President Clay Fairley presented a request for charter of the Cape Fear Cyclers Club. A lengthy discussion ensued because the club membership is open to non-students. A new section of the constitution's club bylaws states that clubs will not be chartered if they have non-student members.

Whaley moved that the bylaws be changed so that non-students can be admitted into chartered clubs if they are classified as an independent campus organization. With that classification, the club can not request funding from the SGA. The change was approved as was the club's charter.

Kelvin Wright of the Minority Affairs Committee presented a revised program schedule for National Black Week which eliminated a planned banquet and replaced it with a drama group from Durham. The banquet had raised objections because invitations were to be limited to members of Wantu Wazuri, administration officials, faculty and community figures.

In other senate action, Senator Lint requested that the Investigating Committee explore the possibility of opening the gym on Saturdays; Sophomore Senator Cindy Buxton suggested that a committee investigate concession machines for the library; Freshman Senator Francis DeLuca asked the food committee to consider more complaints about the cafeteria; President Whaley voiced student complaints about the cheerleaders and about campus roads problems; and Senator Lint proposed that the Senate look into the establishment of bike paths on campus.

Two appointments were also made at the meeting. Vice-president Laird appointed Senator DeLuca as chairman of the Investigating Committee to replace Ray Warren, who resigned last week. Freshman President Glen Downs nominated Tom Witner to replace Mike Broom as Freshman class secretary.

Absent from the Thursday meeting were: Ken Lilly, Tommy Long, Doug Shackelford, Clint Myers, Scott Olson, and Parks Griffin.

Letters to the Editor

In Defense of Cheerleaders

Dear Editor,

Last semester several male students attempted to form a cheering squad to add gymnastics and stunts to the cheering routines now used. Unfortunately, we were unable to resolve all our problems and make such a plan feasible. I was fortunate, however, to work with the present cheerleaders and was impressed by the time and effort required to practice their cheering routines. Few people see these long and tiresome practice sessions and very few seem willing to make the sacrifices required to be a cheerleader.

Last week a group of senators (the majority of whom find it difficult to do anything more time consuming than to sit through their weekly meeting) sat in judgement of our cheerleaders. This self appointed jury declared our cheering squad guilty of failing to show enthusiasm and not cheering at girls basketball games.

Last Friday night I attended a home game of the girls basketball team. Only two senators (Carol Rains and Glen Downs) were present.

Last Saturday I attended an away game in Wilson. The cheerleaders had given up their own plans to be there. Three senators (including two who came with me) were present. The others, including the sponsor of the resolution about the cheerleaders, were noticeably absent.

"Why worry about a speck in your brother's eye, when you have a board in your own? Hypocrite! First get rid of the board. Then you can see to help your brother."

Mathew 7:3-5

If our cheerleaders spent no more time practicing than our senators spend passing resolutions then the senate would be on safer ground. As it stands now, I think our self serving senate owes the cheering squad an apology.

Ray Warren.

WEEKLY SPECIAL

Forming a U.S. Energy Policy May Be Carter's First Project

by Jack Anderson
with Joe Spear

WASHINGTON -- Perhaps the most urgent problem facing President Jimmy Carter in the first days of his Administration is summarized in a cryptic national security memo known only as "Policy Study No. 38." The study deals with the energy crisis and warns that the United States is dangerously dependent on foreign oil. The available supply of natural gas is also dwindling, states the memo.

Americans are painfully aware of the shortfall in heating fuel supplies as subfreezing temperatures grip the nation. Schools, businesses and factories have been forced to close to conserve precious fuel supplies. And the worst weather, claim meteorologists, is yet to come.

Meanwhile, the secret energy briefing papers urge that the United States end its "heavy reliance on oil and natural gas." According to the papers, it took the nation 60 years to switch from coal to oil and gas. This time, we don't have 60 years.

The present world reserve of 700 billion barrels of oil will be exhausted by the end of this century. Yet, the United States ranks a pitiful 17th among the industrial powers in energy conservation.

Though former President Gerald Ford set up a task force more than a year ago to find a reliable supply of energy imports to tide us over, infighting among federal agencies killed several policy proposals. The result is that the nation still has no energy policy.

According to the secret national security memo, the oil-producing countries are expected to maintain their stranglehold on oil supplies until 1985. The memo also predicts that oil prices will continue to rise.

Thai Tales: We have obtained secret cables from the U.S. Embassy in Thailand that reveal the lush, Southeast Asian country would like some nuclear weapons to defend itself against Communist-controlled Vietnam.

A Thai foreign affairs adviser, Thanat Khoma, told U.S. embassy officials that his country fears a Vietnamese attack. Thanat warned that the Thai Army would be no match for the battle-tested Communist troops.

The U.S. embassy in Bangkok passed on Thanat's comments in a series of classified cables to the State Dept. in Washington. According to the cables, Thanat mentioned the possibility of acquiring "unconventional" weapons. "Unconventional," said the U.S. diplomats, can only mean "nuclear."

But Thanat didn't ask for nuclear weapons without offering some special benefits. He spoke of providing U.S. corporations with "a favorable investment climate," and tempted U.S. officials with talk of oil and gas. Specifically, the cables refer to "promising discoveries of natural gas in the Gulf of Siam." Multinational oil companies are only waiting for the go-ahead from the Thai government before they start exploratory drilling.

Though State Dept. spokesmen refuse to comment on the cables, U.S. relations with Thailand have been shaky for some time. Since the debacle in Vietnam, leftist Thais have been demonstrating for an American pull-out in Thailand and U.S. defense bases in the country have been drastically cut. So without a large American presence in Thailand, officials of the Thai government feel they must take drastic precautions. American diplomats are unlikely to accede to their wishes.

Vietnam Leftovers: The U.S. Air Force has more than two million gallons of contaminated herbicide on its hands and no one knows what to do with it.

During the Vietnam War, the Air Force sprayed clouds of defoliants on the thick jungles of Southeast Asia. The purpose was to clear the land of hiding places and deprive enemy troops of the bountiful plenty of the rice paddies. One of these defoliants, known as "Herbicide Orange," was so potent that former President Richard Nixon ordered the Air Force to stop using it.

Since supplies of the noxious chemical were produced to meet the needs of a protracted war, the presidential order left the Air Force with 2,300,000 gallons of the defoliant in storage. There are 14 million gallons in storage on Johnston Island in the South Pacific and another 860,000 gallons in Gulfport, Miss.

While planning to destroy the herbicide, scientists for the Environmental Protection Agency found that the whole lot was contaminated by a deadly chemical known as Dioxin. Though Herbicide Orange itself is an unpleasant enough mixture, with Dioxin added, it could wipe out not only foliage, but animals as well.

When Dioxin was released into the atmosphere after a factory explosion in the northern Italian town of Seveso last year, it killed all the foliage for miles around. People and livestock were evacuated from the area immediately, and the land surrounding the town may be unusable for years. Dioxin has also been proven to cause birth defects in animals.

The Air Force originally planned to incinerate the contaminated herbicide at sea, but environmentalists warned of devastating results. So another plan was developed calling for reprocessing through charcoal filters. It works, but still leaves the problem of what to do with the Dioxin-contaminated filters. So far, there's no solution to that problem and the Air Force and Environmental Protection Agency scientists are still at the drawing board.

KEFE THE DENVER POST '77

BYLINE:

A column of personal comment
by Bobby Parker

Jim Hunt brings an aura of fresh vitality to the Governor's Mansion that can and should be translated into a new era of progress for North Carolina. The state seems to have settled into a peaceful plod, far from the progressive moderation for which it was once known.

North Carolina was once a leader in southern politics, adapting to the social changes of the sixties with much less turbulence than its regional neighbors. The Democratic Party has unquestionably wielded dominance over state politics for the entire twentieth century.

But, you say, our present stagnation cannot be blamed on the sudden turn to Republicans Jim Holshouser and Jesse Helms in 1972. I say that, indeed, we can't blame the Republicans—but their presence in high state offices is a strong indication of the loss of vision that has permeated our citizenry.

Perhaps, back in 1972, (so long ago, it seems), Skipper Bowles and Nick Galifianakis were a bit too progressive for North Carolinians. And having the liberal George McGovern at the head of the national ticket couldn't have helped the situation.

In a state where the word "liberal" equates the devil's brother, Bowles and Galifianakis seemed a few steps too far, much as George Wood and Howard Lee did in 1976.

North Carolina settled for the stable progressiveness that Holshouser offered, much in the same vein of his conservative Democratic predecessors. And we experimented with the ideological extremity of a political neophyte, Helms, probably with the idea that Helms' retroaction would be easier to correct than Galifianakis' avant-garde progression.

Holshouser did an unillustrious job, working with a Democratic legislature. He made progress in such areas as road construction, but he played havoc with the Transportation Department and the Highway Patrol. He did very little for industrial development, but he did guide the implementation of a statewide kindergarten system.

Holshouser was mostly a caretaker governor over the past four years. There was little he could do with an opposition party controlling both the Council of State and the legislature. What this meant for North Carolina was stalemate government, with no initiative and narrow vision.

Jim Hunt's opportunity has been increased tri-fold because of the Holshouser administration. He'll have no trouble following the Republicans' act. The people are eager for a change of pace and direction. Thus there is little chance that Hunt will be perceived as moving too quickly.

The most important incentive for the new governor is the tremendous mandate he received from the voters of this state. Not only did he remarkably defeat three major opponents within his own party, but he went on to receive one of the largest electoral majorities in state history over Republican David Flaherty.

I am still wary of Mr. Hunt. He seems too much of a politician. Almost every time he speaks, it sounds like another campaign is about to commence. Hunt did not seem as sincere as Flaherty did during the fall campaign, and it is for that reason that I still believe Flaherty would have made a better chief executive.

However, there is always the practical side, and a Flaherty administration would have been a repeat of the stalemate of the Holshouser years. Perhaps a politician in the Governor's Mansion will not be so detrimental as it sounds, if Hunt can put some of his ideas into practice. He should have but one problem in that respect: Lieutenant Governor Jimmy Green.

The gravel-voiced, longtime legislator has ideas of his own, I suspect. It is no secret that Green as House Speaker and Hunt as presiding officer of the state Senate did not always see eye-to-eye, to say the least. Hunt would surely have been happier with Howard Lee in Green's position, and North Carolina would have been much better off.

There are many important issues that will come before the legislature this year that will need a guiding progressive hand from Governor Hunt. Among them are the Equal Rights Amendment, which should have been approved four years ago, and a new death penalty law to replace the one struck down by the U.S. Supreme Court last summer. Since there is no hope that the legislature will take the only sane action concerning capital punishment—throw it out altogether—they must devise a modified bill that has a semblance of justice.

By far the most important legislation that will face the legislature this year is the issue of increasing the powers of the governor's office. That is, to make the executive branch of state government an equal partner with the legislature, as the constitution prescribes.

Our governor is the only one in fifty states who does not have veto power over the legislature. He is one of the few who cannot serve two consecutive terms: This severely—monstrously—limits the governor's power, and the situation must be changed.

Hunt has committed himself to both of these changes, each of which will require a constitutional amendment. Let us hope that the state legislature will not see these proposals as an abridgement of their power but a step toward more representative government with a true partnership between the branches of state government. It's really a simple question of giving the man we elected to lead the power to do so.

Decadents Discover Snake Venom High in Paris

(CPS)—Sick and tired of that same old beat weed? Looking for a new kick? Well, according to RUSH, one of newer head magazines, an ultra-decadent group of thrill seekers in Paris are claiming they've negotiated the ultimate high.

This novel method of bending your mind and body is called "La Vite Morte" aka "Death Rush" and it's achieved by an injection of deadly snake venom. The cultists have developed an immunity to the doses of venom with the aid of a herpetologist (snake specialist) who gradually increases their tolerance level to the killer juice. When this level hits the point which is normally fatal, the daredevil, pumped up with immunity, undergoes a death rush that makes one fall to the floor in ecstasy.

There is one small catch, however. Since immunity cannot be guaranteed every time, one never knows whether the death rush will just a rush, or the real thing. Advised for only the most serious of drug takers.

Only in New York

(CPS)—Bloomindale's, a leading department store in New York and recently in Washington, D.C., a leader of the nouveau chic, issued its January catalog with a subtle promotion for pot. Included in one of a series of photographs advertising window blinds on sale is a large marijuana plant sitting on a window ledge. According to HIGH TIMES magazine, it is not known if executives of the posh New York department store are aware of the presence of the pot plant on page 55 of their catalog. The promotion was mailed to thousands of Bloomindale's charge-account customers.

Pied Piper Theatre Brings Pooh on Our Campus

by Donna Martin

If you see a lot of five-, six- and seven-year-olds around Kenan Auditorium in the next couple of weeks, Winnie the Pooh is responsible. Actually, The Pied Piper Theatre is producing the play, Winnie the Pooh for the New Hanover County public school system. The Pied Piper Theatre is a combination of four local groups: The Junior League of Wilmington; the Wilmington-New Hanover County Board of Education; UNC-W; and the Beggar's Theater, a local theater group. The Pied Piper Players sponsor one classic children's play each year to expose the kindergarten, first and second graders to drama of this type.

The shows are at 10:00, January 28 (kindergarten); 10:30, January 31-Feb. 4 (first and second graders); and Sunday, Feb. 6 at 3:00 for the public. The last performance will require an admission of 25 cents.

The Pied Piper Theatre's play is David Stone's adapted version of A.A. Milne's Winnie the Pooh. It is the story of a young boy, Christopher Robin, and his stuffed animal friends. Eore, Piglet, Tigger, and Owl are just some of his stuffed playmates. Winnie the Pooh, a teddy bear, is Christopher Robin's lovable buddy.

People in the community are the actors in Winnie the Pooh. Several of them are familiar around the UNC-W campus. Mary Mac Moore (Pooh) is a teacher who has worked with the Straw Hat Theatre. Jenene Smith (Kanga) and Tony Rivenbark (Tigger) are graduates of UNC-W. Tony has been acting in New York and was free to help with this project. Doug Swink is the director.

The Pied Piper Players have been in existence since 1971. They have put on such plays as Alice in Wonderland, Sleeping Beauty, and Pinnocchio. The Wilmington school children see one of these plays each year.

Homecoming Dance Features Poison

This year's Homecoming Dance, sponsored by the Dance Committee, will be held at Pistol Pete's on January 28 from 9:00 till 1:00. The group playing for the dance is Poison, an up and coming supergroup from Richmond, Virginia. This dynamic group carries 9 performers on stage and they play powerful rock and soul music and disco.

The members of the group, Poison, are Melvin Watson (Lead vocals and bass), Herbert Dabney (keyboards and kalimba), Janet Cook (Lead vocals), Marshal Smith (Lead vocals and extra percussion), Tony Jogher (Congos, extra percussion), Pegton Johnson (Trumpet, Lead vocals), Richard Gillyard (Sax, Lead vocals), Charles Morris (Guitar), Wayon Brown (Drums). They have appeared on Soul Train and have backed up some top bands on concert tours throughout the East.

The band currently has an album out and their singles "Let Me Lay My Funk On You" and "Do What You Wanna Do" have been aired in major eastern cities.

Admission is free and beer is 35cents a draft, while mixers are reduced to 40cents. Bring your own Boozie. Also, the Dance Committee needs some members for this semester and next year. If interested contact Kirk Grumbine 791-3963, or Al Harris (Student Union Services).

Gong Show

The Society of Enterprising Xenophiles will be sponsoring a Gong Show, Feb. 7, 1977 in King Aud. at 7:00 p.m. The audition-rehearsal will be held on Jan. 31 in King Aud. at 6:30. Get your acts together and get in on the fantastic prizes. The fees are 50 cents entry and student admission. If more information is required contact D.L. Hope, 317 Galloway Hall, 791-9843.

Marketplace

"The Marketplace", a forum for current issues of interest is sponsored by United Christian Campus Ministry and meets Wednesday mornings for breakfast, 7:45 a.m. - 8:30 a.m. in the small dining room of the cafeteria. The topics for the next several weeks are as follows: Jan. 26 and Feb. 2 - Dr. James Merritt of the Biology Department will discuss "Cloning and Its Ethical Considerations." On the mornings of Feb. 9 and 16, Dr. Gerald Shinn of the Philosophy and Religion Dept. will talk about "Apocrypha and Pseudepigrapha: What are They?" Rev. Vivan Martindale, Campus Minister, will deal with topics, "Ash Wednesday: Beginning the Pre-Easter Season." These forums are open to all interested persons who wish to buy breakfast and attend.

Pool Tournament

The UNC-W eight-ball championship will be determined in a double elimination tournament to be held in the Pub recreation area on the evenings of February 16-18. The Student Union Program Board is sponsoring the event and all students are encouraged to enter. First place green and gold trophies will be awarded for each of three categories: men's singles, women's singles, and open doubles. There is no entry fee for the tournament, however, all contestants must sign up in the Student Activities Office, room S105 of the Pub prior to 11:00 a.m. Tuesday, Feb. 15. The tournament trophies are now on display in the lobby of the Pub.

SEAHAWK SPORTS

Seahawks Nab Three Road Wins

In past years, a rumor has surfaced which claims that UNC-W basketball can't win on the road. After last week, it is doubtful if that rumor will surface again this year.

In powerful displays of talent, the Seahawks downed rival Pembroke State University 86-59, defeated North Carolina A&T 80-52, and toppled Atlantic Christian College 96-70. That equals out to margins of victory of 17, 28, and 26 points, respectively.

"It has been an extremely good week for us," said head coach Mel Gibson. "We've beaten Pembroke and ACC (Atlantic Christian College) on the road before, but never both in the same season."

Defense seems to be a key in the Seahawk's success. On the average, the Hawks outrebounded their opponents 39-29 per game. What makes this statistic even more remarkable is the fact that the Hawks had no one over 6'6" for the first seven games, and were playing teams considerably larger. The team also averages ten steals a game, an extremely high average.

The team is also playing with a great deal of intensity and competitive spirit. This accounts in part for some of the large victory margins. "This team has a dimension," said Coach Gibson, "which is only characteristic of good teams—the ability to have spurts of 8, 9, and 10 points in a short period of time."

As an example of this in the A&T game, the hawks were behind 28-18 with five minutes left in the half. At halftime, UNC-W was ahead 35-34. In another game, the Seahawks were ahead of Atlantic Christian by one point at 1:30 left in the half with ACC having possession of the ball. By halftime, the Wilmington squad had made four unanswered baskets for a nine point advantage. In that same game, the Seahawks outscored the Bulldogs 20-5 in the third quarter to put the game out of reach for ACC.

It's very difficult to pick out a "superstar" on this year's ball club, for the simple reason it is a very well-rounded team. In most games, every member of the squad plays.

Individual rebounding statistics illustrate this point very well. While the team prides itself on its rebounding ability, the team's leading rebounder, center Denny Fields, averages only eight rebounds a game. In second is Gary Cooper with 7.5, with the rest of the team following close behind.

Fields has emerged as an outstanding member of the Seahawk squad. Besides leading the team in rebounds, he also leads in scoring (25 points per game average) and field shooting percentage (an amazing 67 per cent). According to Gibson, this places Fields among the best in the nation. Evidence of the fact will come later in the week when national statistics are released.

Gibson said his team, now 9-5, is "much further along than most people thought." At the first of the season, he said his team's goal was to be competitive in their first year of Division I play. Now, says Gibson, their goal is to have a winning season.

This goal is not as easy to reach as it may sound. The odds of a team having a winning season in their first season in Division I competition are slim indeed. But then, the odds of the Seahawks being 9-5 at this point were also said to be slim.

Lady Hawks Seek First Win

by Tony Lombardo

A difficult schedule and inexperience have proved frustrating for this year's Women's Basketball Team. After five games in a fifteen-game schedule, their record is 0-5.

According to Coach Kraft, the team looks good in practice session, but come game time they just "fall apart." "We do play a good second half," said Coach Kraft, "but we're so far behind we can't catch up."

However, it seems that defense has been a saving grace for the squad. In the Campbell game, for example, the Lady Hawks held a Campbell team who usually scores upwards in the 80s to around 50 points.

Head Coach Ann Kraft, in her first year as coach, inherited a team with no returning starters and no players recruited on scholarship. Coach Kraft stated, "We are playing a difficult schedule in Division III. We are facing teams with established women's basketball programs. For tryouts this year, we just put posters up around campus, for girls to try out for the team."

In explaining her team's poor record, Coach Kraft commented, "Every team we have played so far has played us in a different way. The girls just need to play together more. They play an aggressive defense but the other teams play so much more physical than we do."

"In some cases," continued the coach, "I don't feel the officiating is tight enough. We also need more student participation in our home games. So far, we have only averaged between twenty-five and thirty people per game in attendance."

Coach Kraft commented on the improvement in sports for women over the past few years: "There is more emphasis every year given to women's athletics," she stated. "This year, for the first time, the school is supplying shoes for the basketball team. Next year, we will be able to give four basketball scholarships, compared to none this year."

At this point the women's basketball team has not been very impressive. Over half the schedule remains for the players to gain maturity and experience to build a successful program for the future.

FORAM Seeking Funds to Support Publication

by Anita Robeson

In Spring, 1976, Dr. Gilbert Bane, Director of the Marine Sciences and Environmental Studies Programs, generated student interest in producing a marine science journal. This journal, which has already published two issues, came into being through the efforts of a group of science students and now bears the name FORAM.

Why FORAM? The word foram refers to the protozoan order Rhypodina, Foraminifera, the pore bearers. It is one of the most ubiquitous organisms found in the oceans. The name FORAM was chosen for the journal to exemplify the aspirations of the journal's first editors—that is, to devote the publication to the many facets of oceanography and, like the organism, to be truly representative of marine sciences.

The quarterly publication is dedicated to undergraduate research at UNC-W. Its purposes are to provide pertinent information on marine sciences and to serve as an organ for expression of undergraduate research.

At present, FORAM is seeking funds to support publication costs of the journal. In an effort to meet these costs, the journal's staff has embarked on a campaign to sell T-shirts emblazoned with the official Marine Science logos. These T-shirts are available in all sizes and a choice of navy, Carolina blue and the school colors, green and gold. The lettering "Marine Sciences, University of North Carolina at Wilmington" is printed in white against the background of the blue shirts. Two logos—a pelican on the back and volumetric flask on the front pocket—are also printed in white. The green and gold T-shirts are solid gold with the printing in green.

Students, faculty and staff interested in purchasing T-shirts, which cost $4 each should contact the Marine Science secretary in Room 242 of the Marine Science Building or David Purser of the FORAM staff.

The staff welcomes suggestions and criticisms from the University community, and is currently seeking new student editors and staff writers for future issues. Students interested in joining the staff are cordially invited to attend the upcoming staff meeting on Thursday, January 27 at 11:30 a.m. The meeting will be held in MS 237.

Volunteers Needed

Volunteers are being sought by the Southeastern Mental Health Center for aides with new groups scheduled to start the first week of February. The remediation and socialization groups will meet on Tuesday and Wednesday at 1:30-2:30 p.m. Recreational activities such as bingo will be planned. A commitment of 2 sessions per month is preferred.

Crisis Line/Open House will hold training classes for new volunteers starting Monday, January 17, 1977. Classes will be held at St. James Church, starting at 7:30 p.m. Training sessions will last 5 weeks, with emphasis on active listening skills for volunteers who will man the telephone.

For more information on these or other volunteer activities, please contact the Cape Fear Voluntary Action Center, 762-9611. VAC's office is open 9:00-5:00 on weekdays.

Issues '77 Presents State Officials

An audience of about forty attended a panel discussion Tuesday night, Jan. 18, that was supposed to include eight members of the North Carolina Council of State. However, State Treasurer Harlan Boyles was the only one of the promised officials that appeared at the program sponsored by the Department of Continuing Education's Issues '77 series.

Mr. Butch Pegram of that Department explained that several of the Council members had other commitments that could not be broken and at least two were ill. Agriculture Commissioner James Graham and Labor Commissioner John Brooks were ironically in Wilmington the same night, but both had other meetings. Graham and State Auditor Henry Bridges did send representatives of their departments, however. Durwood Laughinghouse represented Graham and John Butler, Bridges.

The purpose of the program was for each to give a brief outline of the duties of his department and answer questions from the audience. Boyles, Laughinghouse and Butler all expressed the opinion that the department heads should remain to be elected rather than appointed to insure a certain independence of department policies.

Charlie Daniels Receives Big Welcome from Hometown

by Mark Rybus

Charlie Daniels returned to Wilmington Friday for a short visit with his relatives and to promote his upcoming concert this Sunday at 8:00 p.m. at Brogden Hall.

Much to his surprise, a small but enthusiastic crowd turned out at the airport to welcome him home. After much back-slapping and hand-shaking, Charlie and his family were driven to City Hall in a limousine to meet Mayor Halterman.

The mayor made a short speech and presented Charlie with the official photograph of Wilmington. Daniels accepted the picture and later said it was one of the nicest surprises of an all-around surprising day.

From there, Charlie went to WKLM for a short taped interview. Then to WWAY-TV3 to tape another interview with Art Bannon for broadcast on "Good Afternoon, Carolina," this Thursday at 12:00 p.m.

During the interviews, Charlie's honesty and good nature were strongly in evidence.

He said he didn't want to classify his music because "it's not really country and it's not really rock 'n' roll—it's our music, the Charlie Daniels Band's music."

Charlie doesn't consider himself a "rock star," preferring to think of himself as "a country boy that picks guitar." His charm seems to be the honest, humble attitude he has about himself and his music.

Later in the afternoon, Charlie came to UNC-W for an interview with WCNU and to have more pictures taken. He laughed and joked with many of the students and signed a few autographs.

The final event of the day was a reception at Angelo's Restaurant. Many people from the school and community were there. More hands were shaken and laughs shared.

During the reception, I had a chance to talk to Charlie about things he wanted to talk about. He said his music was basically influenced by his background.

"My folks are all working people, and all my friends are too. So, it's just kinda natural that my music would reflect that."

Duane Allman was a big influence on his guitar playing and Hank Williams and Willie Nelson influenced his song-writing, Daniels said.

In 1967, Charlie moved to Nashville to do session work for such people as Al Kooper, Ringo Starr, and Bob Dylan.

Charlie formed his own band in 1971, the current Charlie Daniels Band. They have grown in popularity ever since, reaching both country and rock

So, don't forget: Charlie Daniels at Brogden Hall, Sunday, January 31, at 8:00 p.m. Charlie has promised the best concert the band has ever done. The tickets are going fast, and are on sale in the Pub at UNC-W, WGNI, and other locations.

Eugene McCarthy, former United States senator and presidential candidate, will present a lecture Thursday night (tomorrow), in Kenan Auditorium sponsored by the University Lecture Series. Senator McCarthy, who is also a noted poet, author, and educator, will discuss the topic, "The Hard Years: A Look at Contemporary America," in his 8:30 pm. lecture.

Long a figure in national politics, McCarthy is most remembered for his adamant opposition to the Vietnam War in his 1968 bid for the Democratic presidential nomination. It was due to the antiwar sentiment which his campaign aroused that then-President Lyndon Johnson left the presidential race, and Robert Kennedy entered.

McCarthy emerged in 1976 as a challenge to the two-party system by announcing his candidacy for president as an independent. Charging that both major parties "are beginning to pay the penalty for incompetence," McCarthy asserted that our nation has had "bipartisan war, bipartisan economic failures, and abuse of the Bill of Rights under both parties."

Born in Watkins, Minnesota, in 1916, McCarthy graduated with honors from St. John's University at age 19 after three years of study. He taught high school in Minnesota and North Dakota, and after receiving his master's degree from the University of Minnesota he returned to St. John's to teach economics and education. After service as a code breaker in World War II, McCarthy taught at the College of St. Thomas in Minnesota. In 1949 McCarthy was elected to represent Minnesota's fourth Congressional District in Congress. Elected to the U.S. Senate in 1958 and again in 1964, he served on several important committees and chaired the Special Committee on Unemployment Problems.

Considered somewhat of a political oddity, it was Sen. McCarthy who first invited the involvement of the restless youth of the Sixties in a national campaign. He drew some of his largest campaign audiences at college campuses where students shared his aversion to the Vietnam War. McCarthy was the first important national political figure to voice opposition to the war policies of President Johnson, who held an iron hand over official Washington.

It was McCarthy who loosened Johnson's hold by openly challenging the President in the New Hampshire primary of 1968 and making an impressive showing against an incumbent president. Johnson eventually withdrew from the race, but not before McCarthy had cleared the way for others to step forward, notably Bobby Kennedy.

McCarthy was known as an unconventional campaigner; he refused to campaign specifically for the Black vote because he felt—however politically impractical—that the electorate should be considered as a whole rather than as segments. In his 1976 campaign he vowed to replace the White House Rose Garden with "humble vegetables," saying that "Presidents have used the Rose Garden as a place to disguise irresponsible policies. You'd have trouble announcing war in a cabbage patch."

One of McCarthy's most ardent admirers is columnist Shana Alexander, who was writing for Life magazine in 1968. She followed his campaign closely and came to admire him not only as a political leader but as a poet and philosopher as well.

"The tough-minded candidate and the questioning poet dwell quite compatibly in the same place—within McCarthy's silver-gray head," wrote Alexander. She saw in McCarthy "a seasoned philosopher, a shrewd gambler, on the intense 12 year old (whose) strength...comes from the force and toughness and nobility of his ideas." He was "a Trojan horse...trying to smuggle some ideas, some ideals, and some serious thought inside the traditional circus tent of bigtime American party politics."

McCarthy retired from the Senate in 1970 and returned to writing and teaching. It was then that he began an extensive schedule of public speaking engagements which has taken him throughout the country.

More than fifty essays and articles which have appeared in major publications were authored by McCarthy. He has written seven books since 1960. His latest book, The Hard Years: A Look at Contemporary America and American Institutions, is the basis from which he draws his current lecture.

Admission to the lecture is $1.00 for the general public, and 50 cents for high school students. UNC-W students are admitted free.

Black Culture Week Activities Outlined

This year Black Culture week is intended to cover the many and varied aspects of the black community. The program is designed to make the student body and the community more aware of minorities and their needs. At the same time, the program will help the black community better understand himself enabling blacks to survive and promote prosperity in the community for all people.

Black Culture Week will be held in honor of Mr. Ralph Parker who is Dean of Student Activities at UNC-W. A Plaque will be presented to Mr. Parker for the services he has rendered to this university and the community on Saturday Feb. 12, 1977. The schedule is as follows:

Letters to the Editor

An Answer, Mr. Warren

Dear Editor:

Ray Warren wrote an article for last week's Seahawk which had some misleading statements pertaining to the senate resolution about our cheerleaders. I would like to clear up the confusion. "Mr. Warren's misinformation about our proposal is understandable since he was not at the Senate meeting. Many, many students have brought to my attention that the cheerleaders are too few in number and need to work more towards motivating the crowd. These students brought this matter to my attention because I am a Senator and they hoped something could be accomplished. Mr. Warren referred to the Senate as a "self-appointed jury." We are not. The members of the Senate are elected every year by the students of this university. Therefore, I feel it is my duty to serve those students.

The Senate was not denouncing the cheerleaders, as last week's article led the students to believe. We are merely a body of people who are able to convey the students' desires. We will be heard, whereas individual students might not be.

The Senate understands that the cheerleaders have lost five of their original nine girls, and with such a small group it is hard to be heard. We also realize the long hard hours of work that must be put into routines and the big poster that's held up at the beginning of each game. That kind of dedication is terrific. All we are suggesting is a change in the style of cheer, and to help the cheerleaders, the fans must be willing to join in when a cheer is started.

Last week, before the Georgia Southern game, I talked to a cheerleader and explained to her what was discussed in the Senate meeting. The main point was that the fans need cheers like "Defense" or "Go, Go, Go"—something they can get involved in. She accepted these suggestions enthusiastically.

Anyone who was at the Georgia Southern game probably noticed a difference in the crowd's spirit. The cheerleaders, following the above suggestions, were able to get the crowd cheering. I asked some of the students around me to join in with the cheers. They did, and more people followed. By the end of the game some of the fans were even starting their own cheers. That is Seahawk spirit the way it should be, and if the Senate had any part of this change, they certainly should not be criticized.

story editor for film director and producer Otto Preminger, he joined the staff of the Ebony Magazine.

The first specifically documented history of the black actors in the American Cinema is discussed in his book, Tons, Coons, Mulattoes, Mammies and Bucks.

Mr. Bogle investigates the stereotypes black actors have been forced to portray using films such as "Gone With the Wind" to support his arguments.

Mr. Bogle used these observations and interviews with various black performers to formulate his book and to prepare a series of lectures and visual slide presentation.

John A. Buggs

Mr. John A. Buggs, a native of Georgia, is a graduate of Dillard University. He received his M.D. in Sociology from Fisk University in 1941.

His career has ranged from a social worker for Los Angeles County to acting staff Director of the U.S. Civil Rights Commission.

In his career, Mr. Buggs has held offices of national and local significance. In 1972, Mr. Buggs was appointed to be the first black person to head the Commission staff since it was created by Congress in 1957.

He is listed in Who's Who in the East, Prominent Negro Georgians and in the Ebony Success Library. In 1961, Mr. Buggs was chosen as "Man of the Year" by the Pasadena Chapter of Omega Psi Phi Fraternity.

Mr. Buggs has written humorous articles in the field of civil rights and human relation. In 1966, he served as a member of the Planning Committee of the White House Conference on Civil Rights.

He is married to the former Mary Brown of Jacksonville, Florida. They have two daughters—Zara Gale and Diane.

Floyd McKissick

To understand Soul City, it is necessary to understand something about the man, for Soul City is Floyd B. McKissick.

The 54-year-old McKissick learned the benefits of the free enterprise system as a boy in Asheville, N.C., where he began his working career at age 12. As a young entrepreneur, he ran a fish stand, sold newspaper, operated a shoe-shine stand, owned real estate. Overseas during World War II, he saw bombed out cities being rebuilt and dreamed that new towns could mean much to decaying areas of the U.S. Later after earning a law degree at the University of North Carolina Law School, he joined Roberts and Assocs. and learned the intricacies of real estate, financial and title law, and became a constitutional lawyer, handling a record number of civil rights cases.

During the 1960's, McKissick was National Director of the Congress of Racial Equality, but resigned that position in 1968 to put into action his advocacy of black capitalism.

"Road To Freedom"

Wantu Wazuri will sponsor "Road to Freedom" from Durham, North Carolina on Feb. 7, 1977. The play is an enactment of the capture, transportation and cultural rise of Afro-Americans to the Black race.

Obataiye B. Akin Wole, Director and Producer, has a masters degree in Music Composition and is presently the Director of Community Radio of Durham. The play was first written in 1969, a reincarnation of a dream experienced at that time. A truly dynamic presentation consisting of vocals and modern dance.

Other contributing members are Charles Gilchrist, Director of the NCCU Touring Choir; and Phyllis Ledbetter, Choreographer for the dance group.

Two dollars admission for adults and one dollar for students at the door. Groups may have a section reserved for their members.

Gospel Night

To end Black Culture Week, Mr. Ralph Parker will be presented with a Plaque and various gospel groups will perform. A few of these groups are the Bethel Male Chorus of Reidsville, Dixie-land Gospel Singers of Kinston and the Southern Spiritual of Ayden. All of the groups mentioned have made an album.

The Bethel Male Chorus has just recently released an album "Give Me Strength" has toured and sung in many cities including New York City

BYLINE: Blacks Should Have High Hopes For Carter Years

By Bobby Parker

Black America has a friend in the White House. It's been a while, but finally Jimmy Carter has brought a concern for America's largest minority back to the presidency. Lyndon Johnson was the last—if he was a friend to anyone, he was a friend to Blacks.

Perhaps it is an eye-opening fact, that these two men both came from southern states of the old Confederacy. Civil rights reforms have come hard on the South in the last twenty years, but now that we have adjusted it's beginning to drift northward, to Boston and to Michigan.

I am not gloating, neither am I saying that the South has indeed overcome. The whole world has a hell of a long way to go before racial discrimination is eliminated. But it must truly start with the individual—we can't expect a mass change overnight from what people have been taught for a lifetime.

Jimmy Carter received over 90 per cent of the Black vote nationwide. There were doubts about his "ethnic purity" remark and about his church's restriction against Blacks. But

The appointment of Griffin Bell as attorney-general was a disappointment, but not because of his judicial background. No, Griffin Bell is a bad choice for the same reason that John Mitchell was a bad choice—he is too politically and personally close to the President.

The picture of Bell as a segregationist judge was horrendously distorted. His was a difficult situation which commanded delicacy. Bell knew the people he was dealing with—he knew that mass upheaval of the school system would breed chaos, leaving unhealable scars.

I worry that Bell is the law partner of Carter confidant Charles Kirbo. I worry that Bell has the inside track among all the new cabinet members. The attorney-general's office was tremendously abused during the Nixon years. Even Gerald Ford played a little game last year during an election—motivated "re-examination" of bussing by former Attorney-General Edward Levi.

Blacks who still have doubts about Bell need only look at another of Carter's appointments for comfort—UN Ambassador Andrew Young. Young wasn't upset by the ethnic purity remark or the Bell nomination. He knew and trusted the man in charge.

Young has deservedly climbed a skyrocketing ladder of stardom during the past year. Though admittedly on the coattails of fellow Georgian Carter, one finds it hard to believe that he could have had any motive other than supporting the man he believed in.

It was first believed that Young would remain in Congress as sort of a Carter liaison. But Young seemed so perfect for the UN job that he was tapped, and, reportedly with some reluctance, he accepted. The argument that Young was merely a token Black has difficulty holding water.

There was no opposition to the Young appointment. One Southern congressman suggested the might be too good for the job. His swearing-in ceremony was packed with a standing-room-only crowd.

The new ambassador has already left on a tour of Africa, a region where the United States has suffered credibility problems in the past. Young's appointment should help ease that tension, but not only in Africa. Young will bring a sense of compassion, understanding, and emotion to his job—much the same as President Carter will to his office.

The new diplomacy will be a welcome change. The tenure of Daniel Moynihan, flamboyant and outspoken, does not look so luminous in retrospect as it did when he was in office. Moynihan, the diplomatic-turned-politician, is somewhat of a disappointment—but that's another subject.

In contrast to the appointment of Andy Young, that of Patricia Roberts Harris seems too much of a token—token black, token woman, and token touch of class. Not that she won't do a good job as Secretary of Housing and Urban Development—she is an unusually bright and sensitive person who fits in perfectly with the Carter-Young mole.

Andy Young may know it or not, I suspect he does. But he has become the leader of the official Black community. Along with the incomparable Barbara Jordan (who, incidentally, turned down the attorney-generalship), Young is the Black in America today who can conceivably be elected to national office.

In this respect, he has replaced another fellow Georgian, Julian Bond. Bond once considered entering the 1976 primaries, but of course he did not. He was once considered, if you'll pardon the pun, the Great Black Hope.

Young, unlike Bond, has national exposure in the Congress, not to mention his new association with Carter. Though Black politicians are usually conceived as more attune to domestic and social issues, Young will have more foreign policy expertise than the average office-holder during and after his stint in the UN.

All this is not to say that Andrew Young is calculating his political future by holding Jimmy Carter's hand. It is to say that Blacks in America should recognize that if a national leader is to ascend from their ranks in the near future, he/she will have to broaden his/her appeal beyond the specific problems of his/her own people and reach out as a knowledgeable assessor of the plight of mainstream America.

Andrew Young and Barbara Jordan have spanned that bridge so that they now speak to the issues which affect the country as a whole, rather than limiting their energies to their own race, such as a Ron DeSantis or John Conyer. As Ms. Jordan so beautifully phrases it, government must work for "The common good."

Andy Young is young, and has a bright future ahead of him. That future has been enhanced by his association with President Carter, and his new position as America's chief diplomat. Though Ms. Jordan has the appeal to gain respect nationwide, Young is on the inside of the Carter "process" which is changing American politics.

Perhaps there is a bit of irony that a Black man is our nation's chief diplomat. Black people have for so long had to patiently negotiate basic human rights which others have taken for granted. We'll hear more from Andrew Young for a long time to come, and Black America can be most proud to have given our nation such an outstanding man.

Job Interview Workshop Set for Today

What should I include in a resume and when should I prepare one? What is the best way to conduct myself during an interview? Where do I find out what job opportunities are available to me?

Museum Chinese Festival

The guild of the Wilmington New Hanover Museum will present a Chinese New Year Festival at the museum, 814 Market Street, on Saturday the 5th of Feb. from 10:00 to 5:00, and on Sunday the 6th from 2:00 to 5:00. It is free, fun and educational. There will be many things to do—make kites, taste Chinese food, use chopsticks, print, taste teas, watch a movie and a narrated slide show on China. There will be a gift shop too. Mr. Lynn Covey (Master Fu Ling Yoo) will be here to conjure up some magic, along with some other magicians. Some Hoggard Voyagers will help with a Chinese "band" while four Hoggard exchange students from Japan will teach calligraphy (writing with a brush) and sing some special songs of their country. There will be puppet shows, and a dragon parade that you might want to get into. Join the fun at the museum on Feb. 5 and 6.

Lost Ring

Reward: Silver 3 diamond engagement ring lost before Christmas. Has one diamond missing. If found, call Kathy at 791-8819 after 6:00.

For those of you who may be perplexed about the process of job-hunting, the answers to these and many other often-asked questions are available—right here on campus!

On Wednesday, February 2, 1977, problems related to job-hunting will be discussed at a Job Interview Workshop. The location is in King Auditorium. (In the Education-Pgm. Bldg.) To begin the program, Mrs. Sandra Harkin will introduce UNC-W students to the Career Planning and Placement Office and explain what assistance the university offers students in locating work.

Mrs. Dorothy Moore of Wachovia Bank will talk to participants about resumes and related job-seeking correspondence. Issues addressed will include how to prepare a resume, when to use one and circumstances under which you might need additional correspondence.

The interview process will be the topic covered by Mr. Wally Yates. Examples of subjects he will discuss are setting up interviews and how to conduct yourself at an interview in order to make a favorable impression.

Jane Johnson, of the Internal Revenue Service, will speak to those in attendance on the federal hiring process. Her talk should inform potential public employees on the rather intricate "how" of securing a government job.

A question-and-answer session to be held after the talks will provide an opportunity for obtaining further information and/or clarification.

Co-sponsored by Sigma Alpha Beta and the Office of Career Planning and Placement, the workshop will begin at 2:30 and wind up around 4:00.

Interested students of all majors, faculty, staff and the public are invited to participate.

Mike Cross in Good Wood Tavern

Mike Cross was born in Maryville, Tennessee in 1946, but was raised in the small North Carolina mountain community of Lenoir. He has the somewhat dubious distinction of having been politely removed from the church choirs as a boy because he couldn't carry a tune. Music was not a part of his life until he went to college.

While in school at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, Cross took up the guitar. Within a year, he was writing tunes and working as part of a folk duo in various small clubs around town. He traveled with his music to New York City and Nashville and even did a short stint in a rock and roll band.

In 1972, he began to work as a solo act, on weekends. He soon found he could earn more money and enjoy life more playing in local clubs in Chapel Hill, N.C. than he could by waiting tables in a main street restaurant. So he spent his time writing and practicing.

In 1973, Cross took up the fiddle, which has become his first love. The next year, he and his wife, Laurie, moved to Atlanta, Ga. where he started law school. They continued to drive up to Chapel Hill once a month to play the club scene to keep food on the table.

His first album, "Child Prodigy," was released in July of 1976, to an overwhelming reception and Mike Cross has been in music full-time since.

Cross will be performing nightly this week in the Good Wood Tavern. Shows will be at 8:00 and 9:00 p.m. Wednesday and Thursday and 9:00 and 10:00 p.m. Friday. Admission is free compliments of the Coffeehouse Committee. Bring Your Own Beer and Wine.

Harper in "Drowning Pool"

If you were doing the right kind of moviegoing a few years back, you met Harper, that racy private eye full of character and full of problems, in the picture called "Harper."

If you never made that scene (and also if you did), you've got a treat in store. Harper is back and busier than ever in the new movie, "The Drowning Pool". Paul Newman, who created that stylish hired hand in his first outing, stars again in the fresh mess of ventures and misadventures. Also starred are Joanne Woodward (whom you may know as Mrs. Newman) and Tony Franciosa. In "The Drowning Pool," Harper is signed on for big bread by an oil heiress that he once knew in very personal ways. The incidents that ensue would traumatize a man of lesser cool and quality.

"The Drowning Pool" is based on the nailbiting novel by Ross MacDonald. The actions takes place in the oilrich region of Louisiana. The ingredients range all the way from humor and romance to shock and suspense. Producers of the Warner Bros. film are Lawrence Turman, who did "The Graduate", and David Foster, who produced "The Getaway." The director is Stuart Rosenberg, whose successful enterprises include "Cool Hand Luke" starring Paul Newman.

Hawk Win Streak Halted

"Disappointing, but not discouraging."

That's how head coach Mel Gibson termed his squad's 78-71 loss to Stetson University in basketball action last Thursday. The loss, following an 87-77 victory over a tough Georgia Southern team, puts UNC-W's record at 10-6.

"Stetson is a very talented ball club," said coach Gibson, "and we had a fine effort." Gibson cited his team's failure to keep Stetson from getting the second shot as a key factor in the contest.

Perhaps a key element in the game was Stetson's rebounding. They edged the hawks 33-30 in total rebounds, one of the few teams to do so this season. This was accomplished by part luck, part strategy for the team from Florida.

The luck came when Garry Cooper, the team's second leading rebounder, couldn't start due to illness. "Cooper's absence really hurt," said coach Gibson.

For strategy, Stetson devised a special defense to contain center Denny Fields, the Seahawk's leading scorer. Without going into details, the defense kept Fields double teamed the better part of the evening. While this defense limited Fields to only eleven points, the big center still managed to grab ten rebounds for the losing effort.

For the Seahawks, perhaps their biggest game of the year came Monday when they tangled with powerful UNC-Charlotte. Coach Gibson, conceding that UNC-C was "tough," insisted that his squad was feeling no pressure, and rather looking forward to the match.

"Tough" is too mild for the Charlotte team. After losing to Atlantic Coast Conference leader Wake Forest in a squeaker, the Forty-Niners destroyed a respected Florida State team on regional television. Occasionally ranked in the Top 20 and second-place finisher in the National Invitational Tournament last year, UNC-C is sure to prove tough competition for the Seahawks.

Lady Hawks Still Winless

by Tony Lombardo

UNC-W's basketball Lady Hawks suffered two more set backs this week in their drive for an elusive first victory. Their record after the two losses now stands at 0-6.

In a home game against Methodist College Friday night the Lady Hawks lost by a score of 71-38. On the Methodist game, Coach Ann Kraft commented, "We played them even in the second half. We just froze up in the first half and got too far behind to catch up. The team has yet to play a good first half of basketball." Leading the scoring in the Methodist game was Susan Spivey with 14 points and Wanda Moore with 8 for UNC-W.

A road game on Wednesday carried the Lady Hawks against Fayetteville St. In a game in which the officiating was labeled "horrible", Coach Kraft stated, "It was a rough and very physical game. The only time the officials would call a foul was on an obvious push or slap under the basket."

The margin of defeat was by a 104-64 score. Wanda Moore with 23 points, and Betsy Massari and Phyllis Creech with 10 apiece, led the UNC-W team in scoring.

Expanding her comment about the poor officiating, Coach Kraft said "Every game we have played with poor officiating, we have to carry someone to the hospital with an injury. In the Methodist game a girl received a concussion and in the Fayetteville State game a girl suffered a broken arm. These injuries are a direct result from poor officiating and rough play by other teams."

When asked what could be done about the officiating Coach Kraft added, "The officials need to be coached or exposed to the style of play in women's basketball. Women play a much slower style of ball than men do. The officials need to be more alert and call more fouls."

The Lady Hawks next game is at ECU next Wednesday night.

QUEEN - Night and Now Day

ELEKTRA 6E-101

This is another remarkable album from England's QUEEN; however, those of you who already have their albums may find this one more calm than its forerunners. The only drawback is that this is one of the first albums Elektra's increased price will affect. This will undoubtedly lower its total sales.

lower its total sales.

Unlike KILLER QUEEN or A NIGHT AT THE OPERA, the group has not shown all its talents on A DAY AT THE RACES. The album contains the usual perfect vocal harmonies yet is based more on the individual cuts than the play of one song off another. Each song is a definite unit and can function by itself as well as in its place on the album. I guess you could say A NIGHT AT THE OPERA was exactly that; and on A DAY AT THE RACES, any cut could come out first.

As usual, AT THE RACES begins with an average QUEEN rocker. "The Your Mother Down" is like the group's formula for a heavy rock hit and is a very good example of their style. It opens with the usual Freddie Mercury "ah-yeah" and continues with some very well done guitar work.

"You Take My Breath Away" follows and is an even better example of the group's vocal abilities than those on "The Prophet's Song" (if possible) from the OPERA album. This cut moves as if the words are floating in a summer's breeze as does the piano work.

Next is "Long Away" which I feel is the worst cut the group has yet done. QUEEN usually puts several serious cuts on each album and they are very well done. But here, they have put serious music to serious lyrics and it comes out sounding fake. This is the type cut any rock group could do and get away with, but not QUEEN!

Following this is another OPERA type cut, "The Millionaire Waltz". This is the type song which I find most remarkable about this group in that the vocals are more important than the music. This is the type song that makes QUEEN unique in the rock music field.

The present single opens side two and is QUEEN at their best. "Somebody to Love" exemplifies both their vocal and musical powers. (This is QUEEN you hear and not a choir.) The recording of the cut is also very well done (as is the rest of the cuts on the album), which is very effective in the split-up of the vocals.

Although Mercury and Brian May write most of the material drummer Roger Taylor, who also wrote "I'm in Love With My Car" from the OPERA album, penned "Drowse." This cut brings the album near an end with a very smooth polished sound.

To sum up (A DAY AT THE RACES is a fine album and very well recorded. But QUEEN can do better and have. Then again, it is as good as most new albums so what can I say? Till then, Kick-out. JW

Budding Hollies

For the most part, the idea behind the live album is to cash in on an act's fame during a lull in their career or upon their leaving a record label.

Two good examples of this practice are last year's live albums by Elton John and Peter Frampton. Neither album really added much to the previous recordings by either artist. For the most part, these albums contained weaker versions of tunes previously released. Frampton's career exploded because of his live album, but this is a rare exception. The new live album by the Hollies is also an exception from the rule.

The Hollies along with the Kinks and the Stones are the only veterans that have kept together. Despite a multitude of fine music, the Hollies will probably never be known for anything other than having once claimed Graham Nash as a member. It's to the Hollies credit that they are still going strong while Crosby, Steals, Trash, and Dung have split up after only two studio albums.

Because the Hollies are no longer in the public's eye, Epic (their last American label) has not released their four most recent albums. To obtain this album you'll have to order it through your local import store. Since it is a Canadian release you will only have to pay a dollar more. For what you get in return, the bother is well worth it.

Hollies Live provides a selection of tunes spanning their career from it's beginning to the last album. Hits like "Bus Stop," "He Ain't Heavy," "Carrie Anne," "Long Cool Woman", and "The Air That I Breathe" are all present. Also on it are tunes which never made the charts like "Another Night" and "Star". Springsteen's "Sandy" is another representation that proves that the Hollies are still in touch with today's music. The album is nicely paced with it's selections. Starting out with some early, fast tunes, side one ends on some of their recent tunes of a quieter nature. Side two picks up some more of their upbeat music. Like side one; two ends with a few soft songs, but with hits this time.

As far as performance goes, the Hollies' harmonies are still in top shape. The backing music is provided by the Hollies themselves. Only one extra musician, Pete "Eighteen With A Bullet" Wingfield is added. This album is an excellent showcase for the talents which have kept the Hollies going. Steve Harvey

YMCA Needs Swim Volunteers

There is an urgent need for volunteers to aid with the YMCA Adapted Swim Program, reports Ms. Carolyn Gruelle, Director of VAC. The program runs from 9:30 am till noon, on weekdays. Volunteers may give an hour a week or 3 hours per day, according to their own desires. It is not necessary to know how to swim to be of help with the handicapped in this worthwhile water activity. Volunteers are needed for tutoring on a one-to-one basis in the elementary schools thru the School Community Assistance Program (SCAP). Volunteers will be able to arrange convenient hours during the school day for one or two sessions a week. The Voluntary Action Center (VAC) is a non profit agency whose function is to act as a clearing house for volunteer activities in the community. The center is open from 9-5 weekdays, the phone number is 762-9611. The UNC-W Student Activities Office acts as a satellite for VAC on the campus and Al Harris, Student Activities Director, can supply information on volunteer opportunities.

Christian Fellowship

What is fellowship? Fellowship is a time of gathering to praise and honor our Lord Jesus Christ. As students, we have plenty of time on our hands to do as we please. As the Bible points out "You have been given freedom: not freedom to do wrong, but freedom to love and serve each other." So if you are seeking true friends, friends who are there to love and help you, come to the campus fellowship. Fellowship meetings are Tuesday nights at 7:30 in Kenan Hall. We are looking forward to your arrival.

Charter Flights Guide Listings

CIEE has just announced the publication of The 1977 Charter flights Guide listing over 150 flights to Paris, Amsterdam and London.

This unique guide includes charters designed and operated by CIEE especially for students, teachers and university staff - enabling them to travel abroad for part or all of their summer vacation or to spend a full semester or sabbatical year abroad. Summer round trips range in length from 4 to 12 weeks, while the academic year flights extend from 4 to 12 months! Prices for these hard-to-find flights are pretty hard to beat. They start at $330 for New York departures, $399 for Chicago departures and $459 for Los Angeles and San Francisco departures. CIEE's advance booking charter (ABC) program has been authorized by the Civil Aeronautics Board, which requires all bookings to be made at least 45 days in advance. The airlines operating the flights are Trans International Airlines, World Airways, Capitol Airways, Martinair and American Airlines. CIEE is a membership organization of nearly 200 colleges and universities and has been active in the field of student travel for over 25 years.

The 1977 Charter Flights Guide is free from CIEE, Department PR2,777 United

Upsilon Nu

The Upsilon Nu Chapter is pleased to announce the acceptance of 3 new brothers: Jackie Allen, Tom Conella, and Olive Pope into the brotherhood. We are also pleased to state that Easter Seals is receiving a check for over $600 from our See-Saw-Athon Project last semester.

At our last meeting, we elected officers for the semester. They are as follows: Historian - Nell K.; Alumni Secretary - Barbara Leonard; Secretary - Mary Beth Pack; Treasurer - Carson Hilburn; Fellowship Chairman - Pat Armstrong; Pledgemastrer - Steve Martin; Project Chairman - Paul Laird and President - Bob Browning.

Another statement worth mentioning is at the National convention (Dec. '76), women were given full rights as brothers on all levels of the organization including Regional, Sectional, and National Levels. To qualify, an additional $10 in membership fee is required.

Other business included plans for spirit raising activities at both the bonfire and the Homecoming Game. Luann Ruffy

Q: What are pentacles: A.N.
A: A pentacle is, to put it simply, a five-pointed star. If we go into a bit more detail, we find that a pentacle is, more accurately, a five-pointed star etched into a circular, metal disk so that the points of the star touch its rim. Magical formulas are then inscribed on this, and the whole thing is, or was, used by Alchemists in their efforts to discover a way to turn straw and/or base metals to gold (and to discover anything else they could).

Pentacles is also a suit in the Tarot, a deck of seventy-eight cards designed specifically for the purpose of divination, although in a pinch it can be used for a game of poker (but I don't advise it.)

The people represented by the suit of pentacles are dark and psychic. They, as far as temperament goes, make good Artists or Scientists and are quite warm and outgoing; however, they are not suited to the world of business, as they find it too cold for them. Q: Do you believe in ghosts: L.L.

A: That's a difficult question to answer honestly since many ghosts have been known to come out of whiskey bottles. If you mean do I believe that ghosts exist, of course I do, but I'm not convinced with at least a little proof.

Impeachment Motion Fails

by Bobby Parker

A motion of impeachment against SGA President Duffy Robinson, which listed eleven counts of maladministration and neglect of duty, was defeated by a one-vote margin at Thursday night's meeting of the Student Senate. The motion also included one count of obstruction of justice by the SGA President.

Robinson appeared before the Senate for the first time since early November. According to sources at the meeting—both senators and spectators—Robinson addressed the Senate to answer a similar motion that surfaced at the last Senate meeting.

The impeachment motion would have required a two-thirds majority of the voting members. With seventeen senators voting, five voted "no" on the motion and one abstained. There were eleven "yes" votes.

By roll-call vote, the tally was: Yes—Bob Browning, Carol Rains, Keith Hedrick, Doug Shackelford, Francis DeLuca, Scott Olsen, Karin Whaley, Glen Downs, Cindy Buxton, Parks Griffin, and Tom Witter; No—Tom Raines, Kent Wiggins, Ken Lily, Clay Fairley and Paul Walker. Greta Lint, who had brought the original impeachment motion to the Senate floor, abstained.

Robinson was asked to report to the Senate and give his accomplishments since his administration began. He noted that he had worked on booking the Charlie Daniels' Homecoming concert, obtaining an FM broadcast license for WCNU, and had most recently looked into rental policy of the Pub's recreation area.

However, sources who worked closely with WCNU to obtain the license said that Robinson had not been active in the FM transfer, and that he in fact was not available to sign some necessary correspondence for the station. Other sources indicated that Robinson was in error in stating that the Pub has implemented "rental" policies, that only a charge was made for the clean-up operations after an

Text of Impeachment Petition

Text of the Petition of Impeachment:

The Constitution of the SGA gives the student body the power to initiate any action within the competence of the Student Senate. With this constitutional authority, we, the undersigned students, call upon the president of the SGA to call for a student referendum on the following resolution:

AN ACT OF IMPEACHMENT

The president of the SGA, William "Duffy" Robinson, is hereby impeached and charged with the following specific offenses: Ten individual counts of maladministration and non-performance of duty:

1. The President has failed to fulfill his duty, as stated in Article VI, section 2, subsection m, of the SGA constitution, to appoint students to student-faculty committees. This failure has caused the student body to be deprived of representation on the curriculum committee.

activity. The source further stated that Robinson had not been available earlier this year to discuss such charges with administration officials. Of the charges being brought against Robinson, there are several which concern his failure to fill student committee posts. These specifically referred to the Curriculum and Calendar Committees, which have vacancies in student position. One of Robinson's duties is to appoint students to these committees.

One of the most serious charges, which has brought the most concern to administration officials, is that Robinson "caused serious damage to the reputation of the SGA by his actions at the Board of Trustees meeting prior to the latest meeting."

Some controversy occurred at that meeting when Robinson asked the Board to endorse a splinter group of SGA representatives from the 16 university system. Robinson argued with one board member when he got the impression he was trying to assert SGA supremacy over the university.

Deadline for Rehder Short Story Contest

by Katherine Stiles

The 1977 UNC-W Jessie Rehder Short Story Contest is open to all UNC-W students. The deadline for submissions is Friday, March 11.

Students should submit their short stories to the Dept. of English. Five awards will be given with the first place author receiving $100.

The second place winner will be awarded $50, third place receives $30, and the two honorable mentions will each receive $10.

The first place story will be published in the spring issue of Atlantis, the UNC-W student literary magazine.

The Jessie Rehder Short Story Contest is an annual event sponsored by the UNC-W Department of English and funded by the UNC-W Jessie Rehder Memorial Fund.

Jessie Rehder, a native Wilmingtonian, was the director of the creative writing program at Chapel Hill for 20 years and devoted her life to encouraging students to write.

She published a book of poems entitled East Wind's Back and later two textbooks, The Story at Work and The Young Writer at Work.

Ms. Rehder also edited the Chapel Hill Carousell, a collection of writing by students and teachers at UNC-Chapel Hill.

Her best-known work, Remembrance Way, was published in 1956. This novel has been cited as revealing "both her careful craftsmanship and her deep insight into human nature."

The awards will be presented at a reception for all contestants on Thurs., March 17, at 11:30 a.m. in the SRO Theatre, Kenan Hall.

Eugene McCarthy: Vision in a Blind Man's World

By Bobby Parker

"I'll be watching in tears," said one young woman in anxious anticipation of Eugene McCarthy's appearance at UNC-W Thursday night. A volunteer worker in McCarthy's 1968 presidential campaign, she was remembering the image of the man she had never met, but had been so strongly committed to.

That image returned as the former United States senator entered Kenan Auditorium to a standing ovation of 400 admirers. The silver hair has been lightened by time, the eyes are somewhat worn—but the voice, the style, and the philosophy are the same that his campaign children so well remember.

Eugene McCarthy is a living legend in American politics. He is the ever-struggling victim of the system he tries to change. From Chicago of 1968 to Washington of today, he has been a voice of change not for its own sake but for a better way.

There is no bitterness espoused by this man. If he indeed has bitter feelings, they are harbored as a secondary thought to his primary concerns.

His gentle wit, his soft-spoken approach give substance to the character that has been painted over the years by those who know him well.

There is somehow a feeling that everyone who has ever met this gentle man has become his friend from the first smile of his kind and human face.

It is not long before one realizes that this man is not a loser at all, but a winner among winners—a visionary among blind men whose victory comes from an ultimate accumulation of understanding and maturity.

Some may expect an arousal of sympathy for this one who has been through so much against odds so great. But far overshadowing any feeling of sympathy is an emission of strength—strength that can almost be felt pouring from his heart and mind.

For those who believe, who share the optimism of his noble vision, McCarthy lends himself as the symbol of the struggle—the spark of quiet revolution. The courage to question and to seek new answers is his battle sword, with which he challenges his fellows to move forward, to strive for something better.

The first impression of this tall, slender man is a certain reverence, an awe, a deification of the myth that he embodies. But with his first few words, he melts the barrier and speaks in human terms, one being to another.

There is no doubt of the experience this man has known. The deep-set eyes are mysteriously concealing, yet openly inviting. One wonders at the knowledge, the capacity, of what is within, while developing an instant camaraderie with this friend of all mankind.

Time is forgotten when conversation with Senator McCarthy begins. He was almost late for the Thursday lecture because the welcoming party of three that carried him to his hotel became engrossed in the wisdom and poetry of simple conversation with him.

Apprehension is immediately erased with a firm handshake and warm smile. So much so that a nervous student with the task of introducing the Senator to the audience was unaware of the hundreds seated in front of him, blind to the television lights glaring up at him—alert only to the impression that began to overwhelm him only moments before.

McCarthy's lecture that night emphasized those problems of 1968 which have yet to be resolved: "militarism" precipitated by "ideological conditions to (See McCarthy, page 3)

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Under the Big Top: Students, Senators Discuss Impeachment

Robinson Is A Disgrace . . .

Dear Editor,

Last Thursday evening, it was our dubious honor to be present and voting at the SGA senate meeting in which the impeachment of SGA President William Robinson was considered.

Constitutionally, to have impeached Mr. Robinson would have essentially been to have sent him to trial. Eleven separate charges, each seriously raising questions pertaining to Mr. Robinson's presidential performance, were brought before the senate.

Due to the actions of a benumbed minority, these questions were not resolved, leaving serious doubt as to Mr. Robinson's qualifications for remaining in office. Either this small minority was constitutionally ignorant, or its members were certainly slow-witted.

We were particularly disturbed by the attitude expressed by four persons present in the senate chambers (Dr. Malloy, SGA President Robinson, Senator Tom Raines, and Senior Class President Clay Fairley) which in essence was that of "well, we've had worse."

By applying this twisted logic, they sought to justify Mr. Robinson's disgracefully inadequate administration; a tactic frequently employed by diehard Nixon advocates during the Watergate Era.

As to Mr. Robinson's conduct during the meeting, he was sardonic, rude, disgusting, appalling, and totally unpresidential. He constantly employed the use of lewd retorts, in vain attempts to abash and intimidate various members of the senate.

In dealing with parliamentary questions, Mr. Robinson incessantly utilized Nazi-like tactics, declaring that he had the floor and would not relinquish it, no matter what parliamentary procedure dictated. Sadly enough, the presiding officer over the senate was not well versed enough in parliamentary procedure to give an accurate ruling on these matters.

We feel that after his performance last Thursday night, every UNC-W student can be rightfully ashamed of the fact that William Robinson is their SGA President.

We have no pity for Mr. Robinson. His attitude, performance, and conduct during his lamentable reign have been a disgrace to our school. He has not seen fit to retract his peridious statement that he wouldn't do a "damn thing" along the lines of improving his administration.

If presented with the opportunity, it is our most sincere hope that each student will do everything possible to see that Mr. Robinson, and everyone like him, is removed from power.

But "Nothing Was Done!"

Editor, the Seahawk

After sitting through a two and one-half hour Senate meeting this past Thursday night, I can only express my extreme disappointment with our SGA President Duffy Robinson and our SGA Senate. The entire meeting that evening was a waste of time, as the Student Senate failed to address itself to the pertinence of Mr. Warren's allegations, preferring to listen to President Robinson make a mockery of our student government.

I was no less than shocked by President Robinson's childish behavior during his hour-long monologue Thursday and fervently hope that he does not conduct himself in this manner at meetings where he is representing UNC-W. His sarcastic and obnoxious manner was unbecoming of both a college student and a government official.

During his speech President Robinson failed to inform the Senate of his accomplishments in his office since October. I believe that he failed to do this because, simply, President Robinson has accomplished next to nothing since the defeat, by referendum, of his executive salary.

But I am even more shocked and saddened by our Senate's inability to stand up to President Robinson. During President Robinson's speech, when he literally took absolute control of the Senate floor, when he constantly berated those Senators who attempted to question him while he failed to completely answer those questions posed, not one move was made to stop him or to regain control of the Senate. Nothing was done!

When questions from Senators ended up as shouting matches between the President and Senators, no move was made to regain order.

What is even more disappointing is the fact that the Senate failed to answer any questions concerning the impeachment of President Robinson. An impeachment is not a decision of guilt or innocence; it is simply an indictment requesting the courts to resolve the conflict.

Certainly Mr. Warren's eleven allegations are serious enough to warrant further investigation by the judicial branch. I do not believe that those six Senators voting against impeachment were fully aware of this.

The question of impeachment must be brought up again and this can be done by petition of the Senate. I only hope that our Senators will have the fortitude to stand up for what they feel is right and not allow themselves to be kicked around by a "lame duck" President.

Joanne Gentry

"A Miscarriage Of Justice"

To the Editor:

Concerning last Thursday's Senate meeting, I am not sure who we, the student body, should be upset with. On one hand, we have President William "Duffy" Robinson, who was both obnoxious and rude at times and who failed to come to grips with the arguments against him. On the other hand, we have the Senate, who allowed someone to come into their midst and belittle, antagonize, and treat them like children.

I would rather look at the faults of each separately. If President Robinson planned to "curtail" his presidential duties when his October salary referendum (which I supported and voted for) was defeated, he should have resigned, allowing Vice-President Laird to take over, rather than become a lame duck president. Since he chose not to resign, the least he could have done would have been to present reports to the Senate regularly or attend meetings occasionally. In his defense Thursday night, Mr. Robinson stated that he had helped plan the Charlie Daniels' Band concert and had also been an instrumental part in WCNU acquiring its FM broadcasting license. I ask Walker O'Quinn (Chairman of concert committee) and Greg Larrimore (station manager of WCNU) to clarify these points. If it turns out that President Robinson was indeed the "guiding light" of these two projects, he deserves praise. This would not, however, excuse him for the eleven points cited in Ray Warren's resolution of impeachment, if they are found to be true.

Another source of disappointment has been the Senate. I refer, primarily, to the last Senate meeting. The question of impeachment was defeated by one vote, but the question of whether or not an impeachment was in order is still in my mind. The eleven indictments against Robinson were never clarified to the point of knowing whether or not they were true. Therefore, the queshave you been doing for the Senate since October?" And for an hour or more Mr. Robinson sat up in front of the room and said absolutely nothing!

According to Mr. Robinson he has done many things for the senate and student body. He brought us Charlie Daniels

Thank You for McCarthy

Dear Editor,

I would like to thank the University Lecture Series Committee, especially Bobby Parker, for inviting former Sen. Eugene J. McCarthy to speak at UNC-W. As some student and faculty members know, Sen. McCarthy also spoke to two political science classes the morning after his lecture. Prominent people in all fields and from different backgrounds should be invited to speak here. As evidenced by the audience size last Thursday night, the public is quite willing to pay an admission fee to listen to interesting, distinguished speakers.

Sincerely,

Mimi Sebian

UNC-W Student

tion of guilt or innocence has not been answered, and yet the Senate still refused to allow the judicial branch to rule on these indictments. The student body should demand that the Senate reconsider this action or allow itself to be washed over in the wake of this miscarriage of justice.

Tom Hunt

It's Now Up to the Students

As a concerned student I decided to attend the Senate meeting on Feb. 3, which was to hold the faith and future of our president, Mr. "Duffy" Robinson, in their hands. As it turned out the senate was more concerned with saving face than doing what was best for the student body.

Two-thirds of a majority of the vote was needed to impeach Mr. Robinson. As it turned out 11 voted for impeachment 5 against and 1 abstention. It is about the five persons that voted against impeachment that I want to talk about.

According to the Senate our president, Mr. "Duffy" Robinson had not attended any senate meetings since Oct. and since the president's salary was voted down.

A question was raised to Mr. Robinson in order of "What Band, FM radio station, and he will not pay for Rental fees on the pub. But when further pressured he finally said he had supported the radio station since 1973 but had not been around to sign any of the bills that gave the campus a full-time FM radio station.

In essence what I'm trying to say is I can't understand how you can let him get away with being this "lazy" in his duties.

If you want to wait until the next president takes over forget it! The damage has already been done between student and student government relationships.

That meeting was the greatest example of lack of Administration in student government. I have ever known. I feel now it's up to the students to do something about their President since the senate won't.

Susie Smith

Senator Disagrees with Action

Dear Editor,

President Robinson has become somewhat a scapegoat. In the January 19 SEAHAWK article on Warren's resignation, numerous reactions to the resignation centered on the supposed inactivity of the Student Senate or senators. Indeed, several senators and other SGA members have voiced their frustration concerning the SGA's effectiveness in campus issues.

The recent impeachment issue produced sort of a double exit for these dissatisfactions. Not only did it provide a means of increasing the Student Senate's influence on campus, it also supplied an available scapegoat, one that was just about in the same boat as the Student Senate for his supposed inactivity.

Just What Is This Wantu Wazuri?

By Angela Hankins

Watu Wazuri is a Swahilian name. Swahilian is a language which is spoken in many African countries. In Swahilian, Watu Wazuri means "beautiful people".

Due to a spelling error, the Watu Wazuri was officially as the Wantu Wazuri. The name can be changed to correct the error, but the president, Kenneth Mills said, "It's a lot of trouble."

The Wantu Wazuri is only located on the campus of UNC-W. It was officially chartered on campus during the second semester of 1972.

Wantu Wazuri is presently the only chartered black organization on campus.

From a mere charter membership of twenty persons, the club has expanded to approximately eighty members. Its 1976-77 officers include Wayne Bryant, Vice-President and Maurice Smith, Treasurer.

Wantu Wazuri's major activity this semester will be Black Week, which is celebrated annually during the second week of February.

Black Week is observed thru a series of programs; each emphasized Black history. The activities began this year on Feb. 6, with a slide presentation by John Bogle. This program emphasized the roles that Black actors are forced to portray.

On Thursday, Feb. 10, Floyd McKissick, organizer of Soul City, NC, will be the featured speaker.

On Feb. 11, a play, "The Road to Freedom" may be seen in Kenan Aud., at 8:00.

On Feb. 12, the final night, several gospel choirs will perform in a concert. This, also, may be seen in Kenan Aud. at 8:00.

This year Kelvin Wright is the chairman of the planning committee.

All activities of Black Week have no admission charge except "Road to Freedom", for which a $1 admission is charged.

McCarthy Stills Holds Optimism That His Supporters Remember

which we must respond automatically;" "illegal and unconstitutional" wrongs of the American political process; and a "changing conception of the office of the presidency" which has resulted from a "personalization" of the office by the individual who occupies it.

But the true character of the man comes from face-to-face conversation with him. He never hesitated to answer, never showed the slightest aversion to question after question. He was eager to share with others what he has to offer.

One incident that illustrates this facet of his character occurred after the lecture. Walking to the car to leave the campus, a man waiting near the car called out to McCarthy. "I wanted to see what you were driving, Senator."

Rather than leave that short exchange as just another of hundreds like it, Senator McCarthy took time to walk over to the man and talk with him for a moment.

McCarthy continued to show his interest in people throughout the eighteen-hour period of his visit to Wilmington. He, too, asked questions, seemed concerned, wanted to know about the people he was with.

It was simply fascinating to listen to the informal, completely relaxed conversation among him and a group of admirers that gathered in a private home for an impromptu reception after the lecture.

Most of those present had actively supported his candidacy in 1968—though none had ever met him.

Yet it was though the evening was a reunion of old friends, a casual recollection of good times past. The only lax in the conversation occurred when a line of thought had been completed and these compatriots seemed to reflect with a touch of sadness, a feeling of decency, and a sense of pride about the meaning of it all.

He talked of the people he has known—of Sam Ervin, Lyndon Johnson, Phillip Hart, and Billy Carter. He exchanged ideas about the national mood, Congress, Jimmy Carter and the court battles before him. He asked about Jim Hunt, the Wilmington Ten, the UNC school system, and the weather.

McCarthy compared his '68 campaign with his current struggle to change election laws. Like then, he is confronted with "unfair" rules which restrict his free expression and opportunity.

The senator points out that if the Chicago convention would have been entirely different. Perhaps the feeling that his campaign had a part in changing those rules to more equitable standards (and it surely did) is compensation for losing the nomination. His is not a search for recognition, but a search for justice.

McCarthy decidedly ruled out any future race to re-join Congress. He said that he retired in 1970 because to win he would have had to run on the Democratic ticket, and even at that time he had an independent candidacy in mind. That year was an uphill race at any rate for those who had taken stands against the war.

There is a sense of disillusionment when McCarthy talks of the Democratic Party. He was one of the few who stood up for a change in the electoral system. He points out that the changes finally came because the party had been "embarrassed" by the Chicago convention. the Democratic Party had been operating under its current rules in 1968, the outcome of

Among the reforms that he advocates today is an overhaul of the electoral college, doing away with the "winner-take-all" electoral vote system and replacing it with an apportionment of the vote by districts within each state. He suggests that these districts be even smaller than Congressional districts to insure better representation of the true will of the people.

"Even the problems of Wilmington are not the same of those of western North Carolina," he explains.

He is working for reforms of the new federal election laws, saying that they heavily favor the two major parties. Of the recently created Federal Election Commission, McCarthy says "you have three Democrats and three Republicans who are not going to act unless both sides want (the change)." This results in "the government itself determining the politics by which the government is formed", a clear violation of the Constitution, according to McCarthy.

McCarthy did not disappoint any of his friends here in Wilmington. We saw what he had pictured: a very warm, personable man guided by humane convictions which he pursues with timeless patience.

When he left, he had cemented friendships that has been forming for years. And somehow we felt that—as we could not forget him—he would not forget us.

McCarthy did not rule out another bid for the presidency in 1980. But that is not important. What is important is that he has not given up his optimism; after all that the system has done to him, he still feels that is can be changed so that fairness is no longer a dream.

Eugene McCarthy is not a dream either. The symbol, the myth, the legend is reinforced, not overshadowed, by the man. For those who can still believe, this man helps make it all worthwhile.

HIGH & MIGHTY

2. The President has failed to fulfill the above stated duty with regards to the calendar committee, resulting in a serious loss of student input with regards to the University calendar for next year.

3. The President has failed to represent the student body at meetings of the Student Affairs Committee.

4. The President has seriously damaged the rapport between the student body and the administration, and caused serious damage to the reputation of the SGA, by his actions at the Board of Trustees meeting prior to the latest meeting. The President further damaged the reputation of the SGA by indicating he would attend the last meeting of the Board, and yet failing to appear, giving no notice or apology.

5. The President has failed to appoint students to the Student Superior Court, resulting in continuous and chronic vacancies.

5. The President has failed to supervise the work of the SGA Administrative Assistant, resulting in extremely poor performance of duties, waste of time, and poor use of SGA funds (being the salary portion of the Executive Fund.) He has ignored the requests of several members of the administration and members of the SGA to correct this unacceptable situation.

7. The President has not seen that the Administrative Assistant fulfill the requirements of the job description. He has caused the Administrative Assistant to become his personal secretary rather than a servant of the entire SGA, including the Senate, as provided for in the job description.

8. The President has created a confused and extremely difficult situation for the chairmen of funded groups by failing to properly administer the state purchase order system. He has been frequently unavailable to sign the necessary forms, resulting in serious delays in the flow of SGA business.

9. The President has made himself unavailable and inaccessible to the student body, the chairmen of funded groups and the Student Senate. He has failed to inform the students of his activities either through the campus media, or the students' representatives. These actions have resulted in confusion as to the actions of the executive branch and have hampered the efficiency and morale of the Student Government Association.

10. The President has brought disrepute to his office and to the entire SGA by his actions at the Senate meeting of Feb. 10. These actions included disregard for the normal rules of order, inappropriate and profane language and actions, and disruptive personal references to various senators and other individuals. The result has been a loss of credibility and prestige sufficient to render effective administration of his office practically impossible.

According to sources, Robinson's conduct was "arrogant and asinine."

Another of the more serious charges concerns the administrative assistant who is the only salaried official of the SGA. The charge says that Robinson has not properly supervised the assistant, noting that she has become more a "secretary" and does not fit the job description as outlined in the Constitution.

One charge was added to the indictment bill as a result of Robinson's behavior at Thursday's Senate meeting. According to sources who were present, Robinson was "arrogant, rude, disgusting, and totally unrepresentative." Senators said that Robinson "talked down" to them in "sarcastic tones."

One incident involved Sophomore President Karin Whaley, who Robinson continually referred to as "my dear lady." When she objected to this reference, Robinson said that he didn't consider the term derogatory. Whaley asked to be referred to as "Senator" or "President Whaley."

At another point in the discussion, Whaley said that she had heard from sources that Robinson had "created a scene" in the bookstore when he objected to their refusing to cash a check during the three-week period before the end of the semester. (Bookstore policy is that no checks will be cashed during this period.)

According to Whaley's account, Robinson tried to use his position as SGA president to have the check cashed. At the Senate meeting, Robinson told Whaley that her sources "are not worth a shit." A source within the bookstore told this reporter that Robinson had not caused any more trouble than some other students who also objected to the policy.

In opposition to the impeachment motion, Senior President Clay Fairley said "I don't think it would help the SGA" to go through with the impeachment. He stated that the move seemed like "a personal vendetta" of some senators against the President.

Senior Senator Paul Walker also opposed the motion, stating that "the entire legal process (of impeachment) could easily expand for weeks." Walker urged the Senate to carefully discuss each charge against Robinson before acting on the impeachment.

Walker said that at Thursday's meeting, "there were objections to President Robinson participating" in the discussion. He noted that some senators "got up and walked around and sometimes left the room" during Robinson's address. Walker added that the Senate abruptly ended Robinson's talk by calling a "previous question," ending the discussion, and calling for a quick vote on the motion.

On Monday, a petition stating the various charges began to circulate among the student body that would require the Senate to reconsider the impeachment motion. Ten per cent of the student body (about 320 students) would be necessary to sign the petition. The general feeling was that a second motion would be passed, as two senators who voted against it Thursday were considered leaning toward changing their votes.

President Robinson was not available to comment on these developments.

The Senate will meet Thursday night at 7:30 in Room 218 of the Chemistry Bldg. All interested students are invited to attend.

Volume vs. Audience: A Homecoming Concert

by Robert Brown

Wielding his fiddle like a conductor's baton, Charlie Daniels brought to a close Homecoming week with an ear-shattering concert for a near-capacity crowd in Brogden Hall Sunday night, Jan. 30.

Clad in blue jeans, flannel shirt and a big hat Charlie introduced the audience to his own brand of country rock as he stood bigger-than-life before them.

Unfortunately, the expertise of the musicians was overshadowed considerably by a deafening volume, so loud that only the hard of hearing could appreciate it. And that one problem is what kept a mediocre concert from being a great concert.

The explanation for the problem was that more volume was needed in order to mask the echo which resulted from the bad acoustics in the hall.

For those who could tolerate the volume, however, the show wasn't a complete loss.

The first big highlight in the show was a drum duet. The duet was very exciting because both drummers played a different music line while sounding like one drummer.

The second high spot was when Charlie played "Long-Haired Country Boy". The crowd went wild acknowledging his big hit.

Returning for the first of two encores, Charlie had everybody dancing as he incited them with his fiddle and song: "The South's Gonna Rise Again." And he kept them on their feet with a grand finale of "The Orange Blossom Special."

The band included an electric guitar, electric bass, two drummers, a piano and Charlie, who switched from guitar to fiddle.

A note is needed on The Winter Brothers Band which served as the warm up act. Volume also was their ruin. Although they lacked in technical expertise and vocal harmonies, they had a few really good tunes that, if played at half the volume, would have been very entertaining and pleasing to the listener.

SEAHAWK SPORTS

UNC-W Nabs First In National Stats

When the national statistics are released at the end of the week, UNC-W should be ranked number one.

Number one in field goal shooting, that is. According to statistics compiled after the Campbell game, the Seahawks are shooting at a .551 percentage, or 55.1 percent, in simpler terms. This beats both West Texas State and Clemson, who were tied for first last week at .549. UNC-W was third in last week's stats.

In the next few weeks, center Denny Fields should be on top of individual shooting from the floor. Due to a late start, Fields is not currently listed in national statistics. If he were, though, his .690 percentage would put him in the number one spot for field goal shooting. He will probably be listed on next week's figures.

Hawks Rout Campbell 72-64

Coach Mel Gibson's basketball Seahawks, coming off a defeat at the hands of UNC-Charlotte, downed Campbell College 72-64 at Campbell last Thursday night, snapping a 25 game home win streak for the Camels.

"There was a huge crowd there," said Coach Gibson, "but the team didn't crack under pressure." Coach Gibson described the scene as "a 900-seat gymnasium with 1200 people in it."

Billy Martin led a very balanced scoring attack with 18 points. Denny Fields followed with 17 points, with Bobby Martin contributing 14. Delaney Jones tossed in 12, and Lonnie Payton made 10 points, giving UNC-W five players scoring in double figures.

As usual, the Hawks outbounded their opponents, this time 30-19. The Hawks also hit 30 of 42 field goal attempts for an amazing 71.4 shooting percentage.

Even though Coach Gibson called this game "one of the biggest ones of the year," perhaps the squad's most newsworthy game came when they battled UNC-Charlotte. Even though the Seahawks lost 83-70 to the powerful forty-niners, UNC-W still played an exceptional game.

Despite the loss, the Hawks gained a lot of respect from many corners of the state. For instance, the Seahawks were only down by seven with four minutes left in the game. The forty-niner coach wisely didn't pull his starters till there were only thirty seconds left in the game.

Denny Fields led all scorers with 29 points, 27 of those scored in the first half. It took a strong defense by UNC-Charlotte in second half to contain Fields and the rest of the Seahawks.

Tomorrow night, UNC-W takes on arch-rival Pembroke State University here at 7:30. In their first meeting this season, UNC-W destroyed the Braves, hitting over 70 per cent from the field. This time, however, Pembroke is carrying a five-game winning streak and is out for blood.

Senior Class Gift Revived

In the past, the Senior Class has traditionally left a gift for the University upon graduation. The tradition was broken after the class of 1967, which gave the sundial located in front of Kenan Hall. As Senior Class President, I would like to see the tradition reinstated.

Any ideas or suggestions concerning a gift would be greatly appreciated. A committee will evaluate the suggestions. Any senior wishing to serve on this committee please leave name, address, and phone number at the SGA office.

Thank you,
Clay Fairley
Senior Class President

Atlantis Deadline

The Atlantis staff is now accepting material for publication in its spring issue. All types of prose and poetry will be considered.

Submit your writing to the Dept. of English no later than Thurs., March 17.

The plan consists of regular evening group therapy sessions, films, and a daily personal control program for home or work. It has been successful over a period of more than 8 years in major cities around the world.

Dr. George Koseruba will be the featured speaker. His past experience in this area is vast, and the information he will provide is based on this as well as knowledge.

This community project is free to the public, and aims at bettering the health of the entire community. With fewer smokers, we will have less air pollution.

Already held successfully in cities all across the U.S. and Canada, the Five-Day Plan to stop smoking features such topics as the psychological and physical aspects of the habit, how craving can be lessened, how willpower can be strengthened, physical effects of smoking, organization of a buddy system, and many other techniques designed to break the habit within a five-day period.

If you are able to pre-register, please call 762-8486, or 762-1932.

New members and prospective oarsmen are welcome to attend.

Vivan Martindale
Campus Minister

THE STILL POINT:

A phenomenon exists in our quiet little closet community which is probably more common than many suspect. "Legalese" labels it cohabitation but is more variously referred to as "living together, shacking up, playing house, trial marriage, living in sin and a variety of other phrases." Cohabitation is literally defined as living together as husband and wife, usually implying sexual intercourse without being legally married. Even the census bureau estimates this phenomenon is vastly underreported. In my wanderings about this campus and the community many people have related their own experiences of living together to me. Unfortunately among many cohabitators, I find an amazing ignorance concerning moral, legal, emotional, physical and social implications of living together. For this reason, I feel it necessary to share some thoughts on the subject, though I may be blown out of the water for messing with some peoples' taboos.

I will not make a blanket moral judgement about the rightness or wrongness of cohabiting for a number of reasons, most important of which is that most people would stop reading at that point. Besides that, I suspect most will do as they please anyway. However, allow me to make this observation. Many of the dilemmas which persons have discussed with me in this context have revolved around moral issues. The living situation has not been reconciled with experience, values, needs and philosophy of life. This often contributes to guilt, anger, resentment and a host of other complicated responses, which reek havoc on relationships. Values and beliefs are a very integral part of our lives which we sometimes fail to grapple with, particularly in an academic setting.

The traditional Christian perspective is one of publically saying that living together is wrong. Most denominations, however, are in the throes of examining family structure, human sexuality, alternate life styles and a host of issues that have emerged in the past few decades. The serious inquirer will find many opposing views in the same household of faith and the responsibility ends up in the lap of those involved. That does not provide an easy answer but I hope you will see the seriousness of the moral considerations.

Living together is one of those situations which most often just seems to happen. It is seldom planned, usually evolves at a slow pace, and unfortunately, is seldom discussed. Few know that cohabiting is illegal in most states, including N.C. and that common law marriage is a myth in most places (including N.C.).

I could go deeper into the issues but let it suffice to say that living together is complex whether married or unmarried and whether we are aware of it or not.

One last thought: Get your act together before you go on the road.

Album: Carpenters Live at the Palladium
A&M Records
Article Title: Faulty Construction By Carpenters

Like my last review the album concerned is a live one an also an import. This time the album comes from England where the Carpenters recently finished a tour. To capitalize on their success abroad A&M has rushed released a live album.

there is no real justification for this album being put out. This not to say that the Carpenters' performance are poor in any way, matter of fact much has been made of the Carpenters' ability to flawlessly reproduce their hits on stage. This is where the live album's biggest problem lies. Who needs a live album that is filled with songs mimicing the original studio cuts? The whole second side of this album is nothing more than a medley of the Carpenters' greatest hits. Outside of the occasional handclapping Side Two could have been lifted from their Singles album. side One is a representation of the Carpenters summer show which toured America. The bulk of this is the narrative of the Carpenters' climb to success. Intermingled with some Gershwin is a draw solo by Karen and Richard's rendition of the Warsaw Concerto. While these tunes were entertaining live they grow tedious after a few listenings on record. A rather poor choice of material. Added to this are a few of the Carpenters album cuts. At best these tunes are nothing more than album filler.

there is one moment worth waiting for on this album. Mixing Cole Porter's "From This Moment On" with a Bach prelude the Carpenters come up with an interesting piece. it's unfortunate that the Carpenters don't display more imagination on the act as they do with this tune. Another mistake was to leave off their encore tune. Like the above cut this tune combines two tunes, "Good Vibrations" and "Coming Through The Rye".

if you caught the Carpenters' special you might remember Karen and John Denver duetion to this tune. it was the high point of the special and would have been the high point on Live at the Palladium. Well, maybe the next time.

Landmark Snoring Case Goes Uncontested

(CPS)--Harris Robinson's wife described her husband's snoring as "a long, rolling sound, like thunder in the distance. There is a second of silence, and then it begins all over again."

Her neighbors agreed so roundly that they hired a lawyer who in a letter to the Robinsons stated that the neighbors had been unable to sleep due to the proximity of the houses and "loud snoring in your bedroom."

"I feel my client has adequate grounds to ask the court for injunctive relief," the attorney threatened.

Robinson woke up long enough to defend his rights as a snoring human being, however. He hired his own lawyer, who challenged the neighbors' attorney to find the authority to compel Robinson to cease his nasal emissions.

"If you can, . . . it will be welcome news indeed for housewives all over the world," he brayed.

No further legal action ensued.

Pride and Experience: Hallmark of UNC-W Police

R. S. Kinsman

Chief C.N. Long of the UNC-W Security Force is a proud man. He is proud of the force he commands and like many police chiefs, proud of the people he protects.

"The finest students in the entire North Carolina university system are right here," the chief declares. "And, I base that on personal observation of student bodies from the Western Border to the coastal Plains."

If every police force must have a mission, Chief Long believes his Force's mission is "to keep the kids out of the local courts and studiously on campus." The chief firmly believes the Security Force is fulfilling this responsibility.

"Safety of the student body, which includes approximately 1,000 living on campus is, of course, of paramount importance. We detail three patrolmen at night whose primary duties is to watch over dormitory live-ins as well as the security of buildings and grounds," the chief explained.

"Our biggest problem here is illegal parking," Chief Long emphasizes. To augment the regular patrolmen, three students are employed as "Ticket writers" for parking violators. Chief Long points out if the occasion arises where big-city police methods are required, his force has the background and experience to deal with most situations. The majority of the Force has several years in civilian police work.

"Everyone on the Force is an experienced police officer, including our only woman, patrolman Dorothy Beatty," the chief smilingly boasts. Like several others of the local force, Patrolman Beatty is a former member of the Wilmington Police Department.

Chief Long spent 17 years on that Force, and second-in-command at UNC-W. Lieutenant Dave Gurganov, served 13 years with Wilmington Police before joining Chief Long about three years ago.

Additionally, each Security Force member attends specialized police training before actually assuming duties on campus. According to Chief Long, the courses range from basic police recruit school at Cape Fear Technical Institute to marksmanship indoctrination with various small arms at the Wilmington Police Department range. The officers also attend the Justice Academy at Salem, N.C., as their duties permit.

In addition to the pride he shows in the Security Force and student body here, Chief Long also proudly discusses the association he enjoyed with his predecessor, Chief Brantly Dillon, chief Dillon retired here two years ago.

Robinson Resigns Position

SGA President Duffy Robinson submitted his resignation to Student Affairs Chancellor William Malloy Monday morning, effective at 5:00 p.m. February 14, 1977. This late development was announced after publishing deadlines and was not included in the following story.

Vice-President Paul Morgan Laird has assumed the office of president and will preside until the Spring elections on March 17 and 18.

By Bobby Parker

SGA President William "Duffy" Robinson was impeached by the Student Senate last Thursday night on seven counts of maladministration and non-performance of duty. There were only two dissenting votes on the impeachment motion, which was similar to a motion that was rejected by one vote at the February 3 meeting of the Senate.

Robinson did not attend the meeting, which included a lengthy discussion, point by point, of each indictment. Originally, there were ten counts on the petition bill, but three were struck down because they lacked solid bases, according to a majority of senators.

Freshman President Glen Downs moved for impeachment and presented the various charges. Saying that "we should take each one . . . on an individual basis," he called for discussion of each count to insure that each charge was viable enough to warrant prosecution of the President.

Sophomore Senator Greta Lint proposed an additional charge which would state that Robinson has violated his oath of office. However, after much debate, the Senate concurred that this additional count is not necessary since it is contingent upon the validity of the other charges.

Discussion began on the first charge, which alleges that Robinson has failed to appoint student members to the Curriculum Committee, and the second charge, which states the same with regards to the Calendar Committee.

Senior Senator Tom Raines pointed out that Robinson had encountered difficulty in finding students to accept committee appointments. But Sen. Lint noted that Mrs. Betty Jo Welch, chairman of the curriculum committee had asked her to serve on that committee and had sent her name to Robinson. Robinson did not bring Lint's name before the Senate, and she was not approved to sit on the committee.

Sophomore President Karin Whaley said that Robinson had appointed two students to the Calendar Committee, but that one of them is no longer enrolled at UNC-W.

Of the charge which said that

Robinson has not represented the student body at the meetings of the Student Affairs Committee, Pres. Whaley, who is a member of that committee, stated "that's fact."

The fourth charge of the indictment concerned Robinson's actions at a meeting of the Board of Trustees. Senators noted that this would be difficult to prove since administration officials would not testify against Robinson in a trial, as they would not publicize and student

The lack of appointees to fill the Student Superior Court was also listed as an indictment. Noting that one justice graduated in December and two more vacancies remain, the senators were also reminded that Robinson had nominated two justices subject to Senate confirmation at the Feb. 3 meeting.

Sen. Lint stated that "the only reason" for those appointments in the impeachment trial which will go before the court. Sophomore Senator Ken Lilly stated "I have heard (Robinson) has tried to appoint students to this court," but the appointments were refused.

But Pres. Whaley added that "it is the duty of the president to appoint students to this court. He's had all year to appoint these people . . . that's what's impeachable."

The Senate joined two charges which both concerned the Administrative Assistant of the SGA. Pres. Whaley charged that "She hasn't been around; she doesn't know us," noting that the Assistant should serve as a liaison between outgoing and incoming administrations.

One clause of this charge stated that the Assistant has become Robinson's "personal secretary," but Sen. Lilly suggested that this be dropped because the Assistant does not work exclusively for the President. Again, the question of University administrators having to testify against Robinson surfaced, and the charges were reworded to eliminate that possibility. Sen. Lint stated that "it is our (the students') problem . . . since (Robinson) is a student, it is our responsibility."

Concerning the administration of the state purchasing system, which governs SGA funds, Concert Committee chairman William O'Quinn stated that its administration was not Robinson's responsibility. The impeachment motion had charged Robinson with creating confusion by poorly administering this system.

O'Quinn was joined by Freshman Francis DeLuca in suggesting that any delays in purchases with SGA funds is caused by the heads of various organizations, not Robinson. There was some discussion as to whether Robinson or SGA

Dean Helena Cheek: More Than A Dean

by Cindy Shell

"Every day brings something different. You never know what to expect; that's what's so interesting about the job." The job is Dean of Students and Helena Cheek is proud to fill it. In her job she deals with student problems, counselling orientation, extra-curricular activities, graduation, dormitory discipline—the list seems endless.

A handsome woman with short, greying hair and glasses Helena Cheek has a ready laugh and a willing ear. Her avid love is shell collecting in which she often indulges at her Topsail Beach vacation home.

With shells collected on the beaches, she has embedded the top of a coffee table; Mr. Cheek is putting a shell mosaic on the outside of the house.

The two prefer spending their weekends at the cottage but this year's severe winter has kept them from doing so. In the summer they often commute to Wilmington.

A French and Spanish major, Dean Cheek met her husband while attending Mary Baldwin University in Virginia. At the time he was teaching French and Spanish.

The couple moved to Wilmington where Mr. Cheek was offered a job at Wilmington College. When he left the University to work in public school administration, Mrs. Cheek applied for and received his job teaching French and Spanish.

she taught fulltime until 1965, when she became Dean of Women. Five years ago that title changed to Dean of Students, one she shares with Dean Ralph Parker. Since that time she has obtained her master's degree in administration from East Carolina University.

At home, the Cheek's often converse in French or Spanish. Their son, a Spanish major, joining in these conversations. The Cheeks love to travel. One of their favorite places is the Caribbean, where they have visited four times. The beautiful shell-laden beaches have no doubt influenced Dean Cheek's preference.

Gazing wistfully out the office window, she spoke of the 80 degree weather there and the 78 degree water, with just enough breeze to keep everyone cool.

Aside from her demanding work as dean, she has continued to teach one class each semester. "I love teaching. It's different kind of contact with the students (than that of dean) and I enjoy both types."

SGA Elections

Students wishing to file for SGA office should do so prior to Wednesday, Feb. 23. Interested students should sign up in the Student Activities Office on the first floor of the Student Union. Elections will be held on March 17 and 18.

Opinion

Senate Meeting A Welcome Change

Much has been said in derogation of the Student Senate this academic year. There have been charges of legislative inactivity, self-interest, and lack of enthusiasm levied against senators and officers at all levels.

But Thursday night's Senate meeting at which an impeachment resolution was passed against SGA President Duffy Robinson was a refreshing and welcome change from any Senate session that we have seen this year.

Previous meetings have often times been little more than a one-ring circus. Two or three senators would bring up matters for discussion, five or six would carry the bulk of the discussion, and the rest were little more than dead weight.

Perhaps it was the seriousness of the situation, or maybe it was in repudiation of the indignation this body suffered at the hands of President Robinson at the meeting prior to The one that caused this change.

It is our guess that both of these factors played an important role in the revitalization of the Senate, but in conjunction with one other pertinent condition. That is, a desire to counter all the recent bad publicity the Senate has received and set itself back on the track on its original purpose.

This paper will not offer its opinion on the guilt or innocence of President Robinson; that is for the court to decide.

We will, however, be watching to see that the impeachment proceedings are conducted in a manner which upholds the principles of fairness, integrity, and complete openness that should surround all student government procedures. The Senate meeting of last week is consistent with those principles.

WEEKLY SPECIAL

Oil Companies Hold Back Gas

by Jack Anderson
with Joe Spear

WASHINGTON — Though denials are ringing throughout Capitol Hill hallways, the natural gas companies can't seem to allay suspicions that they are deliberately withholding supplies to force up prices.

We have been able to confirm that gas wells have been capped and the gas held in the ground. The federal government has evidence showing Gulf Oil Company has withheld gas from needy customers up north. Shell Oil has an incredible two trillion cubic feet of gas in its reserves. Both companies have cited technical problems as an excuse for holding back the flow of gas.

Both Gulf and Shell have also been accused of illegally keeping gas off the market. Yet the Federal Power Commission hasn't shown any interest in pressing charges so far. And the Justice Dept. has been even less enthusiastic about prosecuting the gas hoarders.

Some congressmen believe that the failure to regulate the industry is really responsible for the gas crisis. The way they see it, the gas companies were led to believe that deregulation was right around the corner. Former Interior Secretary Rogers Morton actually told a group of oil executives in the White House: "Our mission is to serve you, not regulate you."

Capitol Hill insiders believe the gas companies have been encouraged to hold back their supplies and wait for higher prices. Now, several congressmen, led by Rep. John Moss, D-Calif., are urging the new attorney general, Griffin Bell, to prosecute the big gas companies. This will do more to stimulate the flow of gas, they believe, than any other action.

We have also learned that Interior Secretary Cecil Andrus is investigating charges of price.

A task force investigating team was dispatched to the U.S. Geological Survey office in Metairie, La. There the investigators will pore over information collected on oil and gas reserves. But Andrus is skeptical of even the government's own information. The problem is that the government's figures are supplied by the oil and gas industry, gouging by the gas producers. Sources at Interior told us that Andrus demanded a special task force report within a week. The investigation is being ramrodded by a former Federal Power Commission economist named David Schwartz. Schwartz has a reputation as a tough investigator who is skeptical of the oil and gas crowd.

Group Aids Small Businesses

From the UNC-W Alumni Bulletin

Students enrolled in the Small Business Management class offered by the Department of Business and Economics at the University of North Carolina at Wilmington are putting theory into practice through their participation in the Small Business Institute—a cooperative venture of the UNC-W Department of Business and Economics and the United States Small Business Administration.

Established to encourage better communications and to promote the exchange of ideas between the local business community and the university, the institute has two major objectives: "to provide a real-life learning environment for UNC-W business students" and "to provide management assistance or counseling to local businesses."

Dr. Stephen C. Harper, who directs the institute, said, "Even though textbooks, discussion groups and lectures can provide students with a basic understanding of economics, accounting, finance, marketing and management, evidence indicates that a firsthand exposure to business operations facilitates a more thorough understanding of the complexities associated with managing a business. Accordingly, the students participating in the institute are provided with a practical environment for supplementing or complementing the theory presented in the academic environment.

Commenting on the value of the program to local businesses, Dr. Harper remarked, "It has been said that it is hard enough for a business to make a profit during favorable economic conditions and that during unfavorable economic conditions management has to do all that it can just to keep the business going. Accordingly, it is during times like these that many managers may desire additional help in the management of their business."

"The Small Business Institute has been established to provide this additional management assistance, in general or in specific areas, free of charge to members of the business community who are seeking advice or an outsider's point of view," he said. "Even though businesses have problems will particularly benefit from the services being offered, any business interested in having an outsider's view of its operations should also find use of the institute beneficial."

The only criterion for selecting firms for participation in the program is that the managers of the business be receptive to members of a student team asking questions about the nature and operations of the business. When the businessman makes the request for assistance, he is contacted by the instructor of the Small Business Management Class and informed of the nature of the program and the period of time that the students will be available. The scheduling of mutually convenient interview sessions is then determined by the manager and a student team assigned by the instructor.

The student teams are composed of two or three members depending upon the size of the firm requesting assistance and the nature of its operations.

By the end of the fall semester, the UNC-W Small Business Institute had provided assistance for over a dozen businesses. The participating organizations were involved in manufacturing, wholesaling, retailing and service organizations and ranged in size from two to almost one hundred employees.

SGA Hears Committee Reports and Discusses Changes In Requirements For Office

By Bobby Parker

In addition to the passage of an impeachment indictment against SGA President Duffy Robinson, the Student Senate heard several committee reports and discussed a change in the requirements for holding SGA office.

Student Activities Director Al Harris relayed a message from President Robinson concerning Administrative Assistant Donna Simmons. Harris stated that Ms. Simmons had been absent from the SGA office for two weeks due to illness, and that she would return to work this week.

Chairman Francis DeLuca of the Investigating Committee reported that he had looked into the possibility of having the gym open on Saturdays. He said that Athletic Director Bill Brooks had indicated that if enough students used the gym on Saturdays, arrangements could be made.

Sophomore Secretary Cindy Buxton gave her findings on the matter of vending machines for the library. Buxton stated that she had talked with Mr. William Smith of the library staff, and he had said that the machines would not "be advisable" because of the disturbance they would cause and the lack of an appropriate area to house the machines.

Senior President Clay Fairley presented a revised charter from the Baha'i Club, which was approved with little debate. The Senate had earlier this year rejected the club's charter.

Freshman Secretary Tom Witner moved that the Senate change the constitutional requirement that any SGA officer must maintain a 2.0 GPA. Senior Senator Bob Brownings said that senators should have to maintain a good grade average.

But Freshman President Glen Downs argued that "there are cases where this 2.0 average is not good." Downs pointed specifically to a student who he had wanted to appoint to fill a vacancy, but who did not have a 2.0 average. He added that the constitution test is a sufficient requirement for SGA officers.

Sophomore President Karin Whaley and Senator Greta Lint advocated the retention of the grade requirement. But spectator Ray Warren countered that "it's not the Senate's place to force a student to be academic."

On a roll call vote, the motion to strike the requirement was defeated by a 9-6 count.

Senator Lint moved that the SGA adopt the academic standards of eligibility of the University as its criteria for SGA offices. The motion was tabled until the next meeting.

President Whaley announced the appointment of Tom Hunt to be Sophomore Vice-President. In a suspension of the rules, Hunt was sworn in and took his seat in the Senate.

Robinson's Resignation Follows Impeachment

Treasurer Mark Wax should oversee these purchases. It was noted that Wax had held a meeting early in the year to explain the system to the organization leaders, but less than half of those attended.

"You're going to have to decide," O'Quinn stated, "if it should be (Robinson's) responsibility."

The indictment involving the purchasing system was stricken from the bill of impeachment.

The tenth charge on the original motion said Robinson "has brought disrepute to his office and to the entire SGA by his actions at the Senate meeting of February 3." After discussion, the Senate decided it would be more appropriate to pass a resolution of censure rather than keep the charge as an impeachable offense.

Before the vote was taken, Sen. DeLuca urged the senators to think carefully about the impeachment. He cited a letter in last week's Seahawk that labeled Robinson "a scapegoat" for the Senate. Sen. DeLuca added, "if we clean up ourselves, then we can go on with impeachment."

But Sen. Lint countered, saying "I think that this Senate has done more than our president. In view of that, we can vote on the motion."

Before the roll call vote, Pres. Downs read the final draft of the seven agreed-upon impeachment allegations.

SGA Secretary Tracy Miller recorded the vote as follows:

Yes - Bob Browning, Tom Raines, Bobby McQueen, Keith Hedrick, Greta Lint, Ken Lilly, Doug Shackelford, Clay Fairley, Karin Whaley, Cindy Buxton, Tom Hunt, Glen Downs, Parks Griffin, and Tom Witner.

No - Kent Wiggins and Francis DeLuca.

Senators Fairley, Raines, and DeLuca reversed their votes of a week ago, and Sen. Lint changed her vote from her abstention to an affirmative one.

Senators Dawn Brickley, Paul Walker, Carol Rains, and Scott Olsen were absent from the meeting. Walker had voted "no" last week, Rains and Olsen, "yes". Brickley was also absent last week.

Dr. Frank Hall to Lecture the History of the State

by Katherine Stiles

"The concept of the modern state does not exist prior to end of the Middle Ages". Says Dr. B. Frank Hall, who will speak on "The State form Dante to Louis the XIV."

The lecture will be given Wed. Feb. 16, in King Hall auditorium on the UNC-W campus at 8:00 p.m.

Dr. Hall gave a summation of his topic in brief: "The concept of the modern State began," explained Hall, "with Dante, who suggested the idea that God's sovereignty over all peoples is exercised not through the church alone."

The philosophical development of man during this period of history, is seen by following the history of France from first, Louis IX, Saint Louis, remembered as a monarch of medieval chivalry through Louis XI.

Louis XI, the "Spider King," who enfolded the minor nobles in his web. The third monarch in this historical series was Louis XII who began subjugating great Dukes to his rule.

"The modern state," concluded Hall, "is the product of these philosophic and historical developments."

The lecture is part of the UNC-W Faculty Lectures which are offered weekly during the spring semester for the Wilmington community. The series is open to the public free of charge.

University Theater Presents "The Misanthrope", February 18-21st

Wouldn't it be fun to peek in on the gaudy court of Louis XIV? You can—at the University Theater's production of Molière's The Misanthrope.

It opens Feb. 18 in the SRO theater and runs through the 21st. Performances begin at 8:15 and are free to UNC-W students. An admission of $1 is charged to others. Reservations can be made by calling 791-4330, ext. 332.

In The Misanthrope, Molière basically wanted to depict the different types of characters found in Louis XIV's court. The people were artificial and had peculiar etiquettes and manners.

The courtiers were fashionable and placed great value in outward appearances. Their mode of dress was ornate, with elaborate wigs a part of their costume.

"Misanthrope" means one who distrusts all people. Within the court, one man's beliefs contrast sharply with the general attitude of the time. Alceste (the misanthrope) convictions about truth clash with his artificial surroundings. Making the situation worse, he falls in love with the court's leading coquette, Celimere.

A French play, The Misanthrope is basically a comedy with some elements of farce. Terry Rogers, the director, adds, "It's a thinking man's comedy."

As part of their senior project as drama majors, Tim Wesner (Alceste) and Sheryl Moore (Celimere) are doing research on all aspects of this play.

Some of the other actors are: Ed Danilowicz (Philinte), John Potter (Acaste), Sharon Pierson (Eliante), and Leslie Jordan (Oronte).

When asked if the play would be suited for the SRO Theater, Rogers replied, "The play needs audience contact. The closeness and intimacy of the SRO provides this. It is the perfect play for that particular theater."

The Misanthrope was chosen by the University Theater for two reasons: it presents the present drama students with a style of production they have not done before; and it fits the university curriculum, in that Molière's The Misanthrope is taught as part of an English course.

Molière's The Misanthrope was first performed in France in 1666. The script used for UNC-W's production was translated by a professor at Florida State University. This will be the second performance of this original translation.

Jimmy Buffet Appears in Brogden Hall

Once again, Jimmy Buffett returns to Wilmington to play Brogden Hall. Feb. 27, 1977, at 8:00 p.m.

Buffett is currently on tour to promote his latest album. He's back with more good music and more good times for all.

Buffett and his band, the Coral Reefer Band, have produced another collection of good country-flavored tunes, poetic ballads and humorous songs on "Changing in Lattitudes, Changing in Attitudes." The Key West Wizard and company are still living up to their promise of making each album better than the last.

If you haven't become a believer yet, come on out to Brogden Hall. Feb. 27, at 8:00 p.m. and try some Buffett for yourself. Tickets are on sale in the Pub from 10:00 to 2:30 p.m. Monday thru Friday. Prices are $4.50 and $5.00 for students (with valid ID) and $5.50 and $6.00 for the general public. Don't miss it!

Yarbrough and Cowan Join N.C. Symphony

RALEIGH, N.C.—Joan Yarbrough and Robert Cowan, considered by many to be America's premiere husband and wife duo-piano team, will tour with the North Carolina Symphony during the months of February and March.

Under the baton of Maestro John Gosling, Yarbrough and Cowan will join the Symphony for six performances. Two concerts will be given in Raleigh Memorial Auditorium, Feb. 20 at 3:30 p.m. and Feb. 21 at 8:15 p.m. The duo's next appearance will be in Wilmington at 8:15 p.m. on Feb. 24 in Kenan Aud. On March 2 at 8:15 p.m., they will play in the High Point Theatre and on March 6 at 3:30 p.m. in the New Bern H.S. Aud. Season memberships will be honored for each of these performances.

For their appearances with the North Carolina Symphony, Yarbrough and Cowan will be performing Poulenc's "Concerto for Two Pianos and Orchestra." A recording of this work, featuring the couple with the New Philharmonia Orchestra of London, will be released later this year.

Acclaimed by critics throughout the world, this fine team has appeared in 30 states, in Europe, and in Mexico. Travelling with their own seven-foot Hamburg Steinways in an especially constructed trailer, they have made over 300 appearances of various types including those with orchestra, at colleges and universities, as artists-in-schools, and at master classes.

SEAHAWKSPORTS

Hawks Roll Over

Pembroke, Baptist

After suffering a 73-60 loss to South Carolina State, the UNC-W Seahawks have bounced back with two convincing wins over Pembroke State and Baptist College.

In a widely publicized matchup, the Hawks met rival Pembroke State last Thursday at Hanover Hall, downing them 81-69. Earlier in the season, UNC-W downed the Braves 86-59 at Pembroke. This time, however, PSU was carrying a five game win streak, and was out for vengeance. UNC-W held fast, thought, to defeat their local rival before an enthusiastic home crowd.

Last Saturday, the Seahawks traveled to Charleston, S.C. to face Baptist College, the school were both head coach Mel Gibson and assistant coach Calvin Bayley taught before coming to Wilmington. In a game where, as usual, UNC-W dominated the boards, the Hawks won 98-78. Billy Martin led the scoring with 23 points. Former Baptist standout Denny Fields followed with 20 points, with Bobby Martin contributing 15 to the winning effort.

Fields tied Dave Wolff for the most rebounds at 13. The Hawks grabbed an amazing 57 rebounds, compared to 34 for Baptist College.

On Monday, the Seahawks played host to Atlantic Christian college. While the Wilmington squad proved the winner in the first outing, ACC has been playing much better ball of late and has added several new players to the roster. Details of the game are not available at this writing.

Luckily, UNC-W has had little trouble with injuries this year. The one exception has been the injury to Jim Brogren, the Hawk's starting point guard. "Though not a big scorer, Jim is a team leader, a defensive specialist, and a great all-around player", commented Coach Gibson on his injured senior. Brogren's place in the line-up is being filled by freshman John McPhaul, with McPhaul and Billy Martin handling the point guard duties.

At this writing, which is just before the ACC game, the Seahawks are 13-8. No matter what happens in the final two weeks of the season, UNC-W is guaranteed at least a .500 season. If they win against ACC, then they are guaranteed a winning season in their first year of competition in NCAA Division I, quite a notable accomplishment.

After the ACC game, the Seahawks have four games left. Three of those come on a six-day road trip into Georgia and Florida, where the Hawks will face three very tough opponents-Stetson, Georgia Tech, and Georgia Southern. The final game of the season will be a home contest Feb. 25 against Mercer University.

Basketball Bounces Into Brilliance

UNCW's basketball Seahawks have proved a pleasant surprise in their first year of NCAA Division I competition.

For most basketball teams, the rookie season in Division I is an unforgettable one, and I don't mean because of their many victories. For most, that first season is a rude awakening of what basketball play with the "big boys" is really like. A break-even record is very difficult, and in the majority of cases losses greatly outnumber victories.

The Seahawks, however, have been pleasant exception. Even if they lose the rest of their games, they will post a .500 record. There is an excellent chance that the Seahawks will finish with a winning record, however, possibly somewhere around 16-10 by my guesstimation.

Besides sporting an excellent win-loss, UNC-W is also placing high in national statistics. The Hawks are leading the nation in field goal shooting percentage as a team, and are ranked among the top ten in rebounding. Center Denny Fields is leading the nation with his individual field goal shooting percentages.

I would be lying if I said that Fields was not probably the team's most valuable player. Not only is he the team's leading scorer, but he is also one of the leading rebounders on the squad. An example of his dominance is the UNC-charlotte game, where he scored 27 points in the first half to keep his team in striking instance of the powerful forty-niners. It took a special defense to stop Fields and the rest of the Hawks from scoring one of the biggest upsets of the year.

If Fields is the star, though, he has one of the best supporting casts of any team I've seen. The squad has tremendous depth, and Coach Gibson freely substitutes. In fact for the better part of the first half of the season, every team member was playing in every game.

No doubt about it, this year has been an exceptional one for the basketball Seahawks. And with only two seniors graduating, the outlook is future years says more of the same.

Jones Works Hard

By Barry Cooper

UNC-Wilmington forward Delaney Jones says college basketball is much tougher than it is in high school, and the 6-foot-5 Elizabethtown native is working hard to improve his game.

"I think I could do better," he said in a recent interview. "I have been in a slump lately. But I'm hoping to start playing better soon. If the boys stay behind me, and push me, I think I will come out of it."

Jones has been a steady player for the Seahawks, and though he came from a small high school (East Bladen), he has shown the ability to hold his own in Division I competition.

"That's the way I like it," he said when questioned about the Seahawk's tough schedule. "It's not as rough as I thought it was going to be. I thought that it was going to be real rough."

The Seahawks recently lost to Division I power UNC-Charlotte, and Jones had hoped that UNC-W would win.

"My biggest thrill (in his two-year career) was playing against UNC-Charlotte," he said. "It's (Charlotte) a nice place to play. The people treated us nice. I was hoping that we would win, though. We gave them a pretty good game. It could have been closer if we hadn't committed so many turnovers."

The Seahawks have been attracting good crowds lately, and that pleases Jones. "We have had almost a full house for all of our recent games," he said. "I hope they come see us in our new gym, especially when we play the big teams."

The Still Point Cohabitation-- Part Two

Vivan Martindale
Campus Minister

Last week's Seahawk was cramped for space so only the first part of the cohabitation article was printed. The following portion deals with some of the legal aspects of living together. Many people are unaware that Cohabitation is illegal in most states including North Carolina.

Living together is often seen as an easy in, easy out situation with few strings attached and little obligation. "But no string is a two-edged sword. The freedom may be greater, but under the law your risk of getting ripped off is considerably greater." (Cohabitation Handbook: Ten Speed Press.)

"Whether you make it a weekend affair, a nine month arrangement just off campus or a year in year out thing there are legal implications to living together. Many issues arise, not the least of which concern debts, children, paternity, abortion property and investments. The ambiguity of the law is so great in this area that enforcement and prosecution are usually left to the discretion (or whim) of the local police and judges. Currently there appears to be an informal moratorium on enforcement of the law unless complaints are filed if you are busted for something else and they throw in cohabitation for extra measure. However, it might be well noted that those most sought after are in the young adult, student category (some cases of harassment rumored to be reported around Charlotte) and the elderly who find it most economical to live together as singles. Mid-aged working class persons appear to be least hassled except in cases of legal complaints by either party or an existing third party (e.g. husband or wife). It is a complex situation which finds a great deal of discomfort and inequity under the law. Women most often lose out on property rights and men lose out in relationships with children. Very sadly both are often used as bargaining power in settling disputes.

Keep the North Carolina cohabitation law in mind and ask yourself some question before you slide into the situation.

It is a crime in North Carolina for an unmarried couple to live together. To convict someone of this crime, the State must show:

1. that the defendant was not married to (name of partner);
2. That the defendant had sexual intercourse with (name of partner) between (name approximate dates);

3. That the sexual intercourse was habitual; and
4. that the defendant and (name of partner) were living together in the manner of husband and wife.

It would also be helpful to bounce some ideas and feeling off an objective third party (you might call it Pre-Relationship Counseling.) Finally, read anything on "alternate life styles." These are a lot of things coming out on the market but pay particular attention to these two:

1. Cohabitation Handbook: Living Together and The Law, Morgan D. King (Ten Speed Press, Berkeley, CA. 1975.) King is a lawyer, lecturer, writer, and a member of the State Bar of California.
2. North Carolina Tenants Handbook: ed. Peter W. Brown (North Carolina Public Inter.

Speed Reading Course to be Taught in Wilmington

The Southern Reading Lab is offering their famous speed reading course to a limited number of qualified people here in the Wilmington area. The average person who completes this course can read 5-8 times faster, and with substantially improved comprehension and better concentration.

The famous course has taught many thousands of people to read over 1,000 words per minute with the ability to understand and retain what they have read much more effectively. Average graduates can read most novels in less than one hour. In rare instances speeds of up to 20 times faster have been documented.

For complete details about this famous speed reading course be sure to attend one of the free one-hour orientation lectures that have been scheduled.

These lectures are open to the public, above age 13 (persons under 18 should be accompanied by a parent, if possible.) and the course will be explained in complete detail, including class schedules, instruction procedures and a tuition that is much less than similar courses.

These meetings will be held in the "Executive Conference Room" of the Holiday Inn, 4903 Market Street, on Monday, February 14 at 6:30 p.m. and again at 8:30 p.m. Wednesday, February 16 at 6:30 p.m. and again at 8:30 p.m. Friday, Feb. 18 at 6:30 p.m. Saturday, Feb. 19 at 1:30 p.m. and again at 3:30 p.m. TWO FINAL MEETINGS will be held on Sunday, Feb. 20 at 1:30 p.m. and again at 3:30 p.m.

Classes are limited and class places will be filled on a first come-first serve basis only. Be sure to attend the earliest meeting possible to insure a class place. Group rates are available upon request.

Album titles: Wings From the Wings-Idle Mind
Wings Over America -Capital

Article title: A real Live Winged Beate

It is to Paul McCartney's credit that he has not dwelled on his past achievements as a Beatle. On the other hand Paul has never denied being a Beatle unlike John and George. Harrison's American tour suffered greatly from his determination to forget the past. Lennon in turn has often been too self-indulgent in his music to allow the past to appear. Paul however has continued to produce music that allows his creativity to show through and at the same time entertain his fans. Part of his success is due to his ability to draw from his past.

The recent Wings tour marked the first solo appearance by McCartney in front of an American audience. Paul is also the last of the Beatles to do this. The one thing that separated his performance from his ex-mates is showmanship.

To capture some of the fun Capital has released a three record set from the tour. Much to Capital's dismay bootleggers had released in at least fourteen different forms various live shows. The best of the boots was a three record set, Wings From the Wings, on Idle Mind. It is because of this bootleg that Capital released a three record set instead of the single or double that originally was planned.

In terms of recording quality the Capital set is much better than the Idle Mind set. This is not too surprising when you consider the Idle Mind album was done on the fly. Several times the Idle Mind album fade away. There is also the occasional audience member talking into the mike by accident. This becomes annoying with repeated hearings. By recording from the stage Capital has eliminated audience noise except for the occasional applause. Unfortunately Capital has also deleted the pattern of McCartney's song intros. Luckily Idle Mind has caught much of these intros and has allowed them to remain on record.

Idle Mind has recorded the entire Los Angeles concert while Capital has used cuts from Los Angeles and other places. With WFTW you get the last concert of the American tour. Except for McCartney, the rest of the band sounds a bit tired. At times the harmonies are a little off. However there is a rather fun feeling added to the whole proceedings. In his intros McCartney takes time to explain dedications (including one to Carl Worthington, a local car salesman.) crack a dirty joke (to which his wife, Linda, pretends to be shocked) sings the intro to the theme from the Monkees, and explains the function of the rhythm box. This may not sound like any big thing, but it does add more of a concert feeling to the albums. Capital's set is well recorded, but lacks any feeling. It is just a set of live cuts with no real connection to each other.

Both albums have the same tunes. McCartney has picked material from his singles, five cuts from the Beatles' stock, and cuts from his last three albums. Outside of "Maybe I'm Amazed" he has avoided using any material from his first three solo albums. This is most likely due to the material's weakness and a desire to push his more recent music. Of all the cuts the Beatles' tunes get the biggest hand. "Yesterday" is definitely the high point of the concert if applause is the judging factor.

Wings has no trouble recreating the music they have done in the studio. Besides McCartney playing various instruments there is Linda on keyboards, Denny Laine (Rhythmes with Penny Lane.) an ex-Moody Blues on guitar and piano, Jimmy McCulloch of Thunderclap Newman fame on guitar and Joe English a session man on drums. Everyone in the band sings. Added to this is a quarter of horns. One of the horn players, Howie Casey, provides a bit of irony to the situation. Before the Beatles made it big Alan Williams (The Beatles' early manager,) sent them over to play in Hamburg, Germany. This evidently upset Casey (Whose band was also managed by Williams,) because Hamburg was good to the Liverpool hands. Casey told Williams that a "lousy band like the Beatles would only mess things up in Hamburg." Wonder what it was that changed Casey's mind?

In concert Wings started out with songs from the recent albums. A couple of Beatle tunes are performed before Wings settles into their acoustic set. The only tune that falls short in this part is Paul Simon's "Richard Cory" Why they ever bothered to do this old warhorse is quite a mystery. It does provide an occasion to drop John Dever's name in as a joke. "I've Just Seen A Face" gets quite a hand and was a good choice for this section of the show. McCartney carries on solo with "Blackbird" and "Yesterday."

Plugging in again Wings returns with more electric music. Most of this is again picked from the Wings albums. At the Los Angeles concert Denny Laine did the only version of "Go Now," an old Moody Blues hit, in America. Too bad Jimmy McCulloch wasn't allowed to give us the old Thunderclap Newman tune "Something In The Air". The concert finally winds up with some of Wings' heavier rock tunes. "Soily" is the final tune and also the only Wings tune never previously recorded.

To cut down on sales loss Capital has set the FBI on the tracks of bootleggers. This may make finding Wings from the Wings a little hard. If you are a McCartney fan or even a fan of Wings it is well worth the search. Until you find it you can at least enjoy the music on Wings Over America.

One final note, the Idle Mind set is a bicentennial collection which comes in red, white, and blue plastic. The Capital set has some nice art work on the labels, but the cover and poster work is awful. You might recall some of the recent art work that has graced recent Beatle albums on Capital. You think that if they were so worried about album sales that they might take more care in the packaging.

Dorms Close Over Weekend

By Bobby Parker

"A royal flush beats a full house."

So said a bumper sticker on the back of a sewer repairman's truck that was conspicuously present on UNC-W's campus Thursday afternoon.

And University administrators evidently had that idea in mind—to empty the house and give it a royal flush—when they decided to close the dormitories last weekend and cancel Friday classes.

There had been no water in the dorms since late Wednesday afternoon. Students had been using facilities in the gym for showers and other necessities. But when it was discovered on Thursday that the sewer could not be repaired in a short period of time, the Office of Student Affairs and other officials decided to cancel classes and close the dorm for sanitary reasons.

A state of confusion permeated the residence halls as students were asked to leave the buildings as soon as possible Thursday afternoon. With students whose homes are more than three hundred miles away in some cases, there obviously had to be an alternative solution than home.

Deans of Students Helena

Cheek and Ralph Parker said that they were still receiving calls on Friday from people who were offering accommodations for residence students. Many students were housed in the homes of such Good Samaritans.

Other students were offered beds in the homes of faculty and staff members. Chancellor William Waggoner and Student Activities Director Al Harris were among those who accommodated students.

"We had more beds available than we needed," commented Dean Cheek.

Dean Parker added that "we did have accommodations" for all who were left without rooms. Parker also noted that overall student cooperation with the situation was excellent.

Deans Cheek and Parker, along with other officials, remained at the dorms until late Thursday night to make sure that all students were aware of the situation. Dean Parker recalled one student who returned to the dorm late that night after several hours of studying in the library. The student was not aware of the problem, but accommodations were found for him.

The problem was concerned with the sewer line and affected both dorms, the marine science building, and the business building. It was corrected on Friday, but clean-up operations went on through the day.

The dorms were re-opened to students Saturday at noon, although most students did not return until Sunday.

"Most students just accepted it as a fact of life," said Dean Parker in summation of student reactions.

Once again it was proven that not even the high institutions of academia are immune to the fallacies of human technology. Mother Nature triumphs once more.

Paul Laird Assumes Office

by Bobby Parker

Paul Laird sat behind the desk as though he had been there for years. He seemed to fit in with the atmosphere of an SGA office, and it would have been hard to guess that he had held his position for only a week or so.

"I'm learning," Laird said when asked how he had adjusted to his sudden ascension from the office of vice-president to that of president. There is some argument as to whether his title is "president" or "acting president," but that does not matter—the job is the same either way. "Before, I dealt primarily with the Senate," Laird said of his transition. "I was not as familiar as I would like to have been" with the executive wing of the SGA, Laird continued.

Laird noted that he has been corresponding already with student governments at other campuses, and that he had received short notice of a meeting of the student officials of the sixteen UNC campuses to be held soon.

The new president will attend a meeting in Chapel Hill on March 18, along with the SGA president-elect, who will be chosen by that time. Laird added that he had met "briefly" with some of the student government leaders from other campuses at a meeting last year hosted by Chancellor William Waggoner. Laird indicated that he realizes he will have little time to implement any of his own proposals for the SGA in his short tenure.

"I'll have such a short time... before the elections," Laird said, "there's not too much that I could do."

He did, however, cite several things that he will be working on, among them a petition that he will circulate in support of beer and wine sales on university campuses. The petition is being circulated throughout the UNC system and will be presented before the North Carolina General Assembly if enough signatures are gathered.

Laird also stated that he is trying to gain understanding of the state purchasing system which governs SGA funds. There has been some confusion about the procedure of that system, and Laird indicated a desire to help correct it.

"I don't like to talk about what might have been," Laird said when asked about the defeat of an executive salary for the SGA president earlier this year.

Some students have argued that this salary would have provided an incentive for SGA President Duffy Robinson to be more active, and his impeachment and subsequent resignation could have been avoided.

Laird added that he supported the salary referendum and would recommend it for future administrations. He noted (See Laird, page 8)

Cap and Gown Procedure Slightly Different This Year

By Cindy Shell

Obtaining graduation caps and gowns will be a little different this year. The graduating student will go to the campus bookstore to try on sample caps and gowns to determine his size. The appropriate caps and gown will be issued on the spot from the abundant stock sent to the store.

In the past, students were measured, the sizes ordered and the caps and gowns were mailed to the school. Due to problems with this system, a new company and system are being used this semester.

According to Mr. Sisko, bookstore manager, caps and gowns should arrive around March 15, giving students until the first of April to be fitted. Gowns will be available during regular store hours.

Graduating seniors should watch for posters and Seahawk announcements concerning exact dates.

Cost of the caps and gowns was included in the fifteen-dollar graduation fee paid last semester. One need only sign a statement that the outfit has been received. Both cap and gown will then be the student's to keep.

Commencement is set for Sunday, May 15, at five o'clock with a rehearsal May 13, at ten o'clock in the pub. Approximately 345 students will be graduating.

The ceremony will take place outside in the center mall (the main courtyard) with Hoggard Hall as the stage. In case of rain, the ceremony will be in Hanover Hall. To date, no speakers have been chosen.

Dean Cheek reminds students that "As stated in the UNC-W catalogue, all May graduates must attend the graduation ceremony, unless excused by Vice Chancellor Malloy."

Retain Al Harris

There is a movement of sorts afoot on campus which calls itself RAH. That stands for Retain Al Harris, referring, of course, to our Student Activities Director.

This has been Mr. Harris' first year at UNC-W. He came on a one-year contract to replace former Director Linda Moore, who will return to Wilmington next fall after a leave of absence to further her education.

Mr. Harris has unquestionably done a good job over the past year. He has made his office and its resources completely accessible to all students. He has put great amounts of time into his work to support student organizations and activities.

Mr. Harris has established a rapport between himself and the various heads of student organizations such that he is not only an advisor, but a friend. He has demonstrated his interest in student welfare by regularly attending meetings of the Student Senate, and providing a weekly Student Activities Calendar for publication in the Seahawk.

It would be most unfortunate if this situation is turned into a popularity contest between Mr. Harris and Ms. Moore. Instead, administration officials should give serious consideration to another alternative: keeping both and dividing the responsibilities of the Student Activities Office between them.

Those responsibilities have grown with this University in the last few years. In addition to overseeing the work of the SGA, SUPB, campus media, and other committees and organizations, the Activities Director is in charge of the operation of the Pub. The job has been greatly expanded with the addition of food service to the Good Wood Tavern.

It is time that the Office of Student Activities become a two-person operation. The RAH movement deserves full student support.

Campus ERA Vote

The UNC-W campus Republicans are sponsoring a campus-wide vote of the Equal Rights Amendment, Wednesday and Thursday. You can vote in the cafeteria between 10:30 and 2:30 and then in the Pub between 2:30 and 5:00. The results will be sent to the North Carolina Senate before it votes on the ERA March 1 and 2. Therefore your vote will count! Please stop by and vote. Bring your I.D.

The SEAHAWK, the official newspaper of UNC-W students, is published weekly for Wednesday distribution. All articles should be in the Seahawk office by five on Friday.

Dorm Student Asks: "Why Me?"

Dear Editor:

Recently, I received a parking ticket for leaving my car in the Loading Zone in front of Galloway. When I took the ticket by the Security Office the next day, I asked why there were no 15 minute limit signs posted around the circle.

The officer I spoke with, Mr. Mintz, rudely informed me that the circle is a loading zone and not a parking place.

He also told me, again in a curt tone, that a car parked there for 1 minute can receive a ticket. (The officer who issued the ticket, Mr. Green, was much nicer when I spoke with him.)

What are we supposed to do? Many of us return to the dorm after a weekend at home. I'm sure that several of us have to make quite a few trips to get our cars unloaded. During this time, we can receive a ticket if our car has been there over 15 minutes.

Are we supposed to slowly drive our cars through the and throw our things out the window? Or, are we to leave our cars running while we try our hardest to unload our cars within the 15 minutes?

If we did the first, I suppose we could get a ticket for throwing objects from a moving vehicle; if we did the second, we might be charged with leaving our cars wide open to burglars.

Since no parking is allowed in the Zone, not even for 1 minute, I suggest that the circle be removed or closed to traffic. I do think something should be done. I have seen many cars parked in the circle without any sign of a ticket on them; these are the cars parked there every day!

Why does someone like me, who rarely if ever parks in the circle, have to be the one reprimanded for it? I also believe that a visitors parking lot should be established near the dorms. This would eliminate our parents receiving a ticket every time they pay us a visit. We students with cars have rights too. Thank you, Deidre A. DeVane

Work Together to Retain Al Harris

Whether or not most of the students realize it we have a serious problem afoot that is about to raise it's ugly head into the light. Our present Director of Student Activities, Al Harris who incidentally has been doing a fantastic job, has been working here on a one year contract that is presently running out.

Linda Moore, the former Director of Student Activities, will be returning next semester to resume her old position. If UNC-W is the progressive and growing university that it claims to be, it should realize that we cannot allow such a treasure as Al Harris to escape.

The position of Director of Student Activities is one that cannot be delegated to a single individual if UNC-W is to remain a thriving part of the UNC circuit. Al Harris has been doing a terrific job, but he is only human—he needs help.

The job is just too much for one person to handle. If Linda Moore is to come back and Al Harris is to leave, we shall still be left with the same problem.

There is, however, a simple solution. Expand the position of Director of Student Activities to a two-person job. With both Al Harris and Linda Moore occupying co-positions we believe that UNC-W will prosper and thrive as one of the best oriented and most active campuses in the nation.

We need Al Harris desperately and we want him to stay. He has done a lot for UNC-W and we cannot afford to lose him. If you feel as we do then join the R*A*H campaign. Let us all work together to Retain Al Harris and make UNC-W a nicer place to be.

ERA Group Plans Trip to Raleigh

The New Hanover County United for ERA has issued a statement announcing that supporters of the ERA will be traveling to Raleigh on Tuesday, March 1, and Wednesday, March 2, to hear the Senate debate and vote on the bill. The vote will take place on Wednesday.

Overnight accommodations are being offered by the League of Women Voters in the Raleigh area. For details on the trip, call Lora Lavin (799-2372) or Mary Cantwell (256-2442.) Carpool arrangements are being made, and there is also a need for babysitters if you cannot go to Raleigh.

The organization also urges ERA supporters to call or write their state senators and urge them to vote in favor of the amendment. Mail should be addressed to the Legislative Building, Raleigh 27611.

Correspondence should be particularly addressed to New Hanover Senator William Smith, Lt. Governor Jimmy Green, and the Senate Constitutional Amendments Committee, Cecil Hill, Chairman.

Students Face "Taxation Without Representation" in Many Counties

by Steve Lemken (CPS)

Students in some of North Carolina's counties are getting a real-life lesson, courtesy of the tax assessors office, on what taxation without representation really means.

County officials who have the funds to set up the machinery to assess the personal property of people who reside or do business within the state have begun to do so. Everyone must file a list of all personal property...or else face a $500 fine.

However, there's a catch. Although the law applies to all, all who pay do not have the right to vote. And guess what group is in the majority with that inequity? If your answer is students, advance to the next paragraph.

At East Carolina University (ECU) in Greenville (Pitt County), students were in a "state of disbelief" when they were informed about the filing law. Cars, stereos, furniture, clothes, all tangible household items, rent on an apartment or house are all taxable personal items.

The editor of the ECU student paper, Jim Elliott, said that "it doesn't seem like a very healthy situation... it is classic taxation without representation in a nutshell." Students who wish to register to vote usually can't, due to the restrictive guidelines imposed on them by local election boards, but they are still held accountable for all taxes which must be paid to the state.

However, the fact that students must pay taxes and yet not have the franchise, is becoming a bone of contention being picked up by the student government and the North Carolina Public Interest Research Group (NCPIRG). Both are urging students who are presently eligible to register to do so.

Peter Brown, an attorney and director of the state PIRG, said that the personal property tax law, from his viewpoint at this time, is very legal. But, like Elliott, he feels that there is something wrong with the situation where students who are liable to be taxed cannot vote.

tional. Brown said, "They (the students) should have the right to apply and register to vote, totally irrespective of the tax situations." He feels that the student voting question may be cleared up if the new governor appoints a different group to the state board of elections.

Meanwhile students at ECU are keeping a sharp eye out for any revenueurs.

Three Candidates Line Up in Race for SGA President

David Davis

David Robert Davis became the only rising Senior to file for the office of SGA president last week. Davis has been active in student government over the past four years, and has been involved with several campus organizations as well.

Currently the personnel manager for WCNU, he has worked as a disc jockey for the campus radio station since his Freshman year. He has also served as the production manager for WCNU.

A member of the Homecoming Committee as a Freshman and a Sophomore, Davis was elected a Freshman senator in 1974. He served as Sophomore Class Vice-president in 1975-76.

Davis has been active with the dorm Resident's Action Team, serving as a member of that group during his first two years at UNC-W. He was also a member of the Chancellor's Investigating Committee in 1975-76.

A 1974 graduate of R. J. Reynolds High School in Winston-Salem, N. C., Davis is an earth science major.

Ray Warren

Karin Whaley

Karin Whaley

Sophomore Class President Karin Whaley filed as a candidate for SGA president last week. Ms. Whaley has been very active in various campus affairs since she has been a student at UNC-W.

Majoring in pre-law, she served as vice-president of her freshman class in 1975-76. She was elected as sophomore class president for the 76-77 school year. In her capacity as a member of the Student Senate, she is chairman of the Senate Communications Committee.

Ms. Whaley has been active in the North Carolina Student Legislature delegation from this campus. She was a member of the Homecoming Committee for the 75-76 year.

A member of the Student Affairs and Hearings Committee, she is chairman of the Heart Fund organization for the university. Ms. Whaley is also working as an intern for the Student Affairs Office.

Ray Warren

Ray Warren, former sophomore class vice-president has filed for the office of SGA president. Warren has been active in the student senate and a member of campus activities since coming to UNC-W.

A rising junior, Warren's majors are history and political science and he plans to go to law school. He was elected to the student senate as a freshman and became vice-president of his class during his sophomore year. Before leaving the senate recently, he was Chairman of the investigative committee. He also led the new section of Club by-laws adopted by the senate this year.

Warren has been an active member of the university theater.

Warren's other activities include writing the lead stories for the SeaHawk during his freshman year and organizing the Campus Republican Club, of which he is Vice-Chairman. He has also involved himself in attempting to expand the cheerleading program this year to include male cheerleaders. Warren has also worked with the food service committee which attempts to improve the quality of the campus food service.

Sharon Pierson: Homecoming Queen Without All That Royalty

By Ray Warren

There is a widely believed theory that all beautiful and successful women suffer from an inability to communicate meaningfully with other people. Sharon Pierson, UNC-W's reigning homecoming queen, happily sends this old myth to its proper grave.

Despite her new title and strikingly beautiful appearance, Sharon displays a genuine warmth and friendliness to those who come in contact with her.

A junior, our homecoming queen was sponsored by Tau Kappa Epsilon. She was part of that fraternity's Little Sister program last year and was named TKE sweetheart this year. She is best known on campus, however, for her work in a number of productions of the University Theatre.

Drama is Sharon's major, and a major force in her life. She has worked in practically every production since coming to UNC-W, including most recently The Misanthrope.

One of her major interests is promoting interest and participation in campus theater. Commenting on the sparse coverage of The Misanthrope by the campus media, she recounted the long hours required to present a play. "No matter how large or small a part, whether in acting or tech, it takes a lot of time."

During the preparation of The Misanthrope, the actors were required to work from five to seven nights a week.

"People ask me why I don't do more on campus or go to the basketball games," she observed, "but I really have no time."

Despite her busy drama schedule, Sharon has deep interest in improving life at UNC-W. She often discusses ideas with members of the drama department on how to alleviate the "suicide campus" affect here.

She has also managed to find the time to work for ratification of the Equal Rights Amendment.

As homecoming queen, Sharon's chief duty will be to represent UNC-W in the Wilmington Azalea Parade. For three days she will attend a number of teas and socials occasionally being committed from eight in the morning until midnight.

She will have no choice in

selecting an escort for these various parties, however, as one will be provided by the Azalea Committee. This year, that fantastically lucky fellow will be an Air Force cadet.

Sharon's essential modesty becomes evident when she talks about her selection as this year's homecoming queen. She disagrees with any over-emphasis on the contest aspect of the homecoming election.

"I just felt it was really nice for a club to select me and to be able to represent my club."

She describes her selection as a complete surprise. "It was a special niceness," she said, "that enough people wanted me to represent them."

She added that "people I didn't even know congratulated me and said they voted for me, and that really makes me feel good."

Sharon's future is rather uncertain. She is presently awaiting notification on whether she has been accepted at the summer school at Stratford-on-Avon in England.

As for next fall, she hasn't really decided where she will be. Having lived in North Carolina for seven years, she now feels a desire to move on to a new school, perhaps in Europe, where her father lives. Beyond next year, her future is rather indefinite.

Whatever she does with her life, however, Sharon says she wants to always find new challenges. With so much talent, one cannot help but feel she will be more than able to meet them.

Jimmy Buffett: An Evening With the Key West Wizard

By Mark Rybus

Sunday, Feb. 27, Jimmy Buffett will return to Wilmington to do "An Evening With Jimmy Buffett." He is currently on tour to promote his new album "Changing in Latitudes, Changing in Attitudes" and the tour to date is a tremendous success!

The new album reflects Buffett's newer musical and mental attitudes. The music, overall, is more driving and up-tempo. Not that the old Buffett is gone; rather his music has more emphasis.

Perhaps his wider success and critical acclaim as a strong singer and songwriter have given him the needed boost to branch out. Recently, Buffett sold out the Tallahassee, Florida, Arena—no small task.

Jimmy started out a journalism graduate from the University of Southern Mississippi, but, instead of becoming a police reporter, he went to Nashville to sing and write his peculiar views of life.

Unfortunately, neither he or Nashville was ready for the other, so he moved to Florida where he met another songwriter, Jerry Jeff Walker.

At this point in Buffett's career, things began to turn in his favor. Walker taught him that he could be a no-account and successful author at the same time. Eventually Buffett settled into a routine of living in Key West and recording in Nashville.

From Nashville came Buffett's first LP, "A White Sport Coat and a Pink Crustacean." Some of his more memorable tunes, such as "The Great Filling Station Holdup" and the touching "Why Don't We Get Drunk" are from that album.

"Living and Dying in 3/4 Time," "A-I-A" and "Havana Daydreaming" came in fairly rapid succession. True to his promise of "making every album better than the last," Buffett now offers us "Changing in Latitudes, Changing in Attitudes."

According to an interview in the December "High Times," Jimmy says his music is "90 percent based on fact, things that I've done or seen other people do." Perhaps that is why his music is accessible and personable. Although much of his music is humorous, a note of truth does ring out.

Last year, Buffett played to near sell-out crowd in Kenan Auditorium. Jimmy and the Coral Reefer Band put on a tight, good-time show to a more than enthusiastic audience that is still talking about them.

Buffett is also doing some serious prose writing. Currently, he is working on a screenplay about a Cuban dealer in Florida and is considering a book on the story of rock 'n' roll.

So, if you would like to see more, come and spend "An Evening With Jimmy Buffett" February 27 at Brogden Hall. Tickets are on sale in the Pub until Friday, from 10:00 to 3:00. Prices are $4.50 and $5.00 for students with a valid ID.

Let's give Buffett a good coastal town showing. See you there.

Laughon Performs in Good Wood

Appearing in the Good Wood Tavern Feb. 23, and 24, Wednesday and Thursday night at 8:00 p.m. and 9:00 p.m. will be Charles Laughon and Stardrive. Charles is a native of Wilmington and has played in night clubs in town most of his musical career. His creative ability is shown through the music he plays.

Stardrive is a four-piece back-up band that adds a bit of color to the act. The four members of Stardrive are Benji Seawell, bass guitar; Jim Herring, percussion; Buck Adams, flute; and Barry Miller, lead guitar. You will not want to miss the once-in-a-lifetime chance to see Charles Laughon and Stardrive.

Singer, Robert Starling To Appear in Good Wood Tavern

Composer and singer Robert Starling will be performing March 9-11 in the Good Wood Tavern. Starling, 24, is a native of Charlotte, N.C. and has been playing professionally part-time or full time for 12 years. His first single "Everything's Gone Wrong" and "Movin' On" was released recently and has received a lot of airplay in the Wilmington area.

He is a 1974 graduate of North Carolina State University with a degree in radio-television communications. While in college he began playing at small coffee houses around the school's campus and finally got a break. He became the house musician at the Frog and Nighttown Club for 2 and a half years where he was associated with top performers, such as Bette Midler, Oliver, Ramsey Lewis, George Carlin and Don McLean.

Starling's performances will begin at 8:00 and 9:00 p.m. on Wednesday and Thursday and 9:00 and 10:00 on Friday. Admission is free, so come on by and bring your own beer.

LOW & BEHOLD ITS BOWIE

DAVID BOWIE

LOW

RCA CPL-1-2030

Cha-changes is what this album is all about, for, if you walked into a room and it was playing, it would be very hard to tell who it was by. In fact, side two does not sound at all like Bowie, or should I say the old Bowie.

As for myself, I think these changes are quite remarkable in that they prove Bowie is always looking to the future and does not dwell on his past. Many groups these days seem to spend all their time on getting an image and then boring you to death with that sound. That could be why most groups have several good albums in a row and then go downhill, while Bowie has had twelve good selling albums in a row.

The one element which makes this album so different is the addition of Brian Eno. As it appears, ENO is again making the rounds with his influence showing even on the cuts on which he does not play.

Side one could be said to be Bowie's new improved disco music. It opens with "Speed Of Life" which is a very unusual instrumental disco type song. "Breaking Glass" follows and is the first cut to reflect the influences of Eno. As Eno plays moog on the song, the whole background music has his sound and not that of the other Bowie albums.

Iggy Pop appears on the next cut and it is the first time in two years that he has been on record. "What In The World" is the song's title and that is exactly what I would like to know. What in the world is Iggy Pop doing on a Bowie album and why did not Bowie let him stay dead?

"Sound and Vision" is next and is one of the better cuts on the LP. The vocals are a play between Bowie and Eno which gives the cut a very unusual sound. In fact, if your speakers are well separated it is almost possible to see the sound move from one speaker to the other.

The best cut on the album is next with "Always Crashing In The Same Car." This one would make a good single in that it has a very good disco-type sound, yet it is an advanced sound and could set future standards for disco music. It is also the longest cut (3:26) on the side, which gives the listener more time to get into it. Again Eno's synthesizer work adds much to the song.

Side two is so unusual that it is hard to explain. It contains four cuts which are the type music I call modern-classical-rock. In other words: in ways, the music is written like classical music and is played on modern instruments with enough rock tone to classify it as such. If you have heard any of Eno's albums or any albums by the German group Tangerine Dream or even TOMITA, you have some idea of what it is all about. These are definitely musical compositions and not top 40.

So there you have it. LOW is another change in the life and times of DAVID BOWIE. So far his changes have been good. I think this one is also. Till then, Rock-out.

JIMMY BUFFETT

JIMMY BUFFETT

CHANGES IN LATITUDES CHANGES IN ATTITUDES

ABC RECORDS- AB-990

As most of you know by now Jimmy Buffett will again be in Wilmington this weekend. Last time he was here he was a great success and more than likely will be one this time.

Thanks to Southern Rock, country music is forever becoming a big part of the rock scene. Beginning with the old groups like the Greatful Dead and Sir Douglas Quintet, it only took several years before Willie Nelson and the like were in everyone's record collections. I must confess I even own a few of them.

Jimmy Buffett must be classified with these country singers for most of his music lacks the power or loudness of true rock music. Although his other albums have been somewhat comical, Changes in Latitudes, Changes in Attitudes remains more serious than they do. I admit that a few songs have comical lyrics, but even on these the music is of that dead-serious country type. This could be the downfall of the album but I find Buffett's vocals are pleasant enough to keep if from fallin over the ledge.

This album also contains a Latin American type sound, similar to the Texo-Mexo country sound. In fact, most of the material is about things which take place in Mexico and the Islands.

This Latin-country mood starts on the first cut, the title cut "Changes in Latitudes Changes in Attitudes." This cut is one of the best on the album.

Also on side one are "Banana Republic" and "Tampico Trauma." The first of these has a very Texo-Mexo country sound. The song is basically about Americans who have left this country for one reason or another. It also has that sad serious country sound which works very well on the cut.

Two other songs which are very good are "Waistn' Away Again" in Margaritaville," which is a saga about the lemon and salt tequila, and "Biloxi," which is nothing but pure country western.

All in all the album is good and recorded very well. I miss the comedy the other albums had but Buffett can sing well enough to keep it interesting. J.W.

Eight-ball Tournament

The turnout of the S.U.P.B. Eight-ball Tournament was very good this year with twenty-eight competing in the doubles tournament, thirty-one in the mens' singles, and seven in the womens' singles. All of the players were full time UNC-W students.

Competition in womens' singles and open doubles was completed Monday night. The winners in all three categories were: Eddie Brock - mens' singles; Jean Hicks, womens' singles; and Keith Yow and Phil Lambert in open doubles tournament. Second place honors went to Tom Sellers, Lori Beasley, and Tom Sellers and Randy Ourt, respectively. Ms. Hicks transferred to

A Real Success

UNC-W this year from Wingate where she also held the womens' billiard title. Brock claimed the mens' singles title by winning six straight matches in the winners bracket.

One of the best performances of the tournament was displayed by the team of Yow and Lambert who had to come from behind and win two straight matches against undefeated Sellers and Ourt. Phil Lambert ran the rack twice in the final frames of the competition.

Highlights of the tournament including one of Lambert's "streaks" will be televised by V.I.C.E. in the Good Wood Tavern, March 14-18.

Poll Shows Majority Opposed to Amnesty for Draft Resisters

By Robert S. Kinsman

College students polled at the UNC-W campus this week on President Carter's recent pardoning of Vietnam War resisters were divided in their opinions, but almost all had a definite view of this volatile subject.

Many interviewed insisted that some penalty should have been imposed on those involved. Most of the 35 students interviewed were opposed.

"Amnesty is a dirty word in my opinion," asserted one young veteran. "If you let men go scot free for not going to war once, they might do the same thing in future wars," he elaborated.

"A country has to have men to back it up, but if everyone can dodge the draft or desert, and then be set free, then that's the choice instead of going to battle," he added.

A former fighter pilot who flew missions in Vietnam summed up his emotions as "mixed" about the president's action within hours of taking his oath of office.

"If the United States were to become entangled in another Vietnam-type situation, I would do everything possible to keep my kids out of it, and I would even lead them out of the country, if necessary!"

He did qualify that statement by declaring if this country were attacked such as in World War II, he and his sons would go to war.

President Carter acted in accordance with Article II, section 2 of the U.S. Constitution in issuing his pardon decree last month. Sixteen other presidents have also used that power to offer some form of amnesty to special groups of dissenters.

George Washington gave amnesty to those who fought Federal troops in the "Whiskey Rebellion" in 1794. President James Madison reluctantly used the power when he freed Jean Lafitte's pirates who could prove they fought with Andy Jackson at the Battle of New Orleans.

Many of those polled expressed the desire to turn over amnesty and pardons to the Legislative Branch of the government, and others agreed each individual's case should have been investigated rather than made a part of the "blanket" program. Nine out of 10 interviewed also wanted something done for military deserters as well as draft evaders.

"Doing something for the anti-war protesters was political. I would have rather seen a pardon for the deserters because at least they did attempt to fulfill their obligation to the country," one student said.

Most of those polled agreed the Vietnam War was probably illegal, but that those who did serve there should also be honored for their service. As one young woman put it, "It is not right for some draft evaders to be granted amnesty when others who didn't perhaps agree totally with the war, chose to stay and fight."

Her comment was seconded by another young veteran who exclaimed "It is not fair for some to have to serve and others run away from it and completely escape punishment."

"I am not in full agreement with the president's action," one Junior explained. "They broke the law and, like other U.S. citizens, should pay for it," he declared while also emphasizing "I am in agreement of letting those U.S. citizens return home, but only if they pay for their crime."

One young lady objected that letting draft evaders go free

"sets poor standards for military personnel."

Not everyone opposed the president's program.

"Personally, I feel President Carter's approach to the problem was a step in the right direction," one Freshman said. Another added, "Those guys that did not go to Vietnam will probably come back and do something constructive for the country."

One student pointed out that the Vietnam War is now history.

"It was unpleasant, but draft dodgers and war protesters were a part of living in America during the Vietnam era. Our country has made mistakes, but we learn and don't make the same mistake twice."

"That's what America is all about."

that there would be a need for some type of restrictions, such as regular office hours, if the salary is approved.

One of the projects that Laird will be working on is the establishment of a chapter of the Emergency Medical Association, whose function is to educate the public in areas of emergency medical treatments with course credit provided for some students. He said that a similar group has been implemented at UNC-Greensboro.

Another area of concern for Laird is the rise in the athletic portion of the student fees. He said that the appropriation for athletics would increase next year from twelve to thirteen dollars. This is inconsistent, Laird said, with the national average which is between nine and ten dollars per student.

To the incoming, soon-to-be-elected president, Laird said he will provide all the assistance he could.

"It's going to be a lot more of a job than they ever dreamed it was," said Laird of the three presidential candidates.

Laird stated that he has not yet decided whether to act on the vacancies which now exist in the Student Court and various student committees. He cited the coming administration transition would appoint new members anyway, but added that he may appoint someone who would be acceptable to the new president.

A senior, Laird is double majoring in history and sociology, (with a concentration in anthropology.) His family presently resides in Fayetteville, but Laird was born in France. His family has endured twenty-one moves due to his father's military career.

"I like to claim North Carolina as my home state," Laird said, noting that he has lived in the state since 1968.

SNCAE Holds Elections

On February 17 SNCAE held elections for officers for the 77-78 school year. The following students were elected:

President: Terry Crouch
V-President: Ellen Smith
Secretary: Conna Coffey
Treasurer: Joanne Essey

On Friday March 11, at 7:00, SNCAE will hold their Spring Banquet at Balentine's. The guest speaker will be Dudley Flood, Assistant Superintendent of Public Schools. Student and Faculty are invited.

Student teachers are asked to invite their supervising teachers. The Banquet will be Dutch treat. There will be a 35 cent charge per person for the room. Please sign up in the Education Office before March 9.

Recreation Majors Club

The Recreation Majors Club has a full spring semester ahead. Beginning with a Feb. 16 meeting featuring talks by various professionals concerning working with special populations, six additional events round out the schedule.

These include guest appearances by Mr. Ken Free, President-elect of the North Carolina Recreation and Park Society, March 16; Mr. Hubert Henderson, employed by the Department of Natural and Economic Resources, March 28; and Dr. H. Douglas Sessions, Recreation Curriculum Chairman for the University System of North Carolina, who will serve as guest speaker for the Recreation Banquet on April 6.

Two additional meetings are also planned. On April 4, elections will be held for next year's officers and on March 30, the Special Olympics will be the topic.

For more information concerning the time and location of these events check by the Recreation Bulletin Board upstairs in Hoggard.

Laird Endorses Whaley

To The Editor:

Several times in the past few weeks I have been asked by aspiring S.G.A. candidates for my personal endorsement. It is not only my right to make such an endorsement but also my responsibility to see that the very best candidate be duly elected and installed as the President of your Student Government Association.

With that responsibility paramount, and in fulfillment of my obligations to the Student Body, I do hereby publicly endorse and support Karin Whaley's candidacy for the office of President of the Student Government Association for the 1977-78 academic year.

During the past two years that Karin has served the students (first, as Freshman Class Vice President and this year as Sophomore Class President), she has exhibited top level competence in all she has undertaken. Repeatedly, Karin demonstrated to me, first as SGA Vice-President and now as your President, not only a desire to promote the students' interests on and off campus, but a marked ability to get things done quickly and quietly and to everyone's satisfaction.

Karin has earned the respect of the administration and of you, the students she represents. It is a respect that she richly deserves. It is for all of these reasons that she has earned my confidence and my vote.

I urge each student to take a personal interest in your Student Government. After all, each year we spend over $80,000 of your money. You have an obligation to see that it is spent in the manner that you want!

Sincerely,
Paul Morgan Laird

Ken Lilly Urges Patient Building Process

Too often, political campaigns, such as this one, become a personality contest with each candidate stressing their superiority over the other. When the election is over, the voters have elected a person they like with little understanding of his or her intentions.

This election may well be the most important in the history of the UNCW Student Government Association. This organization must undergo a substantial rebuilding process.

The prestige and respect that the SGA possessed in previous years has all but disappeared. This election must produce leaders, not just persons to fill empty offices.

The problems concerning this campus are not imaginary, they are very real. The media on this campus (radio, newspaper, yearbook) must be doubled. The substantial investments already made by the SGA are too great to allow the media to continue at their below-average state. The increasing size of this campus make this improvement essential. There must be an improved system of financial allocations to various other organizations on campus. Too many organizations are dying of neglect, not only for SGA but from the student body itself.

An essential element of success for SGA is a respectable, ongoing relationship with the administration of UNCW.

Without a strong student government becomes a house divided against itself and can achieve very little. These are just a few of the problems facing this campus in the following year. These problems, along with the many others, will not be accomplished in just one year. It will be a building process over a series of years and patience is essential.

The office of Vice-President of SGA offers an opportunity for me to insure that the problems pressing us at this time receive proper attention. As president of the Senate, it will be my responsibility to guide the course of this body and hope that individual prejudices will not prohibit the Senate from operating at optimal strength.

You may have noticed that I have provided you with no readily available solution to all of these problems. Many candidates offer solutions that are too ideal, especially for this campus. My solution will only come from students, like myself, who have a general concern for UNCW. A start to finding those solutions is an all-out participation in the upcoming election. For all these reasons, and many more, I strongly solicit your vote for Vice-President of the SGA.

Rough Roads Get Attention

"OUR ROADS NEED FIXING: CAN'T YOU DO SOMETHING ABOUT THEM!"

Students were constantly saying this to me, so I decided to see what could be done. I met with Mr. Bierly, Vice Chancellor of Business Affairs, and he listened to the problem. He was very sympathetic toward the students' wishes. After some discussion he told me he would call the physical plant and ask them to see if funds could be found for fixing the roads.

Only a week later, UNCW students found themselves driving on smooth, newly paved surfaces. On behalf of all students, I would like to thank Mr. Bierly for all his cooperation and prompt action.

Language Lecture Scheduled

Wisconsin in Oshkosh for seven years.

Dr. Dodson received his PhD from the University of Nebraska in Nineteenth Century British literature. He has not, however, taught in this field since his interest in language began.

In addition to his job as chairman of the English Department, Dr. Dodson teaches a course in composition. He feels everyone in the department should teach composition each semester.

According to Dr. Dodson, professionally trained linguists have been hired for next year to teach several courses. The courses will be offered at the graduate and undergraduate levels.

The lecture will be at 8:00 p.m. in King Auditorium.

You Say Liberal, Boy?

Comment by one of the members of the Board of Governors when told that the Liberal Arts program at UNCW needed to be upgraded: "Well, which art course are you taking?"

Greta Anita Lint: Who is she? What is she? Why does she do the things she does? You need answers to such questions before you cast your votes.

Greta Anita Lint is a sophomore from Conover, N.C. She came to UNCW for Marine Biology, but switched to Mass Communications. She says that "Yes, the two can go together. I want to be a public relations person for a marine biological center."

Greta is determined to enter a field that will permit her to pursue her many interests. Such a powerful determination has proven to be of benefit to the students and community. Greta is co-founder and President of the UNCW Campus Republicans, President of the Interclub Council, an APO brother, a debater and an individual events speaker, and a member of the SGA Investigative Committee, Communications Committee, and food committee.

She keeps pushing for bike paths here on campus. She tried being a D.J. for WCNU, but prefers supplying it with public service announcements for broadcast. She was on the committee for last summer's freshman orientation.

She provides r.w. suggestions for the new dorm-like storage places, book shelves, and lobbies for each floor. She tried getting a sandwich/fruit machine for the dorms.

Why is she so active? Greta Anita Lint wants the best for students here at UNCW. Would you believe that with such a heavy schedule, Greta has even been on the Dean's List? If she has been so active in her first two years here, just think what else she can accomplish, with your vote, as SGA Vice-President!

You just can't lose when you VOTE FOR GRET! FOR VICE-PRESIDENT!
Artesa Bohymen

Frank Zerbinos Lists Qualifications for Office

As a candidate for SGA vice-president, I seek to bring my experience and organizational ability to UNCW. After serving three years with the Army, two of those with the U.S. Army Chorus in Korea, I worked for ITT as a purchasing agent. After working for ITT, I was store manager of the General Nutrition Center in Raleigh.

In 1974 I was hired through civil service to work at Camp Lejeune. There I held the position of management consultant until I reached the decision to return to college on a full-time basis in August, 1976.

Living in Jacksonville and recognizing the need for an expanded youth athletic program, I organized the Eastern Carolina Soccer Association, a program that began with 26 young people in July, 1975, and presently has approximately 100 girls and boys participating. I am presently Executive Director of the organization.

I coached the White Oak High School Soccer Club during fall 1976, and am the coach of the ECSA McGuire Cup team, presently entering in state competition. For work in the community, I was nominated for the Distinguished Service Award for 1976.

I transferred to UNCW from Coastal Carolina Community College after receiving an AA in 1975 and hold membership in SNCAC and AAHPER (student). A rising senior, I expect to graduate in 1978 with a major in Physical Education.

The biggest issue this year, I feel, is not one that the candidates can take sides and debate. It is the apathetic outlook that so many of the students have towards student government and involvement in student affairs and activities. This is only natural after an upsetting event such as the impeachment proceedings.

In order to change this outlook, it is important that the student body elect a slate of officers in whom they feel confidence and therefore support. It is most important to elect persons that are capable and enthusiastic towards their positions. For the office of SGA Vice President, I am one. Thank you.

Coley Asks for Support And Input of Students

As a result of much reflection and discussion with other students, I'm announcing my candidacy for the Office of S.G.A. President. I've come to this decision after viewing the state of affairs in Student Government here at UNC-W.

I am a junior majoring in Psychology and Philosophy & Religion and I've viewed with much concern the lack of significant participation by the student body at-large in the affairs of the S.G.A. I think my background in other student government associations both in high school and at the University of California at Santa Barbara, coupled with what insight I've gained through these experiences, gives me the tools necessary to serve as your next SGA president.

It is time for us as students to begin to play a significant part in the development of this young but rapidly growing university. The faculty and administration are waiting on us. Maybe waiting isn't quite the appropriate word here because actually many of the departments are growing in leaps and bounds. And in fact some of the departments are already rated as tops in their respective fields.

Of course we see evidence every day of striving of the administration. We need only to view the continuing construction of new facilities around campus to see that the administration is definitely doing its part.

Let's join as students this effort to make UNC-W one of the finest universities anywhere. In order to do that we need input from all the students. In soliciting your support in the form of a vote, I ask that you don't stop there. I'll need your support as president. I want to serve you as your president. Your input will not only be encouraged but actually sought out.

So please go to the polls and let's make the Student Government Association as respected as the other many phases of this university. Thank you.
Ron Coley

Davis Pledges Decisive Leadership

November 17 - 18, the students of UNC-W will elect a President of the Student Government Association. It is my honor to have nominated David Robert Davis for this office.

The most severe problem our president will have next year will be to restore the students' confidence in their SGA. I feel David Davis is best qualified to fulfill the duties of this important office. His experiences while serving as Freshman Senator, Sophomore Vice-President, and production manager and personnel director of WCNU have brought to light his leadership abilities.

He has proven while serving in these offices that he has the ability to listen to all sides of any issue before making a fair decision for all concerned. This unique characteristic is why I feel he will bring about a fresh start.

A key solution will be placing more emphasis on communication through the VICE squad, SEAHAWK, and WCNU. Weekly exposure through these media will keep the University's 3,900 plus students more informed as to the activities of the SGA. Also David would like to create a monthly activities calendar to inform the students of all campus events.

As part of his effort to initiate an open door policy, he plans to maintain regular office hours to make him available to meet the students' needs. I know David will devote all of his efforts to an entire year as our president without any interruption to prevent him from fulfilling his commitment to the student body.

Dave will bring imaginative ideas such as the possibilities of a better postal service, the beginnings of a student bank, and student lounges in classroom areas. He realizes the large financial responsibilities of the SGA (being close to $96,000) and knows the importance of proper budgeting to receive the most benefit from our student activities fees.

I have only one wish and he is the best candidate who will express our desires, needs, and interests. Next year when the Board of Governors and Board of Trustees convene their meeting, the President of the SGA of UNC-W will be present to air student ideas on formation of University policies. We, as students, should demand a strong, decisive individual who will present the student views in a way in which brings forth their significance.

If elected, David would be instrumental in changing the image of this year's "lack-luster" Senate back to that of a respected student government. This may be accomplished by conducting a close-knit administration to create a more productive legislative organization.

I fully support David Robert Davis. When the polls open on March 17 and 18, a vote for David is a vote for a fresh start.

W.J. Daniels

Whaley Cites Record of Experience in Presidential Campaign

The Student Government at UNC-W is patterned after our national government. In order to function efficiently, all three branches must function efficiently. A weak chief executive can destroy their efficiency. An active president, however, can do much to improve the competence of the entire SGA.

As a government major (history, political science, and pre-law) I believe I can do much to increase the efficiency of student government.

For the past two years, I have been active in various campus activities. As a participant in the University Theatre, I gained an appreciation of the effort required to present a quality production. This experience, I believe, will bring a new appreciation for all the arts into the SGA. I have also written extensively for the Seahawk. Last fall, I worked to expand the cheering program. Fortunately, we should be able to accomplish their goal in time for our "big time" schedule next fall.

I helped organize a club for my political party and worked with members of the opposition party on joint projects such as the mock presidential election last fall.

My governmental experience is extensive. I've been in the Senate two years, once as class vice-president. I was chairman of the investigative committee and was Senate parliamentarian. Due to my ability with words, I frequently wrote letters and resolutions for the Senate. As a senator, I introduced two constitutional amendments and a revision of our bylaws dealing with the funding of clubs. I also caused each funded committee to report to the Senate to ensure that student money would not be wasted or improperly used.

Several students have expressed concern about my resignation from the Senate last month. That painful and difficult action was without malice, but taken in the belief that I could best serve the school by working on other projects. Since that time, however, after conversations with other students and much soul-searching, I have gained a great appreciation for my ability to promote real, effective and positive change through student government.

Despite my disenchantment with the past administration, I did not propose impeachment of our president. Once the question had been raised by another senator, however, I felt it should be resolved in the proper legal manner. At the request of several senators, I investigated and drew up the impeachment charges. When the Senate backed down from its duty to bring charges, I authored a petition to force the issue (again at the request of several senators.)

An important thing for us to remember is that past inefficiency need not continue. There are several things we can accomplish next year.

Our most pressing need is for an open presidency. To accomplish this goal, I will initiate a weekly presidential report in the Seahawk, attend weekly Senate meetings, institute regular office hours, and visit a meeting of each chartered club to listen to ideas and concerns.

As president I will actively use my office to promote UNC-W to the community. Activities which need to be emphasized are those tangible examples of student accomplishment such as our athletic teams, the theatre, our debate team, our rowing club, the Music Series, and Black Cultural Week. The Lecture Series should be expanded to include more speakers of the stature of Eugene McCarthy. All of these activities publicize the name of UNC-W and help us become the competitive university we should be.

There are four candidates for SGA president this year. One candidate is endorsed by the present administration and promises to continue the same old establishment. On the other hand, it is far too easy to call for "change" when one has done nothing all year to promote change. I believe in the positive alternative of active change and necessary experience. We can make our SGA work. Let's do it.

Warren: "We Can Make Our SGA Work" with Positive Change

As a candidate for SGA President I am asking for your vote. I am currently President of the Sophomore class and a pre-law major. I attended elementary and junior high school in Greensboro, N.C., and senior high school in Huntington, N.Y.

When I came to UNC-W my hope was to become very involved in student government. That seems to be the most effective way to hear students' problems and ideas and be in a position to do something about them.

UNC-W is here to serve its students. But it takes strong, dedicated, experienced student government leadership to seek out student opinion and then work with the administration to generate results.

I was elected Vice President of my Freshman class. This gave me experience in the operation of the Senate, and, importantly, in working with the budget. I expect that many students are unaware of the fact that the Senate handles a budget of $85,000. I believe that we can and must find better means of getting your input into deciding on the most useful ways in which to spend that money.

During my Freshman year I also served on the Homecoming Committee, the Advisory Committee for Improving Freshman Orientation, and in the North Carolina Student Legislature (NCSL).

The NCSL is made up of student representatives from most of North Carolina's universities. It is organized along the lines of the N.C. State Legislature and actually develops bills which are passed on to the state body. A number of these bills have become North Carolina law.

This year, as President of the Sophomore Class, I have placed much of my efforts toward searching for better ways to learn the students' viewpoints. As Chairman of a special Communications Committee, I created green and gold armbands for all senators to wear on Wednesdays and Thursdays (the day before and the day of the Senate meeting.) These armbands have been successful in making it easier for students to identify an SGA representative. I am also serving on the Chancellor's Student Affairs Committee and Hearings Committee.

Although many SGA activities are handled by committees, there is always room for individual effort. On behalf of many students who complained to me about the poor road surface conditions by the gym and up to the dorms, I met with Dr. Bierly, Vice Chancellor of Business Affairs, and presented our case. In a week the road surface was repaired, thanks to his sympathetic attitude.

A rapidly growing campus such as ours benefits from a good relationship with the community. February was National Heart Fund Month. I served as a Board Member for the New Hanover County Heart Fund, representing UNC-W. Involvement like this helps in gaining recognition for UNC-W as a responsible member of the Wilmington community.

When our new dorm is completed we will have 1000 students living on campus. However, most of our students will still be commuters. A college should be more than just an academic institution. Extra-curricular activities are important to ALL of our students. We need to and we can do a better job of designing activities to appeal to students who live off campus. UNC-W belongs to all of us.

Since UNC-W is here to serve all its students, we must make sure it has strong, dedicated, experienced student government leadership to seek out student opinion. Then, they must be able to work with the administration to generate results.

I am asking you to review the record of all the candidates. Choose the one you believe is most qualified and VOTE! I hope my record convinces you of my experience, of my concern for UNC-W and the student body; and I hope that you will give me your support.

Changes In Veteran's Benefits

Advance and prepayment of VA educational benefits ends on June 1 of this year. Advance pay will no longer be an automatic thing upon completion of a certification form. Beginning June 1, veterans will have to specifically request it. Presently VA checks are mailed at the beginning of each month. This, too, stops on June 1. Beginning with that date checks will be mailed at the end of the month. Therefore checks that veterans would normally receive on June 1 of this year will not be mailed until the end of that month. This change in check policy was included in Federal law enacted last year. For further information please contact a VA representative.

The Veterans Administration (VA) will not pay a veteran "for audited courses or courses for which the grade assigned is not used in computing graduation requirements." Essentially if a student accepts a "W", incomplete or "No Credit" grade an overpayment retroactive to the beginning of the semester or quarter will be charged for that course. This is a reversal of past policy whereby such an overpayment would have been assigned only from the date the non-punitive grade was assigned. The VA, however, will accept a number of mitigating circumstances in determining whether or not to charge the overpayment.

They are as follows:

1. Serious illness of eligible veteran or person.
2. Serious illness or death in the eligible veteran's or person's immediate family.
3. Immediate family or financial obligation which requires a change in terms, hours, or place of employment which precludes pursuit of a course.
4. Discontinuance of a course by a school.

In the future VA officials will be scrutinizing the records of veterans attending school to determine if they are making "satisfactory progress" towards an educational objective.

Variations in course load from one term to another will be "computed" when determining a student's progress. If the VA decided that a student is not making satisfactory progress, their VA educational benefits will be discontinued. The VA will reinstate those benefits only after the veteran has been "counseled" by VA officials. Once again, though, the VA will consider "mitigating circumstances" before discontinuing VA payments.

Mitigating circumstances include, but are not limited to the following:

1. Personal illness.
2. Illness or death in the immediate family.
3. Geographical transfer or change in hours or conditions of employment.
4. Financial emergency.
5. Any other circumstances beyond the student's control which hamper pursuit of a course.

This policy went into effect on December 1, 1976, and does not affect educational progress before that date.

SUPB and Concert Committee Sponsor Dinner Theater

The SUPB and Concert Committee will co-sponsor a dinner theatre Wednesday, March 23, at 7:30 p.m. in the UNCW cafeteria. The Curtain Call Company will present a play entitled "Luv."

The nagging indignities caused by man's most troublesome emotion-love-provide what one New York critic described as "an evening of unalloyed pleasure, of sustained and perfect comedy." The play is set on a metropolitan bridge, from which one of the three characters, Harry Berlin, is preparing to throw himself in despair. Along comes his college roommate, an on-the-make entrepreneur named Milt Manville, who persuades Harry there are lots of things worth living for, such as money, power and especially love. Milt, for reasons of his own, quickly arranges a liaison between Harry and Ellen, his wife, to prove the point.

Schisgal uses this triangle to satirize all-American optimism, beatnik pessimism, popular psychology, romantic waffling, and every country's national pastime. "Luv" emerges as a series of "brilliantly bouyant cartoons, and extraordinarily funny evening in the theatre," according to veteran critic Walter Kerr.

Mark Barefoot as Milt Manville brings skill, insight and conviction to every role he has undertaken, from a lead in Euripedes' "Orestes" to Neil Simon's "Barefoot in the Park." Mark's voice will sound familiar because of the newscasts and commercials he broadcasts on WGNI. Victoria Upchurch, as Ellen Manville, comes from the Washington, D.C., area, although she has long been active in North Carolina with the SRO Straw Hat Theatre, the UNCW University Theatre and the Parkway Playhouse in Burnsville.

"Luv" will be presented in "thrust" staging rather than in the arena style. Portable platforms are being built to insure better visibility for the audience and local artists are providing a colorful backdrop.

Tickets for the theatre will be on sale in the Student Activities Office from 8:00 to 5:00 weekdays. The cost is 3.50 with a meal ticket and 5.00 for the general public.

Vicki Upchurch and Dan Ansell from the cast of "Luv" to be presented next Wednesday night in the cafeteria.

HOLLYWOOD IN GOLDEN AGE

by Doug Swink

The UNC-W Fine Arts Committee is bringing the ninth movie to Kenan Auditorium on Tuesday, March 22, at 8:00 p.m. It is the well-known and breathtakingly beautiful film "The Day of the Locust."

John Schlesinger, the British director who last came to America to make "Midnight Cowboy," and who carried back home with him to England 'Oscars for Best Director and for Best Picture of 1969, sat alone. A view finder was strung around his neck, and he tried for the moment at least to catch as much of the fleeting sun as possible.

Laced through West's novel and the film are some of the most intriguing (and to Schlesinger "desperately appealing") characters in American fiction.

There is, for example, Faye Greener, played in Schlesinger's film by Karen Black who dyed her red-brown hair a buttery blonde for the role. Faye is a failed dress extra whose personality is a human pastiche of all the great movie stars of the '30s. To some literary critics, Faye is the incarnation of what philosopher William James has called "The American Bitch Goddess"--a tantalizing creature whom most of the men in the film pursue but never catch without paying a terrible price. Among the men who trail after Faye are Homer Simpson, a bookkeeper from the Midwest who has come to California for reasons he cannot even hope to articulate ("beautifully, but beautifully, played by Donald Sutherland," Schlesinger says) and Tod Hackett, played by newcomer William Artherton, a painter fresh out of Yale who has travelled West to work as a studio sketch artist and who is at once repelled and fascinated by the grotesques in the Hollywood twilight world.

The final riot in the story speaks of West's vision that perhaps Hollywood would be unable to retain its place as the American dream factory. Looking at the town today, it is clear his prediction has come true. The magic is gone.

As for all of the Fine Art movie series, UNC-W students will be charged 50 cents upon presentation of I.D. cards or season membership. The cost for all non-students is only $1.

SEAHAWK SPORTS

Varsity Baseball Opens Season

Believe it or not, weather has been a big problem for the UNC-W varsity baseball squad this year.

While the weather now couldn't be better, it was far from perfect at the start of the baseball season. Temperatures were frigid, and rain always was a threat to practices and games. In fact, the Seahawk squad once went five days without a practice session or game during the opening part of the season.

These conditions could account for the varsity squad's poor record (1-4) at this point. It should also be considered, though, that the Hawks play a schedule that reads like Who's Who in Southern Baseball. Among their opponents are Stetson, Western Carolina, Clemson, and Yale, long an Ivy League power.

Coach Brooks maintains that, despite the poor record, his team has played good ball this year. He pointed to the squad's 4-3 loss to Western Carolina as an example.

A number of key players were lost off last year's squad, and Brooks is still trying to find the right combination of players to fill in those spots.

Injuries, fortunately, have not been a problem. The Hawks have suffered only one major injury this year. Outfielder Dan Lewis hurt his knee, and will miss action for about a week.

The key for determining the outcome of the rest of the season, it seems, is these next few weeks. If this warm weather will hold, the squad will be able to get in some much needed practice time, and Coach Brooks and his staff will be able to observe more closely what changes, if any, need to be made on the team.

Thoughts While Dribbling

BENCHED

George Benedict

These past few weeks have really been heaven for basketball fans here in North Carolina. What with the ACC tourney, the NCAA championship pairings, and even the NAIA finals dominating the sports pages, it has been hard to avoid even thinking about basketball.

All of this activity reminds me of UNC-W's basketball squad. Though they're not participating in any post-season tourneys as most outstanding teams are, I still feel they have to be considered one of the best around.

The Hawks finished on top at the end of the regular season in field-goal shooting percentages. This is a fine credit to Coach Mel Gibson, his staff and the entire 'squad, for a team to be able to finish that high in statistics in their first year of NCAA Division I competition is indeed a fine accomplishment.

While this made the Hawk's offense a potent weapon, this was not their only attack. At one time, they were the number ten team in the nation in rebounding. I'm not sure how they'll finally wind up, but no doubt it will be right up there.

When the announcers start rambolling about Joe Schlabbotnik of Podunk U. being one of the best shooters in the nation, I remember that we have the best in the nation. That is Denny Fields, the transfer from Baptist College that proved to be a key figure this year. Though not officially listed due to eligibility, Fields' percentage was the best in the nation.

Fields wasn't the team, however. This year's basketball team had tremendous depth, the best I've ever seen on most any team around. It wasn't unusual for every man on the squad to play a contest, and I don't mean one of those thirty point victory margin games, either.

Many local sportswriters were saying this would be a key year for the Seahawk year. While this year was a transition year for the Hawks, next year should provide a very interesting season for the Seahawks. Just glancing over the schedule, I see three teams which have gained national attention. To start the season, UNCW faces the Deacons of Wake Forest, an Atlantic Coast Conference powerhouse for the past few years and now making their presence known on the NCAA tournament level.

Then there's a return match with UNC-Charlotte, a team that almost found itself in trouble when they last faced the Hawks. I think it's interesting that UNCW is only one of two North Carolina schools with guts enough to play to tough Forty-Niners.

As if those two weren't enough, the Seahawks will face rival Campbell College. The Camels played Cinderella this year, winding up in the NAIA national finals. And then, of course, there's the usual assortment of highly-rated Division I opponents which the Hawks faced this year.

Should be an interesting season.

PHIL SPECTOR

Phil Spector's Greatest Hits

Da Doo Ron Ron

I have already reviewed the Phil Spector reissue albums as an import set. Instead of releasing the set of albums in American Warner Brothers has released a double album of Phil Spector's hit records. What makes this album different from the imported series is its concept.

Phil Spector is the only record producer around to overshadow the artists he produced. Each singer on his records plays more of the part of an instrument than a star. This album does not break Spector's work into group categories, but displays his achievements from the very beginning to his return to the charts. The only things missing from the album are Spector's work with the Beatles and more recently his work with Dion and Cher.

Included in this album is "To Know Him Is To Love Him". This cut by the Teddybears was Phil's debut as a songwriter, producer and recording artist. Despite the tune's success Spector gave up his recording career to concentrate on producing. Such early production numbers as "I Love How You Love Me" and "Pretty Little Angel Eyes" are also present.

The real meat of this album is found in Spector's artistry on cuts by the Ronettes, the Crystals, and the Righteous Brothers. Cuts like "You've Lost That Lovin' Feelin'", "Da Doo Ron Ron", and "Be My Baby" not only were smash singles, but set an example for recording techniques that are still used today. Next time you hear a record by Springsteen, the Beach Boys, or the Carpenters, listen closely. That full scale production, "Wall of Sound," is an influence which Phil Spector is responsible for.

Two important cuts on this album are "River Deep-Mountain High" and "Black Pearl." The former was Spector's last bid at chart success. Due to bad vibes generated in the music business against Spector the song was a flop in the American charts. Considering how great this tune sounds it is a real crime that it never made it. In England the song was a smash two times. Its failure pushed Spector into retirement while still in his early twenties. "Black Pearl" signaled his return to the music world and was a hit.

What makes this album so good is that it not only represents the work of a very powerful music influence, but it is thoroughly enjoyable. This is one album that can be played all the way through and leave the listener satisfied. Few albums new or reissued can provide as much enjoyment as Phil Spector's Greatest Hits can.

Steve Harvey

AL STEWART

YEAR OF THE CAT

JANUS JXS-7022

As the story goes, last year as well as this year have proved to be years in which a good album can send a group to the top where they have remained. Look at Fleetwood Mac or Peter Frampton who both broke through, after many years of hard work, with an album to put them at the top where they belonged.

This is exactly what Al Stewart has done with YEAR OF THE CAT. With the hit single and the other good material on the album, it has been one of the most played single and album on both AM and FM radio.

To help out on the album are: Stuart Elliot and George Ford, presently with Steve Harley's Cockney Rebel, Peter Wood, Peter White and Tim Renwick.

It is also remarkable that such a dynamic album like this one is on a small label like Janus.

The album itself is one of the most clearly recorded I have heard this year. It is a very mellow rock type album which should be enjoyed from the Kiss fan to those fans of Tomita. Production by Alan Parsons is also at tops.

Side one opens with "Lord Grenville" which is a beautiful rock number. The almost classical guitar and vocals make this cut one of the best on the album.

"On The Border" follows and is somewhat more powerful than its forerunner. Once again the classical type guitar is very well done and the lyrics also as Stewart says: "In the village where I grew up, nothing seems the same. But still you never see the change from day to day." This seems to be the over all theme of the album (if it must have one).

Another very good cut on this side is "Sand in Your Shoes."

Among the other songs on side two is the excellent title cut, "Year of The Cat." This cut must be one of the best Top 40 songs on the charts these days. Yet the stereo effect is lost on radio and must be heard at its best. Even so the classical type guitar work is evident as is Stewart's ability to manipulate music and lyrics.

"Broadway Hotel" and "One Stage Before" also fall on this line in that their renderings are equal.

To sum up: YEAR OF THE CAT will most likely be one of the best albums of 1977. Stewart has put some incredible work and material into this album and will get his just rewards. Till then, Rock-Out.

Senate Recommends Executive Pay

by Bobby Parker

The Student Senate passed a resolution at its regular meeting Thursday night in support of a monetary grant for the next SGA president. The resolution was in the form of a recommendation to the members of the next Senate who will be elected tomorrow and Friday.

The Senators did not want to approve such a proposal themselves because the majority felt that it was beyond the authority of the current senate to direct disbursement of funds which will be included in next year's budget.

Sophomore Senator Greta Lint first stated that the grant should be in the form of a scholarship equal to the amount of room and board costs in the dorms. But SGA President Paul Laird pointed out that a scholarship would have to pass through administrative channels and the Financial Aid Office.

The Senate then moved to establish a grant for the office to avoid the administrative red tape and to evade a salary provision which would involve state and federal taxation.

SGA Treasurer Mark Wax urged the Senate to "talk about grants, scholarships . . . and forget about compensation" (such as a salary). Wax said that this would eliminate any possibility of taxes.

Ray Warren advised the Senators to act on the proposal before the elections to avoid the possibility of personality conflicts entering the situation. Senator Lint and Junior President Scott Olson wrote the final resolution which was adopted by the Senate.

In other action, Freshman President Glen Downs proposed that the Senate adopt "UNCW" as the official SGA abbreviation for the university to replace "UNC-W". The motion was discussed and approved.

President Laird informed the Senate that Michael Disher has resigned as chairman of the Fine Arts Committee. He read a letter from Doug Swink and the Fine Arts Committee which recommended Steve Capezi for the chairmanship. Capezi has worked with that committee this year.

Treasurer Wax presented a financial report that outlined all SGA funds and expenditures through February. The report showed total revenue at just over $100,000, with $3,528 remaining unallocated. A deficit of $91 existed for the publication of the Student Handbook, and the Senate voted to allocate the money to eliminate the deficit.

Also approved at the meeting were the nomination of Tom Massengale to the Academic Court and a charter for the campus radio station.

Senators Ken Lilly, Doug Shackelford, and Tom Witner were absent from the meeting.

Training Seminar

The UNCW Office of Career Planning and Placement* has announced that Fieldcrest Mills, Inc. will be conducting a training seminar in Wilmington for management level employees. They need student participants for the mock interview segments of the workshop and pay each interviewee $10 for participating.

The interviews will be conducted at the Holiday Inn at Wrightsville Beach on Wed., March 23, 1977 at 11:00 a.m. and on Thurs. March 24, 1977 at 9:00, 10:00 and 11:00 a.m. Eleven students are needed for each hour scheduled and the interviews will take less than an hour.

Sign-up sheets are located in the Office of Career Planning and Placement, 205 Alderman.

Tau Kappa Epsilon

Tau Kappa Epsilon welcomes everybody back from a well deserved now complete, and TKE would like to thank everyone who attended our Monday night party at Pistol Pete's. We all had a great time and we hope you did too! Debaters in Tourney Spring break was short for members of the UNC-W forensics teams. They traveled to the Citadel and to the South Atlantic Forensics Tournament at Lenoir Rhyne College.

Those debating at the Citadel were: Greta Anita Lint and Ray Blackburn, Charles Craft and Mike McCumbe, and Ed Stone and Art McMurry. Other schools debating were: VMI, USC, ASU, Duke, UNC-G, Troy State from Alabama, Morris Harvey University from West Virginia, and the University of Richmond. The top team from USC won the tournament.

At Lenoir Rhyne, Greta

Anita Lint represented UNCW in Impromptu Speaking, a division of individual events. She carried home a trophy for third place, after having placed first in two out of three pre-elimination rounds.

There were fifteen contestants in the event. Davidson College speakers placed first and second. Other schools represented were: The Citadel, UNC, Morris Harvey, Mars Hill, UNC-G, Duke, and Clemson.

The forensics teams have won three trophies this year. The teams are coached by Mrs. Betty Jo Welch and funded by the SGA.

are back in action on campus.

Our alumni will be sponsoring a dance at the Elk's Lodge on March 26, featuring the Ethics. Tickets will be $10.00 a couple which will include the band, set ups, and door prizes.

On March 11, we had a camping trip to the Neuse River. Brothers, pledges, and dates got our tents, gear, and boots together (not to leave out beer, etc.) and had a great time.

Bahai Holds Regular Meetings

The Bahai Club has finally congealed to the point where it will be holding regular group discussion. These informal discussions will be directed towards explaining the basic principles and teachings of the Bahai Faith, concentrating on a different aspect each week.

Topics to be discussed include the equality of women and men, the agreement of religion and science, the oneness of the human race, the progressive revelation of religious truth through the world's religions, prophecy (American Indian, Biblical, Buddhist, etc.), and the evolution of global unity out of present-day chaos.

Meetings are tentatively scheduled for Tuesday night at 8:00, in Kenan room 103.

Anyone interested but unable to attend should call Austin Bowder at 791-4456 for other arrangements.

SGA Funding

Any organization desiring funds from the Student Government Association for academic year 1977-78, should pick up budget request forms from Al Harris, Director of Student Activities or Mark Wax, Treasurer SGA.

Internships

Information on federal and state internships is available in the Office of Career Planning and Placement, 205 Alderman. The deadline for application is March 25.

Applicants must have completed at least 60 semester hours as of June, 1977, must be in the upper third of their class and must be returning to school in the fall.

Caps and Gowns

Measurements for caps and gowns for graduating seniors will be taken through April 1. Hours are 8:00 to 4:00 in the Bookstore.

Whaley, Coley in Run-off

By Bobby Parker

Karen Whaley and Ron Coley were the top vote-getters in the SGA election for president and will face each other in a run-off contest today and Thursday. Whaley received 178 votes to Coley's 112 total.

The remaining votes were divided between David Davis with 96 and Ray Warren who polled 80 of the 466 votes cast in the presidential race.

There will also be a run-off in the vice-presidential race with Ken Lilly and Greta Lint on the ballot. Lilly received 166 votes which compared to 141 votes for Lint. A third candidate, Frank Zerbinas, polled 88 votes.

Jim Wishon captured the office of SGA secretary with four write-in votes. Deidre DeVane received one vote.

In other contests which resulted in run-offs, the Sophomore class will decide the races for class president and vice-president. John Wiley led the three-man field for Sophomore president with 57 votes, followed by Mark Sanchez with 54, and Charles Allen with 49. Whaley and Sanchez will be on the run-off ballot.

For Sophomore vice-president, the five-candidate field was lead by Thomas Witner with 37 votes and Darrell Hope with 27. These two will face a run-off election. Frank Calvin (23 votes), Gail McAuley (20), and Ann Lavars (12) completed the voting tally.

In Senior class elections, Barbara McKay received 72 uncontested votes for class president, as did Herman Smith receive 68 for class vice-president. David Ramey collected 73 votes to win the class secretary's office.

In Senior senate competition Jim Franks (65 votes) led the field, followed by David Harris (60), Mike Watts (58), John Potter (56), and Scott Olson, who received 10 write-in votes to complete the five-position slate.

For Junior president, Paul O'Bryant won with 68 votes, and for Junior vice-president, Tom Hunt was successful with 73. Cindy Buxton defeated Keith Hedrick for the Junior secretary spot by a 62-28 margin.

The five winners for Junior senator were Dan Allen (61), Linda Rhodes (60), Wayne Bryant (59), Shirley Bryant (58), and Greg Musselwhite (50). Greg Stutts completed the balloting with 37 votes.

Glen Downs collected the largest margin in the class elections by winning the Sophomore Secretary's seat with 101 votes.

Sophomore Senators elected were led by Francis DeLuca (78), and Chris Aldridge (74). They were elected along with Neil Murphy (68), Charlie Suppler (65), and Jack Allen (60). Mike Rourke and Deborah Sloan trailed with 58 and 57 votes respectively.

Polls will be open from 10:00 am to 4:00 pm Wednesday and Thursday.

Mock Interviews Set

Participants for the mock interview segment of the Fieldcrest Mills management training seminar are reminded that the interviews will be conducted at the Holiday Inn, Wrightsville Beach.

The interviews are scheduled for Wednesday, March 23, at 11:00 and for Thursday, March 24, at 9:00, 10:00 and 11:00. All students participating will need to take a completed job application form to the interview. The forms and additional information are available in the Office of Career Planning and Placement, 205 Alderman.

SGA Funding

Any organization desiring funds from the Student Government Association for academic year 1977-78, should pick up budget request forms from Al Harris, Director of Student Activities or Mark Wax, Treasurer SGA.

Budget requests are due in the SGA office March 25.

Coley and Whaley Take Differing Views at Election News Conference

By Bobby Parker

SGA presidential candidates Ron Coley, David Davis, Ray Warren and Karin Whaley discussed a wide range of topics at a news conference Wednesday night on the eve of balloting in this year's student elections. A panel of media and SGA representatives posed questions to the candidates who answered to an audience of about twenty people.

VICE Squad member Pat White, SGA Secretary Tracy Miller, and Seahawk co-editor Bobby Parker composed the panel. The news conference was sponsored by the Seahawk.

Program coordinators attributed the low attendance to a lack of publicity and the late date of the conference. They added, however, that "the general concept and format of this type of program should set a good precedent for future elections."

Most of the questions yielded concurring responses from the candidates, although there was some disagreement on certain issues.

Whaley and Coley will face each other in a run-off election as a result of the outcome of the first election.

Both Coley and Whaley said that campus communications should receive top budget priorities. Coley indicated a desire to have the Seahawk published more often than once a week.

When asked about the recent Senate controversy concerning allocations for the Minority Affairs Committee in which several senators charged that this committee is not representative of all campus minorities, both candidates agreed that it is not the committee's responsibility to seek out minorities.

Whaley stated that the Minority Affairs Committee had done a good job getting involvement from students this year, citing the success of Black Cultural Week, the committee's major project. Coley added that this is "a problem with the student body at large," noting again the communication problems.

About the revitalization of the student court system, Whaley said that an active attorney general as well as interested court justices would greatly aid the situation.

Coley noted that he had dealt with the courts this past year as a defense attorney and labelled the Academic Court a "farce."

The state purchasing system which governs expenditures of SGA funds and was implemented on this campus last year has been a subject of debate among SGA-funded groups.

Whaley said that she supports the system and that the problems have resulted from a lack of interest by the leaders of the campus groups. She noted that SGA Treasurer Mark Wax had called a meeting of these leaders to explain the system but few had attended.

Coley said that he is not familiar with the system and would like to investigate it further before offering an opinion.

Both Coley and Whaley said there were good and bad points about an executive salary for the SGA president. They each said that it would not affect their performance one way or another.

Coley advocated a reduction in the size of the present Senate, saying that this would involve the most interested students. Whaley argued that the present number of representatives was adequate and should not be altered.

Letters

Whaley Asks for Vote

For several weeks you, the students of UNCW, have been hearing about the SGA Presidential Candidates and their qualifications. Now we are down to the final decision. It is for you to decide which of two students will lead and represent your university.

I ask that you vote for the candidate who has already spent time working for your school, listening to your opinions and getting the results you want.

Have a say in how UNCW will be represented at statewide meetings; decide which candidate is most qualified to help you. AND VOTE!

Karin Whaley
SGA Candidate

Lint Promises More Action

I thank all the people who came out to vote in the election last week, especially those who cast their ballot for me. I really appreciate the support and I ask that you will continue to support me in the run-off election.

During my active schedule this year, I have seen changes on this campus that are both constructive and destructive. Working with the Interclub Council, I have seen the attendance grow from a few clubs represented to more than half of those clubs on and off campus.

I have seen long faces of people at meetings turn into happy faces when student/club projects for fund-raising or projects for new members have been discussed and planned. Last month, we posted a calendar between the cafeteria and Kenan Hall where clubs are supposed to post projects and meeting information.

Many clubs will be working hard during Super Weekend. Some students and candidates want to discuss student apathy; I'm telling you how UNCW is overcoming that problem.

Students are getting involved; that is constructive.

Remember how we all complained about the food here on campus? We complained about hair, bricks, glass, and plastic in our food. Some people wanted fresh fruits, vegetables, and fruit juices served. Others wanted more varieties of entrees.

Having worked with the food committee, a special committee of the Senate, I have delivered your ideas, as well as the others of the committee, to those people in charge.

What are the results? Good Wood, the snack bar, new menus, new recipes, new meal tickets, fresh fruit, vegetables, juices—and the list goes on. Students working for good results is constructive.

During the election for local, state, and national offices, many students became active politically. Democrats, Republicans, Independents, and other parties were alive on this campus and in the community. It matters not who won or lost; people became involved. That is constructive.

Our radio station is going FM very soon. It is suffering growing pains right now. The new station must be built, the DJ's need to get licensed, equipment must be updated—all this while awaiting the golden day when we can turn on our FM dial for our own radio station. Communication is constructive.

I have seen new majors added to this university. However, one member of the Board of Governors told me that because he felt that students see the field of marine biology as a "glamour field . . . Jacques Yves Cousteau" that there will not be a major for that field in the near future. UNCW has the best local for such a degree along the Eastern Seaboard. Such a decision is destructive. Student unity for action, a constructive move, will help reverse this decision.

Like the radio station, UNCW is suffering growing pains. We have an enrollment unequal to what we offer—in and out of class. With unity of students and administration, we can heal some of those pains.

We have already begun—the ICC, student committees, and cooperation with the administration. Student apathy is breaking down. I have been only a part of it—the students have done the rest. I have done the rest.

I hope you will allow me to even be more a part of the increasing action here at UNCW. I feel that being SGA Vice-president—president of the Senate—I can guarantee more student action on this beautiful campus.

WEEKLY SPECIAL

FBI Warns of More Terrorist Attacks

by Jack Anderson
with Joe Spear

WASHINGTON—The FBI has secretly alerted the Carter administration to expect a repetition of the siege that recently shook Washington. The Hanafi Muslims attracted worldwide attention to their cause by holding hostages in Washington. The FBI fears this will encourage other terrorist groups to attempt similar dramas.

There have been increasing threats of violence, for example, from the Cuban extremists. They are enraged over President Carter's friendly overtures to Fidel Castro. Many of them were trained by the CIA to fight against Castro. Now they may use their CIA training against Carter.

Some of the most violent radicals, meanwhile, have formed a coalition of terrorist groups. Such diverse groups as the Weather Underground and the Symbionese Liberation Army have now banded together. They call themselves the New World Liberation Front.

Worried FBI experts believe the coalition is far more dangerous than the fragmented groups had been.

Privately, FBI officials have complained that their hands have been tied by recent restrictions on surveillance. According to these officials, they might even have been able to prevent the Hanafi Muslims from taking hostages. But the FBI was compelled to relax the surveillance on the Hanafi Muslims for fear of violating their rights.

Friend of Israel: The official communiques did not tell the full story of the Carter-Rabin talks. President Carter invited the Israeli prime minister upstairs into the family quarters of the White House. For two hours, they talked in private.

This private conversation turned out to be more significant than the official discussions.

Sources close to the president tell us he expressed deep personal feelings for Israel. Our sources describe Carter's attitude toward Israel as "almost religious."

The two leaders developed an unusually warm relationship. Finally, the president swore to Rabin that the United States would preserve Israel. He said he would see to it that "Israel continues to exist for a thousand years."

Oil and Politics: The election of Texas Rep. Jim Wright as the House Democratic leader caught Washington by surprise. It was a major political upset.

We've learned how he did it: the oil industry quietly hustled votes for Wright behind the scenes.

In the old days, oil privileges were protected on Capitol Hill by that powerful pair from Texas, the late Speaker Sam Rayburn and Senate leader Lyndon Johnson.

Fittingly, the Rayburn Memorial Library in Bonham, Tex., was built largely with oil money. A photograph of the dedication showed a grinning Lyndon Johnson with an arm around the late oil millionaire Sidney Richardson.

Those days are now gone. But the oil industry still had enough clout in the backrooms to install Jim Wright as House Democratic leader. Not long afterward, he quietly escorted four oil producers over to the White House. They met with James Schlesinger, the new energy chief.

Then Wright ushered them into the oval office for a 10-minute visit with President Carter himself. That's how oil and politics mix in the backrooms of Washington.

Coffee Conspiracy: There's an untold story behind the high price of coffee. We've learned that the State Dept. quietly encouraged Brazil to raise coffee prices. The State Dept. looked upon this as a form of foreign aid. It's a way to get around Congress, which has been cracking down on foreign aid lately.

But the Brazilians went too far. They tried to buy up coffee beans around the world for instant coffee. It looked as if Brazil might be trying to corner the market. This fear was one reason that coffee prices suddenly went into orbit.

The State Dept. finally protested. It accused Brazil of selling its foreign beans as Brazilian coffee beans. The protest did no good.

Coming Out: Former President Richard Nixon is slowly coming out of seclusion. He has been in touch, for example, with Gerald Ford's running mate, Sen. Bob Dole, R-Kan.

It began last year after Dole inserted an article by Julie Nixon Eisenhower in the Congressional Record. Nixon scrawled a handwritten note on his LaCasa Pacifica stationery thanking the senator.

Wrote Nixon: "Pat joins me in sending our warmest regards to Elizabeth and to you."

Then after the election, Nixon got on the phone to Dole. Nixon urged the defeated vice presidential candidate to get behind the victorious Carter administration.

Congressional Chauvinists: A congressional clearing house has been keeping tabs on how members of Congress have voted on women's rights. We have tabulated the results.

The congressmen with the worst records on women's rights are Phil Crane, R-Ill.; George Hansen, R-Idaho; Ken Robinson, R-Va.; Richard Kelly, R-Fla.; Larry McDonald, D-Ga.; Del Clawson, R-Calif.; and, believe it or not, Congresswoman Marjorie Holt, R-Md.

The SEAHAWK, the official paper of UNCW students, is published weekly for Wednesday distribution. All articles should be in the Seahawk office by five on Friday.

Super Weekend Activities Include Music and Games

The event that we all know and love as Super Sunday has grown to new highs. We now have Super Weekend, Saturday, March 26, and Sunday, March 27. This will be two action-packed days you will not want to miss!

This year the sponsors are SUPB, SGA, and the Concert Committee. Help has been provided by Al Harris, Tom Hunt, Ted Neufang, Parks Griffin, Clint Myers, Chip Plyler, and Mark Sanchez.

Super Saturday

Saturday will be quite a day. Super Weekend Super Stars games are to be held. These are team events which require ten fine men and women for each event. The games will be pyramid building, tug of war, water balloon toss, three-legged race, and VW push. There will be a wheel barrow race if a tie breaker is necessary.

A trophy will be awarded to the winners. To enter, you must be a UNCW club or organization. Final date for the entry of a team is Friday, March 25, at 4:30 p.m. You can enter your team with Al Harris, Student Activities Office in the Pub. The games will start at 11:00 a.m. and run until 2:00 (approximately).

The Super Stars games will take place on Brooks Field, except the VW push which will be run on a road nearby. It should be a great event to watch as well as participate in. Also, there may be a special surprise event!

At 2:00 p.m., come over to the baseball field and watch the Seahawks battle the Charleston Buccaneers in great baseball action. After the game (at 5:00) 3200 PING PONG BALLS will fall from the sky!

Why?, you may ask. Because each one of those balls will be worth $10 in funny SUPB money. This brings us to Casino Night, our own version of Las Vegas.

We are going to turn the Pub into the Hinton James Royal Casino. You must have at least one ping pong ball to exchange for $10 of funny money to get in. You may exchange the money for chips and go at the roulette wheel, craps, and blackjack tables.

Prefer a game of less chance and more skill? Then amble over to the poker tables. When you get thirsty, head for the bar and purchase a beer or soft drink. It will cost you $5.00 a drink (Las Vegas prices too) in funny money.

Hate lines? Then have one of the Tri Us Epsilon girls get your drink for you! She will bring your drink for a smile and a tip (funny money) just like all the big-time joints.

Want some entertainment? We have a down-home revue planned. We will feature the music of Harry Tuetung on guitar and later The Bluegrass Band.

We all hope you have won some money or saved some money because it is then auction time. You are gonna take that funny money and bid for items contributed by local merchants with big hearts. The auction will start at 12:00 p.m. in the Pub.

Super Sunday

Super Sunday will be all that it has been and better! There will be great music, fun games and interesting displays.

The day will kick off at 2:00 between the cafeteria and the library. Walker O'Quinn and the Concert committee have booked Early Wild, the back-up band for Marshall Tucker's last tour. They will play from 2:00 until 4:00.

Then from 4:00 until 6:30, there will be music by the wild First National Rotagilla Band. As usual there will be a variety of displays and games. Bring your money and play anything from frisbee golf to toss-for-a-prize games. Refreshments will be on sale by various clubs.

If your club or organization would like to put up a money-making game or display contact Al Harris. He is in the Student Activities Office in the Pub. The final day to enter a game will be Friday, March 25, at 4:30 p.m.

by Richard Boles
SUPB Chairman

First National Rotagilla Band Comes to UNCW

Insanity is coming to the UNCW campus on March 27, in the form of the 1st National Rotagilla Band. Rotagilla (that's Alligator backwards) is an extremely versatile and entertaining musical ensemble that has one basic philosophy: have fun!

The band offers the best in ragtime, folkrock, and traditional music in its own unique style. Banjos, guitars, mandolin, steel guitar, kazooes, fiddle, trombone, and an electric washtub (or gutbucket) bass combine to create a sound that has kept audiences on their feet throughout the entire south-eastern United States.

The V.I.C.E. squad will present a video-tape of Rotagilla, filmed while they were performing on the "Midnight Special," starting on Wednesday during lunch in the Good Wood Tavern.

In addition to the Rotagilla sound, there will be acts to captivate any audience including the funniest '50s show in America, a nostalgia, "Boys in the Band" show, and even a tongue in cheek tribute to Deliverance called "Dueling Gutbuckets."

Appearing with the Rotagilla Band on Super Sunday will be a good solid producer of Columbia, S.C.—the Erly Wilde Band. If the byword of the last few years in music is "Boogie" then the Erly Wilde Band could be called the sign of the times.

This five-piece band presents a dynamic fusion of "Boogie" and "southern rock 'n roll" reminiscent of the Marshall Tucker Band and other big-time southern bands.

But the resemblance to the MTB is not merely coincidence! The original member of the Erly Wilde Band was Chuck McCorkle whose brother, George, plays with the Marshall Tucker Band.

All in all, the Erly Wilde Band has a bright future.

The combination of lead vocals, bass, keyboards and two guitars is sure to set off a beautiful Super Sunday performance beginning at 2:00 p.m., Sunday, March 27.

Contributing Merchants

The following is a list of merchants that have contributed gifts to be auctioned on Casino Night for Super Weekend. SUPB would like to thank them for their gifts.

SEAHAWK SPORTS

Pick of the Litter

BENCHED

George Benedict

In less than a week, the most exciting season in college basketball will be over, with one team emerging from the madness as national champion.

Who will it be? That's the question that's dominating conversation today. Can Marquette give head coach Al McGuire a national title as a retirement present? Can the Tar Heels four-corner their way to the title? Can Las Vegas outrun the rest of the teams in the race to the top?

Or will UNC-Charlotte pull the upset of the year and win the national crown?

Normally, I don't make predictions, but this year I am forced to make an exception. The phone calls and telegrams from sportswriters all over the nation have urged me, with all my wisdom and courage, to pick the winner. After all that, how could I refuse?

Of the four, Carolina is probably the best balanced team. They have a potent offense, punishing defense, the best bench in the nation, and a tournament-wise coach. Phil Ford and Walter Davis must be in top form, though, if the Heels want to win.

I was very impressed by the University of Nevada at Las Vegas' defeat of Idaho State. Their offense is awesome, and they can literally run an opponent in the ground with fatigue.

Marquette right now is strictly on emotion. This year is head coach Al McGuire's last season, and he has made it very clear he would love to have a national title to finish it off. His team seems to agree with him.

This year the underdog role is being played by UNC-Charlotte. They quite convincingly knocked off number one ranked Michigan to get to the finals. The other three schools don't really know anything about the Forty-Niners, and are afraid Charlotte could sneak up and win it all.

In the past, there's been one semi-final match that's really determined that national champion, with the actual final event serving as an anti-climax. This year, that game should be Carolina vs. UNLV. It's a classic match-up—the finesse and skill of the Tar Heels against the speed and power of the Rebels. It's my opinion that finesse will win. The Rebels won't be able to tire out Carolina, and I don't think they'd know how to handle a four-corners.

The other semi-final match pits Marquette against Charlotte. This week-long resting period between the regional and national contests should prove the determining factor. The teams are similar physically so their psychological states will be important. Charlotte will have a week to think about the contest, and I'm sure fantasies of a national title will appear. Marquette, however, will have the week to think about Coach McGuire, and how badly he wants to finish on top. My pick: Marquette.

So it's now the finals—Carolina vs. Marquette. I have very briefly highlighted the four teams, and picked these two as winners. I'm running out of space, so let me give my choice as national champion. Carolina.

Just loyalty, I guess.

Wilmington Nine Defeat Yale

Varsity baseball began accumulating some victories this week, but at the same time felt some losses.

Ivey League power Yale University suffered back-to-back defeats at the hands of the Seahawks Monday and Tuesday last week. The score was evened, however, when Clemson downed the Hawks later in the week by scores of 8-0 and 4-1. It should be noted, however, that Clemson is a baseball powerhouse in the south, and is expected to win the Atlantic Coast Conference title with little problem.

Five home contests are scheduled this week. On Monday and Tuesday, Western Connecticut State met UNCW. Dartmouth meets the Seahawks on Thursday and Friday with a Saturday contest against Baptist finishing the week. All games begin at 3:00 except the Baptist game, which will start at 2:30.

Lady Netters Seek Improvement

Womens' Tennis at UNCW began its spring schedule yesterday, and is hoping for a much better performance than was given last fall.

(Editor's Note: Womens' Tennis is unique among intercollegiate sports in this area, for its season is divided into two parts--fall and spring. Win-loss records, both team and individual, are combined from the two schedules to determine standings and seedings at the state tournament, schedule this year for April 14-16.

Last fall, inexperience and a tough schedule proved disastrous for the Lady Hawks, who suffered a disappointing season. It is hoped, however, that this gave the young squad the experience it needs to carry it through the spring.

As for the schedule this spring, it is almost as tough as its fall counterpart. Tentatively, the team has five matches scheduled. Only one of those is at home, that being a March 29 event against Campbell College. There are also two matches scheduled against St. Mary's and UNC-Chapel Hill jayvees, both widely known for their tennis programs.

Doubles play seemed to be the saving grace for the squad last fall, and it is expected that doubles competition will again prove successful for the team this spring. The team of Martha Richardson-Theresa Hege was the top-seeded pair on the squad and will probably retain that position lead.

Both Richardson and Hege lead the team in singles competition. Others expecting to contribute heavily include Kim Kanter and Terry Kirby.

Honeycutt Sees Good Season Ahead

Using a combination of experienced veterans and talented freshmen, Coach Larry Honeycutt feels he has the makings of a good mens' tennis team this year.

Though their record is 3-4, Coach Honeycutt said things are progressing about like he thought. With three home matches scheduled this week, he feels the team will probably be over the .500 mark by week's end.

Overall, the team is stronger at the top. According to Honeycutt, this is due to the addition of two new players at the top seeds. Kenny House, a transfer from Fairm College, is the number one seed, with freshman Paul Gemborys taking the number two spot. The two also are the top-seeded doubles pair on the squad.

The number three seed is junior David Shackleford, with veteran Joe Goulding at the number four position. These two players also make up a doubles pair seeded number two on the team.

Rotating at the fifth and sixth seed spots are three players: freshman Colin Summerall, senior Danny Curry, and senior Greg Carroll. Curry and Carroll make up the third seeded doubles pair.

Coach Honeycutt mentioned, however, that there were several players who could move up into the starting ranks. He specifically indicated two freshmen--Doug Shackleford and Greg Dausey.

According to Honeycutt, the team is sound all the way through, and better than last year's 10-9 squad that placed second in the NAIA District 29 tournament. "We have better quality players," said Honeycutt.

Some indication of the team's soundness is evident in their roster. Of the nine players mentioned by Honeycutt, four are freshmen and three are veterans of last year's team, making this year's squad a very balanced one.

Rowing Marks Water Sports Start

Every morning at 6 a.m. one can find the UNCW Crew having regular practices on the choppy tidal water of the Intracoastal Waterway. On February 11, after several years of patient struggle, a 32-foot, green, 10 man, 1000 lb. barge was pushed into the water under a clear sky and a cold breeze, thus making the beginning of UNCW water sports.

The oarsmen developed the basic rowing skills in the stable coaching barge, under the guidance of Coach John Anderson. Mastering the techniques of rowing is a tedious and often frustrating process in which the oarsmen must learn blade control, slide control, balance, and precise timing--all of this before he can worry about building the endurance necessary to race. Once the fundamentals were learned, the oarsmen moved into a four-man barge configuration to develop the teamwork so essential in crew. After the timing and balance was practiced in the barges, they graduated to the new 8-oared racing shell and began the demanding job of developing a racing crew.

With the help of the SGA, the crew was able to purchase the new racing shell. Local businessmen and other interested citizens chipped in materials, money and time needed to build the boathouse. Coach Anderson, Ray Robinson, and Jeff Hawkins spent much of their Christmas break building the barge after Mr. David Smith, the Vocational Education teacher at Roland-Grise

Junior High School volunteered to help and received permission for them to use to school shop.

Recently, the crew honored Senior Bob Browning by electing him the first Captain of the UNCW Crew. He is also a Crew Leader in the Rowing Club. Bob is a history major whose home town is Durham, North Carolina. He rows bow position for the crew.

Members of the crew include Bruce Evans at stroke, Steve Oakley, Mike Gallagher, Kelly Swing, Rob Burks, Tom and Will Raines, David Wilkins, Tom Witner, Skip Swanton, Bob Browning, John Turner, Brian Wooten and Phil Rackley as coxswain. Ray Robinson manages the team.

Are you interested in S*E*X? Remember that ad way back last semester in the Seahawk? Well S*E*X alias the Society of Enterprising Xenophiles, finally made it to UNCW.

We've done a couple of things since getting here; some of you may remember the Bike Race, the Maco expedition, and the infamous GONG SHOW, but S*E*X is more than all of that. We wanted to bring a society to UNCW that did not conform to the norm. We wanted a haven for anyone and everyone who had the slightest interest in science fiction, fantasy, parapsychology, the Occult sciences, and the Unknown.

We are also an investigative group, and plan to be taking field expeditions to investigate first-hand things belonging to the category of the unknown such as: The Maco Light, The Devil's Tramping Ground, Haunted houses, UFO sightings, Bigfoot sightings, Star Trek and Science Fiction Conventions and other things that we may become interested in.

We are also planning to utilize some of the money made by our ventures to bring things of interest to UNCW such as: Films, Lecturers like Gene Roddenberry, our own Star Trek and Science Fiction Conventions, perhaps a Mini Fair featuring things of the Occult and unknown, and we are planning to piece together our own Science Fiction, Occult, and Unknown library.

If all of this or even a part of it sounds like something you might be interested in, then drop by a meeting of the S*E*X. There are no fees and we meet every Sunday night in H-104 (Hoggard Hall) at 7:00 p.m. As we said in our first advertisements, "Come on out and give S*E*X a try; we're sure you'll get a bang out of it."

Research Competition

The UNCW Research Committee announces that April 15 is the deadline for entering the 4th Annual Research Competition. Entry is restricted to rising seniors interested in performing original research, and prospective candidates should contact their respective department chairmen for more detailed information. All research proposals must be submitted to department chairmen by April 15.

The Genesis of Gabriel

Peter Gabriel

The Genesis of Gabriel

If Mick Jagger was to leave the Rolling Stones tomorrow, which of the two would carry on the Stones' sound? It's hard to say, but Genesis was faced with a similar dilemma when lead singer, Peter Gabriel, left the group. To everyone's surprise Genesis' album A Trick of the Tail showed little absence of Gabriel. Drummer Phil Collins was even able to cover the vocal parts in a voice that sounded like Gabriel's. The verdict seemed to be that Gabriel did not carry that much weight with Genesis. However by Genesis' Wind and Wuthering album the material sounded weak and faceless. Peter Gabriel has now surfaced with his first solo album. An album with material that holds its own with the best Genesis has to offer.

Starting off Peter Gabriel is "Moribund the Burgermeister." A cut that uses several weird effects and voices to create a mood of both horror and comedy. The only fault with the tune is that the lyrics were not included in the lp. From the bits that I caught it seems like a pretty interesting story.

All material on this album was written by Gabriel except for a vaudeville-type tune, "Excuse Me", which was co-written with Martin Hall. This and "Waiting For The Big One" are the only duff cuts. The style of music they represent are really just a waste of time for a talent like Peter Gabriel.

Even with a couple of so-so tunes this album runs a strong possibility for being one of the year's best. "Solsbury Hill" is a really beautiful tune that hits an uplifting pace at its chorus. This tune alone make the album worth buying.

Cuts like "Modern Love" and "Slowburn" are pretty hard rock tunes for someone who can write such melodic tunes as "Solsbury Hill." I can't recall even Genesis doing any tunes that hard. A couple of the tunes on the album can't be classified too well in any one category. They occasionally may recall bits, and pieces of other forms, but over all they are very original. Combining strong material and excellent instrumental talent has made this album good. Add to this a very evident care which has been used in its recording. Instruments seem to start out a few at a time then swell up into a full orchestra.

To top the whole thing off is Gabriel's voice which is excellent and is put to thorough use on this album. It is really pleasing to see that at least somebody these days is concerned with putting out a decent album. Steve Harvey

VICE Shows

The VICE will present a documentary on Mohammed Ali entitled "Skills, Brains and Guts" in the Goodwood Tavern March 21-15 at 12 noon daily.

"A Man for all Seasons"

On March 30 at 8:00 pm in Kenan Auditorium, the History Department will present a movie entitled "A Man for all Seasons." Winner of six academy awards, including best picture of the year, the movie features an impressive cast of such actors as Paul Scofield, Robert Shaw, and Orson Wells. The movie is free, and students, faculty and other members of the academic community are cordially invited to attend.

The movie dramatizes the opposition of one man, Sir Thomas More, to Henry VIII's attempts to make himself of the English Church. While in the service of the king, More advanced rapidly through the government to a position of great prominence as Lord Chancellor. However, his opposition to the annulment of Henry's marriage to Catherine or Aragon, who had failed to produce a male heir, soon forced him into retirement.

But More remained an influential man in the kingdom, and Henry deemed it necessary that he submit to the king's high-handed policies. When More refused to take the Oath of Supremacy, he was condemned for a lengthy stay to the Tower of London. Though he courageously and skillfully resisted the government's attempts to involved him in treasonable activities, he was ultimately sent to the block for execution.

Reader's Theater Will Present "Doonesbury"

G.B. Trudeau's popular comic strip "Doonesbury" is famous for its biting political satire and its perceptive presentation of the underlying truth in our everyday lives. Since its beginning, the strip has followed the personal development of such characters as: Michael J. Doonesbury, a young representative of middle-class America (played by Wayne Dunlap) "Megaphone" Mark Slackmeyer, the local campus radical (Steve Harvey) Zonker Harris, a drug connoisseur (Charlie Suppler) Nichole, a young feminist (Thea Hagepanos) Joanie Caucus, an older feminist who leaves her family and enters Berkeley law school (Susan Ritchey) Virginia, Joanie's black roommate at Berkeley (Artesa Bannan) Virginia's boyfriend, Clyde (Darrell Hope)

Each of these characters is related to another in some way, so that the progression of the strips create a story that flows just as our own daily lives flow—with some certainty and with many false starts. Trudeau allows us to laugh at ourselves, but he also realizes that it is the humorous part of our personalities that makes life interesting and exciting.

"Doonesbury" will be presented on March 25, 26, 27 at 8:30 p.m. in the S.R.O. Theatre at UNCW. General admission is $1. Students are admitted free. Reservations can be made by calling 791-4330, ext. 332.

Dinner Theater Presents "Luv"

The UNCW Concert Committee would like to cordially invite all UNCW students to attend the Curtain Call Company's dinner theatre production of Luv, Wednesday night, March 23, at 8:00 p.m. in the campus cafeteria. The play has received terrific reviews from its off-Broadway appearance and should prove to be a truly hilarious performance. The play is directed by Sam Garner, a long-time actor and director in our area, for the Lower Cape Fear Council for the Arts.

Dinner will begin at approximately 8:00 p.m. and should be the culinary delight of this semester. The menu reads like this:

Main Course

Whaley Wins Election

By Bobby Parker

Karin 'Whaley, a rising Junior from Greensboro, has been elected president of the Student Government Association for the academic year 1977-78. Ms. Whaley, who currently serves as president of the Sophomore class, defeated Ron Coley in a run-off election held Wednesday and Thursday.

Whaley had led the four-candidate field in the first election but she failed to garner a majority of votes cast. The official vote tally in the run-off election, according to Board of Elections chairman Julius Metts, was 303 votes for Whaley and 221 for Coley.

In addition to the presidential run-off, there was also a second election for SGA vice-president. Ken Lilly won that race with 250 votes over opponent Greta Lint who collected 199.

Lilly is a Junior and has filled a Senate seat from that class for the past year. He, too, led in the first election over Lint and another opponent.

Also on the run-off ballot were two elections for Sophomore class offices. John

Karin Whaley

Whaley was elected class president and Tom Witner won tie race for class vice-president. Whaley defeated Mark Sanchez by a 72-60 margin. Witner outpolled Darrell Hope 64-58. Both winners will be returning to the Senate from positions that they held in the Freshman class this year.

When asked about her victory, Whaley said, "I intend to put UNCW back on its feet with statewide relations." She emphasized that this is not a derogatory comment on the administration of the current president Paul Laird. It appeared, however, that she may have been referring to former president William Robinson who resigned his office earlier this year after an impeachment motion was passed against him in the Student Senate.

Whaley also gave several indications as to what priorities she will carry into the office, which she will assume April 14. She stated that she would like to help "improve the efficiency of the Senate," suggesting that senators be instructed in parliamentary procedure.

One major action will be a rewriting of the SGA constitution. Whaley said that she will name a committee headed by Ray Warren and including student court justices to work on this project. The new constitution will go before the student body for approval next year, Whaley said.

The president-elect also said that she will be investigating the possibility of combining existing SGA committees "to cut down on duplication." She mentioned as a possible merge the Concert and Dance Committees.

"I'll definitely have office hours," Whaley stated, adding that she will continue to live in a dormitory and be available on campus.

Faculty Lecture Features Psychologist

"Early Experience and Later Behavior" is the title of the UNCW Faculty Lecture to be delivered tonight, Wednesday March 30, in King Hall Aud. on the UNCW campus.

Dr. Robert T. Brown of the UNCW Psychology Department will discuss research on the ways in which different types of early experience may or may not have a lasting effect on behavior, how we may account for these effects, and the implications for such practical concerns as child rearing, early education, and treatment of exceptional children. Among the work to be described is some of his own research on imprinting and early environment.

At present, there is considerable controversy over the importance of early experience, partly because of increasing evidence that Freud over-emphasized the importance of early social and psychosexual experience and partly from the apparently limited effects of Headstart. Dr. Brown will try to clarify the issues involved in the controversy and will describe areas where early experience has permanent and irreversible effects.

Burkie Repeats as Short Story Contest Winner

by Anne Morris

Mrs. Doris Burkie has won first place in the annual Jessie Rehder Short Story Contest for the third straight year. The winners of the 1977 contest were announced Tuesday, March 22, at an awards presentation in the SRO Theatre.

Mrs. Burkie, a senior English major, received the $100 prize for "Quietly in Her Sleep." Doug Swink of the Drama and Speech Department read excerpts from the story at the awards presentation. The story will appear in the spring issue of Atlantis, the UNCW literary magazine, along with the other winning stories.

Gerald Cooney won $50 for his second place story, "You Can't Kill a Dead Man," and Lance Smith won third place and $30 for "Flags and Broken Glass."

An honorable mention and $10 went to Reed Rhodes for "Two's a Crowd." Laura Hales also won $10 and an honorable mention for her story, "Like All Children."

The Jessie Rehder Short Story Contest is sponsored by the UNCW English Department and financed by the Jessie Rehder Memorial Fund. The contest is held in honor of Miss Jessie Rehder who served for many years as the director of creative writing at UNC-Chapel Hill.

Miss Rehder, a native Wilmingtonian, was both a writer and a teacher, and she encouraged many students in their writing during her years at Chapel Hill. Her writings included fiction, criticisms, and textbooks. She is best known for her novel, Remembrance Way.

Judges for this year's contest were Dr. Joanne Corbett, Dr. Terry Mount, and Peter Smith. Excerpts from Miss Rehder's book, The Young Writer at Work, were read by Cindy Shell, associate editor of Atlantis.

The winners were announced by Mr. Lynn Covey, President of the Lower Cape Fear Council for the Arts. A reception was given for the winners and guests by the North Carolina Junior Sorosis prior to the awards presentation.

Opinion

Welcome, Ms. Whaley

It is with much optimism that we welcome Karin Whaley to the office of student government president. She has the ability and experience to bring new vitality back into the SGA, and we have no reason to expect anything less than her best efforts.

Her job will not be simple. She enters the leadership of an organization plagued with numerous problems, not the least of which is its fallen reputation among the student body.

Karin has served this university well over the past two years. She has been one of "those two or three senators" who have carried out the real responsibilities of a student senator.

Perhaps more importantly, she has gained the respect of administration officials and faculty as well as students. Karin's administration can only bolster the role of the student body in the decisions for a growing UNCW. Bobby Parker

Elections Chairman Issues Appreciation

I would like to take this opportunity as elections committee chairman to thank all of those who assisted with the elections these past two weeks. There were many who sacrificed their time and efforts to make it all possible by manning polls, counting votes and publicizing the elections. I would especially like to thank Bobby Parker and the Sea-hawk and Carson Benson of VICE for their efforts in covering the elections and keeping the students informed.

A vote of thanks should also be given by all of the students to Paul Laird for all of the time he has put into filling the presidency. The voters should be commended for taking the time and interest to vote. Voter turnout is improving and in the future should be even better.

UNCW as a growing university has a bright future with many challenges and problems. It is my hope that all of the students and candidates (who won or lost) will continue to support the Student Government Association and give students a voice in what happens on campus. Julius Metts

Lint Urges Student Input

To my fellow students,

I thank all of you who voted in both elections--for any or all offices. I was very proud that 15 per cent of the student body voted in the general election. I was shocked when almost 20 per cent voted in the run-offs. Student action at the polls is constructive!

I congratulate the winners. Karin should make us a good, devoted president; she is experienced. I am glad that at least someone in the SGA office will have had active and productive experience with the students, the Senate, the SGA and related committees, and the Administration. Experience is constructive!

I urge you students to attend the forthcoming Senate meetings when the new budget for next year is proposed. Many of you wonder why the annuals cost, why the newspaper prints only one issue a week, why the radio station, Atlantis, minority affairs, VICE, rowing club, etc. get so much, or so little, money. Go see how your elected representatives spend your money. Are they really representing you? Go and ask questions. Speak up. Student input is constructive. (Remember--$100,000 is 1/10 of $1 million.)

I thank my supporters. Sincerely, Greta Anita Lint Outgoing Soph. Senator

WEEKLY SPECIAL

Chilean Dictators Had Role In Embassy Row Killings

by Jack Anderson
with Joe Spear

WASHINGTON -- Last September, the former Chilean Foreign Minister, Orlando Letelier, was blown up as he was driving down Embassy Row here. A co-worker, Ronni Moffit, also died in the blast. The lone survivor of the tragedy, Ronni's husband, Mike Moffit, telephoned our office afterward in anguish. We promised to help him try to track down the killers.

We now have a list of 10 key suspects. We're not ready to name them, because we don't have the final proof. But we have a pretty good idea of what happened.

We are convinced that the real culprits are the military dictators of Chile. They have used their dreaded secret police, known by the whispered name DINA, to hound leaders in exile abroad. The military junta was particularly upset with Letelier because he had maneuvered behind the scenes to block a Dutch loan to Chile.

According to our sources, DINA contacted one of the veterans of the Bay of Pigs, an officer of Brigade 2506. This was the unit that the CIA carefully trained in demolition techniques.

Allied with the brigade was a special unit called Commandos L. One member had fought in the Congo with the Cuban fighters. Another had worked for a mobster in Havana. Another was a chemist, with a talent for rigging explosives. The CIA trained them to be terrorists.

This was the killer squad, we believe, that planted the bomb under the driver's seat of Letelier's car.

But there's more to the story. In January, some of them were hauled before a secret grand jury. Suddenly, they received a stark warning on January 7 to keep their mouths shut. At least that's our interpretation of the incident.

For on January 7, Juan Jose Peruviero, a Bay of Pigs veteran, was gunned down gangland-style in front of his Miami home. We believe the execution was a warning to anyone who might be tempted to talk about the Letelier assassination.

We don't know whether the case will ever be cracked. We've done our best to keep our promise to Mike Moffit. Letelier's widow, meanwhile, has seen Attorney General Griffin Bell, and reminded him quietly that her husband was killed six months ago while he was under the protection of the United States.

Luxurious Lifestyle: The society pages of the Washington newspapers are often more revealing than the front pages. In Washington's political atmosphere, social acceptance is as fragile as a crystal champagne glass. The names dropped at the posh parties reflect the rise and fall of the power seekers.

Of course, the Democrats now dominate the Washington social whirl. President Carter's bright young staff chief, Hamilton Jordan, has replaced Henry Kissinger as the toast of the social set.

Some of the most ostentatious parties are held in the ornate rooms of the Capitol building. Any senator or congressman can reserve a room simply by writing a letter to the Senate Rules Committee or the Speaker's office.

Then he can invite his friends for a bash under the tinkling cut-glass chandeliers. He can borrow a dozen or two potted palms from the National Botanical Gardens to give the room a romantic atmosphere.

All he has to pay for is the food and drink. But the Senate and House food services will cater his party inexpensively. Everything else -- the rooms, the palms, the clean-up crews -- can be charged to the taxpayers.

Even when the Senate is in session, senators can duck into one of the private Capitol rooms for a drink. Here they can find the stimulation that might be lacking in a dull debate.

For years, the late Sen. Wayne Morse led a lonely campaign against these unlicensed bars. The thought of inebriated senators casting votes on vital national issues upset him.

But colleagues looked on Morse's opposition as a quaint idiosyncrasy. And the festivities between roll calls went happily on, unhindered by the Senate and unreported by the press.

Other rooms are dedicated to the further comfort and convenience of our legislators. There are steam baths to help senators recover from the rigors of law-making. There are also two swimming pools where they can cavort in the nude to soothe tired muscles. And on the House side, congressmen enjoy similar privileges in their own cloistered surroundings.

Taken together, all this forms a pattern of living that can be likened to the excesses of the Roman Empire, whose palaces gave birth to the architectural form on Capitol Hill.

Caps and Gowns

All graduating seniors should pick up their caps and gowns in the bookstore immediately! This will probably be the last week.

The Society of Enterprising Xenophiles will present its first full length feature film presentation: Beyond the Time Barrier Monday night, April 4, at 7:30 P.M. in the Arnold Kimsey King Aud., in King Hall. Admission prices are 50 cents for students, $1 general. All proceeds will go to the Society's continual struggle to bring good quality items of interest to our campus. The film starts at 8:00.

Tired of the Ordinary?

By Alan K. DeWitt

When was the last time you saw yourself paddling about in a sparkling blue ocean, while feeling the warmth of the sun's rays shining on your naked back, and suddenly you were awakened by a desk top because your sleeping face fell on it?

Or maybe you were attacking a complex integral, but could not decide which method to use, and inevitably "she" walked through your study area and swayed your concentration towards a more pertinent activity.

Whatever your case, don't despair! You were merely experiencing symptoms of the "Environment Fatigue Syndrome." It is currently sweeping through most major institutes of higher education in epidemic proportions. However, help is on its way.

Habitat-Systems Scientists from UNC-Burgaw have recently researched our campus and concluded that this "syndrome" definitely does exist here. It is usually found lingering in the quiet corners of our library and dormitories. Some cases have even been cited within our classrooms!

The scientists suggested that the only way to overcome the "Environment Fatigue Syndrome" is to seek out newer study areas. When searching, keep in mind that a good study area is one that is comfortable, non-distracting, and capable of enhancing cranial stimulation. Until students are conscious of this syndrome, they will continue to have bumped heads and flunked tests without ever knowing why!

Study areas should be . . . comfortable . . .
non-distracting . . .
and enhancing to cranial stimulation.

Criminal Justice Award

All institute, college, and university students are eligible to submit papers for the James Merritt Annual Criminal Justice Award.

Five papers will be selected from those submitted. Their authors will present them at the annual meeting of the North Carolina Association of Criminal Justice Educators to be held in Boone, NC, in October, 1977. Cash awards of $100, $60, and $40 will be given for first, second, and third place respectively. The winning papers will also be printed in the association's Criminal Justice Notes.

An original and five copies of each paper must be submitted to Dr. Dennis Dorin, Assistant Professor, Department of Political Science, UNC-Charlotte, Charlotte, NC 28223, no later than September 1, 1977.

For more information, contact the criminal justice instructors in the Sociology Department, Hoggard Hall.

Spring Dance

On Thursday night, March 31, the Spring Dance will be held at Pistol Pete's Nightclub on Market Street from 8:00-1:00. The band playing for the dance will be a dynamic, super versatile band from Virginia called The High and the Mighty.

This band has played in Wilmington previously, but they have gotten more recognition recently and have the chance to become a top flight recording and concert band. The High and the Mighty play songs ranging from Top 40's Disco to dynamic rock, which are all played with a gut-thumping, get-down sound.

Their vocal prowess equals their instrumentation, and for anyone who wants to get their ya-ya's out, this group is primo to dance to.

The dance starts at 8:00, with disco music until 9:00, then The High and the Mighty will play from 9:00 until 1:00. All UNCW students and one guest will be admitted free with a validated student ID. Draft beer will be 35 cents and setups will cost 40 cents. These are reduced prices.

So come out early, get cranked up, and enjoy the music of The High and the Mighty for our Spring Dance '77.

Also, people are still needed for the coming school year to work on the Dance Committee and a chairman is needed, as I am graduating this spring. Contact Kirk Grumbine at 791-3963 or Al Harris at S-105 at the Student Union Bldg. Kirk Grumbine (CPS)--As if the prospect of water rationing in the West weren't bad enough, a Nebraska scientist is warning that the world could be in store for an ice age in 15 years.

"I'm not a doomsday person," says C. Bertrand Schultz, executive director of the Nebraska Academy of Science. "I'm an optimistic person. But if we are headed towards an ice age, it will happen within 10 to 15 years, not 150 to 250, like some people think."

Schultz says that study of the migration and extinction patterns of various animals shows that droughts often are followed by ice ages. He says that the Eastern U.S. will be spared in the event of creeping permafrost, but warns that western states including California, Nevada, Arizona, New Mexico, Colorado, Kansas, Nebraska, the Dakotas, and Missouri could become cold, dry deserts.

"People say, 'Oh, we're never going to have another ice age,' but it's happened in the past and we should be prepared," Schultz says. Experts are assembling data, he continues, and should know within a few years whether the world is slipping into another deep freeze.

(CPS)--No kidding. Ronald Taylor and Barbara Carter have written the ultimate cookbook, Entertaining With Insects. What more can we say except to show you one of their recipes:

Mealworm Chow Mein
1 cup celery, chopped
1/4 cup onion, chopped
2 tablespoons green pepper, chopped
1 tablespoon butter
1/2 cup cooked mealworms, finely chopped
1/2 cup chow mein noodles
1 and 1/2 cups Insect Broth (you'll have to buy the book or use your-own)
1/2 cup light cream
1/8 teaspoon pepper

In a large skillet, cook and stir celery, onion and green pepper in the butter until the onion is tender. Stir in mealworms, 1/4 cup of the noodles, and the remaining ingredients. Pour into ungreased 1 and 1/2 quart casserole. Sprinkle casserole with remaining chow mein noodles. Bake at 350 degrees, uncovered, for 30 minutes.

Mens' Tennis Team Nabs Three Straight

Men's Tennis was very successful this past week, racking up three straight victories and pushing their win-loss record to 6-4.

The three schools which fell victim to UNCW were USC-Sumter, Pembroke State, and Francis Marion. All three matches were at home.

This week Coach Larry Honeycutt's team will be traveling. Yesterday they met N.C. Wesleyan at Rocky Mount, and tomorrow they'll be in Sumter, S.C. in a return match against USC-Sumter. They conclude the week Saturday when they meet Francis Marion College in Florence, S.C.

Both USC-Sumter and Francis Marion have been defeated by the Hawks earlier in the season. N.C. Wesleyan is the unknown factor. Coach Honeycutt reports that he has very little information about the Wesleyan tennis program.

The Seahawks are looking forward to the Azalea Classic tournament, to be held April 15 and 16 here at UNCW. Scheduled to compete in the round-robin affair include UNCW, UNC-Charlotte, Campbell College, and Pfeiffer.

While most of the individual records are similar to the team's, there have been some exceptions. Paul Gemborys, the number two seeded player, has a 8-2 record, and Colin Summerall, rotating with two other players at seeds five and six, has compiled a 7-2 record. The number two-seeded doubles team of Danny Curry and Greg Carroll have also posted a fine record, winning eight times against two losses this season.

The seedings for singles competition have remained unchanged since last week. Kenny House is still the number one seed, followed by Gemborys, David Shackelford, and Joe Goulding. Three players (Summerall, Curry, and Carroll) rotate in the last two seed positions.

Coach Honeycutt is pleased with his team's success thus far. He feels most are playing as he expected, and the team is about where he thought it would be at the start of the season.

Varsity Baseball Off to Poor Start

Baseball at UNCW is experiencing one of its worst starts in recent years.

At this point, the varsity squad is 3-10, with the three wins coming against Yale (twice) and Virginia Commonwealth. It should be noted, though, that four of those losses came against Clemson and Stetson. Clemson is currently leading the Atlantic Coast Conference with a 25-0 record, and Stetson is regarded as one of the two baseball powers in the South.

The Seahawks have had two major problems this year—hitting and defense. The team lost last year's two top hitters due to graduation, and have not yet found anyone to fill those spots. Team hitting has been improving in the last few games, however.

Poor defense has been a major stumbling block for the Hawks. "We've been making both physical and mental errors," stated Dave Miller, assistant coach of the varsity squad. According to Coach Miller, good pitching and strong defense make for a successful college baseball team, and the lack of good defense has held the Seahawks back.

Pitching has been the saving grace for the squad. In the last six to eight games, pitching has improved greatly.

One failure, though no fault of the squad's, is the failure to make the "big play." "Our opponents have been able to make the big play when they needed it, and we haven't," commented Coach Miller.

One cannot accuse the team of not wanting to win. The squad has been playing with a lot of "hustle" the last few games, and all the team members have a very strong desire to win.

The Seahawks have a four-day break this week before facing a tough Chapel Hill squad Thursday. Miller thinks this break will help the season's outlook.

Though the baseball program has been scheduling a large number of Division I ball clubs for the past few years, Coach Miller said the team wanted especially to have a respectable year in their first year of sole Division I representation. (In the past, baseball has belonged both to NCAA Division I and the NAIA.)

"If our hitting keeps improving . . . and our defense improves," said Coach "we should be a much better ball club."

Warner Outlines Intramural Program

By Kent Wiggins
David (Pop) Warner, UNCW Director of Intramurals, says intramural programs have steadily improved since their beginning at UNCW six years ago.

In a recent interview, Warner said he started intramural programs at this campus six years ago.

Warner feels that intramurals should be a laboratory for skills students have learned in their basic physical education classes.

The intramural activities are open for men and women with the exception of flag football (only for men.)

Warner says the budget for intramural programs this year is approximately $6,000.

That may sound like a lot but all the money is used to pay for the administering of the activities, equipment and officials.

Warner says 90 per cent of the money goes directly back to students for services they perform.

Warner's staff gets some help from students enrolled in an intramural course. Each student in the class is responsible for some event.

These students take care of organizing, administration of, officiating, publicity and anything needed to make the program successful.

This activity gives the student practical experience in setting up an intramural program.

Warner has been in intramural activities for many years. He started programs at Berry College, Georgia, Frostburg State Teachers College, Maryland, and Davis-Elkins College in West Virginia.

Warner also was a director of athletic activities in the Coast Guard.

GENESIS

WIND & WUTHERING
ATCO SD-36-144

PETER GABRIEL

ATCO SD-36-147

In 1973, Peter Gabriel led Genesis to America where the group should have become the biggest thing from England since the Beatles. Unfortunately, Southern Rock had already hit it big and the States were so engulfed with that sound that no progressive rock was allowed to intrude.

In turn, Roxy Music, Lindisbarn, Jack the Lad, Genesis and many others were all pushed under the rug during a period when they were at their best. Since that time Genesis has managed to push in on the American market, first with one of the most unusual stage shows since Arthur Brown's FIRE and second on the album scene with SELLING ENGLAND BY THE POUND and THE LAMB LIES DOWN ON BROADWAY.

Then in early 1975, Peter Gabriel left Genesis to go solo.

GENESIS - The Beginning Of Rock's Renaissance

This was considered the end for all because it was thought Gabriel was Genesis as Genesis was Gabriel. This turned out to be false as Genesis proved that they were just as good without Gabriel with the album, TRICK OF THE TAIL. In fact, Gabriel was not missed at all.

Late 1976 saw the release of the second new Genesis album which again proved the group was as good as ever. WIND AND WUTHERING is as strong as album as any they have done as the lyric and music hit on the edge of perfected rock.

All lyric of Genesis are true poems and ballads. They never have to depend on repeating a line fifty times as their lyrics tell stories and tales of great adventures. As THE LAMB LIES DOWN was a novel, WIND AND WUTHERING is a collection of short stories.

The music style the group uses is also remarkable for the songs are true compositions. There are very few times when the measures are repeated over and over the same way. They are improvised upon so as a composition of classical form is evolved.

The result of very well thought out lyrics and music give Genesis a unique style to say the least. For example, "All In A Mouse's Night" is a very unusual cut in that, it is presented in three points of view. It evolves around a mouse who leaves his hole and how he sees the world around him. As a couple in the room see the mouse their feelings are reflected and finally a cat sees the mouse as his dinner. The mouse then escapes back to his hole to await the next night's adventures.

On the other hand, Peter Gabriel has just this year released his first solo album.

his ego by becoming solo. He has even taken new musicians and taught them to play similar to his old group. This could be the one fault of the album for the playing qualities of the original group are lost.

Gabriel, however, is at his best which makes up for the slightly less powerful musicians, and the material also stays as strong as ever.

"Here Comes the Flood" is as good a song as Gabriel as written and could have come directly from THE LAMB LIES DOWN. "Excuse Me" is a little difference than any sound Gabriel has yet used and sounds a little like David Essex. And then there is "Down the Dolce Vita" complete with the London Symphony Orchestra which brings the album to a totally well rounded experience.

So now you have Peter Gabriel and you have Genesis. Both are the now music.

It is possible to say that in 2001 people will look back and say this type music is Classical Rock, or Rock Music's Renaissance; with Rock and Roll as its roots, the 1960's as its experimental era and Gabriel/Genesis as a new beginning. A beginning of perfected rock music.

Thank You

Biology Dept. Takes in Pet Pelican

The Biology Department of UNCW has a temporary house guest—a six month old brown pelican who has acquired the name Herbert.

Herbert, sick and unable to fly, was found on Wrightsville Beach four weeks ago by two young boys. The pelican was transported to the office of Dr. James F. Parnell of the Biology Department and left in his care.

Herbert, with his neck straight and his long bill extended outward, is about two feet tall. His oblong body is thickly covered with layers of beautiful brown feathers which give him his title—the brown pelican.

Herbert was temporarily placed in a large box in Dr. Parnell's biology lab, although this new home was not much to his liking. He has made his presence felt by snapping at people curious to examine this strange creature. A number of sore appendages and other parts of the human anatomy currently bear witness to his liveliness.

In one such incident, Herbert gave biology instructor Frank Chapman a substantial nip on the leg as Chapman was writing on the blackboard. The instructor's reaction was pained astonishment; the students' reaction, intense amusement.

Subsequently, Herbert was removed from the lab to the Biology Department's new greenhouse. He seemed content with his new accommodations, where he had plenty of room to flap his wings and run about.

UNCW's botanists, whose plants were subjected to considerable physical alterations during Herbert's exercises, were not at all content. So once again Herbert was moved to another location.

He did not stay long in the small chain-link fence drying yard behind the Marine Science building. Herbert displayed his anger by thrashing back and forth against the chain fence. His webbed feet were also torn in his efforts to get out.

Further observation by Mrs. Nikki Bane, who has assumed care of the pelican, showed he had lost one toe and was shivering from the cold.

Herbert is now recovering in Dr. Parnell's lab once again. Hopefully, despite this minor setback, Herbert will soon be well enough to return once more to his native coastal habitat.

Outdoor Volunteers Needed

Spring is coming and volunteer needs focus on outdoor activities at this time, according to Ms. Carolyn Gruelle, Director of the Cape Fear Voluntary Action Center (VAC).

For the adult whose interest and skill is horsemanship, there is the excellent opportunity to share this hobby with a group of 4-H Club young people. The number of Club meetings per month and the time of these meetings are both flexible.

The Girls' Club of Wilmington is eager to recruit a volunteer instructor from the many devoted tennis buffs in the area. This volunteer would help plan a series of tennis classes to be held during a five-week period starting in April. These would be beginning tennis classes for the Girls Club members.

Interested persons may learn more about these and many other volunteer opportunities by calling the VAC office, 762-9611.

SUMMER SCHOOL

By Bobby Parker

Many students complain year after year that the summer school here at UNCW does not offer a wide variety of courses in either of the two summer sessions. Dr. John Stokes, assistant to the academic dean, is the director of summer school, and he explains that the number of courses offered is directly dependent on the size of summer enrollment.

The budget for summer sessions, Stokes said, is comprised partially of state funds, but the bulk of funding must come from student tuition and fees. Each individual department submits its own schedule to the academic dean and must assure that the courses offered will be taken by a sufficient number of students.

"We need to make accurate projections of what the enrollment will be," Stokes said. "If we offer new courses and the enrollment does not measure up" then it is not practical to spend state funds for those courses, Stokes added.

Stokes indicated that summer enrollment has been increasing steadily over the years, especially since this campus became part of the UNC system. There was, however, only a "modest increase," Stokes said, in the enrollment of last year compared to the previous year.

In the 1976 summer school, 1434 students attended the first session, while 1098 enrolled in the second. Stokes pointed out that all of these were not full-time students, however.

It is an individual faculty member's choice whether or not to teach during the summer, but Stokes noted that most faculty "probably will want to teach in the summer."

He added that some instructors, particularly in the sciences, are involved in research over the summer and, therefore, do not teach.

As to the number of courses for the 1977 summer school, 133 are offered in the first session (including 13 labs) and 107 in the second (12 labs).

Illustrative of the overall schedule are the somewhat limited offerings of several of the larger departments on campus. For example, the biology curriculum for the first summer session lists only seven courses, including three labs. The English department offers five courses in the same session, while there are but six business courses.

One area of complaint about the schedule is the lack of upper level courses offered.

For example, of the 133 courses in the first session, only 45 are 300-400 level. This would seem a contradiction to enrollment percentages since students are generally more likely to attend summer school in their latter years of college.

But Stokes noted that the summer school program is not only directed at UNCW students. There are, in fact, efforts underway to promote enrollment growth by attracting students from other campuses who will be in the Wilmington area during the summer.

Special courses are also being offered such as an "elder hostel" program which is aimed at senior citizens and sponsored by the Office of Continuing Education for a three-week period.

Stokes cautioned that the curriculum here cannot be appropriately compared to that of other state institutions. He said that even those schools of similar size would have differential factors in such aspects as the geographical location. For instance, this campus draws a largely rural student body while others might attract more urban dwellers.

Despite a seemingly widespread view among students that the summer school is not adequate, Stokes said that his office has not received any recent complaints. Dean of Students Helena Cheek indicated the same of her office, although Joyce Jackson of the Student Affairs Office said that she has heard complaints in previous years, but none this year.

Stokes indicated that the best answer for student grievances is through the individual departments, since each plans its own summer curriculum. Dean Cheek stated that she felt the major complaint, if any, would not be the volume of all courses but the volume of upper level courses.

It would seem that the summer school at UNCW is like most everything else on the campus: it is growing, but not fast enough for some students. The problem of summer offerings will only be solved by increased enrollment, and it stands to reason that enrollment will only increase when the selection of courses improves.

One hand scratches the other.

Fledgling Editor Houghton Replaced

By Bobby Parker

Linda Houghton has been replaced as editor of the 1977 Fledgling by Eric McLamb, who formerly served as business manager for the yearbook. Houghton, a senior, stepped down from the position after the publications board had voted overwhelmingly to release her from the job.

According to yearbook advisor or Gwen Culbreth, Director of Information Services, the yearbook has met only one of the several publishing deadlines this year. Houghton, a student from Jacksonville, has been student teaching in that city since January.

"The reason (the decision to remove Houghton) was made was that Linda is practice teaching and was not able to be on campus to coordinate the staff's efforts," Ms. Culbreth said.

The publications board, comprised of the heads and advisors of campus media, as well as Vice-Chancellor William Malloy and Student Activities Director Al Harris, conducted a telephone vote on whether or not to request that Houghton be replaced. All seven members of the eleven-member board who were contacted voted to remove Houghton as editor.

As to the progress on the book, Culbreth stated that parts of it have been finished, although she acknowledges that the major part of the yearbook remains to be completed, and with less than a month to do it.

McLamb has already, however, initiated some changes in the original plans, such as a slight alteration of the cover. There will also be a different theme for the book than was first decided.

That the theme can be changed this late in the year is an indication of how little has been sent to the publishing company. Culbreth said that she didn't know what has been sent in because nothing has gone through her to the publisher.

"Linda had done a really great job last fall when she was on campus in organizing things," Culbreth noted.

When she began practice teaching this semester, Houghton had only one class each week on campus, this on Tuesday nights. She has not attended any staff meetings since January, except to meet with Culbreth and McLamb last week when the change of editors took effect.

Culbreth emphasized that there will be no foreseeable delay in the arrival of the yearbooks for students next August. She said that a representative of the publishing firm had met with her last week and had expressed confidence that the job can be completed.

Houghton will continue to serve as a staff member for the Fledgling.

Senate Meeting

There will be a special meeting of the Student Senate tonight at 8:00 p.m. in room 218 of the Chemistry building. The Senate will consider budget requests for the coming academic year.

It is very important that all new and retiring senators be present at the meeting tonight.

The Sominex Connection: How to Sleep Like the Dead

By Neil Klotz

Two years ago I reported findings I had obtained from a source at the Food and Drug Administration (FDA) that most non-prescription tranquilizers and sleeping pills like Sominex and Compoz are not only ineffective as sedatives, but can be deadly. In the next month or so, the FDA panel studying the drugs will get around to telling everyone else. And the big drug companies that have been endangering the American public will probably get off scot-free and loss-free.

Pieced together from a source on the FDA panel and panel minutes obtained under federal freedom of information guidelines, the "Sominex Connection" not only tells an all-too-familiar drug fraud story, but also illustrates how drug companies can use the FDA's methodical study procedures for their own benefit.

Admittedly, students may have more trouble finding the time to sleep than actually doing the dozing off, yet the educational pressure cooker has driven a number of students I've known to over-the-counter downers for chemical solace. They might as well have gone right for the under-the-counter stuff, because the drugs advertising "safe and restful sleep" can be just as dangerous.

Major ingredients in day and nighttime sedatives now taken by more than 30 million Americans—cannot only cause death, but also blindness and paralysis, the FDA panel has found, and none of the ingredients can be proven to cause natural sleep at the dosages prescribed by the manufacturer.

For almost three years the FDA panel has studied sedatives and sleep aides which can be bought without prescription in any supermarket or drug store. But its most damning findings were determined as early as June 1973. Between then and now, the FDA has made no warning statement despite what some would consider a compelling need to inform the public of the danger. In particular, two major ingredients were designated dangerous and put on the "remove" list by the panel's fourth meeting. They are:

1. Bromides (sodium bromide, potassium bromide, ammonium bromide), contained in Nervine and Rexall's Sleep Tablets. The FDA panel found that bromides were effective when found to be poisonous.

At some doses, they were found to be poisonous. A single dose can remain in the body for 12 days, so that as the drug accumulates over a few weeks, a person may first find himself confused, dizzy, and irritable. Then he may suffer from thick speech, staggering, delirium, mania, hallucinations and tremors.

These symptoms can easily be mistaken for other diseases like muscular sclerosis or alcoholism, which makes a doctor's diagnosis difficult.

"Deaths have occurred because of the delay," said the panel.

2. Scopolamine, included as a major ingredient in Compoz, Sominex Capsules, Sominex Tablets, Nite Rest, San-Man, Sure-Sleep, Quiet World, Sleep Capsules and Sleep-Eze. Probably the most insidious of all the ingredients studied, scopolamine is actually not a sedative, but an hallucinogen like LSD, an extract of the belladonna or "deadly nightshade" plant.

The panel found that this drug was not only ineffective as a sleep aid in the doses recommended by the manufacturer, but could be highly dangerous in only slightly larger amounts.

For instance, a person taking Sominex Capsules may find he's not at all sleepy after taking two tablets. Only a couple of the capsules can produce hallucinations, agitated delirium, belligerence, and violence in some people. As few as seven to eight caps in the space of a few hours will produce these effects in most people and can lead to paralysis, coma and death, especially in children, old people and the sick.

As far back as 1969 a researcher for the National Institute for Mental Health noted that people poisoned by scopolamine have been mistakenly committed to psychiatric institutions after being diagnosed as schizophrenics. If scopolamine poisoning is not diagnosed correctly in 48 hours, the person may enter paralysis and fatal coma, he said.

If that weren't enough, a study by one FDA panel member early in 1973 found that regular use of scopolamine drugs can also bring on attacks of glaucoma, an eye disease which now accounts for 14 per cent of all blindness in the US and affects more than 1.7 million Americans.

Under FDA regulations, a study panel can remove a certain chemical from the market. In 1971, a similar study panel requested and got immediate withdrawal of soaps containing hexachlorophenol as a cancer risk, although it had not completed its final report.

Bomb Scare Cancels Concert

by Helen Hazelton

On Thursday, the UNCW Security Office received a call from the Wisconsin State Department concerning a possible bomb planted in Kenan Auditorium. The caller had stated that the bomb was set to go off at 8:00 p.m.

To supplement security, both Kenan Auditorium and Kenan Hall were emptied at 4:00 p.m., only fifteen minutes after the call was received. Both city and university police were called in to search the auditorium.

According to university Director of Auxiliary Services James K. Clark, it was very difficult trying to find the alleged bomb due to the amount of materials being stored in the auditorium.

Finally, the search was called off, but the University Wind Ensemble concert which was scheduled for Thursday night was postponed, and a guard was kept on the grounds until approximately 8:30 p.m.

"You have to treat them seriously," Clark said of the callers. Clark also reported that as of Monday, the police have no leads as to who the caller was.

Why was no such warning or withdrawal order issued in this case? From all accounts, the panel itself, made up of outside consultants and drug specialists, simply don't want to get involved in the controversy, perhaps because they didn't want to jeopardize their relations with the big drug companies. "We figured it would all come out in the final report," said a source on the panel. "Our charge was to put forth this report and nothing else."

According to FDA official and panel administrator Michael Kennedy, scopolamine and the bromides were not considered an "imminent danger" to the public. He said that in order to issue an emergency recall in this case, the FDA virtually had to be "running a body count" of fatalities related to the ingredients and that the products involved presented no danger when used as directed.

From the panel's own literature, however, the very fact that the drugs have no sedative effect at the dosages prescribed has led many people to take the dangerous few more tablets.

Acknowledging that the panel would recommend in its final report that the bromides and scopolamine be removed from the market unconditionally, Kennedy outlined the steps that under federal regulations would be followed before the drugs would have to be removed. Allowing for the required number of publications in the Federal Register, comment periods and appeals, the process could take another year and a half.

Kennedy noted, however, that some drug companies were beginning to remove the two ingredients voluntarily. Most consumers would never notice the difference, he said, since "I don't think the American public buys OTC (over the counter) products on the basis of ingredients."

No doubt the drug industry will find new ingredients with even more obscure names than "bromides" and "scopolamine" so that they can point to their package, like the bureaucrats who rewrote history in 1984, and say, "Oh, we replaced those ingredients long ago."

For what it's worth, I went down to my neighborhood drug store last week and found them all still sitting there, grinning from the shelf. At such times I imagine a film panning rows and rows of bottles lined up and voice of Jack Webb in his best "Dragnet" tones narrating, "This is the food and drug industry. There are millions of drugs and chemicals in your diet. You're about to hear the story of one of them."

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Newsweek, Where are You?

Dear Editor,

Frequently during the past year I have attempted to find the "big three" news magazines in the Randall library. As many other students will testify, it is often impossible to find Time, Newsweek, or U.S. News on the periodicals shelf. These magazines occasionally disappear for an entire week. Last week I attempted for three days to find Time magazine. There appeared to be nobody reading this magazine, so I assumed somebody had removed it from the library. Newsweek and U.S. News often disappear in a similar manner.

To alleviate this situation and give everyone access to these very popular magazines, I suggest that they be available behind the service desk on request. This arrangement has worked very well for other periodicals such as MS, and I hope the library management will extend it to cover the news magazines as well.

Carter's Human Rights Stands Don't Make Him a Failure

by Bobby Parker

The recent uproar over the breakdown of arms talks with the Soviets is once again proof of the old cliché: you can't win for losing.

What was it all the conservative retros hammered out day after day during the 1976 presidential campaign? That detente should be a two-way street, and Gerald Ford and Henry Kissinger were surrendering our national security with SALT.

Now, no sooner than President Carter begins to speak out against the horrendous human rights record of the Soviet Union, everyone is calling out his instant failure.

In the past, the US has tended to officially ignore human injustice in the Soviet Union as well as Africa, Latin America, and other areas of the world. We painstakingly turned our heads to oppression while opening out hands with large amounts of foreign aid.

Brazil was one of the first to bite back at President Carter's tongue lashings. Lo and behold if that country didn't stand up and say that they wouldn't accept any more American aid until the President discontinued his attack on their "internal affairs."

As Argentina, Uruguay, and other Latin American nations followed Brazil's lead, the United States seemed to be losing one of the most used foreign policies since World War II: buying friendship.

It's atrocious how Third World nations can blackmail their way into US money coffers by promising independence in the Soviet-American contest for Miss Universe. But being in no position to offer a better alternative, I can not refute the necessity of such handouts. We must use the same tactics as the competition; we can't go on an ideological tirade while the Soviets engage the favor of every Third World country with their military hardware and economic handouts.

While Mr. Carter was taking on countries like Brazil and Argentina, he stood up also to more traditional allies like South Korea. But things got really complicated when he embraced Soviet dissidents in Washington and scolded Soviet leaders in Moscow.

Some would argue that what goes on within the borders of one country is no business of another country. (Political sovereignty, they call it.) That's exactly what Soviet party leader Leonid Brezhnev told the President.

All of this was happening at a most inopportune time. Secretary of State Cyrus Vance was about to set out on a mission to Moscow to renegotiate the SALT agreement, which will expire in October if not renewed.

Vance did not get a new agreement. He came home with nothing but a stern warning from Brezhnev that if he wanted new SALT, he'd have to put a muzzle on the human rights talk coming from the White House.

That's all the news media and Mr. Carter's political enemies needed to know. Almost immediately, both groups were lambasting the President as a complete failure. The same group of people who had called for US negotiators to put some strings on these agreements are now blaming him for botching the negotiations.

The important question that comes out of all this is whether the chief executive of the US should make it his business to comment on "internal affairs" of other countries. The fact is that it is questionable if political oppression can actually be labelled "internal affairs." More often than not, such practices affect a nation's foreign policies; they make little or no difference in domestic politics since it hardly matters what the country's populace thinks about these governments' policies anyway, in the large majority of countries.

(Exception noted.) India's citizenry recently told its leader what they thought of her political oppression. But then, in those other countries, the people don't have an opportunity such as in India.)

Jimmy Carter promised morality in foreign policy. That's a vague, ambiguous term, and a very lofty goal. It's doubtful that such can occur in the complicated tangle of world affairs.

Whether or not it is good politics for President Carter to speak so openly about human rights in other countries is debatable. What is important is that he has the courage to speak up for what he really believes, without putting on a facade that contradicts all the human rights our country has ever stood for.

The Carter-Vance foreign policy, including its conduct of arms talks, is not a failure. There hasn't been near enough time to gauge the effectiveness of the new administration around the world. But I guess they had to have something to talk about.

Summer Trips Abroad Planned by Two Departments

by Kathy Stiles

Gerald Shinn, an Associate Professor in the Department of Philosophy and Religion, will be the director of the second Bernard Boyd Expedition to Israel for UNCW students this summer.

"There will be approximately fifteen students leaving from Raleigh June 21 and returning July 29," says Shinn.

Seven semester hour credits will be received for the work abroad: four credits from Tel Aviv University and three credits from UNCW.

This is a cooperative venture between Tel Aviv University and UNCW. Other universities involved are the University of Pennsylvania, University of Minnesota, and Brigham Young in Utah.

"The students will be excavating Tel Michal, which is near Tel Aviv on the beach of the Mediterranean. This is the first season of excavations at this particular site," noted Shinn.

"One week will be spent in Jerusalem and surrounding environs and weekends will be open for travel to other archaeological sites throughout Israel," he explained.

The round trip from Raleigh to Tel Aviv is $599. Tuition is $100 at Tel Aviv and $69 at UNCW. The room and board at the dig and the week in Jerusalem will cost $300 for a total cost of $1068.

If anyone is interested in any further information about this consult with Dr. Shinn at 791-3821 or visit him in the library Monday through Thursday from 10:00 to 12:00 in the morning.

Another exciting adventure is planned for this summer in the tropics of South America.

Dr. Charles Fugler, Associate Professor of Marine Biology at UNCW, and Dr. Grover Miller in the Zoology Department at N.C. State University will supervise the field studies in tropical biology.

The group will depart either July 5 or July 6 and return either August 9 or August 10. This is the third trip and "As usual," says Dr. Fugler, "we will be concentrating on vertebrate systematics (the fauna), their geographic distribution, and the ecological aspects as well as the parasites of the area."

Disciplines of study to be covered are herpetology (the study of snakes and amphibians), mammalogy, ichthyology (fish) and parasitology.

"We will be in two areas," Dr. Fugler explained. "One will be two days up the Amazon River, west of Manaus, to a tributary called Solimões. The other will be in the town of Leticia."

A fee of $1100 is required of participating students. This will cover transportation from Wilmington to the study areas, subsistence while in the areas, and also return passage. This does not include tuition or passport.

For any additional information you may contact Dr. Charles Fugler in the marine biology building, Room 124.

Senate Discusses New Constitution

With 10 of its 21 members absent, the Student Senate held its regular session Thursday evening. There was a discussion of absentee policies and of the new constitution committee which will soon begin a revision of the SGA constitution.

Incoming SGA President Karin Whaley had previously announced her intention to appoint such a committee. She stated that it will not be a "radical" change, but would make the constitution "more concise."

"It's (the constitution) got areas in it that aren't clear... and areas that are repetitious," Whaley explained.

SGA President Paul Laird urged a better provision for dealing with attendance problems at Senate meetings.

Whaley indicated that, among others, Ray Warren, Roger Wiggs, and Rufus Butler will be serving on this committee.

The Senate will hold a special session tonight at 8:00 P.M. in Room C218 to discuss next year's budget requests.

Paul Taylor Dance Company Combines Drama with Dance

By Donna Martin

"An evening with Paul Taylor is an intensely theatrical experience," according to Clive Barnes—The New York Times.

The Paul Taylor Dance Company, as part of the University Music Series, will perform different programs in Kenan Auditorium on April 6 and 7 at 8 p.m.

Paul Taylor, the company's choreographer, has developed a unique form of modern dance by combining drama with dance.

The dancers always portray people although his choreography is very physical. Runes, one of Taylor's most recent ballets, deals with music, ritual, and man.

Paul Taylor began his career as a dancer. He is a former member of Martha Graham's Ballet Company. At 45 years, he no longer dances but has become a creative and imaginative choreographer.

While dancing, he had a distinctive style. Taylor's large body moved with a graceful carelessness. His athletic control probably influenced his choreographic style.

Admission will be $5 for adults and $3 for students. Call 256-2461 for further information.

The Paul Taylor Dance Company is also offering a workshop Tuesday, April 5 at 10 a.m.

Guitarist Al Kunze in Concert

As part of the Friday Night at the Arts Center series, the Lower Cape Fear Council for the Arts will present classical guitarist Al Kunze in concert at the Community Arts Center, 2nd and Orange Streets, on Friday, April 8 at 8:00 p.m. Mr. Kunze is currently visiting artist at Nash Technical Institute in Rocky Mount, under a program of the North Carolina Arts Council and Department of Community Colleges.

Kunze holds a Master of Music degree from Florida State University, the first such ever granted by that school. His undergraduate degree in music history was completed at the University of Florida, with high honors, where he was elected to Phi Beta Kappa.

Mr. Kunze has also studied as a performer in master classes with Jose Tomas, Manuel Lopez Ramos, John Duarte and Pepe Romero, and at the North Carolina School of the Arts with Jesus Silva.

In over three years as a visiting artist, Kunze has done more than four hundred performances for groups ranging from kindergartens to prisons. He has also performed at universities throughout the South and last season at the North Carolina Museum of Art. The concert will include works by Villa-Lobos, William Walton, Dowland, Albeniz, and others.

To compliment the musical program, artist Florence Illman will exhibit examples of her enamels and jewelry, including large wall enamels. Ms. Illman is an accomplished designer-craftsman in metals. She also works in textiles and wood.

She has taught at the prestigious Penland School of Crafts in Penland, N.C. and has exhibited at the NC Museum of Art, the Mint Museum, the Southeastern Center for Contemporary Art and in a Smithsonian Traveling Exhibition.

In conjunction with her appearance in the Friday Night at the Arts Center program she will lead a batik workshop at the Community Arts Center on Friday, April 8, from 10:00 a.m. to 1:00 p.m. For information and registration for the workshop, call 762-4223 or 762-1198.

The program on Friday evening is open to the public for an admission charge of $1.00. It is presented by the Lower Cape Fear Council for the Arts under the auspices of the North Carolina Arts Council and the National Endowment for the Arts.

Research, Reading, and Practice Aid Debate Team

By Donna Martin

"If you have a sharp, keen wit and have a command of the language, then you have the makings of a good debater," believes Betty Jo Welsh, UNCW's Debate Team Coach. The Debate Team is open to perience is not required. However, a lot of time must be devoted to the team.

The ten-member team works hard to prepare for their debates. Outside research, reading and practice is involved.

The Drama and Speech course, Intercollegiate Debate, is also required. The class meets once a week for one the class up to eight semesters and receive eight hours of credits.

The Debate Team does not debate a subject of their choice. Each July, the American Forensic Association decides on a very debatable topic which is used by every college debating team in the U.S. for the entire year.

For 1976-77 the topic is—Resolved: That the government should guarantee the safety of a consumer product required of manufacturers.

Research follows the announcement of the topic. Each person on the team makes a file catalog for both the affirmative and negative positions.

The debater must be knowledgeable on both sides of the argument because he does not know which he will speak for until he arrives at the tournament. Also, the debater may have to switch sides in the next round.

The tournaments are intercollegiate and invitational. UNCW sends different two-man debate teams to the contests.

The tournaments usually run for two days. The SGA finances UNCW's Debate Team, with expenses including lodging, travel and entry fees.

Each year, UNCW sponsors the Blockade Runner Invitational Tournament. It was held in October this year with forty-four schools represented.

The judges at the tournaments are usually coaches of debate teams at other colleges and former debaters. Judging is based on reasoning, delivery, analysis, evidence, organization, and refutation.

There are two debate formats: Cross-Examination Style and the Oregon Style. The latter is commonly used in collegiate debates. It begins with four ten-minute constructed speeches.

The affirmative side speaks first, giving their contentions and outlining their case. The negative side then argues for the present system. Next each side gives rebuttal speeches.

With the Cross-Examination Style, constructive speeches are presented and then the teams cross-examine each other.

UNCW's Debate Team is using this format for a documentary debate they are filming for WWAY-TV with the Citadel. It will be aired later in the spring.

Baseball Continues Downward Slide

Varsity baseball, now 3-11, is struggling through its worst season on record.

Hitting has been a problem for the squad since the start of the year. "Most seasons we have two or three really good hitters, and the rest of the squad sort of backs them up," said Bill Brooks, head coach of the varsity squad.

This year, however, the team has no one having a good year as a hitter. In fact, the team batting average is right around .200, an extremely low mark. Coach Brooks feels, though, that the players and the team as a whole are much better hitters than the statistics indicate.

Defense has also been troublesome for the Hawks. "We're not playing up to our capabilities," said Brooks. "We're not making many errors, but the ones we do make . . . are costly."

Pitching this year has been, in the words of Coach Brooks, "spotty." He commented that this year he had no "stoppers," or someone to come in off the bench to stop a rally.

With only twelve games left, Coach Brooks still is optimistic about having a break-even season. This would mean the team would have to win ten of its last twelve matches.

"If we get on a hot streak, and get a break here and there, I think we can do it," he commented.

If the team can't pull off a .500 season, it would be the first time in twenty years a UNCW baseball team has posted a losing record.

It should be noted, however, that the Seahawks had an extremely difficult schedule this year. As Coach Brooks himself said, there wasn't an "easy one" among any of the twenty-six matches.

Men's Tennis Make

Six in a Row

While other sports are grabbing the headlines, Mens' Tennis at UNCW is quietly racking up victory after victory.

The squad went through their second straight undefeated week. Falling to the Hawks was N.C. Wesleyan (8-1), USC-Sumter (6-3), and Francis Marion (6-3). The wins faces Charlotte at 10:00, with UNCW and Pfeiffer meeting at 2:30.

According to Coach Larry Honeycutt, no one school is a clear favorite. The four teams were chosen because they are all of equal talent.

Next week, the team also has only one match scheduled. That comes April 12 in a home way team downed the Hawks 5-4 at Conway.

CORRECTION: Last week, it was reported that Danny Curry and Greg Summrell had a 8-2 record and were the number two doubles team. Curry and Summrell, though, are the number three seeded pair. Joe Goulding and Doug Shackelford were the number two team who had the 8-2 record. Only now it's 10-2.

Only one match is scheduled this week, that being in Fayetteville Wednesday against Methodist College. In their first meeting this year, UNCW came out the winner 9-0.

The team seedings remain the same, except for the last three spots. Coach Larry Honeycutt has been rotating three players among the spots, but a round-robin tournament was held last week to determine actual positioning. Danny Curry captured the number five seed, with Greg Carroll and Danny Summrell following at six and seven, respectively.

On April 15 and 16, the team will host the Azalea Classic, a round robin event against four schools. Competing will be UNCW, UNC-Charlotte, Pfeiffer, and Campbell College.

At 10:00 on Friday the 15, Campbell and Pfeiffer will meet and at 2:30 UNCW and Charlotte will square off. Then, on Saturday, Campbell

Softball Off to a Good Start

In its first season of intercollegiate competition, the womens' softball team is sporting a respectable 3-5 record.

"We can compete with anybody," said Judy Lewis, coach of the squad. This is evidenced by the team's narrow 9-7 loss to a powerful N.C. State.

Coach Lewis feels one of the major problems this year is everyone working together as a team. She says the players are not yet familiar with their teammates' talents and abilities, as well as the responsibility of each position. This problem can be eliminated, however, as the season progresses.

At this point, team leaders include Carolyn Bender, Susan Spivey, Darlene Treadway, and Susan Richards.

Coach Lewis hoped the team would be better than 3-5 at this point of the season. She still thinks, however, the team will break above the .500 mark by season's end.

One reason for this is the fact that the Lady Hawks will return for some home matches shortly. The team has not played a home match since March 23, when they faced Methodist in a doubleheader.

Luxury Liner
Emmy Lou Harris

Warner Brothers

Emmy Lou Harris is a good friend of Linda Ronstadt and is in some ways like her. Both are part of the neo-country/rock movement that is now in motion, both are admirers of Dolly Parton (a country singer now pushing into the rock field) and both have done backup work for Gram Parsons.

Parsons died in his twenties after spearheading the country-rock sounds via such groups as the Flying Burrito Brothers and the Byrds. While neither of the groups made much of a dent with country music it was Gram's efforts that later enabled such groups as the Eagles to break big. It was while in the Burritos that Parsons first ran into Emmy Lou. When Parsons made his break as a solo artist he took Emmy Lou along for harmony.

I was lucky enough to catch them together shortly before Parsons' death. It will be quite a while before another duo comes along that is so well matched. Their voices provided a great contrast to each other.

The title tune, "Luxury Liner," is an early Gram Parsons cut from his days as one of the International Submarine Band. Emmy Lou pays tribute to his influence by doing this tune and also Parsons' "She."

The first is a fast-paced tune while the latter is a slow ballad that is almost Harris' own tale.

The bulk of this album's music is country. Emmy Lou does break this selection with Chuck Berry's "You Never Can Tell." It is a relief to hear something other than an album full of country so this tune was a good choice.

When she does country, Emmy Lou does it well. Her voice is flawless in it's delivery. The best cut from the country field is "Hello Stranger." This is an original Carter Family tune; they were the first family of country music. What makes this tune so good is its simple melody and message.

A few tunes on this album tend to drag a bit due to the typical country music mold. "Hello Stranger" cuts through their dryness.

Another tune, "Poncho &

Lefty," is a slow song, but does not get dragged down like the others. This is partly due to the fine backup music.

Most of the music is done by Emmy Lou's Hot Band, a couple of whom work for Elvis. Perhaps it is because they also tour with Emmy Lou that makes the Hot Band sound so good. A good combination and an enjoyable album for anyone that is seriously into country and rock.

A Gift for Seniors

The UNCW Alumni Association has a gift for graduating seniors--THE GRADUATE Magazine. Copies are being distributed from the Alumni Office, Alderman 201.

The 96-page Handbook for Leaving School is an easy-reading, educational magazine. It includes information on careers, job hunting and life styles, as well as numerous other articles designed to prepare seniors for life after college.

"Employment Outlook '77" reviews and analyzes job options seniors have in several career areas, while "Choosing a Career" offers self-inventory exercises to help seniors determine their skills and where they can lead.

A number of Graduate articles are designed to aid seniors in their job hunt. "First Impressions Count" reveals what recruiters look for. "Tracking the Elusive Job" presents 10 ways to stand out from the crowd of other job hunters. Still another feature examines the importance of appearance.

"First Job Realities--What Can You Expect?" is a special 3-part section including articles on entry level jobs, life in a big corporation and basics to learn from a first job.

Post-college life styles are also examined with special features in The Graduate. "Rural Living" takes a look at the reasons young people are returning to small towns and villages to live; "The Single Experience" covers the advantages and disadvantages of being single in today's society.

Other articles in the handbook include "Fiscal Shock: or How I Learned to Stop Worrying and Love Debt;" "A Primer for Starting Your Own Business;" and "Lifelong Learning: It's Not Too Early to Think About Going Back to School."

The Graduate magazine is published by Approach 13-30 Corporation, Knoxville, Tennessee, an eight-year-old marketing and publishing firm specializing in educational programs.

Work in Europe Program

Hundreds of U.S. students will find jobs in France, Ireland and Great Britain this summer through the Work in Europe program sponsored by the Council on International Educational Exchange (CIEE). For the past eight years, this popular program has provided students with the direct experience of living and working in another country and, at the same time, helped them reduce the cost of their trip abroad. The Work in Europe program virtually eliminates the red tape that students faced in the past when they wanted to work abroad.

Participants must find their own jobs but will have the help of cooperating student travel organizations in each country. In France and Ireland they may work during the summer; in Great Britain they may work at any time of the year for up to six months.

The jobs are usually unskilled--in factories, department stores, hotels, etc. Salaries are low, but students generally earn enough to pay for their room and board while they work. A typical job would be that of chambermaid in a hotel in London's West End. But last summer one enterprising student found work in Paris as a wine steward in a restaurant at the Champs-Elysees!

To qualify for CIEE's program, students must be between the ages of 18 and 30 and must be able to prove their student status. To work in France, they must also be able to speak and understand French.

For more information and application forms, contact CIEE, Dept. PR4, 777 United Nations Plaza, New York, New York 10017; or 236 North Santa Cruz, No. 314, Los Gatos, California 95030.

Young Democrats Organize

A new politically-oriented club is being formed on campus: UNCW Young Democrats Club. All interested persons should attend a meeting tonight at 7:30 in room 227 of Hoggard Hall.

At its first organizational meeting last Wednesday, club members elected officers and discussed the state YDC convention to be held April 15, 16, and 17 in Charlotte. At least two members are planning to represent the UNCW club in Charlotte, and other interested people are invited to attend also.

Officers elected Wednesday night were: Ray Blackburn, president; Cathy McCulloch, vice-president; and Bobby Parker, secretary-treasurer.

The group welcomed as guests to their first meeting Tom Hodges, an officer of the Seventh District Democratic Party, and the president of the new Hanover County Democratic organization.

There is a cordial invitation to all Democrats and other interested students to join the UNCW YDC. It should serve as an active expression of political viewpoint for concerned students at UNCW.

Auditions

Auditions for the first annual Spring Country Bluegrass Festival will be held April 13 and 14 in the Good Wood Tavern at 5:00 p.m. Interested people are to leave a note in the Student Activities Office, located in the Pub.

The Spring Festival will be held Saturday, April 23, and is sponsored by the Coffeehouse Committee.

History and Science Buffs

Here's an interesting volunteer science buff! The New Hanover Museum is setting up a Science Van which will house a space exhibit, to be open from April 8 to May 8. Volunteers need have no special skills or knowledge as the exhibit will be self-explanatory.

Their presence is needed to watch over the exhibit and see that everything is going well. Tuesday through Saturday, 9-5, and Sunday, 2-5. Working hours are flexible, as is in the amount of time given.

For more details please call the VAC office, 762-9611. VAC is a non-profit agency funded by the United Way, which acts as a clearinghouse for volunteer opportunities in this area.

Fledgling

Now is the time to get your yearbook order in! Place your order in the Fledgling office or with any staff member. (Names are posted on the office door.) Nikki, the SGA secretary will also be taking orders for 1-4 o'clock everyday in the SGA office. The Fledgling will cost only $3.00 this year and is promising to be one of the best published so far. Don't miss out on the 1977 Fledgling! Order now!

Building Additions To Include Third Dorm, Bookstore

By Bobby Parker

The growth in the physical facilities on this campus is most obvious in the construction of the new health and physical education complex. But there are other expansions planned, including a new bookstore and a third dormitory.

According to Vice Chancellor for Business Affairs Darryl W.

Bierly, construction began last week on the new bookstore with the clearing of the site, which is located behind the cafeteria near the Wildlife preserve.

Vice Chancellor Bierly said that the building, which will be double the size of the present bookstore, will be completed sometime in August. Bierly stated that it is hoped construction will terminate in mid-August so that the store could be ready for opening at the beginning of the fall semester.

Approximately $93,000 is being spent on the new facility, with an additional projection of $2,000 expected to go into new equipment, including fixtures and shelving. Bierly added that there is no anticipation of a staff increase, although temporary help will be hired during the opening weeks of the semester as in past years.

The new bookstore will be a metal frame building, but the front will be brick, maintaining the architectural style of other campus buildings.

If the new facility is not ready for occupation at the beginning of the semester, the present bookstore will be used until the new one is completed.

As for the new dormitory, Vice Chancellor Bierly said that "The plans are basically completed," noting that bids for the construction will be accepted beginning April 28. It is hoped that work will begin by early June, with an August, 1978, target date for completion.

The new dorm will house two hundred students and will be in suite arrangements much like Belk Hall. The site for the new residence hall is behind the Galloway Hall parking lot.

The need for more on-campus housing can be illustrated with figures obtained from Dean of Students Ralph Parker which show that approximately 1400 requests for on-campus housing have come through the Student Affairs Office for the 800 rooms available.

Dean Parker reported that the two dormitories have been filled since the second week in March. He said that about 300 of the applicants were returning students who presently live in the dorms. A waiting list of 96 men and 97 women has been closed, with little hope that all of these will get a room.

Vice Chancellor Bierly stated that university officials are looking into other possibilities for housing. This includes contacting several motels in Wilmington to see if they would be interested in housing students for the same amount

SUPB Presents Theatre Group

The Student Union Program Board will present the Carolina Regional Theatre's production of "Saints and Sinners" Saturday evening at 8:30 p.m. in Kenan Auditorium.

"Saints and Sinners" is an anthology of literature compiled by the CRT staff which illustrates man's eternal struggle to deal with the forces of good and evil, focusing on that struggle within the individual. The various works from which it is drawn includes the Book of Job, Archibald MacLennan's J.B., Christopher Marlowe's Dr. Faustus, Herman Melville's Billy Budd, and Stephen Vincent Benet's The Devil and Daniel Webster.

The production is designed as a discussion show, a concept developed by CRT, in which the many sides of a controversial issue are given and the audience is encouraged to participate with their own views.

The Carolina Regional Theatre is the largest professional touring company in the state. Based in Chapel Hill, it has no theatre facility of its own and relies solely on tours throughout N.C.

The performance Saturday is free of charge.

Poetry Writing Workshop is Set for Tuesday

By Anne Morris

The English Club will sponsor a poetry writing workshop Tuesday, April 26, at 1:00 p.m. in the library auditorium. The workshop will be conducted by David Childers, an area poet. All interested students are encouraged to attend and bring their poems.

As part of the Third Century Artist program funded by the state, David Childers promotes poetry writing through several different approaches. Poetry Writing Workshops are held every Monday night at 7:00 at the Community Art Center, and these sessions are free to the public. David has also held several poetry readings and worked with the local high school creative writing programs.

A graduate of UNC-Chapel Hill in creative writing, David is currently working on his masters at UNC-Greensboro. As part of his masters' thesis, he recently published a collection of poems, American Dusk.

David has also worked with the Artist Outreach program sponsored by the Lower Cape Fear Council for the Arts. In his capacity as poet and guitarist, he has taken the arts to people in nursing homes and prisons.

Budget Plan Insures Journalistic Integrity

During the recently completed first round of the SGA budget-making process for next year, this newspaper presented a new idea for implementing its budget, which compares with a similar plan adopted by the UNC-Chapel Hill student government for the Daily Tar Heel.

Under this "Chapel Hill plan" the DTH automatically receives 16 o/o of student government funds each academic year. This plan eliminates debate over the DTH budget year after year, and thus removes all political consideration which enter. The Carolina paper is thus afforded greater autonomy from the student government, and the principle of a free press is furthered.

First, let us note that the Seahawk in no way expects 16 o/o of UNCW student funds. We, rather, will ask one-half of that amount—8 o/o—which is only a trace of an increase over the usual appropriation.

What this guaranteed percentage plan would do for the Seahawk is give us freedom from any fear of reprisals from the SGA in the event of editorial criticism or dissent. We would, too, be able to endorse SGA candidates during elections without the possibility of political retaliation by an SGA official who disagreed with our endorsements.

Some of you readers may think that we have no business in political endorsements. But the real issue here is a matter of journalistic integrity; our editors should have the right to print what they see fit, until such time that their judgment is proved reckless.

This will not completely remove the Seahawk from control of the SGA; the Senate can conceivably rescind the percent provision at any time. But it will limit the reach of the SGA into an area in which it has no real province.

The proper time to insure appropriate management of campus publications is when the editors are chosen, not at budget time. This new budget proposal will help perpetuate such procedure.

BP

Commendation Due to SGA Treasurer Wax

During the past year, there has not been very much to brag about in the way of student government. A president has been impeached, our Senate has often shirked responsibility, and the judicial branch has been virtually invisible.

But with the feeling that credit should be given where credit is due, we wish to cite SGA Treasurer Mark Wax for a well-performed, often thankless job.

Assuming office amid the switch to the state purchasing system, which significantly changed the purchasing procedure with SGA funds, Wax has consistently been available to help those who were unable to understand the system.

Wax put much time and effort into his job, and there has been no question as to the quality of his performance. We commend the Treasurer for execution of the responsibilities of an important SGA office.

House Secret Study Charges Justice Didn't Really Probe Into M.L. King Assassination

by Jack Anderson
with Joe Spear

WASHINGTON -- Last January, a Justice Dept. task force completed a review of the Martin Luther King assassination. The task force concluded that James Earl Ray "was the assassin" and that "he acted alone."

But meanwhile, the House Assassinations Committee conducted a secret study of the task force report. The findings are summarized in a sizzling, 16-page analysis. We have obtained one of the restricted copies, and we think the public is entitled to know what it says.

The House study charges that the Justice Dept. really investigated itself, that it upheld its own findings of nine years ago, that it didn't conduct a real investigation but merely reviewed the existing paper work.

It would be an enormous task, according to the analysis, to determine whether King was the victim of a conspiracy. Yet the task force didn't hire a single investigator. Instead, the task force relied upon five attorneys, two researchers, two secretaries and two clerks.

James Earl Ray visited 19 cities and five foreign countries during the year he gunned down the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. Yet the task force didn't bother to interview more than 30 people. The House study claimed this hardly scratched the surface.

The task force conceded that it had unearthed some new information. Yet this was covered in one lone sentence. The new information was never spelled out. Yet the task force described in dreary detail how long King spent in different rooms in the Lorraine Motel where he spent his final hours.

The task force stated flatly that Ray acted alone yet he exchanged rifles in Birmingham. And he was quoted as saying his brother didn't like the first rifle. Another witness quoted him as saying he was waiting for money from his brother. Ray told still another witness that he was going to visit a brother in Birmingham.

Ray's motive for killing King, the task force suggests, was hatred for blacks. Yet Ray worked with 22 blacks in a Winnetka, Ill. restaurant for seven weeks. He also took orders from a black boss who, according to the House study, "wasn't an easy man to get along with."

The secret analysis found many other discrepancies in the task force report. Meanwhile, House investigators are going ahead with their own investigation. They have started interviewing witnesses who should have been questioned nine years ago but, for some reason, were not.

International spies: Inside the gray filing cabinets that line government offices are literally millions of secret dossiers compiled on U.S. citizens. Thanks to new laws passed by Congress, government agencies are now restricted in their use of these files.

At least one secret intelligence organization, however, freely slips information about Americans to police departments not only in this country but abroad. Those dossiers are passed in direct defiance of the Congress and the law. The organization responsible is Interpol -- the international police organization featured in cloak-and-dagger tales.

Interpol is a private Paris-based group that operates in more than 125 nations. It supposedly serves as a clearinghouse of information on international criminal activity. But the organization is not as innocent as it may seem. Interpol actually rose from the ashes of European fascism. The organization has an extensive Nazi history, which agents have spent the better part of 30 years trying to hide.

We have also linked Interpol with illegal tactics of both the CIA and the Drug Enforcement Agency. In testimony before Congress, the U.S. head of Interpol claimed that his organization never crossed paths with the CIA because Interpol is not in the intelligence-gathering business.

But recently, a private organization filed a suit in federal court to force the CIA to open up its files on Interpol. Claiming national security problems, the CIA refused to release the files because "disclosure of the documents would reveal that the government had cooperated with Interpol in the collection of intelligence."

The U.S. government provides Interpol with a national office at the Treasury building in Washington. The government also pays annual dues amounting to $150,000 and provides hundreds of thousands of dollars to Interpol for information services.

Gas Search: President Carter is privately worried that the nation will run short of natural gas before new sources of energy can be developed. The federal government, therefore, is secretly studying how to tap huge reservoirs of "unconventional" natural gas. This gas is trapped in underground rock formations, in coal deposits and in the tight sands of the Rocky Mountains. It would cost billions, of course, to extract the trapped gas. Some of the underground rock, for example, would have to be fractured.

The government is now studying the pros and cons of developing this unconventional gas. The secret project is known as MOPPS. This stands for Market Oriented Program Planning Study.

Last Friday, officials of the Energy Research and Development Administration met secretly at a downtown motel to review the preliminary findings. They concluded that the cost of squeezing this gas out of the rock, coal and sand would be prohibitive at today's energy prices.

But they conceded that unconventional gas would become more attractive as the price of conventional gas soars. A continuing price rise is now considered likely. So the secret study group is trying to work out cost estimates. This will determine whether the government will go after all that trapped gas.

Arms for Panama: The United States and Panama are engaged in sensitive negotiations over the Panama Canal. Panamanian strongman Omar Torrijos has threatened violence if the canal isn't turned over to his country.

Intelligence reports warn that Torrijos is trying to beef up his military might. Yet he has been getting military equipment from the United States.

Last late year, four armored cars were secretly unloaded in Panama. They were purchased from an American company, Cadillac Gage, with State Dept. approval. Now we've just learned that a dozen additional armored cars have been delivered to Panama within the past month.

BYLINE: We Didn't Buy It, We Haven't Paid for It--It Isn't Ours

by Bobby Parker

(First of two parts)

Ever since Ronnie Reagan grabbed the Panama Canal and thrust it out into the political arena as an "issue," conservatives across the country (including our very own Brother Jesse-Helms, that is) have been sending out battle cries. "We built it, we paid for it, it's ours," they say, with the usual demagogic simplicity.

It proved to be a pretty good political move for Reagan, but it has developed into a national argument that has been tossed about in the same manner that we usually treat our social issues. That is, we have distorted the facts, overlooked the complications, and made it into an either-or search for a solution.

The Reagan crowd has used the Canal question for pure political purposes. When they say "we paid for it," it is not very far from being an outright lie. The fact is that we have been and are paying for the use of a 10-mile strip of land across the country.

We may own the equipment and the materials that went into the physical construction of the canal and its supporting facilities, but we do not own the land through which it was cut.

Another popular part of the argument is that the treaty which we signed with Panama in 1903 gives us sovereignty over the Canal Zone. This, too, is a misinterpretation, as William Howard Taft told us in 1906 when he, as Secretary of War and in charge of the canal project, acknowledged the "titular sovereignty" of the Republic of Panama over the Zone.

(Taft was later to become does destroy in toto the argument that the Canal Zone is sovereign US territory, which the Reaganites have claimed.

The question of sovereignty is not, however, the most

We may own the equipment and materials that went into the physical construction of the canal and its supporting facilities, but we do not own the land through which it was cut.

chief justice of the Supreme Court, so his interpretations should deserve some respect.)

Just exactly what does that infamous treaty say? It gives the United States the "use, occupation, and control" of the Canal Zone and also grants all authority within the Zone "which the United States would possess and exercise if it were the sovereign of the territory."

The key part here is "if" and the use of the subjunctive mood. The subjunctive mood, grammatically, expresses a concept (such as potentiality or condition) but it can express neither fact nor falsehood.

To illustrate, one might say that an object in a photograph looks "as if it were real;" this, would not mean that the object is real, only that it has the characteristics of reality. Therefore, the US possesses not sovereignty, but the characteristics of sovereignty.

And there is a difference between the two, in any legal document.

Now that difference between actual sovereignty and having the characteristics of sovereignty is insignificant from a practical viewpoint. But it important question regarding our presence in Panama. The real problem is how we got there in the first place.

Under the somewhat imperialistic guidance of Teddy Roosevelt, we bullied our way into an agreement with Panama. There was only one problem as Teddy began his quest for a Canal treaty with Panama: there was no Panama, at least not a sovereign Republic of Panama.

Mr. Big Stick was fortunate enough that Panama, then a province of Colombia, rebelled against the Colombian government and established its own. The Panamanians proved much easier to deal with than the Colombians.

The Panamanian revolution succeeded, under the dubiously watchful eye of an American ship that just happened to be in the neighborhood. Very quickly, diplomatic relations were established between the US and the new republic, and negotiations were begun on a canal treaty.

So here was an established world power negotiating with the new kid in town for a strip of land that would dissect the new country. And on top of all this, Panama was represented in the treaty talks by a Frenchman, Philippe Banau-Varilla, who was a veteran of the abandoned attempt by his country to build that same canal. Thus, there were two sides negotiating with basically the same goal: to get a canal built, one way or another.

To see what a farce this treaty really is, one need only read Article I:

"The United States guarantees and will maintain the independence of the Republic of Panama."

This shows us two things:

(1) The paramount interest of Panama was its own survival as an independent nation.

(2) The US was willing to promise them anything to get what we wanted, robbing them blind in the process.

We even went so far as to take the responsibility of sanitation for Colon and Panama City (both port cities at either end of the Canal.) We promised them, too, the use of our telegraph and telephone lines. Such paltry concessions were probably gems in the eyes of the naive new government. But, you say, what about the monetary provisions of the treaty?

With an initial payment of $10 million and annual payments of $250,000 (which began nine years after the signing of the treaty), the US was granted the "rights, powers, and privileges" that were agreed upon in the treaty. Rights, powers, and privileges—but no land.

In all fairness, however, it must be acknowledged that the US has aided Panama in many other ways that designated in the treaty. Their economic and political climate is much more stable than some of their Latin neighbors. These benefits greatly exceed $250,000 per year.

But it's time the US sought out a more equitable management of the Panama Canal that shows respect for the people and government of a nation which we have abused, perhaps by initial necessity, but also in moral error.

Next week, this column will comment on some of the solutions that have been offered.

New Facilities Planned

per year that is charged to dorm students.

"We consider it an obligation to find students housing when they come to Wilmington," Bierly added.

Bierly also noted that campus officials have received approval from the General Assembly to begin laying plans for a fourth dorm. However, it will be some time before plans are finalized, and at least a few years before such a project is realistic.

"We now have the authorization," Bierly stated, "... if we feel the need to construct a fourth dorm." He added "it's pretty apparent to me" that such a need will exist.

The largest building addition to the campus is, of course, the new gymnasium facility, which will include a swimming pool, classrooms, and office space as well as the gym. The gym will have a capacity of nearly 6,000 people.

Bierly stated that the facility will be completed by the first part of June, although some work may still be needed on the interior of the gym.

The facility is "basically going to be used by the student body," Bierly noted. In order to obtain state funds for the $4,300,000 project, the facility cannot be used solely as a sports arena, but must also be used for educational purposes.

Bierly indicated that the Physical Education Department is currently seeking applications for a swimming instructor and coach. There will also be a need to hire lifeguards for the pool.

"It's going to take us a while to get everything geared up," Bierly said, referring to the search for new staff members.

Math Quiz

Five sailors are shipwrecked on a desert island and gather a pile of coconuts for food. They decide to retire for the night and then in the morning divide the coconuts. The first sailor awakens in the night and being distrustful of the others decides to take his share during the night. He tries to divide the pile of coconuts into five equal shares but finds there is one coconut left over. He eats the extra one, takes his share to a hiding place, and goes back to sleep. A second sailor then awakens and upon dividing the remaining coconuts into five equal shares finds there is one left over. He eats the extra one, hides his share, and goes back to sleep. A third sailor repeats the process once again. He discovers that by eating one, the remaining pile of coconuts can be divided into fifths, and he hides his share before returning to sleep. The fourth sailor and after him the fifth repeat the same process. What is the minimum number of coconuts left to be divided in the morning after all five sailors awake?

RULES

1. First correct solution wins a prize.
2. Anyone who has not yet received a bachelor's degree is eligible to participate.
3. Solutions must be legibly written on 8 1/2" x 11" paper and must contain name and mailing address to solve.

4. Submit solutions to Math Department secretary and have her mark it with the time and date of submission.
5. All entries become the property of Pi Mu Epsilon.
6. As soon as winner is determined, announcement will be made by posting the winning solution in this space.
7. New contest begins two weeks from date on current problem sheet.

J. Craig McCue, senior chemistry student at UNCW was one of seventeen students who received the American Institute of Chemists Student Award at the spring meeting of the North Carolina Institute of Chemists at Meredith College in April.

The award is presented to the chemistry student who, in the opinion of his institution's chemistry faculty, shows the most potential for making a significant contribution to the field of chemistry.

Science Academy Meets

By Anita Robeson

One good quality for a scientist to have is the ability to present a paper on his topic of interest in the field of science.

Approximately a dozen UNCW students will have the opportunity to demonstrate such ability on April 22 and 23, when the North Carolina Academy of Science, Inc. will meet.

These UNCW students are Billy Hammond, Robert Wendell Pickett, Mary Eason, Carol Moore, and Peter Havens of the Biology Department; Rita Harrell, William White and Greg McCue, Chemistry Department; Judy Rhue, Psychology Department; and James Tomosunas of the Physics Department.

This 74th annual meeting of the Academy will be held at North Carolina Agricultural and Technical State University in Greensboro, North Carolina. The first presentations will start at 2:00 p.m. on Friday, April 22.

Papers will be presented on such topics as ecology, zoology, botany, biochemistry, cell and developmental biology, physiology, psychology and microbiology. These topics will be divided into appropriate categories to facilitate better judging.

Each presentation is limited to fifteen minutes. Twelve minutes will be used for presenting the paper and the remaining three minutes will be used for questions.

Prizes will be given to outstanding presentations. First, second and third prizes will be awarded in each category and honorable mentions will be at the discretion of the judges.

Teacher Exam of Certification

As of April 7, 1977 the requirement of a score of 950 on the National Teacher's Examination has been reinstated by the North Carolina State Department of Public Instruction. Therefore, students who wish to be certified must arrange to take the examination. The next regular scheduled date for administration of the exam is July 16, 1977. Forms are available in E-102.

Cloggers

The Apple Chill Cloggers from Chapel Hill, N.C., will be performing in the courtyard in front of the Pub Saturday afternoon April 23, beginning at 2:00 p.m.

The Cloggers have performed at folk festivals in Michigan, Washington, D.C., Georgia, and North Carolina. Country bluegrass music will be provided by student of UNCW.

LIFE to Sponsor Photo Contest

Campus photographers. What is distinctive about your school, your relationships, your friends, the things you care about?

A special report of LIFE is being planned that will explore some of the ways young people live in the 1970's. You can make an important and individual contribution to this issue. The gathering places? Hights and lows? What forms does love take? Events that matter?

The issue will deal with people aged 14 to 25, but the emphasis will be on the college generation.

Contributions must be addressed to LIFE Special Report, Box 624, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019 before May 10, 1977 and must conform to these restrictions.

1. Photos must be original and taken since the fall term began in 1976.
2. Prints must be between 8 x 10 inches or 11 x 14 inches—not larger, not smaller.
3. Color transparencies must be 35mm or larger.

4. Each print or transparency must carry on it your name and college address.

5. A stamped, envelope of the proper size with your permanent address must be included with each group of photographs entered.

6. No one should submit more than 20 photos.

7. All entries will be treated with care, but are submitted with the understanding that neither Time Inc. nor any agents will be responsible or liable in any way for loss or damage to the photos submitted.

8. The submission of the photo gives Time, Inc. the right to publish the photo it selects and to use the photo in promoting the publication in which it appears.

9. Payment for pictures used will be made promptly upon publication at the regular space payment rates of LIFE Special Report.

10. Upon request all contributors must be able and willing to supply a "release for publication and promotion" for themselves and all recognizable individuals appearing in their photos, when such a release is necessary.

Job Interview Workshop Set

The Office of Career Planning and Placement has announced a job interview workshop for all interested students. The workshop will begin at 9:30 a.m. in the Library Conference Room.

Revitalization Is Topic of Lecture

SEAHAWK SPORTS

Crew Tops Carolina in First Meet

UNCW Crew made a good rookie appearance in its first meet, downing UNC-Chapel Hill jayvees by over 100 meters.

The UNCW racing scull pulled out in front at the start and kept a sixty-foot lead till about halfway down the 1000 meter course. There, UNCW con-

Power 10 maneuver, and the Seahawks went into a commanding lead which they never lost.

(Editor's Note: A "Power 10" is all eight oarsmen putting everything they have into ten consecutive strokes. In effect, it's a quick burst of speed.)

The final margin of victory was over 100 meters, of about 23 seconds. The race was part of the Carolina Regatta, held on University Lake at Chapel Hill.

This is the first year of inter-collegiate competition for UNCW. Carolina first organized their crew in 1968.

Plans are being made next year to revive the Azalea Regatta. Once a popular part of the Festival, it was discontinued some years back. The races will probably be held the Cape Fear River.

Tom Raines serves as president of the rowing club, and Bob Browning acts as captain of the crew. John Anderson, a professor with the business department, is the coach.

Anderson had a distinguished career as a rower while in college. He was a member of the U.S. Naval Academy crew, and was scheduled to participate in the 1964 Olympics. Only an injury prevented him from doing so.

Tennis Nabs Two in Azalea Classic

UNCW's men's tennis team celebrated the Azalea Festival in high fashion this past weekend, downing both UNC-Charlotte and Pfeiffer in the Azalea Classic Tennis Tournament.

The tournament is sponsored by the UNCW tennis program and is the brainchild of tennis coach Larry Honeycutt. It pits four colleges of equal tennis quality in round-robin tournament competition. Participating this year were UNC-Charlotte, Campbell College, Pfeiffer, and UNCW.

The Seahawks won both their matches in the tournament downing Pfeiffer 5-4 and defeating UNC-Charlotte 7-2. Individual scores for both matches are listed at the end of the article.

"We played very well as a team this weekend," said Coach Honeycutt. "We jelled as a team, and played good competitive tennis."

It looks as if the team has been playing good tennis all year. At this writing, the squad has a 12-5 record, with just three matches remaining. Individually, Paul Gemborys leads the team with a 14-3 record. Others with impressive records include Danny Currie (12-3) and Colin Sumrall (11-2.)

There has been very little change in the seedings since the start of the season, except in the last three seeds. Two of those seeds have changed of late, with Sumrall challenging and successfully defeating Greg Carroll for the number six spot. Carroll is now seeded seventh.

UNCW vs. Pfeiffer

Varsity Baseball

"Inconsistent"

For the first time in twenty years, UNCW baseball will post a losing record. With only six games to go, the varsity squad has a 6-15 record.

Head Coach Bill Brooks feels inconsistency has been one of the team's major problems this year. "We haven't been consistent in any department," he commented. "One week our pitching will be good, then next week it'll be our defense."

An extremely tough schedule has also been a problem for the Hawks. Several of the teams it has played are having undefeated or one-loss seasons. At last check, Clemson was ranked among the top five of the nation.

The team has been playing good baseball during the year. Unfortunately, though, they have been coming out "on the short end of the score," according to Coach Brooks. Many games have been close right to final one or two innings, when the opposing team has been able to pull ahead.

After the varsity season ends, most of the team will participate in the 36-game Summer League season. They will be joined by several members of the junior varsity team, which has had a very good season.

Basketball Seahawks Sign Two

Basketball coach Mel Gibson has announced the signing of two highly-recruited high school seniors to grants-in-aid at UNCW.

Chuck Verba, a 6'9", 210 lbs. player out of Whitko High School in Columbia City, Indiana, is one of those signed by Gibson. Verba averaged over 21 points and 15 rebounds a game, and was voted All-Conference, All-Section, and honorable mention for All-State.

Gibson feels Verba will be able to boost the post position on the team, especially with his ability to change quickly from offense to defense and his rebounding talents. Some indication of this talent is the fact that he can vertically jump 30 inches, extremely high for a big man.

A North Carolina native, Jimmy Denton, was the second player announced as having been signed. At 6'6", 210 lbs., Denton averaged 26 points and 13 rebounds a game, and received an honorable mention on the All-State squad. He was also voted the most outstanding player in Western North Carolina, and is a likely pick for the East-West All-Star Game.

Denton will probably work the big wing spot on the Seahawks squad, mainly due to his size and shooting range. While a senior in high school, he had ten games of 34 points or more.

Denton is a native of Weaver, N.C. and played basketball at North Brunswick High School.

"50's Revived With Rock's In My Head"

MIKE BERRY
ROCK'S IN MY HEAD
SIRE SASD-7524

During the 1970s there have been many stabs at a revival of the Rock 'n Roll sound of the Late 50's and early 60's. This included several original re-releases as well as the explosion of new groups such as Sha NaNa.

Then to add to all this revival came American Bandstand's big 20th birthday and again it was known that Rock 'n Roll was here to stay.

Now we get to Mike Berry. Berry is quite unique in that he can do the old songs with a new type zest yet keep the original Rock 'n Roll feel. Though Berry is English, it was he and his early group, The Outlaws, who helped take the American sound to England back in the early 60's.

Included on the album are several of Buddy Holly's biggest hits. "Peggy Sue" and "Rave On" are two of these and are done so well only Holly himself could do better. Other Holly tunes on the album are "That'll Be The Day," "Baby I Don't Care" and "Think It Over."

Three other great Rock 'n Roll stars are also represented with Berry's versions of Elvis Presley's "Don't Be Cruel" and Fats Domino's "I'm In Love Again" and Tommy Roe's "Everybody." Again Berry displays the zest and freshness of the originals yet brings them to a new light with his talents.

This becomes apparent in that he has written several excellent cuts on the album itself. Cuts such as "Fool's Gold," "It's All Over," and "For Me and For You" were written by Berry yet would have easily been hits 20 years ago. The biggest cut on the album has to be one which is a remake of an old Mike Berry hit, "Tribute to Buddy Holly." This cut is one of the best of its type, comparable to "American Pie."

To sum up: ROCK'S IN MY HEAD is truly a monument to Rock 'n Roll and Mike Berry must take a bow. Most of the songs are already classics but Berry has brought them to a new light.

Till then, Rock-out.

YARDBIRDS

The Yardbirds Greatest Hits
Epic Records

This is the first record of Yardbird tunes released in ages. It's odd how a group that once contained such members as Jeff Beck, Eric Clapton, and Jimmy Page is constantly ignored by rock audiences. The late Keith Reiff, vocals, formed with Jim McCarthy, drums, what was the original Renaissance. The group that bears the same name today is descended from his group, but contains no original members. Bassist Paul Samwell-Smith went on to produce Cat Stevens and Carly Simon. Chris Dreja, rhythm, photographed the first album cover for a group that sprung from the Yardbirds, Led Zeppelin. Yet despite all this talent the average rock fan is lucky enough to have heard of them, let alone heard them.

The Yardbirds were not exactly an unknown group. With such hits as For Your Love, I'm A Man, Shapes of Things, Heart Full of Soul, Little Games, and others they stayed in the charts. Dazed and Confused was an original tune by the Yardbirds before Jimmy Page had even contemplated putting together Led Zeppelin. When Zeppelin was formed they posed as the Yardbirds to complete some European gigs. Still nobody knows who they are. Train Kept A-Rollin' was not done first by the Yardbirds but by Johnny Burnette. However it was the Yardbirds' version that kids in the Sixties learned to play from, including Aerosmith.

This album is a godsend for anyone truly into hard rock. The Yardbirds were the first to put lead guitar upfront in rock, first to use dual lead guitar jams, first to put out a live album while other groups were churning out pop fodder, and they pioneered what was known as psychedelic music before San Francisco took over. The original Yardbirds Greatest Hits contained pretty much that. This new album, however, has dropped a few of the hits in favor of more rockin' material. Two hits, For Your Love and Heart Full of Soul, are included for pop posterity, but on the whole the album is either r&b music or rock. Each tune is well done, some of the guitar on side two puts to shame most of the "progressive" groups. If the right people had been in charge the Yardbirds might have even overshadowed the Beatles, no mean feat either. They even bypassed the Stones in terms of rock ability (Don't get me wrong, I'm a Stones fan from long ago, but even they couldn't top the Yardbirds.)

My only complaint are that the album is too short and the cover is a letdown. With so much material (including unreleased gems,) you would think Epic could add a few more tunes per side. As for the cover is bland, a simple picture of the group would have suited most fans fine. Still this album will probably beat out most rock records released in the year. Quite an accomplishment for a group that had their final Happening Ten Years Time Ago. Whether the public will wake up and pick up on this remains to be seen. With the Yardbirds' old albums going for thirty-some dollars these days it would be a crime to let this one go, too. Steve Harvey

Graduate Record Exam Changes

College seniors planning to take the Graduate Record Examinations (GRE) Aptitude Test next fall will see some changes in the exam. A new section designed to measure analytical skills will be added to the traditional areas that test verbal and quantitative skills.

The change, the first since the current form of the Aptitude Test was introduced in the 1940's, is based on an extensive research effort initiated by the Graduate Record Examinations Board that showed that analytical skills can be distinguished from verbal and quantitative skills and are related to academic success.

Students, faculty members, and administrators from all over the country were consulted in the various planning stages of the change in the exam.

Educational Testing Service (ETS), which administers the exam for the GRE Board, explains that the additional measure will enable students to demonstrate a wider array of academic talents when they apply for admission to graduate schools.

Janis Somerville, GRE program director at ETS, said, "The new measure will test a student's skills in a number of areas. Students will be able to show their ability to recognize logical relationships, draw conclusions from a complex series of statements, and determine relationships between independent or interdependent categories of groups."

She explained that, like the traditional measures of the GRE, the new test will use various kinds of questions.

"Three types will be used in the analytical section: analysis of explanations, logical diagrams, and analytical reasoning questions, each designed to test a different aspect of analytical ability," she said.

Somerville also explained that no formal training in logic or methods of analysis is required to do well on the new measure.

"Some analytical skills are required and developed in virtually all fields of study," she explained. "And, like verbal and quantitative skills, analytical skills are developed over a long period of time and are not believed to be improved to any significant degree by intensive study in a brief period of time."

Somerville also noted that the 1977-78 GRE Bulletin of Information will describe the new measure and will include sample questions and explanations of the answers. The Bulletin is sent free to all students registering for the GRE.

In addition, a Sample Aptitude Test containing the same number and types of questions as the actual exam can be ordered at one dollar per copy. Both publications will be available on August 1.

Despite the new addition, the GRE will remain a three-hour test since the verbal and quantitative portions have been shortened and the time saved allocated to the new measure.

"The same research effort that produced the new measure also yielded shorter versions of the verbal and quantitative sections that are comparable in reliability and usefulness to the earlier and longer sections," explained Somerville.

The GRE is taken each year by about 300,000 college students as part of the admissions process to graduate school.

The exam is offered six times a year, while advanced tests in 20 subjects are offered five times a year throughout the nation.

Fledgling Deadline

The deadline for purchasing a 1977 Fledgling yearbook is Friday, April 29 at 5:00 p.m. Yearbooks may be purchased for $3 from any staff member, the Fledgling/Seahawk office, or in the SGA office from 1-4 p.m.

Archeological Society to Meet

The Archaeological Society of North Carolina will hold its spring meeting at UNCW Saturday, April 23. Neophytes and other interested non-members are invited to attend.

Arnold Kimsey King Hall will open at 9 a.m. for registration and the setting up of exhibits, most of which will consist of Indian artifacts from North Carolina.

At 10 a.m. Dr. David S. Phelps of East Carolina University will give a "Tentative Summary of Eastern North Carolina Archaeology", followed at 11 a.m. with an address by UNCW's Dr. Tom Loftfield on "Terminal Prehistoric: Distribution of Shell Tempered Ceramics and Coastal Algonquian People."

The closing session, scheduled to begin at 1:30 p.m., will feature Dr. Trawick Ward of UNC-Chapel Hill who will speak on "Hardaway Site Excavations Since 1964."

Articles for Freshman Seahawk

Student Activities Director Al Harris is in the process of compiling information for this year's Freshman Seahawk.

This special edition newspaper will be distributed to all incoming freshmen and transfer students during the June orientation sessions. If your organization would like to do some advance recruiting or just let the newcomers know you're around, this is your chance for some free PR.

Please submit a typed article in 300 words or less about your organization to the Student Activities Office prior to 5:00 p.m. on Thursday, April 28. Include such information as the organization's history, functions, meeting frequency, advisors, officers, contacts, policies, standards, and interests.

We will also consider printing any 5 x 7, black and white photo of your organization involved in an activity.

Don't be left out! Submit your articles as soon as possible.

Sharp Here for Graduation

North Carolina Chief Justice Susie Sharp will be the guest speaker for commencement exercises which will take place Sunday, May 15. Approximately 510 students will be graduated during the ceremony that will be held in the mall between the administration building and the Pub.

Chief Justice Sharp will speak briefly to the graduates and guests, and will receive an honorary Doctor of Laws degree. Justice Sharp was chosen by a vote of the faculty.

With Hoggard Hall serving as the stage, the commencement will begin at 5:00 p.m. Approximately 1200 chairs will be set up on the lawn to accommodate graduates and guests. In case of bad weather, the ceremony will be moved to Hanover Hall.

Two awards will be presented during the commencement exercises: the Alumni Award and the Hoggard Medal. The Alumni Award will go to the senior with the highest grade point average, while the Hoggard Medal is presented to the student who has shown the most improvement.

There will be a rehearsal for graduates in the Pub Friday morning, May 13, at 10:00 a.m. At that time, Dean of Students Helena Cheek will explain the procession order and stage procedure to the seniors. This meeting should be brief as there are no plans for a practice session.

All graduating seniors are expected to be at the Pub by 4:15 p.m. on the day of graduation. According to Dean Cheek, it will take at least forty-five minutes to line the students in the proper order.

Diplomas will first be awarded to the nursing graduates. August, December, and May graduates will then follow, in that order. Each group will be divided into Bachelor or Arts and Bachelor of Science majors.

In total, there are approximately 510 graduates, but only about 350 are expected to participate in the commencement.

Dr. John L. Stokes, assistant to the academic dean, is in charge of coordinating the commencement exercises.

Stokes estimated that the program will last about an hour and fifteen minutes. He also said that there will be no commencement address as such, although Justice Sharp will deliver brief comments.

Any graduating senior who has not yet picked up his or her cap and gown should do so immediately in the campus bookstore.

Radio Station Prepares to Move Into New FM Broadcast Facilities

by Curtis Ward

The call letters for the campus radio station have been changed from WCNU to WLOZ, bringing the station a step closer to FM.

According to Al Ludlum, a station staff member, the present projected date for completion of the FM conversion is early next fall or possibly late summer, if all goes well.

"The reason for the delay basically is waiting for an OK from the FCC and testing with Channel 6, WECT-TV," explained Ludlum. He added that WECT's audio frequency is very close to WLOZ's future FM frequency, 91.3, but that no problems are foreseen at this time.

Operations for the 1976-77 year were closed Friday to begin moving into the new studios, located in a trailer by the entrance to the physical plant. When operations resume in the fall, WLOZ will be broadcasting at 10 watts, probably for only eight hours a day. This will be increased eventually to 24 hours, using some automation.

The station will also have a new SGA administration to contend with, but staff members seem optimistic. Ludlum stated, "I hope they (SGA) will work with us 100 per cent, and we'll work with them as much as possible."

Much emphasis was placed on the need for more student involvement next year. Staff positions open for next year include program director, business manager, secretary, and news director.

DJs are also needed, but a third class radio-telephone license, with broadcast endorsement, will be required because of the FM standing. The FCC test for the license is scheduled here for June 1. Applications can be obtained from Al Ludlum or by writing the FCC office in Norfolk, Virginia.

Interclub Council

There will be an Interclub Council meeting Thursday at 6:30 in Room C218.

Senate Discusses Salary, Appointments at Meeting

by Bobby Parker

The newly elected Student Senate conducted its first meeting as the student legislative body last Wednesday night, approving several executive appointments and discussing a proposal for a presidential salary. Vice-president Ken Lilly presided at the meeting.

SGA President Karin Whaley delivered a president's report that revealed her nominees for several SGA positions. These included Paul O'Bryant, nominated for the Treasurer's position.

Whaley voiced confidence in O'Bryant's capabilities, noting that he had been recommended by several members of the business faculty. O'Bryant, who was elected junior class president in the most recent election, has resigned that position to become treasurer.

Nominated for chairmen of the standing committees were Walker O'Quinn, Concert Committee; Greta Lint, Homecoming; Ron Coley, Minority Affairs; Steve Chiappies-Fine Arts; and Francis DeLuca, Board of Elections. All nominees were approved by the Senate.

President Whaley also commented on the progress of a committee which will be rewriting the SGA constitution. She said that included in the new document will be stricter rules for Senate attendance and a requirement for periodic reports from the standing committees.

At a recent Board of Trustees meeting, Whaley reported, there was a discussion of parking improvements for next year that will be accompanied

Women's Tennis Breaks .500

After a disappointing 1-9 fall season, the womens' tennis team rallied to a 2-2 mark this spring.

"This spring we played much better," said head coach Jane Batson, "especially considering we didn't have any organized practices." (This is due to a shortage of tennis courts and two teams who need to use them.)

Next year, the team will be playing most of their matches in the fall. Coach Batson hopes this will eventually end the playing of both a spring and a fall schedule, with a three-month break in between.

"We learned a lot and really matured this year," said Coach Batson. One of the problems with the team at the start of the year was a horrendous lack of experience.

Next year looks like it will be a good one for the team. They don't lose anyone, and plus will be gaining three or four new recruits.

Tennis Finishes Best Season

Mens' tennis at UNCW has just completed one of their best seasons ever.

As of Monday, the team had posted a 13-6 overall record, with one game remaining. This record, regardless of the final game, is the best ever posted by the squad.

The final game of the season came Tuesday when the Hawks traveled to Pembroke. While details are not available at this writing, it should be noted that in their previous match UNCW won by the score of 9-0.

In action this past week, the Seahawks downed Campbell College 7-2 and lost to East Carolina 6-3.

"I think we've really had an outstanding season," said Larry Honeycutt, head coach for the team. "We did a little better than I expected and... some of our losses were very close," he added.

Paul Gemborys, the number two seed, led the team with a 16-3 individual record. Colin Sumrall also posted a fine record, scoring twelve wins compared to three losses.

The number two seeded doubles team of David Shackelford and Joe Goulding led the Hawks' doubles pairs with a 13-4 record.

Coach Honeycutt says the team is looking forward to next year. "We'll have our top three seeds back," he said, "and have people down the line to fill in our empty spots."

One change Honeycutt wants to work on is an upgraded schedule. "We'd like to get half of our teams from NCAA Division I or II. As it was, this year we only had about five or six."

Overall, Coach Honeycutt says the team is very proud of its accomplishments this year, and is really looking forward to next season.

Football to Begin Next Fall

Next year, UNCW will have a football team. It won't, however, be sponsored by the athletic department.

All support for this new venture in Seahawk sports will come from the newly-formed UNCW Football Club. At an organizational meeting last Thursday, over thirty people expressed an interest in forming such a club.

Club Football is perhaps the newest and fastest-growing movement on college campuses today. It was originally started to keep football interest going in those students who couldn't quite make varsity level programs. Recently, however, schools like UNCW with no varsity football program have joined the Club Football Association, in an attempt to get former high school players back into the game.

All members of the UNCW faculty, administration, and student body are encouraged to participate. The only player eligibility restriction is that no one who has received a football grant-in-aid or scholarship may participate.

The team will play a 9-11 game schedule, with the first game coming two weeks after school opens. Practice will start the first day of school.

Equipment acquisition is the responsibility of the individual player. Jerseys and pants will be ordered as a team at a cost of twenty dollars per player. A ten-dollar deposit is required.

Anyone interested in Club Football should call Frank Zerbinos at 455-4563 (Jacksonville) or write to him at 419 Regalwood Drive, Jacksonville, N.C. 28540. You can also leave your name, address, and telephone number in the mailbox in the student union.

Softball Concludes First Season

This spring, both womens' softball and tennis, managed a break-even regular season record, upsetting the predictions of many.

Rarely does a team in its rookie season post anything but a losing record. Womens' softball, however, forgot about that and went on to an excellent 6-6 record in their first season.

"We did alright this year," said Judy Lewis, head coach and associate athletic director, "but we had the potential to do better."

Coach Lewis also pointed out that the squad played the "best teams around." With this in mind, the team's .500 mark looks very good, especially considering the fact that there were six freshmen on the team.

In post-season tournament play, the Lady Hawks scored an opening round victory against Shaw University. They subsequently lost, however, to UNC-Greensboro and N.C. Central and were eliminated from the event.

PHIL OCHS

CHORDS OF FAME

A&M SP-4599

Phil Ochs was a true folk song hero. His life was of those legends are written about.

Phil began his career in the early 1960's with a trip to Greenwich Village, New York City. It was there where he gained fame as a writer and singer of the protest song. He sang about almost anything you could protest against as his first album, ALL THE NEWS THAT'S FIT TO SING, suggests. In fact, Lillian Roxon goes so far as to say this album "established him as the First of the singing journalists. He thought like a journalist, wrote like one, rhymed what he came up with, set it to music and sang it."

He continued with this type singing and writing until the late 1960's when the protest song gave way to the new music sparked by the Beatles and other progressive groups. Phil, however, had the idea that his topical type song was not finished. It was because of this that his popularity dissolved.

In 1969 came his REHEARSALS FOR RETIREMENT and in 1970 came his most talked about album, PHIL OCHS' GREATEST HITS. It was here that Phil had decided the only way to reach the American public with his ideas was by a Che dressed as Elvis Presley. This resulted in his famous Carnegie Hall concert where he shocked what fans he had left into obscurity. As the back of Greatest Hits says, "50 Phil Ochs Fans Can't Be Wrong!" for after that concert, it was sure that that was all the fans he had left.

Knowing this, Phil left the US and toured the world to study different types of government. He then came back in 1974 and recorded several singles which A&M Records thought were quite good and released several. There was very little response and in early 1976 Phil Ochs took his own life.

CHORDS OF FAME is a collection of his best works. It is a remarkable album in that it contains so much excellent material. It is the backbone of Phil Ochs' life and soul.

Because there are so many songs on the album and each one has its own story, it would be impossible for me, at this time, to tell of each one. So below, I have made a disography of all his albums. The songs under the album title

Senate Debates Salary, Approves Appointments in First Meeting

by a substantial increase in parking fees. It will cost $25 for on-campus parking next year, but Whaley stated that this is still comparatively low, adding that the cost at N.C. State is near $70 per year.

The improvements in parking facilities will come in the form of several new parking lots and the curbing of several streets, including Reigle Road.

In his treasurer's report, Paul O'Bryant submitted the names of nominees for the Finance Committee, all of whom were approved by the Senate. The committee includes Glen Downs, Tracy Miller, Keith Hedrick, and Frank Zerbinos, and is chaired by O'Bryant.

O'Bryant also reported that there will be $69,500 available in the SGA budget from anticipated student fees. Added to $10,000 cash on hand, the SGA expects total resources to amount to $79,500.

By contrast, the total of funds available in the 1976-77 year exceeded $100,000. O'Bryant stated that the Finance Committee has received requests from various SGA-funded groups totaling $128,000.

O'Bryant stated that, obviously, the Senate would have to "cut out some of the frills" in the budget, noting that he expects cuts by "almost every organization."

Concerning the executive salary question, President Whaley stated that she feels $1500 is too expensive for a university of our size, and gave examples from several other state universities. She reported that UNC-Chapel Hill pays $1600; NC Central, $1500; and Appalachian, $1500 to the president and treasurer, and $1200 to the vice-president.

Whaley, however, said that a salary would not affect her performance in office one way or another.

Last year's president, William Robinson, had requested a $1500 salary. The Senate submitted it to a student referendum and it was voted down.

Senior President Barbara McKay said "I don't see any reason for bringing it (the salary) up again at all." She stated that it should be enacted by student referendum, and that the "students don't want it" as shown by the result of the last referendum.

Director of Student Activities Al Harris told the Senate that

"by taking this constantly back to the students... you (the Senate) are 'lumping on part of your responsibility.'"

Harris noted that a large part of this issue is based on "personality conflicts" between the Senate and the president.

Junior Vice-president Tom Hunt and Sophomore Secretary Glen Downs continuously urged the Senate to take action on the matter at that meeting so that the Finance Committee could include the salary amount in its budget figures.

Sophomore Senator Chris Al-dridge added that the Senate should "act on this now... so we can go ahead and put it into the budget."

But debate on the issue was continued for about one hour as the Senate first heard a motion from the floor for a $1200 stipend that was finally tabled after an illegal vote on the motion took place.

The illegal vote occurred when two senators, John Potter and Wayne Bryant, took part in the vote without having been sworn in. All other senators had been sworn in at the beginning of the meeting, but Potter and Bryant arrived late.

The Senate suspended the rules so that the two senators could be sworn in.

Secretary Downs moved for adoption of a resolution which called for consideration of an executive stipend, but the motion failed in a floor vote.

In other Senate action, the Atlantis was given a $300 reallocation to cover costs incurred through a misunderstanding between the staff and printer. The unexpected costs arose from expenditures for the cover.

By Neil Klotz

The sun rises over "Great Issues in Applied Physics." By some dint of caffeine, illegal pharmaceutical or sheer will power, you have again experienced one of the most hated of all collegiate states of consciousness: the all-nighter. You have an hour before the test, so you eat breakfast, apply more stimulants, and get ready to spew forth the Great Issues. If only you could sleep for an hour. . . .

The test over, you return to your room and flop exhausted on your bed. But while your body says "rest me," your hands are shaking and your eyes are wide open. Time for Somnifex? Don't get caught dead.

After abusing your body to stay up, you should try to get to sleep as naturally as possible. Downers or alcohol may seem like a natural, but they can combine with whatever you were using to stay up—even coffee—to produce real havoc.

To use an extreme case, if you're speeding to stay up and taking barbiturates to relax, you not only risk the effects of those killer drugs, but can also wind up in a vicious up-and-down cycle that would take medical help to break. In addition, while more drugs or alcohol might actually knock you out, they'll also cut out essential "dream sleep," which researchers have found you need to feel rested. Here are some alternatives:

Ups and Downs. Folklore prescribes "a warm drink before bed" for insomnia, and in this case, the folks have something. Most warm drinks will induce a mild state of low blood sugar and make you sleepy.

The same goes for any quick influx of sugar. On an empty or relatively empty stomach, a candy bar will give you an initial burst of energy. But the rapid influx of sugar causes your body to over-react in order to balance the sugar content in the blood. It withdraws more sugar from the blood than you ate and you experience a sudden drop in energy. People who eat a lot of refined sugar go through this sort of up-and-down routine regularly. Some of them become diabetics.

If you hadn't guessed, keeping your blood sugar high will help you stay up. Try to stick to high-protein, low refined-sugar foods like nuts, seeds and fruit for the duration and you'll need less caffeine or whatever to make it to sunrise. In my own extensive career of all-nighters, I tried staying up for several days with no stimulants by maintaining high blood sugar and found I was better able to deal with whatever academic insanity was called for without spinning out into Jittersville.

Coffee, cocoa and Lipton-variety tea will all lower the blood sugar, but because they also contain caffeine, the sedative effect is garbled. Alternatively, those who have developed a sort of tolerance for caffeine will sometimes find that coffee puts them to sleep because of the blood sugar factor—a paradox that never ceases to amaze non-coffee freaks since a half-cup keeps them awake for days.

Garden Variety Sleep. Warm milk will lower the blood sugar mildly, and the calcium will provide a bonus sedative effect. Those who cannot digest milk should go with herbal teas, which don't contain caffeine. Mixed with a little honey, teas made from chamomile, lady's slipper root and peppermint make good sleeping potions. Chamomile can also be made into a powerful sedative medicine—good for those tough cases—by putting the herb in cold water and brewing the mixture until black.

You should be able to get these herbs at any natural food or herb shop. If all else fails, order them directly from the San Francisco Herb and Natural Food Co., 367 Ninth St., San Francisco, CA 94103 or from Celestial Seasonings Herb Teas, Box 4367, Boulder, CO 80302. Celestial Seasonings also makes an herbal tea mixture called Sleepy Time, which is a good general relaxer.

In case you were wondering, the infamous and now illegal herb marijuana was, around the turn of the century, a legal tranquilizer listed in the US Pharmacopoeia. It was regularly prescribed whenever a sedative or pain-killing drug was required. While the most unhealthy side effect of marijuana presently seems to be jail, the above herbs will do as good a job of relaxing you, if not altering your consciousness.

Leaving Your Body Behind. While recurring insomnia may signal some problem unresolved in your mind, a simple case of all-nighter hang-over largely stems from the fact that your body's sleep time-clock has been thrown out of kilter. Relaxing your muscles will in turn relax the internal organs, nervous system and the rest and allow your body metabolism to reorient itself. At that point the body discovers your perfidy: "What's this guy been doing to me? I'd better get some sleep!"

Warm baths will relax your muscles. Better yet is the yoga exercise known as Savasana or "dead body posture." You lie flat on your back on the floor, arms at your sides, breathing easily and slowly. Then consciously tense and relax each group of muscles from the feet to the calves, upper legs, thighs, stomach, hands, arms, shoulders, neck, jaw, face and forehead. Inhale deeply and hold the breath as you tense each group. The more you do it, the more muscles you will rediscover and the more relaxed you'll be. It works every time.

Some things that don't work every time are the special anti-insomnia mattresses, bed lights, sleep records, eye shades, ear plugs, talking pillows and other sleep paraphernalia available. If you find something that works for you, use it. Anything helps that allows you to let go and shut down the small computer sitting on your shoulders that wants to keep clicking through the essay question on Part B of Section One. As you leave your body behind to relax itself, your mind can float off to places unknown. Tomorrow, tell yourself as you close your eyes, the sun will rise over the Great Issues without me.

WEEKLY SPECIAL

Senate Works to Curtail Debt Collectors' Ploys

by Jack Anderson
with Joe Spear

WASHINGTON -- A New York man recently received an urgent call from a woman who said she was a nurse at a nearby hospital. She reported that his wife had been involved in a serious automobile accident. She said the hospital needed to know at once his hospitalization coverage, his employment, his salary.

The agitated man hurriedly supplied the information. Then he rushed over to the hospital--only to discover that his wife wasn't there at all. He had been the victim of a cruel but common hoax. He had been tricked into supplying private financial information to an unscrupulous debt collection agency.

Such abuses have flourished among some agencies which collect financial information to an unscrupulous debt collection agency.

Such abuses have flourished among some agencies which collect an annual $4 billion in debts. They get away with it, because there is no federal law to restrict their unsavory practices.

Their harassment is often directed at the wrong people. Most of the abused debtors simply can't pay their bills because they've lost their jobs or suffered setbacks.

Some have already paid their bills. The collection agencies are merely behind in their paperwork. One elderly man, who was hounded over a $14 debt he didn't owe, dropped dead while yelling at the collector over the phone.

Collectors have posed as public officials, lawmen, attorneys and newsmen. Some have even pretended to be social workers as a ruse to get personal information from institutions. Others have represented themselves as department store clerks. Then they have called the debtor's bank to ask whether he has enough money in his account to cover a phony purchase.

One debt collector has boasted that he can collect a volume of personal information on anyone in the country in 24 hours.

But it is the individual harassment that is the most outrageous. Some people have received as many as 20 telephone calls an hour, even in the middle of the night. Other collectors try to cause trouble for the debtor by harassing his employer.

The House Club recently selected a federal lawsuit by agreeing not to harass delinquent clients in the future. And the Senate Consumer Affairs Subcommittee is trying to set strict standards for collection agencies. So there is hope for the maligned debtor.

Cuban Mission?: The State Dept. is quietly preparing to establish a diplomatic mission in Cuba. Of course, the plans are strictly preliminary. But some foreign service officers have already been interviewed for possible diplomatic positions in Havana.

The idea of re-establishing normal relations with Cuba is favored by most of the people around president Carter. But there are still those who oppose it.

They point out that Castro is holding an estimated 4,000 political prisoners in Cuban jails and that Castro owes the United States nearly $2 billion for property that was seized after the revolution.

But the strongest argument against normalizing relations with Cuba is Castro's global operations. The latest intelligence reports show that Cuba is supplying military assistance to 10 African nations and half-a-dozen other countries from South Yemen to Laos.

Hiding behind Castro's beard, of course, is Leonid Brezhnev. The Kremlin is aware that the Cubans are more acceptable to the Third World than are the heavy-handed Russians.

But there is no question about who is financing Castro's activities. In fact, intelligence reports claim that the Soviets are now shelling out close to $4 million a day to keep Castro solvent.

Globetrotting Chairman: The Consumer Product Safety Commission is supposed to protect the public against dangerous products. This can best be accomplished, it would seem, here at home. But Chairman John Byington has felt the urge to promote product safety in exotic, faraway places.

In the 10 months since Byington was appointed chairman, he has managed to visit almost as many foreign countries as Henry Kissinger. Byington has made flying trips at the taxpayers' expense to Hong Kong, Taiwan and Tokyo; to Bonn, Brussels and Hamburg; and to the sun-kissed Virgin Islands.

He told us that he has been explaining U.S. standards to foreign companies.

Meanwhile, the globetrotting chairman is preparing to visit Europe again this summer. The CPSC has been so busy arranging his travels, apparently, that it hasn't had time to take action against hazardous heaters, extension cords and other dangerous products.

Deficient Diet: Several international corporations have moved into the baby-feeding business in underdeveloped countries. But the babies, I've learned, are doing poorly.

In the past, these babies have been nourished by their mothers. But several international food manufacturers have conducted an advertising campaign to boost bottle feeding. Many mothers have been persuaded by the advertising to put their babies on bottles.

Unfortunately, the water is impure and the baby formula is expensive in poorer countries. The result has been that the babies are getting less nourishment than if they had stuck to mother's milk.

But the big food manufacturers are happy; their profits have shot up.

Manpower, Inc., the world's largest temporary help firm, expects to have jobs for more than 25,000 students with office work skills throughout the country this summer, a substantial increase over last summer, according to Mitchell S. Fromstein, President of Manpower.

"Every year students add an important dimension to our workforce. This year they'll play an even bigger role because of the optimistic job forecast Manpower has received from businessmen," Fromstein said.

A recent survey of 5,000 businessmen nationally conducted by Manpower indicates business hiring is on the upswing with a growth projected for this spring and summer in the service and retail trade areas.

When students go looking for jobs, they swell a part-time U.S. workforce that already includes some 16,000,000 people. Ironically, students may not get a job because they overlook their competitive edge. Many of them have a marketable office skill and don't know it.

One of the reasons that students may overlook these skills is that they have their sights set on a more distant goal--a case of not being able to see the forest for the trees. Fromstein said that students who type term papers for themselves and their friends often have typing rates as high as a highly qualified typist.

The person who's a skilled typist of office machine operator can usually find a job with Manpower. There are also some opportunities that don't require as much skill, such as inventory takers, maintenance workers, etc.

One University of Denver student, Mary Kay McNulty, uses her typing ability to travel the world with Manpower. Mary Kay lives in Milwaukee, Wisconsin and during the Christmas vacation she works in Manpower's Milwaukee office. One summer she decided she wanted to stay in San Francisco and worked in Man-power's office there.

Fromstein said Mary Kay is just one example of the many students who take advantage of Manpower's Work Travel program. Under this program, a student who establishes a good work performance record in one city can transfer to another Manpower office in another city.

Reasons for entering Manpower's temporary workforce are varied. Many are women who re-enter the workforce after their children are grown. Teachers and students work for Manpower because it offers them variety and they can work whenever their schedules permit. Other individuals work for Manpower because it offers a supplemental income.

Besides typists, secretaries, material handlers and some technicians, Manpower offers positions as systems analysts and keypunch operators. Students can find jobs as survey takers, interviewers, sample distributors, or they may help out at conventions, or work on assembly lines.

(Second of two parts.)

There have been numerous proposals for a solution to the question of control of the Panama Canal. Contrary to popular belief, the search for a more acceptable arrangement has been ongoing since the 1950's, and earlier, to some extent.

Internationalization was discussed at the Potsdam Conference of 1945 for both the Panama and Suez Canals. Indeed, had action been taken then, we could have avoided the takeover of the Suez by Egypt.

Certainly Panama is incapable of repeating Egypt's action. The country's general weakness and the presence of the United States assures us of that.

The government of Panama, however, does seek nationalization of the canal—not by force, but by diplomatic and political pressure. With the support of most of its Latin neighbors, Panama demands that it is its right to control the canal, without the dominance of the US threatening that country's national integrity.

The Panamanian's argument is not without validity. The US is there by reason of an immoral treaty that has a peculiar odor of imperialism. We have displayed blatant disregard for the rights of the people and government of the Republic of Panama.

Something must change, if President Carter wishes the US to become a symbol of human rights to the rest of the world.

Complete control by Panama is virtually impossible, if for no other reason but economics.

The canal is in need of vast improvement—indeed, it needs to be replaced with a sea-level structure. The canal cannot accommodate many of the modern trading vessels which are simply too large, as it can't handle aircraft carriers either. (The fact that it can't handle these ships is an indication of how its military advantages have dwindled.)

Panama does not have the economic resources to maintain and improve the canal without outside help. If that is the case, we may as well not go through the motions of giving Panama "complete" control.

It is fairly evident that the solution will have to be a multi-lateral, international agreement. That is, neither the US nor Panama can have total control.

Similarly evident is the fact that there will never be an equitable agreement between the two nations which eliminates the dominance of the US. Seventy years of experience tells us that.

One proposal is the formation of an international company, with worldwide stock subscriptions, presided over by Panama. But this would probably limit participation to the wealthy nations, and the idea of a private company administering the canal is suspect in itself.

Another of the more interesting solutions is modeled after the New York Port Authority. A Panama Canal Authority would be formed with membership restricted to those nations in the Americas which have both Atlantic and Pacific borders and whose domestic communications are affected by the Canal.

This proposal, devised by Professor Robert Potash of the University of Massachusetts in 1964, would include the United States, Panama, Canada, Mexico, Colombia, Guatemala, Nicaragua, and Costa Rica.

But the fallacies of this solution lie in the political climate between North and South American nations, and in the probability of US dominance within the group.

President Carter has offended many South American nations recently with his human rights criticisms. The Latin countries have always been somewhat wary of their northern neighbor, with the Panama Canal being a focal point.

Similar to that proposal is one that would place the Organization of American States in control of the canal. This would expand the group mentioned above to include Brazil and Argentina, and other such countries which have been particularly offended by the Carter administration's human rights statements.

The OAS is an organization of questionable stature. Its purpose is largely artificial, and it certainly does not have the resources to take on the responsibility of the Panama Canal. This solution would likely become just a battle ground for the US and the South American countries.

There are other suggestions for the canal situation. Some border on the absurd, such as having the US actually purchase the Central American half of Panama, from the canal to Costa Rica. (This was an actual proposal from an American university authority.)

Of course, any of you who have kept up with canal developments know that I have not yet mentioned one of the most mentioned propositions: placing the canal under the supervision of the United Nations.

Because of a general mistrust and a desire to keep their own affairs to themselves, the Latin American nations have been skeptical of UN control in Panama. The US has argued that with the UN would come communist nations who could peddle their wares in the "banana republics."

The UN solution would bring in so many voices that it will take a carefully crafted plan of implementation. There is also concern about the UN's standing among the nations of the world which has continually diminished in recent years.

But it is not likely that a better solution can be found. The UN has the machinery available for a gradual takeover. The canal would not continue to be the hot political issue that it is now, with communist and third world nations thumbing it up or nose every time a human rights question arises.

The UN plan would also end the exploitation of Panama by its great northern neighbor, with the canal becoming community responsibility of the members of the United Nations.

The UN is there to provide for international cooperation among the nations of the world. The only reason it has lost respect is that few are willing to place any responsibility in its hands.

The Panama Canal is an appropriate place to begin delegating such authority for the UN. Perhaps it would be a turning point for the revitalization of the world body.

For certain it would close a chapter in American foreign policy that we all should be ashamed of, and lend the United States as an example of the move toward morality in foreign policy that Jimmy Carter has promised.

S*E*X Visits Devil's Tramping Ground

On Friday, April 15, at 6:00 p.m., four members of the Society of Enterprising Xenophiles (Cynthia Jonson, Ann Levans, Loraq Pierce and Don Jackson) departed on their expedition to investigate the mystery of the Devil's Tramping Ground. Arriving in Siler City at about 11 p.m. they were led to the intamorous path of land by a native of the area, Mr. James Moody.

Mr. Moody tried to interpret the history of the Tramping Ground in order to try to clear up some of the mysteries surrounding it. For years it had been said that any object placed within the circle (the Tramping Ground consists of a patch of land ovaloid in shape, about 25 feet in diameter and inside of which supposedly nothing grows) is removed to the outside and disappears overnight. Moody attributed this phenomenon to the fact that the now deceased owner of the land used to camp out there and play pranks on the campers.

The original plan for the expedition was for the members to camp out at the site. But because of rain, alternative options had to be chosen. However, the members did notice one very unusual fact.

No matter how hard it was raining on the outside of the circle, if one stood within it, he/she wouldn't get wet. All four of the members will verify that statement.

Returning to the site in the morning the expedition noted the fact that there were no trees to shelter the circle from the rain. They also met another group of intrepid explorers from Statesville who also came out to investigate the Tramping Ground. James Tague, the spokesman of the group explained that they had also had some interesting experiences there overnight. Mr. Tague is a member of a group very much like the S*E*X in form. His next plans are to go to California and

Board of Governors Selections Challenged

Raleigh, N.C. On Thursday, March 31, 1977, suit was filed in the United State District Court challenging a state law which requires that four out of the thirty-two members of the Board of Governors of the University of North Carolina must be members of "a minority race."

Charged as defendants were Rufus Edmisten, Attorney General of North Carolina and the officer of the state primarily responsible for the defense of the racial quota system, Governor James B. Hunt, Jr., Lieutenant Governor James C. Green, House Speaker Carl J. Stewart, Jr., and the Chairman and members of the Board of Governors of the University.

The challenge was brought by Catawba County Legislator J. Reid Poovey of Hickory, Raymond A. Warren, a UNC-Wilmington student, David A. Boone of Stateville, a Dixie Chapel Hill Alumnus, and Mrs. Ann C. Cochran of Wilmington, a newspaper columnist.

Section 6(e) of Chapter 116 of the North Carolina General Statutes requires that one member of "a minority race" must be elected to the Board of Governors by the General Assembly every two years.

The suit is being brought with the financial assistance of the North Carolina Fund for non-profit corporation organized in 1975 to oppose unlawful government infringement upon constitutional rights.

Wilson J. Bryan, Jr., of Charlotte, North Carolina, President of the NCFIR, said, "The Fourth Circuit Federal Court of Appeals has ruled that any government-required minimum racial representation, 'blatantly fouls the letter and the spirit of both the Civil Rights Acts and the Fourteenth Amendment. A reading of them. . . is all that is needed for authentication of this conclusion.'"

Bryan further stated, "The North Carolina Fund for Individual Rights is pleased to be able to assist Representative Poovey and the other plaintiffs in their work towards eradicating racial discrimination and quotas from all aspects of the University of North Carolina. We believe that excluding potential members of the Board of Governors from any consideration because they do not belong to the 'right' race is just as bad, just as immoral, just as unjust, as excluding potential students or teachers from consideration because the quota for their race has been filled."

Special Olympics Scheduled

The Wilmington Parks and Recreation Department is sponsoring a Special Olympics program of Track and Field Events for retarded students on Tuesday at Legion Stadium. Volunteers are requested to help on a one-to-one basis with the athletes.

Crisis Line will begin a session training for new volunteers on Monday evening at St. James Church. These classes are scheduled for five Monday nights and one Saturday.

The United Way is looking for someone who enjoys contacts with people and has some interest or experience in jour-alism, to gather information from member agencies for a monthly newsletter.

Bane to Give Shark Lecture

by Anita Robeson

"Because of the great interest in sharks subsequent to the movie 'Jaws,' many fishermen are wantonly killing any sharks that they can catch," says Dr. Gilbert W. Bane of the UNCW Marine Science program.

Dr. Bane will be the speaker for the UNCW Faculty Lectures on Wednesday night, April 27, at 8:00 p.m. The lecture will be held in King Hall Auditorium, and admission is free to the public.

His lecture will focus on shark populations and various fascinating aspects of this feared creature.

Besides concentrating on sharks in general, their abundance and decline, Dr. Bane will discuss the population of the local sharks, such as the Tiger shark, the hammerhead, the sharpnose, dogfish, and blue sharks.

Other aspects to be discussed in the lecture are feeding and food habits, migration and reproduction of sharks. The sensory perception, a unique adaptation of sharks, will also be included in this part of the lecture.

Many peoples of the world and many U.S. restaurants prepare succulent shark dishes. Imagine going into a restaurant and ordering a shark steak or going fishing for a shark for your next meal? With this in mind, Dr. Bane will discuss the harvesting of sharks now and in the future.

Slides of American sharks and their ecology will be shown. Mounted shark jaws will be displayed and discussed, along with anti-shock methods and repellants—to keep you out of those jaws.

Articles for Freshman Seahawk

Student Activities Director Al Harris is in the process of compiling information for this year's Freshman Seahawk.

This special edition newspaper will be distributed to all incoming freshmen and transfer students during the June orientation sessions. If your organization would like to do some advance recruiting or just let the newcomers know you're around, this is your chance for some free PR.

Please submit a typed article in 300 words or less about your organization to the Student Activities Office prior to 5:00 p.m. on Thursday, April 28. Include such information as the organization's history, functions, meeting frequency, advisors, officers, contacts, policies, standards, and interests.

We will also consider printing any 5 x 7, black and white photo of your organization involved in an activity.

Don't be left out! Submit your articles as soon as possible.

State Government Will Offer Internships: UNCW Students Eligible

Raleigh—If you are a student interested in learning about the workings of state government firsthand, a program sponsored by the North Carolina Internship Office (NCIO) may be for you.

Students at UNCW are eligible to apply for six-week internships slated for this fall, according to Jim Caplanides, Director of NCIO. The program this fall will run from October 10 through November 16 and the student can work in most any area of the state, including Raleigh.

Students do not receive a stipend for the internship, but are expected to arrange to receive academic credit as a result of their internship experiences.

"Most schools in the state encourage learning experiences of this type," said Caplanides, "and the staff at the NCIO office can aid interested students in setting up these arrangements with departments at the school."

Caplanides said that students may work with the NCIO staff in gaining an internship at a location near UNCW so they can still live on or near campus and take regular courses, if they so desire.

Brochures explaining the fall internship program are available at the placement office on campus. Deadline date for submitting an application is September 15 and all applicants will be notified of acceptance or rejection by September 30.

For more information, students should obtain a brochure at the placement office or write the NCIO, 401 N. Wilmington Street, Raleigh, N.C. 27601.

Each internship is designed to provide the opportunity for students to learn about government and public service professions by doing actual work in a field related to their academic or career interests.

Each student is matched with an internship on a case by case basis so that both the student and the government agency can obtain the maximum benefit from the program.

Natl. Teacher Examination Offers Three Test Dates

Students completing teacher preparation programs and advanced degree candidates in specific fields may take the National Teacher Examination on any of three different test dates in 1977-78. Educational Testing Service, the nonprofit, educational organization that administers this testing program, said today that the tests will be given November 12, 1977, February 18, 1978, and July 15, 1978, at nearly 400 locations throughout the United States.

Results of the National Teacher Examinations are considered by many large school districts as one of several factors in the selection of new teachers and used by several states for the credentialing of teachers or licensing of advanced candidates. Some colleges require all seniors preparing to teach to take the examination.

On each full day of testing, registrants may take the Common Examinations, which measure their professional preparation and general educational background, and/or an Area Examination that measures their mastery of the subject they expect to teach.

Prospective registrants should contact the school systems in which they seek employment, their colleges, or appropriate educational association for advice about which examinations to take and when to take them.

The Bulletin of Information for Candidates contains a list of test centers and general information about the examinations, as well as a registration form. Copies may be obtained from college placement officers, school personnel departments, or directly from National Teacher Examinations, Box 911, Educational Testing Service, Princeton, New Jersey 08540.

Senate Meets

The Student Senate will hold its first meeting of the year Thursday night at 7:30 in room 217 of the Chemistry-Physics Building. All senators are urged to be present.

Any interested student is also invited to attend this meeting and observe the proceedings.

UNCW Hosts Campus GOP Meeting

UNCW has been chosen as the host school for the September meeting of the North Carolina Federation of College Republicans. The Federation Executive Board will meet Friday and Saturday in King Hall (Education) auditorium. All interested students and local citizens are invited to observe the proceedings and meet the various state officers who will be present.

The North Carolina Federation of College Republicans is a statewide organization composed of independent clubs on each college campus in the state. UNCW became an active participant in the federation with the organization of a C.R. Club on campus last year. C.R. members have been a vocal and highly visible force in working for Republican candidates and organizing students for various conservative libertarian projects.

One of the main issues to be discussed at the executive board meeting will be selection of the site for the fall convention of the NCFCR. There is a good chance that this convention, which usually receives statewide media coverage, will be held at UNCW.

Local C.R. members are hoping for a strong turnout of UNCW Republicans to lobby for the selection of UNCW by the Sea for this important gathering.

This Newspaper's OPINION

UNC Right to Reject Desegregation Guidelines

The UNC Board of Governors was right to reject parts of the recent desegregation order handed down by the Department of Health, Education and Welfare (HEW). The plan, which would have required a 150 per cent increase in black enrollment in the UNC system by 1982, was not only unrealistic, but grossly missed the target of the problem it aimed to solve.

While adamant that this was not to be a quota system, the HEW officials also called for an increase in the number of black faculty and staff members and a strengthening of programs at the five historically black campuses of the system. Still another requirement was more compensatory instruction programs for disadvantaged minority students who might encounter academic troubles.

The route set forth by the HEW proposal to speed the integration of predominantly white campuses seems to be heading in the wrong direction. It brings to mind a manufacturer who tries to change his market to fit his product: one can readily see that it is more sensible to alter the product.

In effect, the HEW guidelines are calling for the alteration of the market which awaits the products of our public educational system. Instead of trying to improve the quality of education in our public high schools, the federal government wants to place the burden on the university system to meet the needs of disadvantaged high school graduates.

Doesn't it really seem more sensible and practical to attack the problem head-on in the public schools rather than allow it to grow until a student reaches college age, and then making colleges responsible for what he missed along the way?

There is no doubt that blacks as a whole have suffered great social, political, and economic disadvantages within all levels of our educational system. But a mere numerical commitment to enrollment procedures will not dissolve those disadvantages. It's a much larger problem than that.

Other parts of the HEW guidelines are as equally disturbing. A commitment to hire more blacks in teaching and staff positions to reflect the number of blacks available in the job market is somewhat arbitrary since UNC officials consider their job market as a national one.

The requirement for goals to improve the facilities at predominantly black institutions would come before any major effort to increase white enrollment in these campuses. This seems contradictory to an overall policy of desegregation within the state university system.

Perhaps the most outrageous part of these orders is the provision that the Department would give prior approval to "any major change in the operations" of the university system that might affect the desegregation plans.

UNC President William Friday has made it clear that UNC has "resisted and will continue to resist" that sort of unwarranted federal interference in a state university system.

UNC has a stake of approximately $100 million in federal funds in this confrontation with HEW. The Department could ultimately cut off those funds if it is not satisfied with UNC's desegregation progress.

But it is difficult indeed to imagine such action by HEW, considering the current make-up of the Supreme Court and the mood in Congress--neither is likely to support HEW over UNC, if that choice ever comes.

The UNC Board has taken the right action to preserve the integrity of North Carolina's university system. Maybe now, HEW will talk in realistic terms which can lead to positive action by UNC officials.

Al Harris: UNCW Loses A Friend

Al Harris is going to be missed around UNCW this year. The former acting director of student activities has accepted a similar position at Armstrong State College in Savannah, Georgia.

There are not many people who could have done as much as Al did in the brief year that he was here. Not only did he accomplish a tremendous lot for students in the form of new programs and services, he displayed a genuine concern for the students on this campus.

He did so by forever seeking out and listening to student opinions. He did so by taking enough interest in the workings of the Student Government Association that he attended more senate meetings than many senators. And he did so by being not only an advisor, but a great friend to the students with whom he worked.

We wish Al the best in his new job at Armstrong. We know that the students there will soon find out why he meant so much to us at UNCW.

Four and one-half years ago when North Carolina sent Jesse Helms to the U.S. Senate, I thought that—just maybe—we could survive him for six years. Back then, I figured a Democrat would have been ready to move into Bro. Jesse's seat by now.

Things aren't looking so good for North Carolina Democrats where Helms is concerned. They have a multitude of hopefuls, but not one stands out as the candidate to do us all a big favor by unseating the marble-mouthed senator.

And to top it all off, Jesse has become a darling (I'm gonna be sick) of the ultra-conservatives, who think that Jesse and the gang have to defend all good and decent Americans from the onslaught of communistic Democrats. (Or is that democratic Communists?)

I don't know how many people had the misfortune—as I did—to see our glorious senator on NBC's "Meet the Press" with his blood brother, Sen. Strom Thurmond of South Carolina. They were preaching the importance of preserving the Panama Canal as "sovereign" American territory.

The two senators had just returned from a whirlwind tour of the Canal Zone, and had come back more convinced than ever of its importance to our country. They went down with an "open mind"; you see, they put aside the fact that for months prior to the visit, they had been preaching hell and damnation at the thought of a new treaty.

Their arguments were and are the same as those of the Lord Conservative, Ronald Reagan, who first brought the canal into the political arena. Reagan, a master of demagogic politics, reached for a last pitch, in his battle with Gerald Ford and found a responsive chord by over-simplifying the Canal negotiations.

The trouble with men like Helms, Thurmond, and Reagan is that they lack a depth of mind that allows them to see an issue through to its real core. They are so pre-occupied with the America-first, right-or-wrong attitude that they refuse to realize the full scope of an issue such as the Panama Canal treaty.

Helms is so paranoid of communism that he reminds one of a latter-day Joe McCarthy. He is intent on making every issue a stand-off between the U.S., as the defender of the free world, and the Soviet Union, as the eminent danger.

Helms says that the Big Ditch is vital to America's defense system. The Joint Chiefs of Staff say it's not so, although Helms also cleverly points out that the Joint Chiefs are subject to the political will of their commander-in-chief, President Carter. Retired military leaders are against a new treaty, Helms says, and they can speak freely without fear of any reprisals from the President.

But one must also note that these retired military officers are retired—either from the Eisenhower era or the Vietnam days. That doesn't say a lot for their credibility.

Of course, the fact is that the Canal is not at all vital to our defense. Aircraft carriers are too large to go through it; we are less dependent on naval power than we were when the Canal was originally cut; and we now have adequate naval strength in both oceans without having to quickly put them together in event of an attack.

Helms also says that the Canal is important to American trade. Seventy per cent of ships that use it, he says, are American. What he doesn't say is that this will not change in the least if the new treaty is signed. The tolls would be increased, but that would happen anyway, and is probably long overdue.

The most important thing concerning the Canal that Helms, et al, are refusing to confront is that the U.S. is there under the auspices of a decreet form of colonialism. The terms of the original treaty are ridiculously weighted in favor of our country.

The Panama Canal is only one area in which Helms fails to see an issue through. His attitude toward federal spending is like that toward the 'Black Plague—and that's not good. Helms, like Reagan and the others, is only using such issues to play on people's emotions and project himself as a national leader.

Helms is a masterful politician. But he is not a representative of the best interests of the people of North Carolina. His popularity in the state is due to his ability to oversimplify a complex problem which most people don't have the initiative to think through for themselves. And because people are so disinclined to become personally involved with the important issues, Helms just might be re-elected.

Don't Let This Man Get Away!

Score Another for Campus Militants

(CPS) Who says campus activism is dead?

Twenty-five angry demonstrators converged one recent Monday morning on Parking Lot N at the University of Wisconsin at River Falls to protest poor parking conditions. They carried placards which labelled Parking Lot N "the Swamp."

Campus police arrived on the scene and Don Chapin, chief of security, offered a policeman's lament.

"I don't make regulations, I try to enforce them," he told demonstrators.

"There isn't a man on this campus that's tried to get more parking for the kids who are going to school than Don Chapin," said Don Chapin.

Soon, protesters were meeting with the assistant chancellor of business and finance, setting forth demands which included better parking conditions, improvement of relations between campus security and students, investigation of where parking ticket monies were spent, and the repeal of all tickets given to those who were unable to park in Parking Lot N due to its muddy surface. After hard bargaining, the assistant chancellor agreed to a compromise agreement until a new parking lot could be built.

Circle K New Club on Campus

The UNCW Circle K Club is a new club on campus. After years of inactivity it is being reactivated on Sept. 12 at 7:30. It will be in the Chemistry-Physics Building, room 101.

The Circle K Club will serve to the needs of the community and campus. All persons are invited to attend. Be the first to join!!

Young Democrats Will Meet

The UNCW Young Democrats Club will hold its first meeting of the academic year Monday, Sept. 12, at 4:00 p.m. The meeting will be held in the lobby area, downstairs in the Pub (Student Services Building).

All interested students are urged to attend this first meeting so that the club can become organized into an effective voice for campus Democrats, club leaders explained.

With a very vigorous primary campaign expected in the race for North Carolina senate seats, the club is expected to be very active this year.

Rowing Club Invites You

We invite you to join the UNCW ROWING CLUB--there's a place for you if you are a sincere athlete who values a challenge and the personal satisfaction of a team effort. UNCW christened its crew in the spring of 1977 with races against UNC-Chapel Hill and the Citadel. This year, the crew will face those schools and several others as they represent the University in its first and only water sport.

If you're not familiar with crew, read on. An oarsman is somewhat unique among athletes--to maintain his conditioning, he trains year round, both ashore and afloat; to maintain his equipment, he spends hours polishing and cleaning; to support his club, he actively participates in its various fund-raising efforts. On a race day, he is expected to put forth 110 per cent for six or seven minutes, usually on a course with few spectators and without media coverage.

There are no heroes in crew--each oarsman contributes to the team effort, and receives cheers (or boos) only as a member of the team. But, the personal satisfaction and the camaraderie experienced more than compensate for the fleeting "glory" of the more traditional team sports. Physically it's as demanding as football, basketball and track. It calls for the utmost in self-discipline. Every man must pull his share of the load 100 per cent of the time or the whole team suffers.

You're welcome to visit with us at our next meeting on Wednesday, Sept. 7 at 6:00 p.m. in Room B103 (Business Bldg.). We'll have some slides to let you see what it's all about and we'll have some oarsmen telling what they have experienced. If you accept our challenge, you won't regret it! If you have any questions, contact Ray Robinson (791-5220) or John Anderson (791-3090).

White House Fellowship Applications Available Upon Request

Applications for the fourteenth nationwide competition for the 14-19 White House Fellowships awarded each year, will be available after August 1, 1977.

Established in 1964 by President Lyndon B. Johnson, this non-partisan program is designed to give outstanding, rising young leaders one year of firsthand high-level employment in the Federal Government as well as a comprehensive educational seminar. In addition to their job assignments as special assistants to the Vice President, Cabinet Secretaries, and principal members of the White House staff, the Fellows participate in an extensive seminar program consisting of off-the-record sessions with top government and private sector leaders, journalists, scholars, and foreign officials.

The program is open to U.S. citizens. Employees of the Federal government are not eligible with the exception of regular members of the armed services. There is no occupational restriction. Those who have been selected have included scholars, engineers, corporate employees, academic professors, and administrators, medical doctors, architects, local public officials, lawyers, oceanographers, a policeman, and a symphony conductor.

Proven leadership, intellectual and professional ability, high motivation, and a commitment to community and nation are the broad criteria employed in the selection process.

Application materials and additional information may be obtained by sending a post card to The President's Commission on White House Fellowships, Washington, D.C. 20415 or by calling (202)653-6263.

Requests for applications must be postmarked no later than November 15, 1977.

AP0 Rush To Be Held Sept. 15

Interested in helping mankind? Are your goals in life to make your life better? While improving your life, as well as others, and enjoy yourself, at the same time? Alpha Phi Omega, National Service Fraternity, is just one way that you can serve others and enjoy yourself at the same time.

Some of the projects we have done in the past have been: ushering at the Welcome Home Charlie Daniels Concert, Walk-A-Thon for March of Dimes, a see-saw-athon for Easter Seals, ushering for the Jimmy Buffet Concert, helping out the Red Cross Disaster Relief by serving as victims, and helping at High School Day last spring, as well as Freshman Orientation.

AP0 Rush will be Thursday night, Sept. 15, at the Creek Clubhouse. Put this very important date on your calendar and plan on coming for a good time! We'll have plenty of drink for dry throats! Look in next week's issue of the Seahawk for further details--oh, we're co-ed!

Homecoming '78

All people interested in helping with Homecoming '78, (Feb. 17-18) are asked to meet in the lobby of Galloway Hall, 7:00, Thursday night. Many plans need to be discussed concerning a parade, the dance and the Homecoming celebration.

Sigma Alpha Beta

The Sigma Alpha Beta fraternity will hold its first regular meeting of the 1977-1978 school year on Thursday, Sept. 8 at 3:00 p.m. in B111. Plans for the upcoming semester and year will be discussed. All members are urged to attend.

AP0 Will Usher Concert

AP0 Brothers will be busy Friday night, Sept. 9, at Brodgen Hall for the Foreigner Concert. Brothers will be ushering and are to contact Jan Storey or Walker O'Quinn, for further information.

At the first meeting, Sept. 1, rush was decided to be Sept. 15 at the Creek Clubhouse. AP0 shirts were distributed and possible projects for the semester were discussed. Dues are to be paid by Sept. 30, 1977.

Band Begins Organizing

Yes, the 1977-78 basketball season is approaching fast. It promises to be the best ever. With our beautiful new facility and our opening game against ACC's Wake Forest, enthusiasm should be at its highest.

What better way to contribute to that enthusiasm than to join the Pep Band? A good band could really add a lot of spirit to the games. The UNCW Pep Band is student-run and all members are students.

We are looking for anyone who can play any instrument, whether it be a trumpet, trombone, clarinet, sax or drums. The music won't be hard--just the same things you played in high school (plus a little more.) So don't stay away just because you don't think you're good enough. If you're rusty--we'll take that, too.

If you are interested, please contact Donna Waters or Barbara Leonard in the Music Department. There will be a list on the library window in the Music Dept., Kenan Hall. Please leave your name and where you can be contacted.

Let's support the Seahawks!

Co-Director

Football Club Seeking Players

The UNCW Football Club is presently seeking more players for the upcoming season. The club presently has 30 players and has room for 15 more. Especially needed are quarterbacks, running backs, and BIG defensive linemen.

The club opens its season on Saturday, Sept. 17, against the New River Air Station team in Jacksonville. The first home game is against Duke on Sunday, Sept. 25, on the UNCW Athletic Fields.

Practices are presently being held on the intramural fields Monday through Friday from 4:30 until 6:00 p.m. Equipment is available. Persons interested go to practice as soon as possible.

S*E*X Hosts Convention

The Society of Enterprising Xenophiles of UNCW is proud to present North Carolina's First STAR TREK, STAR WARS, Science Fiction, and Fantasy Convention, September 23-24-25 on the UNCW Campus, featuring STAR TREK's MR. CHEKOV WALTER KOENIG in person, over thirteen hours of science fiction and fantasy films, such as Forbidden Planet, Silent Running, The Illustrated Man, The Golden Voyage at Sinbad, and much more, including the STAR TREK BLOOPER REELS.

LASER LIGHT SHOWS, a Costume Party, Lectures, exhibits and more will complete 3 big days of Futuristic fun.

Tickets on sale now in the Student Union for UNCW. For information call 791-4330 ext. 264 or after 5 p.m. call 791-9843 room 317 or 314.

May the force be with you.

SEAHAWK SPORTS

Son of

Long ago, in a galaxy far, far away, there lived a young sportswriter named Lee Skycrawler. Though a talented writer and a capable sports editor for his school's newspaper, he had one major fault. He always waited till the last minute to do something. Lee's favorite motto was "Never do today what you can put off till tomorrow."

One stellar-day, however, this procrastinating caught up with our hero. It was Freuday, and school had only been in session for a few stellar-days, but Lee was ready for a big night on the planet. He had just finished his last class and was getting ready to leave the school when he received a telepathic message from his editor, Pak-hur. "Where are all your articles and pictures? Deadline is 5:00 today and your two sports pages are empty."

Deadline!! Lee had forgotten today was D-Day. What he had been putting off all week could not be dawdled about for another millisecond. He dashed to his pedocycle and raced over to the newspaper office.

"That's right, Lee," said Pak-hur, "all stories are supposed to be in by 5:00. You have about three hours."

"Give me a break, Pak-hur," begged Lee, "I've always been on time before. Just this once. I haven't even started on any of my stories, and do you know how hard it is to get up with a coach on a Freuday afternoon?"

"Tell you what I'll do, Lee," replied Pak-hur, "I'll give you till Mansday afternoon, and give you only one page instead of two. But if your articles aren't in by then, you'll spend the rest of your life writing for the National Inquisitor." Lee shuddered at the thought, a fate worse than death, and accepted the offer.

When he came to his senses, though, he realized he still was in a panic situation. He had three stellar-days to come up with four sports stories and three pictures and he had no idea where to start.

Suddenly, the Geoo Jayo impulse-recording unit that he had found floating in the ocean began sputtering and beeping. A beam of light came from the holographic visual projecture objective. "A message!," Lee thought. What he got, though, was no message, but announcements of five coming attractions and a plea for funds to save the starving mud-rats of East Algonia.

A voice then came over the unit's audio loudspeaker. "And now, back to our regularly scheduled philosophical message that will save this person from writing some supermarket newspaper." The GOJO unit then projected an image so revolting that Lee felt like turning away. The figure was humanoid, Lee was sure of that, but one whose face looked like an intergalactic war had been fought upon it. He had large ears and a protruding nose. On top of his head was what looked like plastic hair. He wore a yellow jacket, with a patch on it that said "ABC SPORTS." "Obviously not from our solar system," thought Lee.

The figure then began to speak, in a nasal and obnoxious tone that Lee found as revolting as his looks. "Right you are, Dandy Don, the Juice did do the right thing on that last play. When in a perplexing situation, one must always seek out the wisest, most experienced sage of knowledge available at that moment in time and space."

Star Wars

It was here that the message stopped. Obviously the GOJO unit had picked up a foreign transmission from a more primitive time field. Still, though, the stranger's words made sense. "I'll do it!" Lee decided. "I'll go see the wisest man on this planet, the aged warrior and philosopher, Abraham Fogg."

It was a long and dangerous journey to see the prophet Fogg, so Lee grabbed his Geoo Jayo unit, along with his D4B0 writing android, and set off immediately. In the time it took him to reach the sage's hideaway, he faced numerous dangers. Besides thwarting the constant swarms of Lokie Smokies and Red Jack-Ups, his journey took him across such horrors as Wagrub, Wasraw, and the most dangerous place in the entire galaxy, College Road.

After two and a half stellar-days of travel, he arrived at the home of Abraham Fogg. He found the aged scholar on his front porch, lying in a hammock pulling the wings off flies. "O great sage," Lee began, "I have traveled far and wide, I have crossed desert and ocean, I have faced numerous obstacles, all so I could seek your wisdom and guidance."

Abraham Fogg looked up from his hammock and stared at the face of the young man who was speaking. "Listen kid, if you want something just ask, so we can get this counseling session over with. It's almost time for the Gong Show."

"Sir, my name is Lee Skycrawler. By this afternoon, I must have my assigned page in our school newspaper filled with exciting stories and pictures or it's yellow journalism for me the rest of my life."

"You do have a problem, kid. What part of the paper do you work for?"

"Sports."

"Oh, well, then you have no problem. What is the biggest sport going on now?"

"Soccer, but..."

"If you want my advice," cut in Abraham, "you gotta remember I'm the one doing the talking. Now here's what you do. Get individual pics of everybody on the team, and scatter that out over two pages. Then get a copy of their schedule for the bottom of one page and a nice little write-up about what they're supposed to do this year for the bottom of the other page, and you've got no problem."

"There is a problem, sir. The soccer team left Freuday at noon on a road trip and won't be back till late Mansday night."

"hmmm, I see. What other sports are going on?"

"Well, there's womens' volleyball and tennis."

"Why don't you write about them?"

"Their seasons don't start till the end of the month."

"Got any other sports or activities going on?"

"We've got cross-country, intramurals of course, a football club, and maybe swimming. I'm not sure about that."

"You know, kid," said Abraham, "you keep saying you have a problem that there's nothing to write about. The way I see it, your only problem is figuring what not to write about."

"School just started, and I don't know anything about any of those sports. Besides that, none of the coaches are around."

Fledglings Will Be Distributed Soon; Swink to Be Honored at Dedication

In a few days the 1977 Fledglings will be distributed to those who purchased them and the few extras we will have will be sold. This yearbook is of an enormous amount of work by a staff which had to produce it in a mere two and a half months.

Because of this tremendous effort, it was most appropriate to dedicate the yearbook to a person who has also put in many hours overtime in order to benefit the university--Doug Swink.

Many of us know Mr. Swink as the spirited instructor of D&S 221-222 who continuously stalks his prey, the "bumps".

between 8:30 and 11:30 a.m. on Mondays, Wednesdays, and Fridays in the SRO Theatre. His contributions have been felt by the community by the administration and by the students.

Some of his major contributions have been his production of the Pied Piper Theatre each semester, his direction of the summer Straw Hat Theatre, and serving as advisor to the Fine Arts Committee and as a member of the Lecture Series Committee.

The Fledgling staff and several faculty members will be honoring Mr. Swink on Thursday, Sept. 8, at the dedication banquet at Tuesday's. Let's have three cheers for good of Mr. Swink!

Don't forget--while we are distributing the 1977 Fledglings, we will also be selling subscriptions for the 1978 annual for only $3.00. Later this semester the yearbooks will go up to $4.00, so now is the time to buy one!

"Yeah, it figures you'd come up with some weak excuse like that. Uh-oh, it's inspiration time. Gimme twenty dollars."

"Twenty dollars!"

"Yeah, wisdom don't grow on trees, you know. Now gimme the money if you want the answer to all your problems."

Lee slowly reached in his pocket, and pulled out a twenty dollar gold piece.

"Now here's your advice," said the prophet, "plug in those two machines of yours, and have them write a story about your problem!"

"That is the dumbest idea I've ever heard. Who would read something like that?"

"Who cares if anybody reads it? Sure, it's a dumb story, but it's either that or writing on something really heavy like which movie star is sleeping with whom or who's gonna quit show business. Of course, you might get into some really good journalism when all those psychics make those solid predictions..."

"Alright, alright," Lee broke in, "I get the message. Thanks for the help."

Lee left Abraham's house, and began the long trip back home. Halfway there, he met a blond-haired young man in a sky cruiser with a gold android beside him.

"Excuse me," the young man said, "my name is Luke Skywalker, and this is my android C3P0. We're looking for a small Artoo Detoo unit that ran off in this direction. Have you seen one?"

"I'm sorry," Lee replied, "I haven't seen him."

The gold android turned to the young man and said, "Excuse me, sir, but do you suppose that stubborn R2D2 unit went searching for that Obie-Won-Kinobie person that that girl in the message was talking about? Something about saving the galaxy from a Death Star? Or some sort of rubbish like that."

"That sounds like a good idea, C3P0," said Luke. "There's a man named Ben Kinobie that lives out towards the east. We'll ask him about R2D2. Oh, thanks for the help, sir."

"Yeah, hope you find him," Lee replied. He watched as the cruiser sped out of sight. "Talk about dumb stories!" he thought.

The above story is commonly known in newspaper circles as a filler. Any similarity between it (or its characters) and any other story (or characters), factual or fiction, is intentionally accidental.

Placement Office Assists in Job Market

The services of the Office of Career Planning and Placement, located in 205 Alderman Building, are available to any University of North Carolina at Wilmington student. Those services include assistance with any job or career-related need and reflect a wide range and great variety of informational and advisory functions.

Students are especially encouraged to utilize the career planning aspects of the office. Underclassmen can particularly benefit from this early attention to career goals and job objectives. Individuals will be assisted in developing an understanding of the world of work and how his or her personal needs can best be incorporated into effective career decisions. Career information and company literature are available through the office.

Employment opportunities for students are available through the office and include full-time and part-time positions. Students who are interested in employment should register with Career Planning and Placement as early as possible.

For graduating seniors the office arranges recruiting visits and job interviews with employer representatives. Seniors and rising seniors should register early in the academic year so that they may be informed of job opportunities and be aware of recruiting visits to campus.

Internship information for federal, state and local programs is available through the office. Interested students should notify the office of their interest by the first of March. Workshops on resume writing and job interview skills are conducted periodically and all students are invited to participate. Additionally, individual assistance with job-related concerns is available to any student.

A student placement file, once established, is available to that student for current or future employment and graduate school admission purposes.

Campus Minister Brings Christian Presence by Being a Listener

Vivian Martindale is campus minister at UNCW as a Christian presence for relating to students, faculty and others at varied levels of interest and concern. He works under the direction of a cooperative board of directors, United Christian Campus Ministry, sponsored by a number of denominations in Wilmington. The long range goal is to promote an atmosphere in which growing persons can discover strength and meaning in Christian faith and where a recognizable Christian community may emerge to become a positive influence in university affairs and in the life of the total community.

Our minister is one who shares your religious interests and personal concerns with understanding. He has no office to hide him and functions best on the sidewalk, in the dorm, under a tree or behind a cup of coffee. You may also leave messages or make contact through the Student Affairs Office (A-113) in the administration building. This is a full time position and he is available Monday thru Friday and for emergencies or personal crises at almost any other time. He'd like to meet you so introduce yourself, since there are more of you than of him.

There are occasional communion worship experiences sponsored by the ministry. Also, the Market Place, a breakfast discussion group gets involved in such topics as: T.M.: Religion or Relaxation, Abortion: Personal Dilemma, The Occult, What About Charismatics and Pentecostals, Euthanasia: Yes or No, Is Cremation Christian, Healing: Real or Phony, What Do I Do Next: Personal Decision Making, Deciding On A Sexual Ethic, The Christian and Politics, Bible Translations: Where Did They Come From and many, many more.

He will also be writing an occasional column for the Seahawk entitled "The Still-point" and developing a religious news broadcast for WLOZ, the new FM campus radio station.

Study Skills Workshop Offered

Trying to swim by holding your head high above the water and thrashing vigorously with your arms and legs will not cause you to progress very far or very fast. With a little help in learning an efficient swim stroke, improvement can be made.

So it is with studying. There are certain principles of learning that improve one's techniques.

A Study Skills Workshop will be offered September 15 in Room 214 of the Alderman Administration Building from 2:30 to 4:30 under the direction of the Counseling Center. Freshman and other interested students are invited to register in the Counseling and Testing Center, Room 217 Alderman. Plan now to attend.

Volunteer

Want to do "something"?
Want to grow, not just exist?
Want to help people?
Want help deciding on a career?

These and many other questions may be answered with involvement in a volunteer program. Approximately 55 area agencies have requested help in a vast assortment of situations. Whether you decide to assist the handicapped, elderly or children, to work with a group, or just one individual, or be an assistant or leader, to help with academics or recreational activities--the choice is yours.

Working in conjunction with the downtown Cape Fear Voluntary Action Center, the Director of Student Activities is able to give students detailed information on opportunities in and around Wilmington. A large amount of time is not required. As little as an hour a week, for instance, would be most welcome. Clubs and organizations could arrange a one-time project to suit member needs and interests.

Check out the variety of opportunities available by contacting the Director of Student Activities in her office in the Pub, or by calling the Cape Fear Voluntary Action Center at 762-9611.

Women in Music: Same Old Song

(CPS) As in most of academia, women pursuing careers in music and music education rank low on the academic totem pole of priorities.

"Almost half of those trained to work in music are women, but only a fifth of those on college faculty are women," reports Adrienne Field Block in her recent study: "The Woman Musician on Campus: Hiring and Promotion Patterns."

Block notes that "women are clustered in the lower ranks, while the reverse is true for men... Men with doctorates are more likely to be full professors, but women with doctorates are more likely to be a notch or two below."

For a full copy of the report contact the College Music Society, c/o Department of Music, State University of New York, Binghamton, NY 13901.

Good Wood Offers Musical Dessert

Saturday night at eight o'clock the Good Wood Tavern will add Harry Tueting to the menu. This special treat, approved by the Coffeehouse Committee, will only be available a couple of hours for those of you who like to top off your dinner with a little musical today.

To aid you in your decision on whether or not to partake further information is here listed.

The ingredients which compose a Harry Tueting are: a musical vitality, a strong voice and a guitar all form the base, then add folk songs, new and traditional, a little blues and a dash of ragtime; which when mixed produce a fine stimulant.

The connoisseur may also detect some new or interesting hot licks, chords, or progression which will be to his liking.

Harry Tueting is a recent graduate of UNC-Chapel Hill where he received a B.S. degree in Folklore. He has played in several local clubs and loves to satisfy an attentive audience.

So come to the Good Wood, Saturday night and bring a joke, a friend and a drink.

Marine Science Program Internships

Beginning in the fall term, 1977, the marine science program at UNCW will make four marine and environmental research internships available to academically outstanding students. Recipients of these fellowships will be awarded a stipend equivalent to University instate tuition.

Fellows in this program will develop a 9-month, broad-based academic learning or research project with a minimum of two faculty members. Normally, the projects and faculty involved will be in fields of marine or environmental science where the student has had little or no previous experience.

Although the recipient must be a major in marine biology or environmental studies, faculty members may represent one of several departments.

Applications should be sent to the Director of Marine Sciences and Environmental Studies and should include:

- (1) A letter of intent written by the candidate;
 - (2) A copy of the student's transcript;
 - (3) Letters of support from faculty; and
 - (4) Any other documents attesting the outstanding potential of the student.
- All applications must be received by September 15.

Crisis Line Needs Volunteers

Crisis Line/Open House is in need of new staff members. The approach at the Center is one of peer counseling and the staff is made up almost entirely of volunteers—this means we need you to care and to help. There are many services that we can provide for our friends: legal counseling, free clinic, emergency shelter, listening, information, and referral, but there are many more things that need to be done and for that we need your help and support.

Staff training will be conducted Sept. 19, 1977 at St. James Church (3rd and Dock Streets. For more information contact Crisis Line/Open House at 763-3695.

The center is a place where people from a world of distance come to a world that is close. To others. To the joy of one's self.

Foreigner Is On The Way for Concert at Brogden Hall

For Mick Jones who sits behind the studio board facing the playback monitors, it is a proud moment. The sound levels are being gingerly sharpened on the final mix of his "Cold As Ice" and cross-currents of richly textured vocal harmonies engulf the panelled room and chill the air.

The other members of the group are huddled around the console and nod their consent. "Feels Like The First Time" follows with its choppy rhythms erupting into a puny chorus underpinned by some glistening synthesizer runs and a razor sharp rhythm section. An eloquently gruff vocal tops it off.

Jones, who has played guitar for Gary Wright, Peter Frampton, Leslie West and Ian Lloyd among others formed Foreigner last year with Ian McDonald who has not been a member of a group since the late '60s when he was an integral part of the groundbreaking line-up of King Crimson. The third English expatriate in the group is Dennis Elliott, a drummer who has played with IF and most recently appeared on the Ian Hunter solo albums. Joining them are three fledgling American talents: Lou Gramm, vocals; Al Greenwood, keyboards and Ed Gagliardi, bass.

Foreigner has been one of the best kept secrets of the year but after months of honing their sound in rehearsal studios and arduous recording sessions, the group is ready to step out of the shadows.

The album is being readied by Atlantic for March release and should prove to no surprise of anyone who has heard advance test pressings—to be among the most auspicious and welcomed debuts of the year.

Early last year, guitarist Jones (ex-Spooky Tooth) and multi-instrumentalist Ian McDonald (ex-King Crimson, noted producer), both transplanted Englishmen living in New York, found themselves working together as backing musicians for an Ian Lloyd solo project. While each had been aware of the other's existence, this was the first time the two had met. At the time, there was a possibility of a band forming out of the Lloyd sessions. That failing to happen, Mick and Ian went their separate ways.

Meanwhile, Mick, who had recently parted company with the short-lived Leslie West Band, had decided that the time was finally right for him to strike out on his own with a new project. He concentrated more on his ongoing songwriting, and then began to do some preliminary recording. At that point, Mick and Ian got in touch again. "I knew Ian wanted to get something really serious together—not just a commercial vehicle particularly, just a nice thing that hopefully would have commercial value."

Or, as Ian prefers to recall it, "He asked me if I was doing anything for the next five years."

So the core of the as-yet-unnamed band—the dynamic duo of Mick and Ian, along with the early recruit Al Greenwood on keyboards—set about the task of formulating what this new project was to entail.

So the pieces of Foreigner began to come together. As a result of his prior experiences, Mick "decided I'd like to start with a certain amount of fresh people—people that weren't jaded, that hadn't abused themselves too much to the point where they were only partial human beings." Added to the original trio were lead singer Lou Gramm (ex-Black Sheep), drummer Dennis Elliott (noted session player) and bassist Ed Gagliardi. The result is an unusual balance between various levels of experience, as well as between English and American influences. As Ian notes, "There is still a freshness about it because as far as people it's still new. It's not weary names that have been around for years."

Entering into concentrated rehearsals, Foreigner proceeded to carve out an original sound stemming largely from Mick's considerable writing talents. Determined to be a live band, the group practiced for months before seriously recording, so that the songs on the album would be based on live arrangements.

Working from a solid base, the varied talents of the six musicians allowed the development of subtle as well as tight, aggressive arrangements. "At face value it's simple," as Ian describes it, "it's easily graspable music. But the more you hear it, the more you hear how we've worked on the arrangements. It's not really that simple." Mick also notes that, early on, "I envisioned a rich vocal sound, a texture of interesting vocal lines. I didn't want it to be purely instrumental."

Armed with over two albums worth of material, Foreigner began to record their debut album in November, 1976. Originally planning to produce themselves, at this time Mick and Ian decided to enlist the co-production aid of John Sinclair and Gary Lyons (of Queen and Pilot association) to work with them on the LP. We wanted somebody with an objective opinion and who was musically in tune with us," says Mick, "and who could tell us—it's going to sound a little more effective this way or that way, so we could get on with the music and playing it—somebody to take the weight off in the control room."

After a year of non-stop preparation, Foreigner has brought forth "FOREIGNER" an auspicious debut characterized by sophisticated arrangements, superlative vocals and inspired instrumental work. And what of the songs themselves? "They're very accessible, that's the thing," Ian notes. "Rather than being spacey and intellectual, they're very good songs and arrangements, we hope."

And as of July, 1977, that album has sold over 1,000,000 copies. That seems to answer Ian's dream.

On the LP, all the songs have been written or co-written by Mick, with Lou making substantial contributions, primarily for lyrics as well as for melodic lines. In addition, the final sound of the music has been greatly shaped by the instrumental prowess of the remaining members of the group (Ian and Al also share song credits.)

As "FOREIGNER" hits the streets, the band is in the midst of preparing to hit the road, bringing the LP's music to American concert audiences for the first time. Needless to say, they are quite anxious to play for people.

In organizing their stage show, in addition to visual plans, Mick also notes that they are especially concerned with getting Foreigner's live sound as good as is technically possible. "The aim should be to make the record sound as great as possible and then go out and have it sound better than the record." With goals like that, it won't be long before the only thing foreign about Foreigner will be the first seven letters of the name.

So, Foreigner is definitely on its way. Wilmingtonians will have a rare chance to see a truly moving band on its way up. The concert is scheduled for this Friday night at Brogden Hall at 8:00 p.m. Tickets are still available to UNCW students through Friday and will be on sale in the Pub. But hurry, because they are selling quicker than for any other concert to come to this area and if you miss it, you'll have no one to blame but yourself!!

Mice That Roar Could be New Key to Earthquake Predictions

(CPS) People living in earthquake-prone zones might not need a better mousetrap if two University of California researchers have their way.

Geophysicist Dr. Durward D. Skiles and biologist Dr. Robert G. Lindberg are monitoring the behavior of a group of pocket mice and kangaroo rats in California to learn whether animals can sense approaching earthquakes.

"We will be able to check at all times how active each mouse is and whether it is above or below ground," Lindberg notes. If the scientists notice any abnormal behavior amongst the rodents, such as intense activity when they should be sleeping, they immediately will contact a seismological laboratory to check whether its records show any earth rumblings at the test site.

Far Eastern folklore has linked erratic animal behavior with earthquakes for several millennia. Prior to tremors, Chinese peasants have reported seeing geese flying into trees, pigs biting one another, and rats fleeing en masse. Western accounts are less frequent, but they include nightmarish tales of alligators leaving the water and lumbering into the woods at a good clip, bellowing all the while.

The UCLA researchers believe that even if their rodents score high, animal behavior probably cannot be used as the sole early warning system for earthquakes. Still, if any person has observed odd animal behavior hours or days prior to a quake, Professor Skiles may be contacted at the Institute of Geophysics, UCLA Los Angeles, CA 90024.

Now comes Miller time.

Administration, SGA Officials Debate Use of Student Union Space

by Ray Warren

With the completion of the new student bookstore, the question of what to do with the space being vacated in the Student Union Building has begun to capture the attention of the administration and student leaders. Several suggestions have been made for utilizing the old bookstore space. Although it has been suggested that it could be used for administrative offices, SGA President Karin Whaley and Student Activities Director Linda Moore have strongly supported alternative plans to develop the space for student use.

President Whaley has submitted a plan to the administration which would move the present game room into the old bookstore and use movable partitions to create meeting rooms in what is now used for games. The partitions would allow several small meetings to take place at one time, but would also permit continued use of the room for larger activities, such as dances or concerts. Whaley complained that many students, especially female students, did not like the present atmosphere at the game room which she characterized as being "like a pool hall." By moving the games into the more isolated bookstore, she hopes to encourage more students to feel comfortable in the union.

One concern emphasized by both Moore and Whaley is the need for more meeting space for campus organizations. Presently the Senate and various clubs must meet in empty classrooms. Both women feel that the student government and clubs would benefit from having a meeting place in the "pub."

Ms. Moore, who has returned to direct student activities this year, points out that much of the space in the present union is not usable due to the fact that the building was originally designed for classrooms with large halls and interrupted space. In addition, the structure is smaller than it appears due to the food service in the Goodwood, a very limited second story, and several boiler rooms. At present, the area utilized for student use (including the Seahawk, SGA, Fledgling and games) is less than 8,000 square feet.

The Bookstore would add approximately 2400 feet to this total.

Moore says that until a new student union is built "we are in need of a usable interim facility." "The bookstore space is only a drop in the bucket," she stated, saying that a study completed several years ago indicated the need for at least 6,000 more square feet to provide space for student activities.

There are several possible obstacles to the plan promoted by President Whaley. One

The game room in the Pub figures in plans for renovation of the Student Union major concern of the administration is the present H.E.W. guidelines which mandate that all student services be accessible to handicapped students. In the elevator-less Alderman building, this has presented a problem for financial aid and career planning and placement. Whaley, however, believes that officials of these departments could set up temporary quarters, during lunch perhaps, downstairs for one hour a day and satisfy H.E.W.

As an alternative, she suggests moving the offices of Dr.

Cahill or Mr. Bierly upstairs and using their offices for these services. Whaley also points out that there is space in Hoggard presently utilized as a biology study room that could be used for offices. Activities presently taking place there would be moved to the Marine Sciences Building.

The other major difficulty confronting proponents of the expanded student union is financial. According to Dr. Bierly, Vice Chancellor for Business Affairs, any renovation costing over $10,000 must be approved by several state agencies. The UNC Board of Governors has approved renovations only for administrative offices. Changing this could require up to six months. Whether renovations would cost over $10,000 has not yet been determined. In any case, at least some of the space may be required for offices.

According to Dr. Bierly, there are some people who feel that the offices of Career Planning and Financial Aid would be better located

Irregular Procedures Characterize Planning of Star Trek Convention

By Bobby Parker

The Society of Enterprising Xenophiles (S*E*X) has traveled many irregular avenues in an effort to fund its upcoming Star Trek, Star Wars, Science Fiction, and Fantasy Convention. Having been allocated $400 by the Student Senate for this year, S*E*X was forced to go before SGA President Karin Whaley and Treasurer Paul O'Bryant to request a commitment of funds for the convention before the Senate convened for the year.

The convention had originally been planned to feature a lecture by "Star Trek" veteran James Doohan. Doohan was available on Sept. 24, and since this date corresponded with the first anniversary of S*E*X's founding, the convention was planned for then.

Darrell Hope, one of the founding members of S*E*X, said that it was first agreed that Doohan would receive $2.50 for each ticket sold, with a minimum of $2000. However, when the contract arrived, its terms stated that Doohan would receive 50 percent of the gross profits of ticket sales.

"We got shafted," said Hope.

But before the contract arrived, S*E*X had requested financial underwriting by the SGA from President Whaley and Treasurer O'Bryant in the amount of $2000 for Doohan's lecture. Whaley and O'Bryant agreed, but were later told only that Doohan had cancelled the appearance without explanation of the contract misunderstanding.

Hope explained that S*E*X could not go along with the Doohan contract, and then contacted Walter Koenig, another "Star Trek" star, who agreed to lecture for $1650. The SGA commitment was then revised to reflect Koenig's fee.

Freshmen Elections Are Scheduled Sept. 28-29

Student Government Association elections for Freshmen will be held on Wednesday and Thursday, Sept. 28 and 29. Candidates are needed for all offices which include president, vice-president, secretary, and five senators.

This is the perfect way to get involved in school and to find out what's going on. To sign up for the election go by the SGA office upstairs in the pub and see Nikki Bane, administrative assistant, between one and five p.m. If these hours are inconvenient, call Francis DeLuca at 799-0856. Leave your name and how you can be reached if he is not in.

The deadline for registration is Friday, Sept. 23. A knowledge of the SGA constitution is needed, as there will be a test on which candidates are required to score at least 80 percent. The constitution can be found in many places, including the Student Handbook.

All interested students are encouraged to register as soon as possible.

Questions to Be Raised About S*E*X Convention

There has been a great amount of work and planning put into the upcoming Star Trek, Star Wars, Science Fiction and Fantasy Convention by the members of the Society of

This Newspaper's OPINION

September 14, 1977

Page Two

Enterprising Xenophiles (S*E*X). But there are several questions that should be raised about the three-day event which takes place next weekend.

S*E*X is a relatively new group on campus. Formed last year, it did not receive SGA funding until this academic year. Its total allocation from the Student Senate for this year was $400.

Now, obviously, $400 was not enough to fund the extensive program of lectures, films, and exhibits that the convention will feature. S*E*X leaders found it necessary to go before SGA President Karin Whaley and Treasurer Paul O'Bryant during the past summer to request funds to bring in James Doohan for Star Trek fame for a lecture.

S*E*X could not go before the Student Senate because it was not in session. In order to have Mr. Doohan at the convention, they had to plan the convention on the one weekend that he was available: Sept. 23-25. The time factor made it necessary to commit enough money for the lecture without prior approval of the senate.

At last week's senate meeting, S*E*X asked for an additional $930 for films, printed programs, and building rentals. That amount was approved, bring the total expenditure of SGA funds for this convention to $2980.

Why did the convention have to be held so early in the year? If it had been scheduled later, the Student Senate would have had time to review the group's request for funds. Of course, there is the fact the Mr. Doohan was only available Sept. 24, but as it turns out he is not coming anyway. Walter Koenig, also of Star Trek, will now replace Doohan.

Why is a fledgling group such as S*E*X planning such an extensive program for its first effort as a SGA-funded organization? It would seem that S*E*X should at first prove itself successful with a smaller version of this 3-day convention before taking a risk with nearly $3000 of student funds.

How big a risk have SGA and S*E*X leaders taken with the funds? Probably not a great one. The convention will in all likelihood be a success and bring in more than $3000, thus enabling S*E*X to return the money it obtained from the SGA. As of Monday, it had sold only 50 tickets, but this was after only one week of sales. The group must still sell 500 tickets to break even with the SGA.

Was it the manner in which S*E*X obtained the necessary backing for Mr. Koenig's lecture entirely proper? James Doohan agreed with the club's leaders to appear here for a minimum of $2000, but when the contract arrived it was learned that he wanted fifty per cent of the gross profits. What was improper is that S*E*X began advertising Doohan's visit before they saw the contract. They were thus backed into a corner—dragging the SGA along—so that they had to hold the convention on Sept. 24. A later date for the event would have avoided most of the financing problems surrounding the affair.

And perhaps the most important question is this: how wisely has S*E*X allotted funds for the various activities of the convention? For nine films—that's nine films—they have spent $350, while at the same time they will pay about $174 for shipping a collection of films from a Florida collector. They will also pay rental fees for such equipment as megaphones "to control the crowd."

We are not criticizing the idea behind this convention as such. We are, in fact, glad to see one club put so much work into an activity that many students will enjoy. But these questions deserve serious consideration because, if for no other reason, student funds are involved.

Letters to the Editor

Reader Defends Senator Helms

To the Editor:

In regards to last week's attack on Sen. Jesse Helms, I have a few things to say.

If Mr. Bobby Parker feels that he doesn't like Helms, why doesn't he just state so? Instead, Mr. Parker made several blurb statements without documentation, qualification, or quantification. I personally feel that once a person begins to launch an attack on something or someone, that person should state facts—not only a opinion.

We, the readers, should derive our own opinion. If the facts about Sen. Helms are as bad as Mr. Parker wants us to believe, why doesn't he state them? We could then concur.

Until he can prove to us that Sen. Helms does not represent the best interests of the people of this state, I will support Sen. Jesse Helms 100 per cent. Even then, I will still support Sen. Helms—because he is out to save the basic foundations on which this country was founded. I don't think the others ever learned. Greta Anita Lint

The Right Line

by Ray Warren

Congratulate yourself. You and I have thus far lived through eight months of the present administration in Washington. Considering the present state of both administration domestic and foreign policy, that boast could become an increasingly difficult boast to make in the long years until 1980. Lest you decide that I am being overly cryptic, let us take a look at the present policies radiating from that city on the Potomac.

Congressional Democrats were successful in preventing a vote on their infamous pay raise. They celebrated this victory by joining the president's advisors in denouncing a Republican plan to cut taxes on the hard-pressed American worker. After all, somebody has to pay the bureaucrats, right?

Lest the voters decide that the present liberal majority should not retain their newly enriched occupations, the president next moved to insure a permanent Democratic majority by legalizing vote fraud. His instant registration plan would have allowed anyone who could walk, stagger, or be bribed, to cast their votes on election day. Just like the good ole days of Tammany Hall and the big bosses.

America's medical system has produced one of the fittest, most healthy populations in the world. Nonetheless, free choice is not "progressive", so Mr. Carter has decided we should join such wonderful models of socialized efficiency as Britain and Albania.

Of course everyone wants to balance the budget, so Mr. Carter was careful to choose a budget director adept at making things appear "balanced." But surely, honesty and ethics aren't really important considerations for such a close friend as dear ole Bert Lance!

Now, balancing a budget like that of the U.S. would require either a drop in spending or a rise in taxes. Considering a drop in expenses absurd, Mr. Carter has chosen to raise more taxes. How? Simple. Devise a massive tax program and call it an energy program! Of course the "energy program" does nothing at all to promote energy production, but that wasn't its purpose in the first place.

Neville Chamberlain would be proud of America's new foreign policy. Appeasement didn't work in Czechoslovakia,

Thoughts on Carter and Congressmen

but Mr. Carter hasn't lost the faith!

Our commander-in-chief proposes to endanger the lives of thousands of young Americans by risking war in Korea. General Singlaub? What makes an army General think he knows more about military matters than a peanut farmer? Everyone "knows" we can trust our friends in North Korea to be on "good behavior", don't they?

Karl Marx and subsequent communist leaders have called for the worldwide expansion of communism. Andrew Young seems to be ignorant of this fact, however, as he considers Cuban imperialism a "stabilizing influence." (Of course, democracy is a rather "unstable" form of government.)

The Carter foreign policy was never meant to be rational anyhow. Why else would we punish our friends in Nationalist China by abandonment and de-recognition, while seeking friendly "normal" relations with the brutal dictatorship of Cuba, China, and Vietnam? For what purpose do we scream of human rights, and then propose to bow down to the murdering General Torrijos of Panama?

There is more, of course, but the basic scheme is apparent. More government, more taxes, and more regulation at home; appeasement and disarmament abroad. They say "it is always darkest before the dawn." With the 1978 elections on the horizon, let us pray for dawn.

In the last six months, there have been five special congressional elections. In four cases, conservative Republicans captured seats formerly held by liberals. There is a candle of hope on the horizon. I hope it is a harbinger of our new day, for the time for a new revolution in honesty, individual freedom, and national security has come.

Club Members Defend Convention

for the lecture did not cover all the expenses for the convention. S*E*X requested and received an additional $930 from the senate last week. The $930 was described as paying $350 for nine films; $256 for rentals and clean-up; and $174 for shipping of more films. This brought the total convention cost of $2980.

"We are not really getting any money," said Hope. "The SGA is underwriting us in case the impossible happens and we flop." He added that S*E*X plans to repay the SGA when ticket sales are completed.

Although the issue of repayment was discussed at the senate meeting, it was not so stipulated in the motion which granted the allocation. Therefore, S*E*X is not actually required to pay back the SGA, although it is generally understood that it will.

Charlie Suppler, a senator and co-founder of S*E*X, said that "In the way of Star Trek conventions, this is not a big show... When this convention goes over big... (S*E*X will be) independent of the SGA. We'll no longer need SGA backing."

As of Monday, 50 tickets had been sold. S*E*X will have to sell 500 to be able to repay the SGA.

It was discovered Monday afternoon by SGA officials that S*E*X has maintained a savings account outside the SGA general fund account, a violation of state law. Hope stated Monday that it contained about $140 left over from profits made before the group became an SGA-funded organization.

However, club treasurer Cynthia Johnson later revealed that there is about $120 in the account and that deposits have been made recently from money collected through convention ticket sales. Johnson could not give specific figures as to the breakdown of the account.

It would not be illegal for S*E*X to keep a separate account of funds collected before they received SGA funding, but the deposits made this year from ticket sales would violate the law.

Johnson assured SGA officials that she was not aware of the law concerning the account. The account was set up in S*E*X's name, and Johnson was the only one who could make withdrawals. She stated that the money made this year would be returned to the SGA account, but that the fate of any funds from last year would be decided by the members of S*E*X. She indicated her personal desire to retain the separate account.

Hope summed up the questions concerning the convention, saying, "Certain people think we have overstepped our authority... This (convention) is maybe a gamble," he continued, but we "had to take chances."

Suppler added that the convention will "draw attention to (UNCW and Wilmington) as an interesting place to go." Both expect to sell as many as 1000 tickets, citing significant interest among local high school students.

If it fails, said Hope, the senate "would have given us our chance and we would have blown it."

Constitution Committee to Hold Public Hearing

By authorization of the student senate, a committee of students is preparing a new S.G.A. constitution. This committee has been working over the summer and is nearing completion of a first draft of the new document.

In order to assure maximum input, however, a public hearing will be held to give students a chance to present ideas and express opinions about what should be contained in the new constitution.

According to committee chairman Ray Warren, areas of concern may include (but are not limited to) apportionment of representation, scheduling of elections, impeachment of officers, the student court system, and election procedures. All students with any ideas or opinions about the content of the S.G.A. constitution are strongly urged to attend the hearing which will be Monday night in the S.G.A. office (upstairs in the Pub) at 7:30 p.m.

Senate Charters Club, Allocates Funds at Year's First Meeting

By Bob V Parker

The Student Senate held its first meeting of the year last Thursday night, approving the charter of one newly formed organization and appropriating funds for S*E*X and the executive fund.

SGA President Karin Whaley delivered a president's report in which she asked for a $1576 re-allocation to the executive fund. The increase was made necessary due to labor regulations concerning the salary of SGA Administrative Assistant Nikki Bane.

The executive fund had previously allotted $3500 for Mrs. Bane's salary, but the labor regulations would cause an increase to $5076. Since only $5000 had been allocated for the fund, President Whaley requested $1500 for other executive expenses plus $76 to cover the assistant's salary.

The Senate later allocated $1576 for the executive fund.

Whaley also reported that Chancellor William Wagoner will be furnishing soft drinks for senators at each meeting. She and the Senate expressed appreciation for this.

The senate also approved an official seahawk logo that will appear on all stationery and communications coming from the university. Until now, several logos have been used by various campus groups.

In the absence of SGA Treasurer Paul O'Bryant, Whaley gave the treasurer's report, indicating that the SGA still does not know exactly how much in funds it will have this year.

The Football Club presented its charter for ratification and requested $85 to join a statewide organization of football clubs. The club indicated that it will become self-supporting when it obtains a sponsor. The charter was approved and $85 allocated.

Darrell Hope appeared for the Society of Enterprising Xenophiles to request additional financial underwriting by the SGA for the expenses of its upcoming convention. He requested $930 to be broken down as $350 for films, $256 for clean-up and rentals, $174 for films, and $150 for printed programs.

"If this convention is really a go, then S*E*X will be off its feet and in the air flying," Hope stated. "We just hope that it doesn't get too big for us to handle."

Hope also reported that $1650 had already been committed for a lecture by Walter Koenig of the television series "Star Trek."

Senator Charlie Suppler, who is also a member of S*E*X, said, "This is the biggest thing I've ever seen."

He stated that he had attended several similar conventions, and that this one would make Wilmington and UNCW "known."

Senior President Barbara McKay moved to allocate $930 to S*E*X, and the motion was approved unanimously.

Senators Jim Franks, John Potter, Dan Allen, Shirley Bryant, Wayne Bryant, Linda Rhode, Francis DeLuca, Neil Murphy, Tom Hunt, and Cindy Buxton were absent.

Parking Fee Increase Will Be Used for New Lots and Improvements

By Tim Bass

Have you been wondering about that steep parking fee you had to pay? Pretty big increase over last year's price of $12.00, huh? No, the Security Office isn't ordering redwood desks and shag carpet for its building; rather, all that cash will be used in the most logical area—campus parking.

Necessity caused the UNCW Board of Trustees to pass the measure to increase campus parking fees. Costs for maintenance of parking lots and sidewalks are as high as ever, and construction of additional parking spaces is scheduled to be underway soon. All money received from parking fees will be spent on this upkeep and on these additions.

Campus Security Chief C. N. Long said that present plans are to add parking spaces behind the Pub, to increase "South 40" (next to the tennis courts) to a 400-space lot, to pave F street on both sides to the baseball field, to pave a 50-60-space lot at the corner of F Street and Riegel Road, and to add a lot large enough to hold 300 cars east of G Street, near the gate.

Contracts for these additions have been let, and hopefully some part of them will be completed within the next 60-90 days, according to Chief Long.

Most of the parking headaches occur in the mornings, particularly on Mondays, Wednesdays, and Fridays. Although practically all parking lots in the classroom areas are full, there is usually ample parking available in "South 40" for those who don't mind a five minute walk to the furthestmost building on campus.

Chief Long said that enforcement of parking violations would begin on September 12, with initial offenses usually being excused in an effort to help familiarize the student with parking rules and regulations. Second offenses require a $4.00 fine in most cases. Court appearances will be required for all violations after number two.

Presently, some 2200 parking permits have been sold. Any person wishing to purchase a permit may do so in the Campus Security Office.

Student Appointed to Statewide Post in GOP

The UNCW College Republican Club gained additional clout within the state C.R. Federation last weekend with the appointment of a second seahawk student to the federation Executive Board. State chairman Doug Markham announced the appointment of UNCW Chairman, Ray Warren, to head the Campus Affairs division of North Carolina College Republicans.

Warren was confirmed unanimously by the State Executive Board.

The executive board of the North Carolina C.R. federation is responsible for directing all federation activities. Warren's appointment gives UNCW two votes on the 21 member board. Charles "Chuck" Balser, the UNCW Vice-Chairman, was appointed to head the campaign's committee last April and continues in that capacity.

At their weekend meeting, College Republican members also learned that the number of possible sites for the fall C.R. convention has been narrowed to four. UNCW is still in competition, as are Meredith, UNCW, and ECU. A decision should be reached by next week.

Campus C.R. officials have expressed cautious optimism about UNCW's chances for hosting the well-publicized event.

Sex Questionnaire Upheld, School Authorities Let Down

(CPS) New York City school authorities who had suppressed dissemination of a student sex questionnaire by a high school editor were recently dismayed when Federal Judge Constance Baker Motley ruled that they had violated the editor's First Amendment right to freedom of expression. School officials had claimed that the 25-question document, which the court labeled "rather personal and frank... about the students' sexual attitudes, preferences, knowledge, and experience," might inflict "irreparable psychological damage" on some students.

Judge Motley stated in her decision that the school officials had failed to prove that distribution of the questionnaire would cause "significant psychological harm" to junior and senior students. However, she permitted the school to deny distribution to children younger than 14.

"The distribution of the questionnaire and the publication of the results in The Voice (the student paper) will make it clear that the questions asked are the concerns of many and that the problems which a student may face are not unique to himself," Judge Motley reasoned.

Remember, You Must Die

(CPS) The palm-reading industry may be dealt a blow by a new computer program that will predict your probable lifespan.

The computer is fed numerous pieces of data, including your age, sex, childhood diseases, smoking habits, and locale, that could affect your longevity. One advantage of earning a college degree, according to the program, is that it will probably increase your life expectancy.

UNCW's newest addition, the Trask Gym, should be complete within a month, according to athletic director Bill Brooks.

Telephone lines, lockers, and bleachers for the 6,100 capacity arena are expected to be installed within 30 days, the bleachers to be the most time consuming. Some minor electrical problems are left to be worked out but should be completed when the telephone lines are installed later this week.

The $4 million building, designed to form one working unit with the old Hanover Hall Gymnasium, includes 4 classrooms, an olympic pool and dive tank, physiology and exercise labs, a training room, 5 handball courts and the Athletic arena. Most faculty offices in the physical education and athletic departments will also be located in the new facility.

Construction on the building is "behind schedule," Brooks stated, "we were hoping to have finished by the end of the summer. All I can say is that it takes time."

The sports arena will see its first action on Nov. 26 when the Seahawks face Wake Forest. The dedication of the building is scheduled for this date.

UNCW will have its first swim team this year, thanks to the new pool facilities. Scuba diving classes are also being held here instead of at the YMCA, as has been the case in previous years. Other plans, for the future, include diving and water polo.

"The new facilities leave us with a lot of possibilities and room to grow," Brooks stated. "It should also help in recruiting, both for athletic and other departments. Our facilities are as good as any other in the area."

The new gym should also prove to be a factor in attracting teams to play here, which will be a help to finances.

Fund Offers Limited Graduate Fellowships to Black Students

With the support of the Ford Foundation, the National Fellowships Fund is offering a limited number of graduate fellowships to black Americans who intend to pursue a career in higher education. These fellowships are offered as part of a broader Ford Foundation program of assistance to historically disadvantaged minorities whose opportunities for participation in higher education have been limited as the result of racial discrimination and other factors.

To be considered for one of these fellowships, applicants must meet all of the following qualifications:

1. They must be citizens of the United States.
2. They must be enrolled in or planning to enter an accredited U. S. graduate school offering the doctoral degree in their field of study.
3. They must be currently engaged in or planning to enter a career in higher education.
4. Have completed the equivalent of two academic years of full-time graduate study.

Eligibility is limited to (a) applicants who plan to pursue full-time study toward the doctoral degree in the arts or sciences or (b) applicants who hold a first postbaccalaureate professional degree—such as the M. D.* J. D. or the masters in architecture, business administration, education, engineering, library science, public administration, public health, or urban affairs and planning—and plan to continue on to the doctoral degree in preparation for a career in higher education.

These awards are for one year only, but they are renewable upon reapplication if the fellow maintains satisfactory progress toward the doctorate. The fellow will be expected to study full time and to complete the requirements for the doctorate as soon as possible.

Fellowship awards for 1978-79 will include the full tuition and fees required by the graduate school, an allowance of $300 for books and supplies, and monthly stipend of $350 to help meet living costs. A married fellow may apply for an additional stipend of $50 a month for his or her spouse and each dependent child, provided that dependency can be substantiated. Applicants receiving Special Dissertation-Year awards may apply for a research allowance in lieu of the book allowance.

Twelve-month awards are available for applicants planning to study full time during the summer session 1978 and the academic year 1978-79, starting with July 1978. Ten-month awards are available for those planning to study full time during the academic year 1978-79, starting with September 1978.

All applicants are required to submit scores on the Graduate Record Examination Aptitude Test and one Advanced Test. These tests will be administered on October 15 and December 10, 1977, and the deadlines for registering for them are September 19 and November 9, 1977, respectively.

Arrangements for taking the tests should be made by the applicant directly with the Graduate Record Examinations, Educational Testing Service, Box 955, Princeton, New Jersey 08540. Applicants should request that their scores be sent directly to "National Fellowships Fund.

Code Number R5487-4."

The deadline for submitting completed applications and all supporting documents is January 5, 1978.

Application forms must be requested by the individual applicants. No applications will be sent to intermediaries.

For application forms and additional information write to: Graduate Fellowships for Black Americans, National Fellowships Fund, Suite 484, 795 Peachtree Street, N. E., Atlanta, Georgia 30308.

College seniors are not eligible to apply.

Talk it Over Amongst Yourself [Your Selves?]

(CPS) Do you think you're crazy because you've been talking to yourself lately?

According to a new book called The Selves Inside You (Exploration Institute) talking to yourself correctly may enhance your control of your life as well as your mental health. The book's authors, Stewart B. Shapiro of the University of California at Santa Barbara and James Elliott of Berkeley, suggest that people identify and get to know their inner voices and then act as moderators in ensuing dialogues.

"This form of self-talk enables us to become accurate observers of ourselves and others, and to begin taking charge of our transactions instead of merely being victimized by them," claim the authors. They continue that "guided self-help talk can distinguish between irrational self-torture coming from old, out-worn and inappropriate morality versus the voices of one's ideals and constructive moral standards."

State Tuitions Beating the Inflation Rate

(CPS) Tuition and fee hikes for the nation's state colleges and universities exceeded the US inflation rate from 1975-1976 to 1976-1977, according to the American Association of State Colleges and Universities (AASCU).

A recent AASCU survey found that average undergraduate tuition and fees increased 8.3 per cent for state residents and 9.8 per cent for non-residents last year, raising average costs to $582 and $1,466 respectively.

In the same period, the Consumer Price Index rose 6.4 per cent.

While 32 states did not raise tuition and fees beyond the inflation rate, tuition and fees in New Jersey jumped 26.8 per cent. Michigan, Rhode Island, and Mississippi followed with increases of 20 per cent or more.

"where students gather." Moving their offices to the student union, would not be unusual, he pointed out, as many large universities have multi-purpose student unions. He conceded, however, that UNCW's union was uncommonly small.

At present no plans have been formally submitted to Chancellor Wagoner. Dr. Malloy of Student Affairs is presently considering the alternatives and will make a recommendation to the chancellor soon, possibly by early October. Whether the bookstore space is used for offices or student activities will be ultimately decided by the Chancellor.

President Whaley is cautiously confident that her suggestions for student use of the space will be accepted by both Malloy and Wagoner. "There is no excuse, no reason why not," she says, adding that using the area for offices would mean a rejection of "every suggestion I made to them." She added that the new classroom building will relieve overcrowding in Alderman anyway, and building offices in the union for only one year "would seem really stupid." Whaley added that she appreciated the help of the administration, particularly Mr. Bierly who she characterized as "a real listener who really leveled with me."

Even though the first game is still nearly six months away, Coach Bill Brooks knows there is no time like the present to begin preparing for the 1978 season.

The highly successful baseball coach at the University of North Carolina at Wilmington has his charges going through their drills and conditioning sessions to make sure they will be ready when the first pitch is thrown next spring.

"When we start in the spring, we just don't have a lot of time," Brooks says. "We want to give everyone who wants to try out for baseball a shot, so we conduct these workouts in the fall. Fundamentals is one of our primary concerns, although we will be playing a few scrimmages during the next few weeks, too."

The Seahawks closed with a flurry to qualify for the North Carolina Summer League playoffs this past year, but are attempting to rebound from a disappointing 1977 spring season.

Hawks Off to Winning Start

Seahawk soccer started off its season on a winning note, capturing first place at the inaugural UNCC Invitational Tournament, held in Charlotte September 9-10.

In the opening match, UNCW faced UNC-Asheville, a school noted for its good soccer program. The Seahawks emerged the winners 3-0. Nino Fleri scored the first Wilmington goal forty minutes into the game on a shot from six yards out. Eddie Broch assisted on the play.

There was no scoring for the rest of the half, though head coach Calvin Lane said they "missed many goal opportunities." Then, thirty-five minutes into the second half, Fleri scored again, this time from 20 yards out. Chi Chi Mercado provided the assist.

Mercado provided the third and final goal ten minutes later. The assist was by Steve Paul.

Winning the first-round game, the Seahawks advanced to the championship match, where they met UNC-Greensboro. Greensboro had defeated host school UNC-Charlotte to advance to the final round.

With surprising ease, the Hawks downed the UNCG squad 9-0. Gil Castella and Mike Shafer both had hat tricks (three goals apiece) for UNCW. Others scoring goals were Mercado, Fleri, and Jerry Rebbert. Ashley Dixon provided three assists.

Among those who did an outstanding job in the game were Ted Kort, Tim Gribbon, Ron Hayes, Rod Becker, Doug Powell, and Chris O'Neill.

The Seahawk's first home game was yesterday against rival Campbell College. Results are not available at this writing.

Needless to say, Coach Lane is pleased with the good start of the squad. He credits their success to the hard pre-season workouts.

A week before the start of the season, the Seahawk squad traveled to Maryland for some scrimmage matches. Scores are not publicized of pre-season scrimmages, but Lane did say they were "very good."

Baseball Prepares for Season?

Soccer Opens Another Year

Though many of the names and faces are the same, this year's soccer team is a lot different from the one of a year ago.

For one, this year's team has started off a winner. Last year's squad struggled the first half of the season before turning around and winning seven of their last nine games.

Graduation hurt the soccer team greatly this year. Coach Lane lost five of last year's starters, including fullback Gene Borowski and goalie Tim Willette, two of the most outstanding players in their positions in the south.

To fill in those empty slots, Lane is using a mixture of talented sophomores and promising freshmen. For instance, in the goalkeeper slot he is testing three young players—junior Steve Asbill, freshman Rusty Russ, and freshman Charles Ingold.

Lane feels this year's team is much quicker than last year. He also noted their "ability to ri. All three have started every year they were on the squad. Fleri scored an amazing 43 goals in his first two years at UNCW, but a knee injury sidelined him for most of last year.

One thing that hasn't changed from last year is a tough schedule. Of the fifteen games the Hawks play, nine are against Division I opponents. Also facing the Hawks will be Rollins, which has one of the best Division II soccer teams in the nation.

Swim Team Begins Workouts

Coach Dave Allen welcomed more than 50 eager prospects—both men and women—to the first-ever swim team practice at the University of North Carolina at Wilmington's brand new indoor facility on campus last week.

As part of the university's ever-growing athletic program, both a men's and a women's team will be initiated this season. And Allen, who came to Wilmington from Potsdam State College (N.Y.), has been encouraged by the early response.

"I was most excited by the enthusiasm and interest of the students at our first practices," he said last week. "They showed me that there is a real interest in aquatics here at the university, and that's what it takes to build the foundations of a successful program."

The first home meet for the Seahawks is October 21 with UNC-Greensboro.

Rowing Club Begins Practice

Ready all? Stroke!

Those are the cries of the coxswain of the UNCW's Rowing Crew, as the fall practice gets underway. Practice will be held on Monday, Wednesday, and Friday at sunrise. The team practices on the usually calm waters of the Masonboro Sound.

The Rowing Club consists of the crew plus regular members of the organization. A meeting was held Wednesday, Sept. 7 and a very good turnout gave everyone hopes of an exciting year. The club officers for this year are: Bruce Evans, President, Kelly Swing, Vice-President, Ray Robinson, Treasurer; and Tommy Witner, Secretary.

Tentative cookouts and fund-raising activities are planned throughout this school year. We are also planning sailing and canoeing for the interested members.

There is more to school than studying and going to class. Why not join a club? The UNCW Rowing Club/Crew could be just for you. Both men and women are welcome. Tommy Witner, Sec.

Fellowship Meets Tuesdays

The Campus Christian Fellowship is a group of college students, high school students, and adults from the Wilmington area whose lives have been touched and are being transformed by the Lord Jesus Christ. We meet together weekly for fellowship and Bible studies to help one another grow in order that we might be able to share the good news of Jesus' transforming power with students on our campus who need to know the answers to those nagging questions.

We support and take an active part in many local denominational Christian churches and have representatives from nearly every major course of study in our university. We would like to help you in any way we can, especially in finding the answers to your questions by helping you to become closer to Jesus.

We will be having weekly meetings every Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. in 103 Hoggard Hall. All are welcome.

Meets Monday

All clubs, organizations, and fraternities on the campus are urged to be represented at the next ICC meeting Monday, Sept. 19, 7:00 p.m. Because I am chairman of Homecoming '78, many of UNCW's activities will be centered around the preparation of the parade. I have many ideas to share with you and I need your response.

Work should begin now. Homecoming '78 will be one of the best ways for clubs, organizations, and frats to raise money for themselves. Therefore, I ask you to please show up at the Chemistry-Physics Building, room 217-218, at our next meeting. Sincerely, Greta Anita Lint, President, I.C.C.

Photographer to Be Here in Early October

From Monday, October 3, through Friday, October 7, a photographer will be on campus to take individual student class photos—absolutely free of charge! Those having their picture taken will have the pictures of their choice put in the yearbooks as well as the option to buy prints from Smith Studio.

Remember, purchase is not necessary. Seniors should come on Oct. 3, seniors and juniors on Oct. 4, juniors and sophomores Oct. 6, sophomores and freshmen on Oct. 6, and freshmen and Absent Minds on Oct. 7. The Place? Upstairs in the Pub in the Fledgling-Seahawk Office.

English Club to Be Involved in Various Projects

There will be an English Club meeting Thursday, Sept. 15 in Kenan 202 at 4:00 p.m. An alternate meeting at 6:00 in K202 will also be held to accommodate class schedules.

This meeting will be organizational and all interested students, regardless of major, are invited to join.

If you cannot make these meetings or have any questions, please call Bill Rapp at 799-2500.

This year the English Club will be involved with such projects as book sales, silent and audio films, poetry readings, poetry and prose workshops and many other interesting undertakings.

The English Club plans to have a lot of fun while stimulating ideas and imaginations.

Please join and be a part of the UNCW English Club.

College Republican Club

Launches Membership Drive

The UNCW College Republican Club has launched a vigorous membership drive. The club's goal, according to Chairman Ray Warren, is to sign up at least fifty members before the fall C.R. convention.

Last year the club had approximately 20 members. A rise to 50 would increase UNCW's delegate strength at the state convention by three votes.

Among the projects planned for this year are open forums to allow local Republicans to express themselves and answer student and community questions. The local club will also participate in several campaigns, including the fight to unseat Congressman Charlie Rose.

Other activities will include letters to the editor in the area media and voter education projects. Club members will also have the opportunity to meet and socialize with prominent party workers and Republican elected officials.

The College Republican Club is open to all students who have not registered with an opposition party. All such students who are interested in learning about politics, promoting Republican philosophy, and having fun are urged to join.

The next club meeting will be at 6:00 p.m. tomorrow (Thursday) in room 218 of the Chemistry-Physics building. Interested students who cannot attend should contact Chairman Ray Warren (256-9235), Greta Lint (Room 302 Belk Hall; 791-2989), or Beth Maney (799-6195.)

Credit Urged for Cheerleaders, Band in Effort to Boost Spirit

As all of you know, November 26 is the date of our first basketball game in the new gym, and our worthy opponent will be Wake Forest University.

Since this is the first game of the season, and will very likely be a sell-out, school spirit is expected to be overflowing. Our cheerleaders, already going strong, have an outstanding squad, composed of twelve enthusiastic men and women. Ideally, UNCW should have a pep band of comparable size.

These cheerleaders have been, and will continue working long, arduous hours coordinating their routines and should have the support of the entire University community. One avenue for such support by the faculty, following the example of UNC-Chapel Hill, is the awarding of each cheerleader with a total of one hour of academic credit for his or her efforts. Unfortunately, the UNCW Physical Education Department does not see any value in this proposal.

When varsity sports were first introduced on this cam-

Report From the President

Karin Whaley

pus, the athletes were given credit hours for their participation in order to create interest and school spirit. With the rapid growth of interest in sports at UNCW, the need for this credit no longer existed. I am greatly disturbed that faculty in the Physical Education Department has stated its intention not to consider our proposal for cheerleading credit.

I have encountered a similar lack of cooperation in the UNCW Music Department. Although Wind Ensemble participants receive academic credit, their director refused to consider such credit for a pep band. Her argument is that with too few students presently participating in the Wind Ensemble, the opening of a new activity, the pep band, could spread these students too thinly. But in a University environment, students should be presented a choice of activities within the range of their skills and interests. A student should not be forced to select one activity over another because of arbitrary faculty evaluation.

Perhaps the faculty in these departments, and indeed, everyone, should be reminded that when people work hard, they deserve some sort of credit or recognition. It should not matter whether the work performed is of interest to all members of the UNCW community. Diversity of interest is essential to University vitality, and I hate to think that campus officials might be extinguishing the spirit of students endeavoring so earnestly to add another dimension to our campus.

The Still Point

Title Embodies The Whole Sense of Faith

Many people have asked where the name "The Still Point" came from and why I chose it. The epithet, "the still point" is found in the poetry of T.S. Eliot, specifically in his work, The Four Quartets.

"Except for the point, the still point.

There would be no dance, and there is only the dance."

T.S. Eliot has long been a favorite of mine, and in the phrase, "the still point", he embodies, for me, the whole sense of Christian faith and life. The Still Point is anywhere; it is everywhere; it is at once the center and sense of all life; it is God; it is the Christ.

We continually encounter

The Still Point though sometimes unaware of our contact. All of life comes into focus at The Still Point; it is where all life has meaning and "the dance" goes on.

The Still Point is not always where we expect it, but is always there.

This column titled, The Still Point, will be a place to encounter The Still Point, to wrestle with the issues of life; to ask questions, seek answers and share perspectives. Some thoughts will be mine and some will be from others, meshing with our lives here at UNCW.

Crisis Line Needs Volunteers

Crisis Line/Open House is in need of new staff members. The approach at the Center is one of peer counseling and the staff is made up almost entirely of volunteers—this means we need you to care and to help. There are many services that we can provide for our friends: legal counseling, free clinic, emergency shelter, listening, information, and referral, but there are many more things that need to be done and for that we need your help and support.

Staff training will be conducted Sept. 19, 1977 at St. James Church (3rd and Dock Streets). For more information contact Crisis Line/Open

Eugene, the Spoiler

(CPS) Eugene McCarthy, nicknamed "the spoiler" during last year's election, is still spoiling to change the election system, which he says is biased against third-party candidates.

"We are trying to establish a legal precedent so that the handicaps we faced in '76 won't happen again," McCarthy recently told a group of St. Louis students. The former presidential candidate says that he already has won four court cases, victories which have overturned election laws in eight states. Now he plans to challenge the federal election laws on grounds that they violate freedom of speech and separation of power.

The press, he said, "operate between two polls—fear and greed. They fear their licenses will be revoked by a Democratic or Republican administration and they also want to make as much money as possible.

Long Live The King - Elvis Presley 1935 - 1977

They say a good performer always ends his act with his best shot. Moody Blue was the latest release at the time of Elvis' death. While it cannot match the excellence of Elvis' Fifties albums it is his best in a long time.

The material was recorded for the most part either on tour or at Graceland, Elvis' home. It ranges in musical forms from country to rock to pop. Unlike much of the past recordings this material has some spirit in its execution.

Starting off with the second side is the single Way Down. Way Down is probably the best rocker Elvis has done in years. His last good rocker, Burning Love, was five years ago. The title track is also quite a mover. Little Darlin', an old Diamonds hit, is the perfect example of doo wop rock. It is one of those tunes you'd expect to hear on Happy Days. A typical teen tune with a falsetto backing that oc-asionally breaks Elvis up. Looking back in the Seventies it is hard to take such a tune seriously. Still the song is enjoyable.

Opening the album is one of three standards, Unchained Melody. This gives Elvis some room to show off his vocal talent. Reaching into the country field Elvis sings She Thinks I Still Care and He'll Have To Go. The latter tune is by the late Jim Reeves, another RCA artist. With Reeves' old material still making the charts it is quite likely RCA will issue Elvis for a good time to come.

Elvis is usually known for making tunes into hits. However on Moody Blue Elvis covers two Olivia Newton-John songs. His vocals sound a lot heavier than Olivia's. The difference is that Elvis' performance is more convincing than hers.

Before Elvis' death RCA had printed up twenty-five thousand copies of Moody

Blue in b'ue plastic. When Presley died the blue album vanished practically overnight. Within the week some stores in New York were asking eighteen dollars for a copy. RCA has reprinted two million copies of the blue plastic. If you are after a collector's item, it might be worth picking up a copy for that reason alone. With the recent increase in Elvis' record sales, that two million will go fast. Steve Harvey

Membership Drive Will Get Under Way for Film Society at Arts Council

The Godfrey Daniels Magical Moments and Marathon Film Society, under the direction of Randolph Dellago and Mark Thomas, is the Lower Cape Fear Council for the Arts' latest foray into the Film Adventure!

The Society will kick off its membership drive this Saturday night (Sept. 10) with a ("free") showing of one of W.C. Fields' greatest hits, "You Can't Cheat An Honest Man!"

The Series will consist of 10 programs-including two "double-bill" programs-featuring a total of 12 films.

Selections have been made from among those "very special films" one can only see in a well-planned film society format-such as Leni Riefenstahl's long-suppressed masterpiece of Nazi propaganda,

"Triumph of the Will," or the silent-film classic, "The Passion of Joan of Arc."

These are films that one cannot see in movie theatres or on commercial television.

But this should not be taken to mean that the The Godfrey Daniels Film Society is for film scholars only! On the contrary, programs have been chosen to satisfy every taste.

For example, the first of our membership programs will be Jean Cocteau's film-fantasy "The Beauty and The Beast", universally acclaimed as one of the most visually beautiful films ever made.

Other films in the Series will be the modern horror film classic, "The Horror of Dracula" and "The Happiest Days of our Lives" and "The Belles of St. Trinians"; the vintage American 30's musical, "Top Hat", with Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers.

Another musical film in the series will be the original 1954 version of "A Star is Born," with Judy Garland and James Mason.

Also, as a pre-Christmas treat, we will show one of the most popular and imaginative films of all time, the original 1937 film of "Lost Horizon," with Ronald Colman.

All of these, in addition to Bette Davis and Leslie Howard in "Of Human Bondage," John Ford's American classic "Tobacco Road," and, of course, the irascible and immortal W.C. Fields!

This is a series that no film lover can afford to let pass!

One hundred series memberships will be available at $12.50 each from The Lower Cape Fear Council for the Arts. All films will be screened at 8:00 p.m. on Saturday nights-and members will receive printed programs to accompany each film.

So call now for your tickets at 762-4223 (the Arts Council) or ask for them in Belk-Beve's Book Dept., at Record World, or at Henrikser's Pharmacy.

Cinema '77 Offers Six Films

Cinema 77 will offer six films this semester all to be shown in King Auditorium. Membership cost for all films will be $10.00 per person, guests accompanied by members will be $2.00 per film while unaccompanied guests must pay $2.50 per film. Tickets may be purchased through the Office of Continuing Education on or before Sept. 15, 1977. A total of 80 memberships must be received by this date to proceed with the program. The films to be shown are: Claude Goretta's "The Invitation" September 24, Francois Truffaut's "Jules and Jim" October 8, Alec Guinness in "Kind Hearts and Coronets" October 22, Ingmar Bergman's "The Virgin Spring" November 12, Marcel Camus' "Black Orpheus" December 3, Jean Renoir's "Rules of the Game" Dec. 17.

Management Center Schedules Workshop for Small Business Sept. 29

The UNC-W Management Center has scheduled a one-day workshop on Sept. 29 for people who are interested in learning how to start a small business. The workshop is being co-sponsored by the UNC-W Small Business Institute, the U.S. Small Business Administration, the Greater Wilmington Chamber of Commerce, and the Service Corps of Retired Executives.

The workshop will provide participants with an understanding of the nature of small businesses, financing, accounting and other aspects involved in preparing for going into business. A portion of the seminar has also been planned for individual consultation.

The speakers for the program will be from the UNC-W Business and Economics faculty and the local business community. The seminar is from 9:15 to 4:30 in room 214 of the Administration Building at UNC-Wilmington.

The workshop fee is $10.00 per participant, and due to space limitations, pre-registration is required before Sept. 21. Persons wishing to enroll or obtain additional information should contact Dr. Stephen C. Harper, UNC-Wilmington, 91-4330, extension 305.

Men Open New Facets in Cheerleading Program

By Betty Salyer

There will be a new facet in cheerleading at UNCW this year. The squad will be made up of both men and women. The men were given the opportunity last year to try out for the squad but poor response forced the cancellation of plans for male cheerleaders.

This year, however, response from the male students was excellent with nearly a dozen men turning out for practice. I talked with several of them about why they chose to be cheerleaders.

Most of the men were looking for a good way to involve themselves in school activities and encourage school spirit. What better way than cheerleading?

Such is the case for Joeei Garrison, a freshman from Greensboro, N.C. Joeei played football in high school and was a member of the Pep Club. He wants to be involved in sports activities and raise school spirit.

Mark Davis, also a freshman, has the same intentions. He was active in gymnastics at his high school in Henderson, N.C., for the past three years.

Lee Miller, a freshman from Charlotte, is also involved in gymnastics. He was a member of the cheerleading squad in high school and believes in encouraging school spirit. He is looking forward to participating in the school activities.

"I think we're off to a good start. I really like the turnout," Miller said.

David Joyner, a freshman from Raleigh, N.C., was also a cheerleader in high school and participated in gymnastics. "I enjoy the stunts most of all. I worked out with the male cheerleaders from State and Carolina and that's how I got interested."

Scott Hardy, a freshman from Newport News, Virginia, has also been involved in gymnastics. Scott said about the way society views male cheerleaders, "If people think there is something feminine about male cheerleading, then there must be a question about their own masculinity."

Steve Martin, senior, who originally planned on wrestling for UNCW, said, "It fills a void that was made when wrestling was dropped from UNCW's intercollegiate competition." He is also very active in gymnastics.

Jack Meshaw, a senior from Clarkton, N.C., was a cheerleader two years ago at UNCW. He attended a meeting of the National Cheerleading Association at Knoxville, Tennessee, and has been active in supporting school spirit for many years. Jack simply says, "Wish us luck."

G. T. Hardy, a senior and TKE Fraternity pledger, was a cheerleader at Wingate College and Mars Hill. "I was more or less 'forced' into cheerleading by a past math teacher of mine at Wingate."

G. T. feels that the administration does not support them financially as well as they should; for example, they have to buy their own uniforms. He feels that they should receive more recognition considering the time and effort they put forth in working out.

Charles "Chuck" Balser, a senior from Tampa, Florida, was a high school cheerleader in 1965. Since then, he has had served six years in the Air Force. Chuck had an interesting quote for me, "If you want to reap the benefits of education, you ought to be willing to support the educators as well as the institution that is providing your knowledge."

"Rather than being like a bear that hibernates and rises only when the occasion pleases him, be a lion and roar at the world."

Koenig Lecture To Be Convention Highlight

On Friday, Sept. 23, the Society of Enterprising Xenophiles in conjunction with the SGA of UNCW will be sponsoring North Carolina's first STAR TREK, SCIENCE FICTION, AND FASTASY CONVENTION. The convention will feature STAR TREK star Walter Koenig. Koenig played the role of the Russian navigator ensign Pavel Andreivitch Chekov. He says that he has never been to North Carolina before and is looking forward to it.

The convention will also feature a laser light show from Dracula's Castle of Myrtle Beach, S.C. The laser light show will examine through use of film, recorded music, slides, and laser beam the history of science fiction films from the early Melies silent classics to STAR WARS. There is also a good chance that the show will be introduced by a mannequin of Darth Vader of STAR WARS.

Friday night the convention will feature films, a science fiction art show, and an auction of convention memorabilia, such as Star Trek autographed photos, STAR WARS posters, Tribbles, and various other items of interest.

Saturday morning the convention will start out at about 9:30 a.m. for anyone who wants to get up that early to have a good time. It will start out with films in Kenan and King Auditoriums. Mos Eisley Bar from the infamous scene in STAR WARS will be in our own Good Wood Tavern. There will be a game entitled Star Chess, which will be a regular chess game played with conventioners as living chess pieces.

There will be a science fiction short story contest and a Star Trek, Star Wars, Science Fiction, and Fantasy Trivia Quiz. The high scorers of the quiz will compete in the game show "Jeopardy 2001", which will go on Sunday morning in King Auditorium. Also on Saturday, there will be a lecture by Walter Koenig about Scifi, Star Trek, and the new series Star Trek which is scheduled to go back into production this November.

Saturday night there will be a costume party judged by Koenig and the president of his international fan club, Jack Townsend of Lenoir, North Carolina. You can come as your own favorite character from any science fiction or fantasy TV series, movie, comic book, or novel. There will be a prize for the best costume shown and everyone can have a great time.

On Sunday morning, Sept. 25, the games, films, and other exciting items of interest start all over again at 9:30 a.m. The game show Jeopardy 2001 will be held in King Auditorium. Then films and games and other exciting events will round out the convention till it ends at about 4:00 p.m.

The films that will be shown during the convention are: Silent Running, The Day The Earth Stood Still, Things To Come, Forbidden Planet, 2001: A Space Odyssey, The Illustrated Man, Metropolis, A Star Wars Featurette, two Star Trek Bloopers, two Planet of the Apes films, some STAR TREK episodes, The Legend of Boggy Creek, Marooned, The Golden Voyage of Sinbad, Jason And The Argonauts, and the Ardremeda Strain. There will also be a silent film festival with features such as the movie Adrian Scott Flicks, Buster Keaton, Charlie Chaplin, and more. Saturday night an all night film festival is planned for after the costume ball.

There will be exhibits of Scifi film posters for recent theatrical releases, and of comic books, novels and fantasies. And perhaps a demonstration of a Light Sabre duel.

The convention will begin Friday, Sept. 23, at 5:00 p.m. in the old gymnasium (Hanover Hall.) Tickets for this outstanding event are on sale now in the Student Union, Record of Long Leaf Mall, Tree Frog Records, and Cape Fear Toyota. It is best to buy your tickets now because they will be priced higher at the door.

Graduate Program in Education Authorized For Spring Semester

By Tim Bass

UNCW will offer graduate programs in education next semester. The school has been granted authorization by the UNC Board of Governors to add the programs, which will provide master's level courses in Elementary Education and Educational Administration and Supervision.

The new programs will accommodate approximately 200 students, expected to be mostly regional, at first, and primarily night classes will be offered, according to Dr. Roy Harkins, Chairman of the Education Department. Many of those enrolled in the program will be public school teachers and administration officials.

Specializations provided within the Master of Education in Elementary Education program will be Early Childhood Education (K-3) and Intermediate Education (4-9), while the Master of Education in Educational Administration and Supervision will offer specialities in the certification for professional roles of principal or curriculum-instruction specialist.

Dr. Harkins said planning for the new programs began in April, 1976, and was completed in January, 1977. The planning was done by Education Department faculty members, faculty members from other departments, and representatives from school districts within the Wilmington region. Approval was given by the Board of Governors on April 22 of this year.

Applications for admission to the programs are presently being accepted, and forms and information concerning the programs may be obtained in the office of Dr. Charles L. Cahill, Vice Chancellor for Academic Affairs and Dean of Graduate Studies.

Senate Passes Resolution Against Executive Disbursement of Funds

By Bobby Parker

The Student Senate passed a resolution at its regular session Thursday night stating that the Senate shall have the only authority to disburse funds from the SGA general account. The move eliminates the possibility that any official of the SGA executive branch can approve any allocation of money without prior approval of the senate.

The motion was apparently in response to a situation which occurred this past summer in which SGA President Karin Whaley and Treasurer Paul O'Bryant okayed a request by the Society of Enterprising Xenophiles for funding of a lecture as part of their upcoming convention.

The Student Senate will meet Thursday night at 7:30 p.m. in room 218 of the Chemistry Building.

Senior class President Barbara McKay made the motion, which was passed with the support of SGA Vice-president Ken Lilly.

"I feel that this is our power" to allocate funds, said President McKay. "I believe that if it was a real emergency, money could be given out of the executive fund," she continued.

Junior class President Tom Hunt countered, saying, "It just might be necessary for... whoever is president to give money to someone" while the Senate is not in session.

President Whaley conceded that there had been irregularities in the S*E*X request, but she cautioned the senators to make sure this motion is "not just a reaction" to the S*E*X situation.

"I knew I was going to have to answer to you about this S*E*X thing," Whaley told the senators. "That's why we only acted on the immediate need."

"You don't know what emergency might come up," she continued, asking the Senate

Offices Wrong for Student Services Building

It is absurd to suggest that administrative offices be set up in the Student Services Building (Pub) when the campus bookstore vacates it for new facilities. The building should be reserved strictly for student activities and services—and this excludes any administrative office other than the director of student activities, who is currently located there.

There is a drastic need for more space to accommodate expanding student organizations with meeting places. A plan has been devised—chiefly by SGA President Karin Whaley—to renovate the Pub to provide space for such organizations. This plan would involve moving the game room into the bookstore space and placing movable partitions in the main room of the Pub to be used for meeting rooms. The partitions would also allow for continued use of the main room for dances and concerts.

Not to be out-done, a proposal has surfaced from somewhere within the ranks of the administration that calls for moving at least one more administrative office into the Student Services Building, using part of the space that will be vacated by the bookstore. The most often mentioned offices for such a move are Career Planning and Placement or Counseling and Testing.

Some university officials would have us believe that either of these offices would be at home in the Student Services Building because they belong in a place where students congregate. But there is nothing to support the idea that these two particular offices are any more student-oriented than others. Thus, this logic could be used to support moving any administrative office from the chancellor on down. It also seems rather foolish to isolate one office from the rest of the administration.

The Pub is already the smallest building on campus. When the new classroom building is completed, the administration will likely have full use of the Administration Building. And administrators have already begun what will probably eventually become a complete takeover of Hoggard Hall.

Administration officials are using weak arguments to justify moving offices into the Student Services Building. We believe they should set their sights elsewhere and respect the students' rights to preserve the Pub for our own.

And Don't Forget to Wash Behind Your Ears!

The Student Senate is again this year facing a familiar problem: absenteeism within its ranks at the weekly meetings. It seems each meeting begins—usually late—with the question, "Do we have a quorum?"

Various excuses are given from the absentee senators. Some work on Thursday nights (the night that the Senate meets). Others have classes.

Working or going to class, however, are not valid excuses. Each senator could adjust his schedule—and he must—if he wants to really be an effective representative of his constituents. There are many, in fact, who have done just that.

At last week's senate meeting, it was decided that senators who were absent that night would not be penalized because no notice of the meeting appeared in the Seahawk last week. It would seem that any and all of the senators would take enough interest in their jobs to, at the very least, know when the meetings are and be there, without having to read it in the newspaper.

To keep the record straight, there are many senators who make it a point to attend every meeting, except when they occasionally have a valid excuse. But there are probably as many who just don't have the interest to show up.

It was requested at the meeting last week that the Seahawk publish a weekly notice announcing each meeting. Okay, senators. Yes, we will remind you week after week of your meeting—like your mother used to remind you to brush your teeth—although we doubt even this will make a noticeable difference in senate attendance.

And, just to keep things even, we will also publish a list of those of you who fail to attend the meetings week after week. Just to keep things even.

Cheerleaders Express Thanks to SGA, Athletic Dept.

To the Editor:

The UNCW Cheerleaders would like to express their deep appreciation to the Student Senate and the Athletic Department. The cheerleaders, an organization that has received very little (and sometimes none at all) financial support from the school in past years, has been fortunate enough to be allocated funds for uniforms, equipment, and travel expenses.

We feel that we can better serve the student body of UNCW with the proper uniforms and equipment. With these supplies, we can help show UNCW as it is: the most up-and-coming campus of the University of North Carolina system.

Without the SGA, the Athletic Department, and the student body, we could not accomplish a fraction of what we are now capable of doing. We promise that the results of these funds will be seen by all. Thank you.

Student Says Futch an Outstanding Candidate

To the Students and Faculty of UNCW:

The time has long since passed when students have taken an active role in their government.

On October 11, 1977, we will have a chance to play an important part in the American system. We will have the opportunity to vote for the candidate of our choice in our local City Council elections.

Billy Futch, III, is a candidate vying for a seat on our City Council. He is a senior majoring in political science, a veteran, and, more important, a concerned individual with the honest intentions of returning the governing body of our city back to the people.

Billy has worked long and hard for the last several years pushing issues which were of concern to the people. Though many of his stands may have been very controversial, he has tried his best to get the full input of the citizens and express their views to city council through public hearings, letters to the local paper, and sitting in on council meetings.

Too long have elected officials of this city run government for the people. Billy will work hard to change this stigma of local government, and hopefully return it more to a government of and by the people.

Billy realizes that no person is able to get the opinions of all the people, but on major issues of concern, he feels there is an underlying tone which can be picked up by elected officials and acted on accordingly.

We all know that there is rarely a decrease in taxes—Billy also realizes this. But he is of the opinion that at a time when we all have to cut back to make ends meet, so must a city. He feels taxes can be held to a minimum if close check of unnecessary expenditures within departments can be maintained.

There are projects now in planning which will cost taxpayers considerable sums of money to maintain. He feels this money could best be spent in smaller sums for projects that benefit the most people for the longest period of time.

What about the students and faculty of UNCW? Billy has expressed to us that the students and faculty will have a friend and a voice on City Council if he is elected.

Billy would make an outstanding city councilman for our city, and we are in hopes that as one of our own, the students would ask his views, and give their full support to the candidate of our choice, Billy Futch, III. Vote on October 11, 1977!

Lance, Senators, President Efforts Bungle Probe

Republicans around the country are having a field day with the controversy that has been growing around Bert Lance and his financial misdealings. One GOP stalwart was heard to remark the other day that he now knows how Democrats felt during Watergate: he can't wait for tomorrow's newspaper to find out what new allegations have been thrust at Lance.

During Watergate, Republicans scorned the press as overzealous, relentless hunters. Now that the press has engaged itself to investigate Lance in much the same fashion, Republicans are not so quick to lash out at the press. Not that there should be any criticism of our media in either case--there is indeed no valid complaint. But the Republican silence in the latter case points up the double standard of looking out for one's own. (Yes, Democrats are guilty, too.)

But Lance was probably one of Jimmy Carter's poorest appointments to a high government position. He does not have an extremely impressive background.

One thing that the Lance

The opinions expressed in Byline and The Right Line are those of the author and do not necessarily reflect those of the Seahawk staff. These columns will appear on an alternating basis each week in this newspaper.

affair does point out is the practice of "rubber stamping" presidential appointees through Congress. Sure, a president has every right to have the people he wants in the places he wants them, but not unless they are absolutely qualified.

Senator William Proxmire of Wisconsin, chairman of the Senate Banking Committee, was the single member of that body to vote against Lance's confirmation. We should have suspected something was not exactly right then and there, because Proxmire is less a politician than the majority of his colleagues. One of the best records in Congress belongs to Proxmire. I guess you'd say he told us so.

Republicans are not interested in the effect of this inquiry on Lance. They only hope to use it to the discredit of President Carter. They really should have known better. Mr. Carter's public standing is in sufficient good health that this nasty little affair will not leave significant permanent scars.

Any problems that have arisen out of this that might harm the Carter image have been brought on--if you'll pardon the expression--by his own big mouth. He should have never told Lance "I'm proud of you," as he did before the investigation got under full swing.

The President has a problem of saying things that do not appear to be carefully thought through--remember "ethnic purity." It's all part of the candid image he is trying to maintain, which is good in itself, but he should know by now that he won't get a second chance. You can bet Mr. Carter wouldn't say the same about Lance today.

President Carter should have waited for the investigation to be completed, or he should have conducted his own investigation and made a decision about the budget director's future. Expressing full support one week, keeping silent the next, and finally judging Lance's performance before the Senate committee is, to say the least, an appearance of indecisiveness.

Just as the White House has handled the Lance case all wrong, so have members of the Senate committee investigating Lance. In the first place, they should have done all this at his confirmation hearing. There are questions about just how competent the committee's staff has executed the behind-the-scenes investigation.

But most notable of the committee's errors was committed by Chairman Abraham Ribicoff and ranking Republican Charles Percy. They had no business whatever to meet with President Carter, inform him of "damaging" evidence they had uncovered, and call for Lance's dismissal all before Lance had testified before the committee.

The senators' action opened the whole mess up into a battle of personalities, not only between Lance and the senators, but among the members of the committee themselves. This even reached into the White House, with Press Secretary Jody Powell foolishly trying his hand at Nixon-esque dirty tricks. At least he proved himself an amateur.

Not only have the President and the Senate Committee handled this matter poorly, but Lance himself has not been a shining star. He refuses to see where all the questions are coming from, reminding one of a former president who used to think that the press and everyone else were out to get him.

He has answered questions about back-dated checks satisfactorily, but on other, more important points such as monumental overdrafts and personal use of the company plane, he has not been exactly eager to clear away the clouds.

Whatever the outcome of the Lance probe, it seems inevitable that he will not retain the public confidence to be as effective as he should be. This will not hurt him, but it will hinder the Office of Management and Budget unnecessarily. Reports already indicate that the Office has been in a stalemate for the past week or so.

But the one that will be most hurt by the Lance affair is President Carter, and it is he who will have to make a decision ultimately. Now that Lance has "had his day in court," maybe that decision will be forthcoming.

My guess is that, if Lance has not already resigned before you see this in print, he will not be long in doing so. At any rate, that's what he should do.

Parking Will Improve

Parking conditions will be greatly improved when new parking facilities now under construction are completed. In the meantime, temporary parking areas have been designated and posted at the following locations:

1. Wooded area adjacent to the Marine Science Building.
2. Shoulders of Street "G" between Randall Drive and College Acres Drive.

Workshop Set for Women

The Wilmington YWCA will sponsor a series of workshops designed to examine the changing role of women in the seventies. The purpose of these three workshops will be to focus on areas of particular concern to women, including educational policies which affect employment opportunities of women; the changing role of women in society, and its effect on family life; and the effects of traditional behavior patterns on the empowerment of women.

The first workshop on Saturday, September 24, will consider educational policies with guest speakers Elizabeth Koontz, assistant state superintendent of public instruction, and Janice Faulkner, professor at East Carolina University.

The second workshop is scheduled October 8 featuring Carol Stalk of Duke University and Susan Daniels of George Washington University.

The final meeting on October 22 will feature Jane Matthews from UNC-Greensboro and Marna Gallassi of Meredith College.

All workshops will begin at 12:30 and last until 4:00 p.m. Child care is available for a limited number of children at 80 cents per hour. Admission is free to the workshops. For more information, call 799-6820.

Enrollment Figures Increase to 3,620 Students

By Helen Hazelton

The UNCW student population has experienced an overall increase for 1977.

According to Dorothy P. Marshall of the Registrar's Office, total enrollment for the fall of 1977 has increased about 7 per cent. The total enrollment for the fall of 1977 stands at about 3,620, as opposed to 3,373 students for the fall of 1976.

The total freshman enrollment for this fall is at about 700, a 10 per cent increase over last year's figure of 626 freshmen.

Students attending UNCW on a full-time basis also experienced an increase of about 5 per cent from last year. Full-time students number at about 2,755.

The number of students attending UNCW part-time increased by only about 8 per cent from 1976. The figure for part-time students this fall stands at about 825.

College Campuses Adults Flocking to Everywhere

If you begin to see some older faces on campus, relax. It's not some new disease, but a new trend. For more and more "older" Americans are coming to college.

Indeed, according to a national survey, adults over age 25 make up more than 35 per cent of the total college enrollment.

And the college and universities, suffering declining student enrollment and rising costs, are welcoming these newcomers with open arms. They are offering scores of new incentives designed to encourage adults to enter the ivy tower. For example, some outposts of higher education are offering:

- 1) lower tuition
- 2) special part-time programs
- 3) study-at-home programs
- 4) extensive programs in night classes.

5) college classes taught via TV
6) special seminars designed to help adults adjust to readmittance into academic life.

And this list is expected to grow as the percentage of 18 to 24 year olds in the nation's population continues to drop. Colleges and universities know that the corresponding boost in the number of adults will make them a big college market in the near future.

The percentage of students age 25 and older in college populations increased more than 12 per cent in the last six years alone. And studies project that the number could rise as high as 40 per cent by 1980.

From all reports, adults are doing well in college working alongside those young whipper-snappers. Nationwide research shows that adults make good students and have grade averages at least a point higher than the norm.

One 38-year-old university graduate put the situation in this perspective:

"A person gets a sense of awkwardness when he looks older, is married and has to operate in a system designed for someone coming right out of high school.

"But I had a pretty good idea of what I wanted by the time I got here. My experiences before I came here gave me a perspective and an opportunity to choose my goals."

Considering the performance of older students in college, it looks like on some campuses an "A" may become synonymous with "Age".

Tuition Costs Rising

By Campus Digest News Service

Here's a piece of news that's probably no news to you at all: college tuition has gone up again.

But this time the increase in tuition and fees from 1976-76 to 1976-77 for the nation's state colleges and universities was well above the rise in inflation for the same period, equalling the largest percentage jump in four years.

This is the finding of the American Association of State Colleges and Universities (AASCU). Based on a survey of 323 member campuses, AASCU found that the average undergraduate tuition and fees increased 8.3 per cent for state residents and 9.8 per cent for nonresidents. This raised tuition and fee costs per year to $582 and $1,466, respectively.

Graduate tuition and fees rose an average of 6.4 per cent for residents (to $1,849) and 9.4 per cent for nonresidents (to $2,664).

However, during this period, inflation rose only 6.4 per cent.

Career Planning and Placement Office Offers Help in Job Market

By Robert Douglas

Instituted approximately one year ago, the Office of Career Planning and Placement (located in 205 Alderman Administration Building) offers a wide variety of services to students of all classifications as well as alumni of UNCW.

The primary purpose of the office is to arrange recruiting visits and job interviews for seniors, according to Mrs. Sandra Harkin, Director of Career Planning and Placement at the University.

Seniors may register with the office by filling out a brief job information form (available upon request), which is similar to a standardized job application form. A student placement file is maintained on each registrant.

This file may contain such items as: resumes, evaluations of the student by others, transcripts, veterans' records, and other references. With the student's approval, this file is released to job recruiters and other prospective employers for review.

In addition to the recruiting and referral services offered by the Placement Office, advice and counseling on career planning is available to all students. Counseling may run from one to many sessions.

Mrs. Harkin urges students to make use of this invaluable aid. Freshmen, sophomores, and juniors may also seek help in obtaining part or full-time jobs, as the office keeps a listing of such opportunities.

Many phone-in inquiries from employers are received (but not necessarily listed) so students are encouraged to make periodical checks with the office.

Besides its many other functions, the office handles internships and was able to place three students in highly coveted federal internships last summer.

The Still Point Something for Mom and Dad

Vivan H. Martindale
Campus Minister

An open letter to send home to mom and dad.

Dear Parents:

Summer will have drawn to a close by the time you receive this and students in your home will already be in college. At the beginning of each academic year, many parents ask the question, "What can we do for our college students?" This often asked question really has two sides—the first part which I have stated, and a second part which should say, "What should we avoid doing for our college students?"

Let's look at the second question. When your child goes to college . . . don't make the bed. Don't hang on too tight. Stuffed animals thrive on being hugged, held on to, never let go. Human beings get smothered. College students are becoming adults and must learn to assume that responsibility. If you want to visit on campus, don't just drop in as if it were the upstairs bedroom. They have class schedules to contend with, exams to take, and activities planned. Work out a good time to visit together.

If your student lives at home, allow some elbow room but come up with some clear and mutually agreed upon, adult rules for living under the same roof. Even dormitories and apartment complexes have regulations.

A couple of things you can do are important. Your relationship will never be the same. It will stretch and bend and change so be prepared and look forward to growing in an adult to adult relationship. You should be willing to listen before you speak. Listen for what is behind the words and what feelings are wrapped in them. They need persons who can listen and creatively speak with them, not talk at them. Another important factor is to be honest. Be open with home situations such as illness, financial problems, etc., but don't play games such as "When I was your age . . ." or "After all we've done for you . . ." Share your own experience in an honest and loving way and trust them. Trust means letting them know what you have learned, but being willing to say, "On the other hand, you have to be responsible for your life, too."

I hope this is the beginning of a new and exciting relationship for you and your children who are students.

With much warmth and concern,

Report Indicates 16 Per Cent of Loan Recipients at UNCW Default

(Reprinted from the Wilmington Morning Star)

While the government has found plenty of students willing to accept educational loans, it is having a difficult time obtaining repayments. Students defaulting on loan repayments can be found at most colleges and universities, including UNCW.

The National Direct Student Loan program began in 1965. It provides students with loans at a three per cent interest rate to help cover education expenses. Appropriations to the program are more than $300 million annually, and outstanding loans currently total more than $3 billion.

However, since the program began, about 12.3 per cent of the students receiving loans have failed to repay them, leaving the federal government holding a $413.5 million tab.

According to Joe Capell, director of student financial aid at UNCW, 512 students have received loans here in the 12 years the program has been in effect. Of those, 82 students, or 16 per cent, have defaulted in repayments. These uncollected loans represent about two per cent of the total $512,000 loaned, Capell said.

He said the university has a policy for late repayments.

The school works through a local bank, which bills the students for six months and then turns the accounts over to the state attorney general's office if there is no success.

The attorney general's office will try for three months to collect. If the amount exceeds $600 it will sue for repayment. If it is less than $600, it turns the account over to a collections agency.

The federal government is launching its own effort to collect from defaulting students, also through collection agencies.

The successful bidder for the government contract will be required to locate the defaulted borrowers, establish a payment schedule, and arrange for payments. Another part of the job will be to recommend measures the government should take on debts which cannot be collected.

In a statement released last week, one federal official said the rising delinquency rates diminish the availability of loans available to needy students.

"They do a serious disservice to the vast majority of former students who honor their obligations and jeopardize the futures of millions of students whose educational aspirations hinge on the availability of these loans," he said.

UNCW officials expressed the same concern but do not believe the delinquency rate is "out of hand" here. Capell said the 16 per cent default rate at UNCW was considerably lower than at other, larger schools. He expressed hope the rate would fall as more students eventually repay their loans.

Meanwhile, Capell said, the number of students applying for financial aid is increasing each year.

Housing Situation Will Be Eased With New Dorm

By Curtis Ward

With one new dorm under construction and another in the planning stage, on-campus housing should be available for 1000 students by the Fall of 1979.

For 600 students on campus (400 in Galloway and 200 in Belk) out of a total enrollment of over 3600 students. The new facility, scheduled for completion by the fall of 1978, will cost about $1.6 million and hold 200 more. This past year there were over 1400 requests and inquiries into student housing.

According to Deans Helena Cheek and Ralph Parker of Student Affairs, who handled student housing until this year, a trend of about four years ago of students moving off campus has reversed itself. "It's more economical to live on campus than off," Dean Cheek stated. The 21 meal, room and board plan for the 1977-78 year is $665 per semester.

Students presently living on campus have the first chance at returning to the dorms for the following year. According to Charlie King, who now handles student housing, this return rate is about 50 per cent.

"We're checking into the possibility of leasing some apartments for next year," he said. He also stated an interest in housing for married couples and graduate students on campus once the fourth dorm is completed.

Both new dorms are being designed with the same arrangement of suites that Belk has, which both students and administration seemed to be pleased with. The suite allows more privacy, and less people per bathroom than the corridor design of Galloway Hall.

"Last week was probably the most important one ever for soccer here on the UNCW campus."

So spoke Calvin Lane, head coach for UNCW's soccer Seahawks. These words were not spoken in jest, either. On Tuesday, the Hawks devoured Campbell College in an impressive victory, and on Saturday they defeated the seventh-ranked University of North Carolina.

In the Campbell match, played on the UNCW campus, the Hawks came out on top early and controlled the rest of the game. Nino Fleri scored the first goal at the 31 minute mark with an assist by Eddie Brock. Brock then scored on his own, eight minutes later, with an assist by Gil Castella, to make the halftime score 2-0.

The second half went along pretty much like the first, with the Seahawks keeping the pressure on the Campbell squad. Castella scored at 27 minute mark, with an assist by Fleri, to make the score 3-0. The last goal was scored when Gary Wade made a corner kick and Doug Powell headed it into the goal.

Some evidence of UNCW's control of the game can be seen by the statistics. The Hawks had 27 goals shots to Campbell's 16, and made seven corner kicks compared to none for the Camels.

"Campbell has always had a good team," Lane commented. "They're very skilled, and will do well as the season goes on."

Coming off this victory, the Seahawks faced Carolina Saturday, ranked seventh in the south. (UNCW is ranked tenth in the south.) In a game that Lane called "one of the top three of my coaching career at UNCW," the Hawks came from behind to down the

Soccer Squad Downs Campbell, Carolina

Tarheels 6-3 in overtime.

Carolina scored the first goal with fifteen minutes left in the first half. They picked up their second goal when Butch Bernard picked up a bad UNCW pass and took it straight in for the score. That made the halftime score 2-0 in favor of the Tarheels.

Coach Lane said that at halftime his team was very disappointed. "We felt we'd played just as well as they had, and we could win the game. We didn't feel defeated." He also indicated that catching up two goals on a team like Carolina is no easy task.

The Seahawks came out for the second half fired up. After only one and a half minutes of play, Gil Castella scored for Wilmington with an assist by Doug Powell. Chapel Hill came right back, though, with a score by Bernard at the 39 minute mark to make the score 3-1, Carolina.

Then score remained 3-1 until five minutes left in the game, when Powell hit a looping goal shot from 40 yards out. It went in at the upper right-hand goals, making the score 3-2.

"When we got within one," said Coach Lane, "all the momentum shifted to our side. We were attacking all over the field." With three minutes left, Castella tied it for UNCW on a head shot with Nino Fleri assisting.

Then, with only one minute left and the score tied 3-3, the Tarheels were awarded a penalty kick. (A penalty kick is almost a free shot at the goal. Only the goalkeeper can stop the ball.) When Carolina attempted the score, goalie Charles Ingold managed to block it. However, one of the referees said Ingold had moved his feet before the kick was made, so it had to be done once more. Again, Ingold blocked the kick, keeping the match at 3-3 and sending it into overtime.

At this point, the Seahawks really took over the game. Fleri scored with 2:25 left in the first overtime period, with an assist by Chi Chi Mercado. With two minutes left in the second and final overtime period, Fleri scored again with Mercado once more assisting. The final UNCW goal came with one minute left on a play which made the perfect end to the game. Castella broke past the Tarheel fullbacks and drove a perfectly placed kick straight into the Carolina goal to make the final score 6-3 in favor of the Seahawks.

Coach Lane called this victory important for three reasons. For one, it keeps them undefeated. Secondly, it will probably help them move up in southern rankings. Finally, it proved, according to Lane, "what our players could accomplish with hard work and faith."

Lane indicated that one of the main reasons they won was their better physical condition. "In our first two weeks of practice we worked real hard," he said, "and we saw the benefits in the overtime periods."

Gil Castella of UNCW scored a hat trick (three goals in one game), his second of the season. Lane said all of his players played well, but he singled out Ingold for "really coming through under tremendous pressure." He also thanked the student body for their support, adding that the crowd at Saturday's game was a big factor in the victory.

This week should prove just as exciting for Seahawk soccer as last week. Yesterday, the Hawks played the Citadel, a team that has always been troublesome for the Wilmington squad. Then, on Friday, UNCW meets Rollins, ranked third in the south, in a game which Coach Lane calls "possibly the biggest we've ever played." "We're in a position now where everybody wants to knock us off," he said, "and we must win to maintain our ranking." Game time is 4:00.

Football Club Loses Season Opener

UNCW's football club got a bad start in its first season, losing to the New River Marines 20-6 in their season opener.

At halftime, the score was 13-0 in favor of the Marines. The New River squad scored on a fumble recovery and again on a fake field goal. For the Hawks, Jim Wishon recovered a Marine fumble but the Wilmington team wasn't able to capitalize.

In the second half, the Marines scored again on a reverse play, making the score 20-0. Seahawk linebacker Tom Brown intercepted a Marine pass, though, to start UNCW's scoring drive. The Hawks scored with only 25 seconds remaining on a seven-yard pass from Carson Royal to David Moore to make the final score New River 20, UNCW-6.

The club's next game is Saturday, September 25, when they host Duke University. Game time is 2:00 at the Lane High School stadium. All UNCW students, faculty, and staff will be admitted free with I.D.

Profile

Ted Kort.

WILMINGTON—The road Ted Kort followed to his vital role on the University of North Carolina soccer team this season was neither smooth nor straight, and numerous stop signs dotted the way.

But the youngster from Columbia, Md., the MVP in the UNCC Four Points Tournament won by the Seahawks, had his eyes fixed on his destination all along, and is now a driving force on the UNCW squad which is unbeaten through its first four contests.

Kort's story begins at a high school—a high school which had no soccer team. So he gained valuable experience playing on Baltimore area club teams before accepting a grant-in-aid to small Athens (Ala.) College. The following year the school went bankrupt, forcing Kort to return to Maryland and Montgomery Junior College.

"I first met Coach Lane (UNCW head coach) at Montgomery," Kort recalls. "After visiting the Wilmington campus, I knew I wanted to come to school here some day."

But it wasn't to be that easy. Kort withdrew from junior college that spring, ending up at Howard Community College but apart from soccer.

Just as he had not forgotten UNCW, however, so had Lane remembered Ted. The contacts were renewed a year-and-a-half later through the Montgomery coach and now he and two junior college teammates, Gary Wade and Lenny Branson, are solid members of the Seahawk program.

"Ted has really cemented our defense," UNCW's Lane says. "He is fast and a hard tackler. He works hard every day and is a true team leader in games and practice, always encouraging and complimenting his teammates in every way possible."

Kort downplays his role as a leader, though, preferring to discuss the accomplishments of his fellow Seahawks and the squad as a whole.

"We've been getting better and better," he says, "ever since our three-a-day workouts before school started. We work together well and the team enjoys playing together. We're a team without any super stars, but a lot of good players."

Fine Arts Committee Presents Psychic Jack London for Return

On Monday, 26 Sept. 1977, the Fine Arts Committee of UNC-Wilmington will open its fall live performance series with a return engagement of Jack London in Kenan Memorial Auditorium beginning at 8:00 p.m.

Mr. London, noted expert on psychic phenomena, will make his third visit to the UNCW campus, having lectured here in 1972 and once

Merv Griffin. He has been a popular guest on "The Today Show," "Play Your Hunch," and has helped John Daley stump the experts on "What's My Line?"

In his talk, Mr. London answers such questions as: How do you separate fact from phantasy in ESP phenomena? Is the observation of psychic phenomena by scientists illuminating, or does it cloud specialized subject matter trademark him as one of the most fascinating speakers in the country today.

There will not be an advance sale of tickets and no reservations for seats will be necessary. UNCW students will be admitted free upon presentation of their I.D. cards. Non-students will be charged an admission of $2.00. Curtain time will be 8:00 p.m. in Kenan Auditorium.

Mr. London has a background of years of successful personal appearances before leading civic, service, and fraternal organizations.

Known as the man who beats psychicists at their own game, London is in constant demand by law enforcement agencies to lecture on the problems of differentiating between the true psychic and the fraudulent one.

Hundreds of people have said that seeing Jack London's program is the most valuable time that they have spent, because through his informative presentation, they have learned to protect themselves and their families against the wiles of the thieves and confidence-men who infest the periphery of the psychic world.

Mr. London has appeared on television with Johnny Cash, Mike Douglas, and the issues? Why is Astrology so popular today? What is such a vast multitude of the intelligentsia involved in the psychic scene?

His tours have taken him halfway around the world, through Canada, the West Indies, Europe and the United States. He was featured not long ago in the New Yorker magazine, and in addition he has authored: "Psychic Vision," "Prediction," and "How To Read Minds."

During his lecture-demonstration at UNCW in 1972, Mr. London predicted the killings that took place at the Olympics and an airplane crash in Russia that killed over 500 people. It is always fascinating to hear his predictions and then wait and see how accurate he can be.

"Greenwich Village" Shown in Kenan

The Fine Arts Committee of UNCW will present the 20th Century-Fox release "Next Stop Greenwich Village," written and directed by Paul Mazursky, on Sept. 27 in Kenan Auditorium. The feature will start at 8:00 p.m.

Mazursky's "Next Stop, Greenwich Village," which he produced and directed from his original screenplay for 20th Century-Fox, tells of a young actor from Brooklyn who tries to make it in the Village, circa 1953. Mazursky did the most logical thing when it came to casting. The director-producer-writer of such hits as "Bob and Carol and Ted and Alice" signed Lenny Baker, a young actor with a lot of off-Broadway experience, to play the leading man.

Says Baker, "My first off-Broadway role was at the Players Theatre, which is next door to the Cafe Reggio where we spent over a week shooting. When I was working at the Players Theatre I used to stop into the Reggio for a capuccino almost every night."

Baker, who is from Brookline, Massachusetts, has appeared off-Broadway in a production of "The Real Inspector Hound" as well as with the New York Shakespeare Festival and with the Manhattan Theatre Club where he performed in plays by the off-Broadway playwright Israel

Horowitz. Baker's leading lady in the film, Ellen Greene, has also made her mark off Broadway. She recently starred in the Public Theatre revival of David Rabe's "In the Boom Boom Room."

Says Ellen, "I love it. Here I am a Hollywood star and I've never even worked in the place."

Other prominent and established off-Broadway actors who have major roles in the film are Christopher Walken, Lois Smith, Antonio Fargas and Helen Hanft.

Walken, who plays a conceited young poet, is one of the most versatile young actors in America today. He has appeared in everything from such musicals as "Baker Street" and "High Spirits" to Shakespeare where he essayed the roles of Hamlet, Macbeth, and Romeo. Last year he won an Obie, the off-Broadway equivalent of an Oscar or Tony, for his work in the play "Kid Champion," and he has co-starred with Irene Worth in a revival of Tennessee Williams' "Sweet Bird of Youth."

Lois Smith was working in a hit off-Broadway play, "Harry Outside," while actually making "Next Stop, Greenwich Village" during the day. Helen Hanft, who plays the wife of the owner of a health food bar in the comedy-drama, is one of the big stars of off-Broadway and recently won rave reviews for her work in Tom Egan's hit play, "Why Hannah's Skirt Won't Stay Down." That production was presented at the Village Gate, across the street from another location where Mazursky filmed.

"There was no grand design in casting like this," says Mazursky. "I just used people I thought were best for individual parts. But if they all do have off and off-off-Broadway experience in common, it's not a coincidence because that is the most fertile training ground for young actors."

Shelley Winters, who is perhaps the only "name" in the pictures, agrees, "I think I have off-Broadway experience too," she chimes in. "I admit I never acted there, but I wrote some one-act plays and directed them there. You know who my cast was? Diane Ladd and Robert DeNiro! They were both unknowns then. This year they were both nominated for Oscars and DeNiro won. That was no accident at all," Shelley says. "Sometimes I think there's more talent collected off Broadway than anywhere else in the world."

Young Democrats Meet

The UNCW Young Democrats Club will meet at 4:30 p.m., Wednesday, Sept. 21 (today.) Several of the candidates for Wilmington City Council have been invited to attend the meeting, which will take place in Hoggard 227.

The Young Democrats will be sponsoring an "Issues Night" Sept. 28 at a time and place to be announced later.

The discussion will involve a bipartisan group featuring members of highway and water bonds.

As with all meetings of the campus YDC, any interested student or faculty member is invited to attend and/or become a member of the club. For more information, contact Ray Blackburn, president, at 791-8055.

All Clubs Must Apply for Charters

All University clubs and organizations must apply to the SGA for charters. This includes all organizations whether they were chartered in previous years or not.

The procedure for chartering a club is as follows:

1. Submit a constitution and/or Bylaws with a list of 1977-78 officers to the SGA office.
2. The SGA Charter Committee will review each constitution and make a recommendation to the Senate.
3. The Senate will look at each organization individually and vote on each application.

It is requested that a representative of each organization be at the Senate Meeting to answer questions concerning their club.

Deadline for submission of constitution and officers is Sept.

27 with the Senate hearing slated for Sept. 29. For further information, contact the SGA office or Tom Hunt, Rm. 116 Belk, phone 392-0820.

Pi Kappas Successful Rush

The Gamma Theta Chapter of the Pi Kappa Phi Fraternity has had another successful rush. We began the rush and the turnout was good. Our first party was the Natural Light Nite with a volleyball game following the next day.

Wednesday of the same week, we had a little get-together at the house where we talked to our prospective pledges. Sunday came around and we had a pig pickin' which everyone seemed to have enjoyed. There was also another good game of volleyball while the pig was cooking.

Many events like these will be on schedule this year adding to your social life at UNCW. The Pi Kappa Phi Fraternity will also be helping the Bloodmobile and other various activities this school year. We also have a little sister program in the Fraternity of which you will be notified shortly.

Everyone is welcome at any time. From the brothers of the Pi Kappa Phi Fraternity, we hope you have a great year at UNCW.

Rowing News

Still more new members were present at the Sept. 14 meeting of the Rowing Club. A race was scheduled for some time in November against UNC-Chapel Hill.

The Club has planned to sell their blood to raise funds to keep up the treasury. (We are not proud.)

A Get-to-Know-the-Members party will take place on Oct. 1 at the beach. Keep reading your Seahawk for more Rowing Club news. Tommy Witner, Sec.

WLOZ Completing FM Switch

WLOZ is now completing the final steps necessary in becoming an FM educational radio station, and will be broadcasting on the frequency of 91.3 mhz soon this fall. A competent staff returns to work from last year, but students are needed to fill D.J. and certain staff positions.

Students interested in working with WLOZ this fall are requested to attend a meeting tonight (Sept. 21) at the WLOZ studio trailer beside the Physical Plant. The meeting will begin at 7:30 p.m. If you are unable to attend tonight's meeting, please drop by our studio at any time.

College Republicans Club Met Thursday

UNCW's growing College Republican Club met last Thursday and adopted several projects for the fall semester. Among the actions taken was the appointment of a publicity director, Charles Long, and a letters-to-the-editor director, Harry Pilos. The club also formulated plans to canvass the student body and begin featuring Republican Candidates on campus. Col. Ray Shrum, Rep. Tommy Rhodes, and Senator Jesse Helms will be contacted about this project. UNCW Republicans also voted to seek the subscription by the library to the conservative news magazines Human Events and The Atlantic. A fund raising raffle is being planned for the near future to finance further activities.

The UNCW C.R. club continues to seek new students. They have presently reached over half their goal of 50 members.

Photographer's Hours Set

Don't forget! A photographer from Smith Studios will be on campus from Monday, Oct. 3 through Friday, Oct. 7, to take students' individual portraits absolutely free of charge. Students having their pictures taken will be under no obligation to buy prints and will have the picture of their choice put in the 1978 Fiedgling for free.

The times are from 9 a.m. - 12 noon and 1 p.m. - 4 p.m. In order to keep the long lines to a minimum, the following schedule may be followed: Seniors on Monday; Seniors and Juniors on Tuesday; Juniors and Sophomores on Wednesday; Sophomores and Freshmen on Thursday; Freshmen and Absent Minds on Friday.

Christian Fellowship

The Campus Christian Fellowship will be meeting every week on Tuesday night at 7:30 p.m. in 103 Hoggard Hall. We invite everyone to attend to share the love of Jesus and witness His power in the transforming of our lives.

Earth Science Club Meets

The Earth Science Club of UNCW will meet Thursday, Sept. 22 at 7:00 p.m. The meeting will be in Room 251 in the Marine Science Building. Dr. Davis Young, Associate professor of Geology will lecture on the topics of Science, Religion, and Philosophy. All interested persons are cordially invited to attend.

Good Rockin' - Foreigner and Cheap Trick at Brogden

For the last two issues of the Seahawk the group Foreigner has gotten mentioned. The first issue had the story on how Foreigner got together. In the second was photos of the concert. Fine, but what about Cheap Trick?

Cheap Trick opened for Foreigner at the Brogden concert. Unlike most opening acts Cheap Trick went over pretty well. This was quite a surprise considering the fact that Cheap Trick is hardly a household name. Both of their Epic albums have yet to receive airplay outside of the concert's plugs. Although there was no time for an encore the demand for one was evident.

To place Cheap Trick's sound in some sort of category is kind of tough. At times you can hear the Beatles via the Raspberries in their music. Other tunes have a hard rock sound to them. What probably stands out the most about Cheap Trick's act is the antics of Rick Neilsen. Just one look at Cheap Trick's album and you can tell which member is Rick. Looking like the offspring of Stan Laurel, Rick cavorts about stage making faces and flicking picks into the audience. This is not to say that he does not add to the music. All the while Rick is busy playing guitar. The rest of the group plays fine, but the sound system was far too loud. Most of Cheap Trick's music was buried in a blare of sound. Perhaps Cheap Trick will overcome this problem soon. Their music is worth better treatment than this.

Foreigner is a pretty amazing band. With only one album out they have managed to turn out two hit singles. Their background is similar to groups like Bad Company and Blind Faith. While those groups were based more on picking names Foreigner opted for less well known musicians. It is this idea of "fresh people" that Mick Jones attributes the success of Foreigner to.

As far as the audience at Brogden was concerned Foreigner was an old friend. Starting out with an old, but effective, trick using dry ice Foreigner opened to an enthusiastic reception. Not only were the two hits, "Feels Like The First Time" and "Cold as Ice," received well, but also album cuts. Evidently much of the audience was familiar with Foreigner's album. What was probably the most amusing incident was the start of "Cold as Ice." The intro started with the whole band before stopping for the piano came in the audience was wild. Once the familiar phrase started the audience erupted in cheers. Foreigner's whole concert went over with no problem. The audience's devotion to the band stayed with them the entire set. Ending the concert Foreigner came back for one more encore. They could have come back for a few more as far as the audience was concerned. Steve Harvey

Colleges Trying to Upgrade Student Writing Ability

By Campus Digest News Service

The syndrome of high school students graduating without being able to read their diplomas is growing, and, along with it, students' ability to write.

In fact, the problem is getting so acute that many colleges and universities are routinely enacting programs designed to spot and then upgrade student writing deficiencies.

A continuous decline of scores on the verbal portion of standardized tests such as the Scholastic Aptitude Test (SAT) taken by students planning to enter college, along with an increase in the number of students who cannot meet minimum entrance requirements in basic English composition, has spelled scholastic trouble for higher education. With so many students unable to write in clear, concise, grammatical English, colleges and universities are being forced into remedial English programs of one kind or another.

Current efforts consist of a variety of new courses and tutorial programs, along with the establishment of writing skills centers on some campuses.

For example, Cornell University established in 1976 what it considers to be the first deanship in the country solely concerned with the new courses and programs for the fall, 1977 term.

And what will this new dean be concerned with most? Why, in working with other departments in dealing with the problem of what is fast becoming functional illiteracy among students.

In fact, Cornell went so far as to try an experimental course format where a writing instructor was added to a regular course instructor in a few business and urban studies courses. The experiment worked so well that it is being considered for expansion into other departments and programs.

Then there is the University of California at Santa Cruz which is also experimenting with including writing instruction into a broad range of academic programs. In other words, students would not only learn engineering in engineering class, but also how to write their engineering class papers in readable English. The university has already hired a half-time lecturer for each of its departments who will teach four courses of writing.

Indeed, all campuses of the University of California are more than toying with ways to incorporate writing instruction with regular course instruction. And one can't blame them. After all, the university system found in 1975 that 76 per cent of its entering students—which happens to already be the top eighth of California's high school graduates—had scores below the minimum required by the university on the College Entrance Examination Board's English Composition Test.

To deal with all this, the Berkeley campus four years ago began the Bay Area Writing Project, which some consider to be the largest writing reform effort in the country.

Designed to help teachers in selected schools and colleges develop new techniques to improve students' writing ability, the project is achieving results. A recent study of the students in the project schools showed that college-entrance writing scores jumped 50 points in 1976, while scores in non-project schools only increased 13 points.

However, remedial efforts are costly and often only half-successful. And the fact remains that many students are passing through the nation's grammar, junior and high schools without being able to read with the proficiency that at one time even dropouts had. And instead of being able to study the subjects at college they paid good money for, these students are wasting time learning a basic skill they should have acquired years ago.

As Harry Levin, dean of the College of Arts and Sciences at Cornell puts it, "The ability to write well is the most important outcome of a liberal education."

And, with the way things are going, that may be an outcome long in coming.

Stanford Study Reveals Sleep Habits

By Betty Salyer

A study at Stanford University Sleep Clinic has had some interesting results. Insomniacs seemed to be underestimating the amount of time it took to fall asleep.

The study consisted of 122 patients, 50 women and 63 men, who complained of insomnia. They were asked about the amount of time it took them to fall asleep, how long they slept, and how often they woke during the night.

Their sleep was then monitored for several nights and the study showed that they slept longer than they had thought. For example, out of 57 people who claimed to get only five hours of sleep a night, only ten actually slept five or less hours. The rest slept six hours or more. Out of the 46 people who claimed it took at least an hour to fall asleep, only six actually took an hour or more.

Twenty of these people fell asleep in fifteen minutes. All the patients underestimated the number of times they woke each night.

"Thus one might speculate that the impairment of daytime activities in people who complain of insomnia is due to chronic interruptions of sleep," says the Stanford team.

SGA Budget Includes Allocations Totalling Nearly $73,000

By Bobby Parker

This year's SGA budget is the result of three long nights of often-heated debate last spring. Every organization, with the exception of the Seahawk, received less money than they originally requested.

The only new organizations to be added to the list of funded groups were the Society of Enterprising Xenophiles and the Fishing Team. They received $400 and $50, respectively.

The Minority Affairs Committee, headed by Ron Coley, was the center of perhaps the most heated debate. The committee requested $10,000, but received only $2,000, compared to $3,000 last year.

The university literary magazine, Atlantis, also encountered opposition to its budget request of approximately $3,500. Several senators questioned the quality of the magazine and suggested that the volume of its readership did not justify that amount of SGA funding. The Atlantis printed 2100 copies last year.

Editor Lance Smith and other staff members argued that the Atlantis is well read, and that it is completely open to students who wish to submit material for publication.

The Senate voted to allocate one half of the request ($1,750) for a fall publication, after which the Senate will again consider allocating money for a spring issue. Senators rejected allegations from Atlantis supporters that this constituted a "discreet form of censorship."

There was an attempt to eliminate the yearbook, The Fledgling, with the Senate voting at one time to not allocate any money for it. However, in a later motion, the Senate voted a $9,000 allocation, less than the request and less than last year's allocation.

When WCNU's (WLOZ) request was reduced by several thousand dollars, Station Manager Greg Larrimore submitted his resignation along with those of most of the other staff members. The Senate subsequently voted not to fund the radio station at all.

However, the station's staff later retracted their resignations, apologized to the Senate, and received an allocation of $5245.

Among the organizations receiving more funds than they received last year was The University Lecture Series Committee, which received $1,700, compared to $535 last year (excluding a $1,000 reallocation.)

The budget allocations for this year totalled $65,639, plus a $7,000 emergency fund. As reported Thursday night by SGA Treasurer Paul O'Bryant, there will be approximately $15,615 to be reallocated later in this year.

Senate Meets Thursday

to have "a little more confidence" in the executive branch.

Vice-president Lilly stated, "No officer in this SGA has any business allocating money from (the general) fund."

The Senate also voted to allocate $996 to the cheerleaders by a one-vote margin. Ray Warren presented the cheerleaders' request, which would cover expenses for uniforms, travel, and equipment.

Warren reported that the squad consists this year of twelve men and twelve women. He noted that the athletic department had already approved $250 to be spent on uniforms for women.

Ms. Jane Batson, faculty advisor to the Cheerleaders, submitted a written request via Warren for $60 for men's uniforms, $66 for megaphones, $400 for travel, and $50 for supplies.

On behalf of the squad, Warren requested additional funds including $120 for jackets and $300 for men's uniforms. This brought the total request to $996, which was narrowly approved on a motion by Sophomore Vice-president Tom Witner.

In her president's report, Whaley urged strict enforcement of attendance rules which state that a senator must be replaced if he has more than three unexcused absences.

Whaley commented on the progress of plans for renovation of the Student Services Building, stating that, by order of the UNC Board of Governors, if more than $10,000 is spent on the renovation must include at least one administrative office. She asked the Senate to pass a motion, requesting that no administrative offices be put into the bookstore space in the Pub, which will soon become vacant.

A motion to that effect was passed unanimously.

Treasurer Paul O'Bryant's report stated that the SGA has unencumbered funds totalling approximately $15,615. The total expected revenue from student fees and cash on hand was $90,845. Total allocations were $72,639. Subtracting $2591 for reallocations since last spring, the remaining figure is unencumbered funds.

In other action, the Senate passed a resolution asking the constitutional committee to consider writing in some provision for summer senate sessions. Another resolution was passed which would require S*E*X to reimburse the SGA in the amount of that club's recent reallocation ($930) from profits earned through ticket sales.

Senators who were absent included John Potter, Mike Watts, Dan Allen, Shirley Bryant, Linda Rhode, Francis DeLuca, Neil Murphy, David Ramey, Cindy Buxton, and Glen Downs.

Now comes Miller time.

Bomb Threat Halts Classes, Caller Unknown

By Tim Bass

Campus activity at UNCW was stalled temporarily on Sept. 20 when an anonymous phone caller contacted the campus switchboard and announced that a bomb had been planted somewhere on the school campus. The caller phoned again within thirty minutes of the first call to repeat the threat. University administrative officials then met and decided to suspend classes and all other UNCW activity until 1:00 p.m. of that day.

The threat, one of "about four", according to one school official, directed to the school in a year, was received by the campus' main switchboard at approximately 9:05 a.m. on Tuesday. The caller, apparently vexed by the lack of an immediate evacuation procedure, called again at approximately 9:35 a.m. and repeated the threat to the switchboard operator. Since the caller would not be specific in naming the location of the bomb, the administrators decided to close off all campus buildings until that afternoon to avoid any trouble. Law enforcement officers and university personnel were notified, classes were dismissed, and all campus buildings, with the exception of the cafeteria, which was searched and then re-opened for lunch, were closed.

Most campus streets were filled to a calm departure from the school. No exceptional traffic problems were reported. The campus was cleared in "just a matter of a few minutes," said Security Chief C.N. Long. Only a few cars remained in the parking lots, while a small number of students and school personnel did wait for classes to resume by congregating in small groups around the campus.

Jim Clark, Director of Auxiliary Services at UNCW, agreed with Chief Long that since the caller gave no specifics as to the location of the bomb, it was practically impossible to make a quick, thorough search in each of the buildings on campus. Mr. Clark also said that specialists in bomb detection, usually notified in these type of situations, were not notified this time.

Vice Chancellor Darryl Bierly and the switchboard operator on duty at the time the calls came in could not be reached for comment.

Problems Surface for S*E*X in Wake of Convention

By Ray Warren

UNCW's "First Annual Star Trek, STAR WARS, Science Fiction, and Space Fantasy Convention," is now history, but the problems of the sponsoring organization, S*E*X, continue. The convention itself appears to have been moderately successful from a critical standpoint but of dubious value financially, and a failure from the standpoint of organization. The Society of Entering Xenophiles, as a consequence, appears to have developed a severe schism and faces a financially uncertain future.

At press time, Society members were only able to estimate the total amount of revenue from ticket sales. It was believed that around $941.00 was collected. This would allow the club to pay back the Senate for a $930 loan and retain a profit of $11.00.

The club may, however, face legal action from one of the "hucksters" (vendors of convention paraphernalia) due to the theft or misplacement of a Star Trek film. The film, an episode from the T.V. series, was entitled, "Where No Man Has Gone Before," and was brought to Wilmington by a huckster from Florida.

Its value is said to be increased to about $300 by extra footage which was never shown on television. The film's owner claimed to have given it to an S*E*X staffer to be shown in Kenan Auditorium. What happened to it then is still a mystery.

The disappearance of the Star Trek episode has brought out the severe division within S*E*X. Darrell Hope, the major organizer of the convention, denies the huckster's story. He claims that the huckster had been "giving us flack" and had lied at least once during the weekend with regards to whether he received some money for merchandise.

Mr. Hope also indicated that there were allegations that the huckster had been circulating illegal and copyrighted materials. An opposing coalition of club members, however, appears to believe the huckster's story. This group blames the loss on Hope's mismanagement.

According to member Charlie Suppler, "In a huckster's business, there is no room for dishonesty because at a convention, like in acting, the audience is everything and you don't do a number on your audience."

What will develop from the film incident is uncertain. Suppler says he honestly does not know what S*E*X will do if sued by the owner. Hope, for his part, is defiant, saying that S*E*X should counter-sue. "We welcome a suit," he

Emma Mahn, Miss Wilmington 1978, Says Education Important

By Betty Salyer

The title of Miss Wilmington 1978 was taken by a UNCW student, Emma Mahn. Emma is a senior studying music education and creative arts. She intends to apply for graduate studies at UNCG and eventually become an editor of a music magazine for children. The scholarship award to Emma will help her in fulfilling this desire.

"Education is very important to me, therefore, the primary reason for entering the pageant was the scholarship awards that were available," Emma said.

The Miss Wilmington pageant was made up of seven girls, placing five UNCW students.

The first-runner-up was Mary Sanderson, a sophomore from Wallace, N.C. Her talent was piano playing. The most talented non-semifinalist was June Kulbeck, a junior from Fayetteville, N.C., whose talent was guitar playing. Miss Congeniality was taken by Delayne Barefoot, a junior from Wilmington, N.C. Her talent was singing. The Hannah Block Award went to Jan Haynes, a junior from Fayetteville, N.C.

The pageant, sponsored by the Wilmington Jaycees, was the first beauty pageant Emma had ever entered. Her mother made her competition evening gown and a friend sewed 800 rhinestones on it, finishing it around 5:00 Saturday evening, just in time for her to dress and be at the auditorium at 7:00. Emma played the piano for her talent.

Emma is presently working as a music and youth director at Masonboro Baptist Church. Her schedule will be busier now, though, with the many activities planned for her, such as participating in the 1978 Miss North Carolina pageant. Emma said, "I'm very excited and I'm looking forward to the next year."

Freshmen Elections

Freshman elections will be held today and tomorrow from 10:00 to 2:00 in the cafeteria lobby and 2:00 to 4:00 in the Pub. Class officers and class senators will be elected.

Senate Plays Purse-string Censorship with Atlantis

Letters

Members of the staff of the student literary magazine are preparing to organize to begin production of their fall issue. What is unique about this issue is that it could very possibly be the last, if certain factions in the Student Senate have their way.

At last year's SGA budget hearings,

This Newspaper's OPINION

Page Two

September 28, 1977

Atlantis editor Lance Smith presented a request for $3500 to fund two issues—one in the fall semester, another in the spring, as has been done in years past. The SGA finance committee has recommended an allocation of $3300, somewhat short of the original request of $5500.

But several of the senators had other ideas about the magazine. Various allegations, insults, and distorted facts were rendered by those who felt that Atlantis had gone astray and students are no longer interested in the poetry, prose, and artwork contained in Atlantis. At least, these senators said, there was not enough interest to justify $3500.

The Senate decided to allocate $1750 for a fall issue this year. After its publication, the senators will decide whether the Atlantis deserves continuation. The arguments presented against Atlantis included the charge that too much of the published material in the spring 1977 issue was written by members of the Atlantis staff.

The fact is that of five short stories in that issue, two were by staff members; of ten poems, six were by staff members; and of nine drawings, two were by staff members. There obviously can be little validity to the charge concerning the artwork, but perhaps that concerning poetry and prose needs further clarification.

Point one: the 1977 Atlantis had an usually large staff for a literary magazine of its size—a total of nineteen. It would not be unusual for a writer who submitted several works—or spent a particularly long time perfecting one—to join the staff. Obviously, those who are most interested in being on the staff are most interested in writing for the Atlantis.

Point two: The method of selecting those works to be published is completely unbiased. All prose and poetry that are submitted are screened by the respective members of the prose and poetry staffs, who work on an individual basis. The works are submitted anonymously. Therefore, the staff members are not influenced by the name of the author or their fellow workers—they simply chose the works they think are best for publication.

Several senators also alleged that students are not reading the Atlantis, referring to "stacks" of the magazine they had seen around campus, copies thrown in trash cans, and copies "stuffed in every little cubby-hole."

Point one: Within three days of their distribution on campus, less than 15 per cent of the 2100 magazines printed last spring were still on campus, this verified by a check of every building on the day before the Senate meeting.

Point two: What does one usually do with a magazine or newspaper after he has read it? Throw it away, of course. Any copies of Atlantis seen in the trash cans are likely those discarded by students who had finished reading them.

Point three: The "cubby-hole!" referred to by senators are the pigeon-holes in the Pub which serve as mailboxes for SGA organizations. A complimentary copy is customarily distributed to every such group.

The most outrageous part of this whole situation is that the Senate has set themselves up—whether they like the title or not—as a panel of literary judges who will, if they decide the quality of the fall issue is good enough, provide the Atlantis with funds for a spring issue. The Senate's command to the Atlantis staff can be stated simply: "Go forth, please us, and we will reward you with life if you do so."

The Atlantis is a very vital part of the UNCW student body. Like the Seahawk and the Fledgling, it represents our campus on the printed page to people throughout North Carolina and the South.

The Senate has set a dangerous precedent by displaying this type of purse-string censorship of a campus publication. The Atlantis is very important to a great many students at UNCW; that's why last spring more than 2000 copies had been distributed within three days.

By taking this action in the magazine's budget request, the Senate has insulted the Atlantis in the strongest sense of the word. More importantly, it has attempted to play the role of a censor; certainly, they are miscast in that part.

Senator Answers for Absent Colleagues

To the Editor:

Speaking on behalf of the SGA, I would like to thank you for being nice enough to find time and space in your noble paper to remind us (the senators of the SGA) of our meetings. We are grateful for your concern; however, as you and I know, most college students must attend a night class sometime or another or, like me, have to work in order to make it through school.

I'm sure you know the trouble it is to rearrange classes and/or to ask for certain days off from work. I'm sure these students who do miss the meetings for these reasons did not do it on purpose.

To clear the record, a set date for meetings wasn't determined until after drop/add was finished, making it next to impossible to change classes.

Also, the reason we asked you to make this announcement was for the benefit of those who have missed meetings and are still not quite sure when the meetings are. Like your paper, the senate meetings depend upon cooperation from everyone.

One further reason we have you announce the meetings is for the benefit of the student body. We were elected to serve the students to their best interest. If they know we do meet and when, maybe we can get more response from the students and ideas to work from.

A HYPERACTIVE XENOPHILE
GLAND WAS THE CAUSE OF DEATH.

The Right Line

By Ray Warren

There is an unfortunate tendency in modern society to abdicate the responsibility for making hard moral choices. Rather, society as a whole, increasingly turns to the supreme court as some great oracle of divine revelation.

Today's students may be surprised to learn that the nine men in Washington have not always been so highly revered. Until the 30's, both Congress and the executive frequently asserted their right to constitutional interpretation. Certainly a court decree was considered far from infallible.

Thus, in 1832 Andrew Jackson flatly refused to carry out the edict of the court with regards to Cherokee lands in Georgia. Nor were many citizens (outside of the South) inclined to accept the Dred Scott decision as the final word on slavery.

Since Franklin Roosevelt managed to bully the court into abandoning law (in favor of sociology) however, the liberal establishment has exalted the court as the very foundation of knowledge in America. This has produced some good, as with Brown vs. Board of Education, but also the disaster of Roe vs. Wade.

Unfortunately, in case after case, all decisions—good or bad—have been accepted as gospel. This is a serious concentration of political and moral power which rivals the theocracy of Puritan Massachusetts.

Still, my purpose is not to attack the court (though they deserve it) but to warn against accepting one forthcoming decision as an oracle from Delphi. The civil rights movement is about to be betrayed and it would be a great loss if the American people fail to reassert their authority for determining the course of their nation.

In 1963 Martin Luther King boldly asserted that "I have a dream that someday my little children will be judged, not by the color of their skin, but by the content of their character." In a cynicism of the '70's, however, so-called "civil rights" leaders have abandoned this worthy dream in favor of a new form of subtle racism.

This new policy doesn't seek an end to discrimination, only a transfer of victims. Allan Bakke and thousands of others are marked to be the new sacrificial lambs.

Of course, the court could rule against reverse discrimination, but the odds are long. In today's "aristocracy of pull" justice is rarely given credence over platitudes. Thus, quotas become "affirmative action" and sons are asked to pay for the sins of their fathers.

The theory behind affirmative action is that whites, and particularly males, "must pay" for past discrimination against minorities. Common sense should suffice to kill this argument.

Who is "paying" for what? The aging perpetrator of segregation? No, an innocent generation, many from non-political, middle class homes.

Are minorities inherently incapable of competing with whites? To all but Nazis and Klansmen, the answer should be "hell, no."

Don't quotas only perpetuate the idea that race is an important factor in assessing the individual. Of course they do! Whatever happened to judging "by the content of character"?

The only criteria for employment or acceptance in American society should be excellence in a chosen field of study or work. If universities must give latitude with regards to cultural disadvantage, such consideration should be independent of the artificial classifications of race or ethnicity.

Despite the popular notion, not all blacks are poor, nor all whites advantaged. Giving each group their "share" is meaningless to the individual, of either group, who is told that effort and talent are secondary to the color of his (or her) skin, or that he must pay for a system he didn't create.

Americans should not be considered as rival racial groups, but as individual human beings of various physical and cultural heritage. Should Allan Bakke lose his case, 300 years of evolution will be reversed and race will again be the identifying mark of a citizen.

Americans should be truly ashamed if they haven't the courage to fight back and make our system as color-blind as it ought to be. The goal of the civil rights movement is not to replace one system of discrimination with an equally oppressive system, but to eliminate all forms of discrimination. Let us not lack the resolve to make that goal a reality.

Harmony Among Students Absent on Today's College Campuses

To the Editor:

Remember back to the late 60's and early 70's when there was so much action on the college campuses? Remember the revolutions, Kent State, protest marches, SDS, demonstrations and all the rest?

There seemed to be a real unity among the students. That unity, strangely enough, was produced by their common alienation from the rest of society. However, this harmony is no longer evident today. Students still feel alienated from society, but no longer believe they can do anything pointed about the injustices they see. They have merely withdrawn into themselves, each searching for separate answers and personal peace.

Why do kids go to college these days? In addition to a number of superficial reasons, most students believe they will find meanings for their lives, some appeasement for their uneasiness. They have been told all their lives that college is where they will find themselves, where they will discover where they fit into this world. They are told that college will mature them and brace them for contemporary society.

However, more and more students find themselves caught up in a seeming whirlwind of drugs, sex, and booze (commonly called partying) revolving around a minimum of studying. After a year or two of this kind of life, the student stops to reconsider what is really happening. They ask, "Is it all a big waste of time, a big game?" More and more of these students are dropping out for a year or indefinitely to take time out to travel or work, or to get their head together. Still, the majority of students who feel the same way choose to stay in school merely because it's more comfortable than reality.

Usually at this point some serious soul-searching begins. After one discovers that college does not give out answers to one's life on a silver platter, he usually pursues those subjects he feels most akin to, hoping things will fall into place. But, because he can't dedicate his time wholly to his studies, he begins to fill his time with his own individual search, now taking on more serious longing for meaning, for fulfillment in his own life.

This is not true for all college students. Some have a definite goal they are striving for—a specific job or career. But generally speaking, our universities are filled with thousands of discouraged, disillusioned young people. Suicide has become the number two cause of death among U.S. college students, surpassed only by accidents.

College students are not the first individuals who have fallen into the trap of believing that through the development of their mind, they will be on the road to truth. They believe if they remain honest to their highest notions, they won't wrong themselves or anyone else.

But this isn't necessarily so. You see, it's the larger questions of life which emerge from the inner man (that which transcends the intellect) that are the college student's real problems. Questions like "Where do I fit in this crazy world? Why do I feel so alienated from it? What is life's purpose anyway?" Most students will have to admit they've gone a few rounds with these. Yet the harder one attempts to quench these nagging questions with the rational mind, the more frustrated one becomes.

Ultimately we are saying that a college education can never bring anyone to a knowledge of the truth. One can accumulate information and become very learned in his field, but he'll waste away inside. It's the weight of these nagging, unanswered questions which make one miserable. We need to learn from the Teacher of teachers, the Lord Jesus Christ. He calls to you—"Come to Me, all you who labor and are heavy-laden and overburdened, and I will give you rest. I will ease and relieve and refresh your souls. Take My yoke upon you, and learn of Me; for I am gentle and humble (lowly) in heart, and you will find rest—relief, ease and refreshment and recreation and blessed quiet for your souls. For My yoke is wholesome (useful, good)—not harsh, hard, sharp or pressing, but comfortable, gracious and pleasant; and My burden is light and easy to be borne." Camera Is a Generation of You and Me "Between the Lines"

Film Review

By Pat White

I went to see "Between the Lines" and saw the lines and could see more clearly between the lines.

The camera is a generation of you and me (at some other time and now) viewing themselves in the place where they were placing themselves to avoid the negative repetition of stagnant existence. They have known the answers; now

The Seahawk is pleased to welcome Pat White to our staff who will be writing reviews of current films playing in the Wilmington area. We hope our readers will be as excited about this new column as we are.

they have to deal with the question.

They saw; they felt; they wrote--and established--carrying the lines... still realizing that between the lines could be:

Ten years ago I was just a young teen
And watching all the chaotic scene--

Not really there, but not really clean--

Detached from being a part of the group

That carried the banners
And weathered the drift

Of social calamity
And political schemes.

I wanted to be.
I wanted to do what others .
But only as me.

So there the conflict lay--
Between the lines.

The social structure is a bedlam of lines and "Between the Lines" we live. There lies, the creative generator to save us all--and save us one. We can be together without threatening the Self (if we can't, then where is the sense of being one--and being two).

Doth said the dialogue ten years ago:

"Hey, this isn't right. Hear us out. We just don't agree."

"Don't make waves."

"But you are the ones and we are the twos. Show me the reasons for reasonless news."

And so they wrote and established a paper...

• A means such as theirs--
A method of boos.

Hurrah!

By running from our mistakes rather than confronting them, we have amassed a conglomerate of errors that muddles and befuddles. We are sailing around on puddles, looking for haven in cliches.

We could be sailing on beautiful clear lakes and streams, rivers and oceans that lead to the sea.

"Sailor" Presented by Fine Arts

On Tuesday night in Kenan Auditorium and the UNCW Fine Arts Committee will present the highly praised and sensitive film "The Sailor Who Fell from Grace with the Sea." Show time is the usual 8:00 p.m.

This film carries the rating of "R" and is directed by Louis John Carlinio, starring Sara Miles, Kris Kristofferson, and Margo Cunningham. "The Sailor Who Fell from Grace With the Sea" is a most unusual motion picture and is a fascinating blend of an erotic love story and a chilling tale of the macabre. Based on the novel by the campus-favorite, Yukio Mishima, this movie is one of the most talked about films in years for its eroticism, its macabre chills and the outstanding performances by Miles and Kristofferson.

New York Daily News critic Kathleen Carroll referred to this film as "a darkly chilling tale. Sarah Miles is a vibrant but sexually repressed young widow. Breathtaking beauty and idyllic charm--lovingly photographed." Others like Richard Eder of the New York Times called it "an atmospheric triumph." Arthur Knight, "a picture of refinement and sensibility" and William Wolf of Coe Magazine calls this "a work of art."

"The Sailor Who Fell from Grace With the Sea" gave his soul to the sea and his heart to a woman. Their love will arouse you. The story will disturb. The ending will startle you.

It is only a 105 minute film--but what a film! Don't miss entertainment in Kenan Auditorium at 8:00 p.m. Tuesday, October 4.

Admission is by season membership or UNCW students with ID 50 cents and non-students $1.00.

Nominations for "Who's Who" Are Sought by Committee

Nominations for the 1977-78 publication of Who's Who Among Students in American Universities and Colleges are now being solicited.

Qualifications include upperclassmen whose academic standing, participation in extracurricular activities, and campus and community service are decidedly above average.

Nominations may be submitted by students, faculty, or administrators. Each name submitted should be accompanied by a brief biographical sketch emphasizing especially the qualifications of leadership, scholarship and service.

Nomination forms are available in the Office of Student Affairs.

Thoughts While Shaving

Soccer is really off to a good start at UNCW. Right now, they're 5-1, ranked fifth in the south, and have beaten two highly respected teams (Carolina and Rollins). This is certainly a credit to Coach Calvin Lane and his excellent team.

To be truthful, I was not that optimistic about the soccer squad at the start of the year. They lost the base of last year's team to graduation, and I was afraid they wouldn't be able to fill in the gaps. Fortunately, I was wrong.

While I'm on soccer, I'd like to congratulate Coach Lane. He was named Sportsman of the Week last week by the Star News, a rival newspaper here in Wilmington.

Club football is really gathering interest, not only on the campus but in the community as well. I've heard several items on the radio and television about the club, and this past game against Duke got a lot of press coverage.

The club almost got their first victory against Duke, but the Blue Devils sneaked in a touchdown in the final minutes of the game. Mark Doll was really the star of the game, with an interception, an assist on an interception, and that big kick-off return.

Speaking of clubs, it seems like sports clubs are the coming thing here. The football and rowing clubs, started last year, are in full swing now. Seven other sports clubs are in existence, covering everything from gymnastics to karate. And now, I see a sailing club is being formed. I guess between clubs and intramurals and varsity sports, everybody who wants to can participate in UNCW athletics. And I don't mean, run-oh-run, either.

Seahawk Gridders Edged by Duke

UNCW's football club suffered narrow defeat at the hands of a veteran Duke University squad, as the Blue Devils downed the Seahawks 14-12.

Duke opened the scoring on a one-yard dash by quarterback Philip Mulford. The two-point conversion attempt failed. UNCW wasted no time, however, in getting on the board. They received the ball on their forty-yard line and went 60 yards in eight plays for the score. The drive was capped by a 29 yard touchdown pass from Carson Royal to Donald Kent. The extra point attempt failed.

In the next series of downs for Duke, Seahawk Mark Doll tipped an intended pass to teammate David Moore, who raced twenty yards to the Duke 37. The Hawks failed to score, however, and the first half ended with the score tied at 6-6.

Doll took the opening half kick-off for the Seahawks and returned it to the UNCW 46. The drive was halted however, and the Wilmington club was forced to punt. Three plays later, though, Doll intercepted a Duke pass and brought it back to the midfield line. The Hawks scored eleven plays later on a six-yard touchdown pass from Royal to Ken Watson. Once again, the point-after attempt failed.

With three minutes left and the score 12-6 in favor of UNCW, Duke took the ball and drove to the Seahawk 15, where Mulford took it in for the score on a quarterback keeper. The Blue Devils scored again on a two-point conversion pass from Mulford to John St. Pierre, making the final score 14-12 in favor of Duke.

UNC dominated most of the statistics. The Hawks had 178 yards rushing and 36 yards passing (4 for 18) for a combined offense of 214 yards. On the other hand, Duke had 69 yards passing (7 for 16) and 63 yards rushing for a total of 132 yards. The Hawks also had three interceptions, compared with one for the Blue Devils. Brad Linden rushed and caught a pass for a total of 150 yards.

Frank Zerbines, coach of the UNCW club, praised the offensive and defensive lines for an outstanding job against an experienced Duke team. Concentration on the kicking game will be the team's immediate objective.

The Seahawks next game is Saturday, Oct. 1, when they face Virginia Commonwealth University in Richmond, Va.

Hawks Upset Rollins 2-0

Last Friday, the UNCW soccer team proved they were for real and their recent victory over Carolina was no fluke. Final score: UNCW 2, Rollins 0.

"This was a very big game for us," said Coach Lane, head coach of the Seahawks. "Rollins is a very good team, and I'm sure more will be heard of them before the season ends." Rollins was ranked fourth in the south going into the game, with UNCW ranked fifth.

Lane feels that fifth place ranking may be in jeopardy, though, due to the Hawks 5-2 loss to The Citadel in overtime here last Tuesday. "We just weren't mentally prepared for the game," Lane said. "We were so high after beating Carolina that we couldn't get ready. All we could see was the Rollins game on Friday."

Injuries also proved to be deciding in the Citadel game. Three starters—Charlie Ingold, Ted Kort, and Steve Paul—saw little or no action in the match.

Citadel took an early lead, and by halftime the score was 2-1 in their favor. Chi Chi Mercado scored the only Wilmington goal in the half.

The Wilmington squad pretty well controlled the second half, but the Citadel packed all its players into the penalty area to prevent the tying goal. Finally, with only five minutes left, Kort managed to kick a right-footer into the goal to send the game into overtime. The visitors then scored on three quick breakaways to make the final score 5-2 in favor of the Citadel.

As Lane mentioned earlier, the team was pointing towards the Rollins game, and it proved to be no disappointment. "It was a great game for spectators and a bad one for coaches," he stated.

It was a hard-fought contest from the very beginning. Both teams were attacking all over the field, yet neither could score. Then, with twenty minutes left, Nino Fleri took a pass from Gil Castilla, slipped in behind a Rollins fullback, and scored the goal.

From this point the Hawks took command of the game. With 1:50 left, the Seahawks scored again. Castilla took a crossing pass and literally took it in the goal with him to give UNCW their 2-0 shutout victory over favored Rollins.

"The key to the game," Lane said, "was our midfield play. We picked up many loose balls and really took the game away."

"This was a victory we really wanted," he added. "We'd just been defeated, and wanted to maintain our ranking."

As far as injuries go, Ingold and Paul have returned to active duty, but Kort is still on the injured list. His status is still questionable for the Atlantic Christian game tomorrow.

According to Lane, these next two weeks are critical for the Seahawks. "They (the next two weeks) will decide whether we receive a playoff berth or not. We must also keep winning to maintain our high ranking."

The next game for the Hawks is tomorrow at 4:00, when they face an always-tough Atlantic Christian College team.

Volleyball Hopes

For Good Year

According to Anne Kraft, head coach of the UNCW women's volleyball team, this year's squad is very similar to last year's squad that finished fourth in the state tournament.

"We only lost two starters from last year's team," she said, "but we've got two real good freshmen that will probably fill in their places." Experience is the key on this year's team, with only five new players on their roster.

Kraft cited as team strengths power serves and good setting and spiking. Weaknesses include blocking and returning hard balls.

The team opened their season last Monday night in Raleigh against Peace College and Meredith College. Only three home games are scheduled.

Pictures For Yearbook Free of Charge

Get your picture in the yearbook for FREE! That's right! There will be NO OBLIGATION to buy your pictures. So, come on over to the fledgling office upstairs in the pub on Oct. 2-7 from 9:00 a.m.-12:00 p.m. and 1:00 p.m.-4:00 p.m. and have your picture taken for the yearbook! In order to avoid long waiting lines, the following schedule has been arranged: Seniors on Monday; Seniors and Juniors on Tuesday; Juniors and Sophomores on Wednesday; Sophomores and Freshmen on Thursday; Freshmen and Absent Minds on Friday. However, if you are interested in buying your pictures, Smith Studios will supply a price list.

The distribution and sale of the 1977 yearbook was amazing. On the second morning, we sold out all our extra yearbooks and still students were asking about buying one.

If you happened to be one who was late to buy a book, don't let your chance slip away for the 1978 yearbook. Subscriptions are now being sold for $3.00, but will later go up to $4.00.

This year for the first time our staff will be offering the option of engraving your name on your yearbook for fifty cents. Also, to preserve the beauty of the cover, plastic covers will be sold for fifty cents. If you are a senior this year and would like your yearbook mailed to you, this can be done for only twenty cents.

Our goal this year is to sell 1000 subscriptions. But we'll gladly take more! Already, 145 subscriptions have been sold for the 1978 yearbook. There are still 125 books from 1977 to be picked up by subscribers. So please hurry!

All clubs and organizations are requested to make an appointment to have their pictures taken. We want to include everyone, so make an effort to get in contact with us. We hope this year we'll produce the most comprehensive yearbook yet.

Rowing Club Requests Senate Funds

By Bobby Parker

The Student Senate met in regular session Thursday night with Senior Class President Barbara McKay presiding in the absence of SGA Vice-president Ken Lilly.

Bruce Evans, president of the Rowing Club, presented a request from that club for a reallocation of $2875 for equipment, operating expenses, and travel expenses. The club had prepared a slide presentation to familiarize the senators with their work.

"We are the university's first water sport," Evans stated. "Interest is up now. Our club has doubled in size since last year."

Evans added that the Rowing Club contributes to community interest in and involvement with the university.

The specific requests of the group were $1200 for a coach boat and motor; $1300 for ten racing oars; $100 for safety equipment; $75 for spare parts (seats, shoes, and riggers); and $50 membership dues in a regional rowing association.

Also requested was funding for six two-night trips for fourteen people in the amount of $1008 for lodging, $840 for meals, and $720 for transportation.

The total of expenses was listed as $5493. The club has set a fund-raising goal for their own projects at $1118, and it was given $1500 last spring by the SGA. The remaining $2875 is the reallocation requested.

Although Evans stated that the club needs the funds immediately so that practices can begin, the Senate voted to refer the request to the finance committee for further consideration.

In other senate action, Sophomore Senator Francis DeLuca resigned as chairman of the Investigating Committee. Junior Senator Herman Smith was confirmed as his replacement.

Senators John Potter, Dan Allen, Chris Aldridge, and Cindy Buxton were absent.

WLOZ Planning Faculty Forum

The staff of WLOZ, in its efforts to bring the community closer to the university, is planning a bi-weekly opinion program tentatively titled "Faculty Forum." This show will feature a faculty member who will come on and voice his or her opinion on any issue which he or she shall choose. For more information come by the WLOZ studio or call 791-8224.

The first organizational meeting of the Sailing Club, will be held on Thursday at 7:00 in room 109 in Hoggard. Anyone interested please attend or contact Libby Streb. See you there!

English Club Meets

The UNCW English Club will hold a meeting Thursday, Sept. 29, in Kenan 202. All existing and any new members are invited. Please call Bill Rapp at 799-2500 if you would like to participate and cannot attend the meeting.

Young Democrats Club Sponsors Issues Night

The Young Democrats will sponsor an issues night, Wednesday, Sept. 28, at 7:30 upstairs in the Hoggard building in Room 212. These issues are the ones soon coming up on the ballot.

Highway Commissioner Garland Garrett, Jr., will speak on Highway bonds.

Rowing Club members handle new 8-man racing shell from Seattle, Washington purchased last year with the help of the SGA and various fund-raising activities.

Rowing Club Holds Meeting

The UNCW Rowing Club will hold a meeting on Wed., Sept. 28, at 5:00 p.m. in room 103, Business Building. Last week, plans for shirts were discussed, as well as races, for the coming season.

This year, the club may purchase some canoes and/or sailboats to provide a wider range of recreational activities besides rowing. All students, both male and female, are welcome to join.

The Rowing Club is thankful for the SGA for its support in providing water activities for UNCW Students.

TKE Holds Successful Rush

The Mu-Chi Chapter of Tau Kappa Epsilon Fraternity has begun another successful year. The two rush parties that were held turned out a big success. Our new house made its own music as people danced, played pool, and had a rocking good time.

At the meeting Sunday evening, many plans were made for the upcoming year, including a camping trip to the mountains and a ski trip. Our new associate member program has been organized to help our pledges become acquainted with the Greek life and ideas.

The brothers of Tau Kappa Epsilon Fraternity extend a welcome hand to all students at UNCW and hope that this will be a successful year for all.

Insurance provisions.

These proposed reforms have received bipartisan support across the state, and former governor James Houser supports them.

Everyone is invited to attend. Young democrats are especially encouraged to attend.

Rock and Roll Heart

A couple of years back I saw Heart opening for the Beach Boys. At that time they were a relatively unknown group on an equally unknown label, Mushroom. Outside of an occasional spin of CRAZY ON YOU on the FM turntables Heart was never played on the air. That was then.

The Heart that is heading at 8 o'clock on Oct. 11 at Brogden Hall is no longer unknown. With their first album they had two smashes, CRAZY ON YOU and the even bigger MAGIC MAN. Heart's latest is Little Queen, but is on the new Columbia Portrait label. With the recent success of BARRACUDA Heart's new record has gone Platinum just like their first has done. Along with the Sanford-Townsend Band (SMOKE FROM A DISTANT FIRE), Heart should provide an interesting evening of musical entertainment.

Fronting Heart is the Wilson sisters, (not related to the Wilson brothers of Beach Boys fame). Ann and Nancy Wilson along with Roger Fisher write the bulk of Heart's material.

All of their hits have been their own compositions. The influence of Led Zeppelin on Heart's music is no secret. This does not mean that Heart's music is all hard rock. They are sometimes most reminiscent of Led Zeppelin when doing acoustical tunes. The dual madolin work on SYLVAN SONG is a perfect example of this. There is also a hint of Yes included. Other numbers like BARRACUDA are definitely heavier music, but really owe nothing to any major influence.

One other major influence that stands out is Joni Mitchell. Although there is no dulcimer on SAY HELLO it starts out just like one of Joni's trademark tunes. On TREAT ME WELL and DREAM OF THE ARCHER the vocals at times sound amazingly like Mitchell's.

Enough of comparisons. Heart does put out good music that is their own. Except for the "babytalk" lyrics of MAGIC MAN, Heart's lyrics are usually pretty good. Not always earthshaking, but often poetic. Both women studied writing in college before leaving to join Heart. The lessons evidently paid off.

Besides the sisters are Roger Fisher, Steve Fossen, Michael Derosier, and Howard Lease. Together they have provided some of the best music on AM radio in awhile. Little Queen has the hard rock sound of Heart that you always hear on the radio. However an even better melodic side of Heart is present on the album. For seven dollars you can witness it at Brogden Hall. Steve Harvey

Phillip-Morris Announces Contest

NEW YORK, N.Y., Sept. 1977--Philip Morris Incorporated has announced its ninth annual Marketing/Communications Competition for College Students. The purpose of the competition is to provide students with a practical and realistic business project, bringing them into direct contact with the business community.

A $1,000 grant will be awarded to the winning entries at both the undergraduate and graduate level; runners up will receive $500 grants, and other finalists in the undergraduate and graduate categories will receive special merit awards. Entries may deal with any aspect of the broad areas of marketing/communications related to Philip Morris Incorporated, its operating companies or any of its non-tobacco products.

Student chapters of professional societies, regular classes or ad hoc committees of no less than five students at the undergraduate level and no less than two at the graduate level under the counsel of full-time members may submit proposals.

A distinguished committee of marketing/communications experts will judge selected entries. They are: Eugene H. Kummel, chairman of the board, McCann Erickson; Mary Wells Lawrence, chairman of the board, Wells, Rich, Greene; Arjay Miller, dean, Stanford University Graduate School of Business; William Ruder, president, Ruder & Finn; and James C. Bowling, senior vice president, Philip Morris Incorporated.

In addition to the grants, two student representatives and the faculty advisor from each of the winning and runner-up committees will be invited to be Philip Morris's guests at corporate headquarters in New York or at another corporate location to discuss their proposals with Philip Morris executives.

For additional information, please contact Marketing/Communications Competition, Philip Morris Incorporated, 100 Park Avenue, New York, New York 10017.

Opportunities for Volunteers

Volunteers will have the opportunity to help get out the vote on election day, Oct. 11, according to Ms. Carolyn Gruelle, Director of Cape Fear Voluntary Action Center (VAC.) The League of Women Voters is asking other volunteers to join them in providing transportation to the polls during the hours 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. This primary election will involve city residents only. Call 762-9611 for more information.

Helms Ignores Testimony of IWY Leaders in Washington Inquiry

By Stephen Harris

(Reprinted from the Daily Tar Heel)

Sen. Jesse Helms's inquiry into the activities of International Women's Year (IWY) groups begins today in Washington, though members of North Carolina's IWY Committee will not be present.

Elizabeth Koontz, chairperson of the state IWY convention said Monday she was not invited to the inquiry, nor were any other members of the state IWY committee.

However, two North Carolina women, Mary Pegg and Ann Bagnall, both critics of the state IWY committee, were invited.

Pegg said she was invited on Sept. 3 to testify at the hearing.

The Helms inquiry will run today and Thursday. It was organized by Helms's staff and is not a formal committee hearing. Witnesses from 40 states are expected to appear.

The hearing will examine alleged restrictions of some women at state IWY conventions, plus other alleged misconduct by the national and state commissions.

Pegg and Bagnall have criticized arrangements at the North Carolina IWY convention held in Winston-Salem in June. Pegg has questioned the state IWY committee's activities and distribution of scholarships for poor women at the state convention.

"A number of state IWY conferences have come under increasing criticism," Helms has said, "for what now appears to be a coordinated nationwide plan to exclude groups of women whose views did not coincide with those of the militant feminist activist members of the National Commission on IWY.

Miriam K. Slifkin of Chapel Hill, who attended the state convention denies that non-feminists were restricted at the state convention.

"We really made an all-out effort to inform women who would not normally participate," Slifkin said. "The convention was handled well, was handled fairly. Elizabeth Koontz leaned over backward to include all opinions."

The state IWY convention began as "speakouts"—small meetings across the state. Lists of issues and potential workshops were sent by speakouts to the state commission.

About 30 people attended a speakout in Hillsborough headed by Slifkin.

"We sent out letters to four counties, to churches and to newspapers," she said. "We sent letters to every organization that we could think of."

Though Slifkin thought activists were better represented than working-class women, she said IWY efforts to attract all viewpoints were the best possible.

Slifkin said the discussions between women at the convention made the effort worthwhile.

"Women told me that they had never felt so good about something," Slifkin said. "The fact that people were listening to their problems for the first time was the reason."

The North Carolina IWY convention appointed 23 members to attend the national IWY convention, to be held in Houston in November.

"A national conference which is not properly representative," Sen. Helms has said, "is worse than no national women's conference at all."

Public Invited to Attend CDC Meeting This Thursday Night

The public is invited to attend the regular monthly meeting of the Wilmington Community Development Committee Thursday, Sept. 19, 1977 at 7:30 p.m. in the County Commissioners' chambers on the first floor of the County Administration Building at 4th and Chestnut Streets in Downtown Wilmington. Highlights of the meeting include an explanation of the budget process and introduc-

The Heart of Heart

HEART, the Seattle-based rock group, is rapidly beating its way toward a place in contemporary music history.

The debut album of the six-member group, titled "Dreamboat Annie," was an immediate success, hitting platinum status in both the United States and Canada, and a gold disc in Australia. Three songs from that album—"Crazy on You," "Magic Man," and "Dreamboat Annie"—became major international hits. Since that impressive start, HEART has built upon its success with a triumphant concert career.

Although the group has only recently achieved international renown, it has been making music as a unit for about four years. In that time, it has blossomed from being a popular local Seattle/Vancouver band into a group respected by critics and fans alike in many parts of the world. In 1976, when the Canadian Academy of Recording Arts and Sciences honored HEART with two prestigious Juno Awards one for Best Group, the other for Best Producer (Michael Flicker) its universal appeal was confirmed.

HEART is composed of six distinct personalities. Each individual has contributed their own musical uniqueness to the group's originality.

Ann Wilson, the band's dark-haired lead vocalist and flutist, composes most of HEART'S music with her sister, Nancy. The Wilsons grew up with a wide variety of music in their home, and although Ann never had any formal musical training, she learned the essentials of playing the guitar, flute and trumpet. In college, she studied art at the Cornish School of Fine Arts in Seattle. She also concentrated on English studies, hoping to be a writer (as well as illustrator) of her own poetry books.

Eventually, Ann chose a musical career, left college, and began playing with a succession of Seattle bands.

She ultimately became an integral member of HEART singing, composing, and even designing some of the stage clothes for herself and the others.

Expansion Plans for Pub Revised

By Ray Warren

Plans for expansion of student services in the student union are being reshaped in the light of the announced intention to move an administrative office into the space being vacated by the school bookstore. It was revealed last week that the office of Counseling and Testing will be relocated into the back portion of the old bookstore. As a consequence, SGA President Karin Whaley has abandoned plans to move all games into the vacated space and is seeking student suggestions for alternative improvements of the student union.

According to Whaley, some space in the front part of the bookstore will be available for student use. She will not know how much, however, until Counseling and Testing reports how much space will be needed for that office. She is confident that there will be a reasonable amount, saying of the Counseling and Testing Center, "they're being good about it and won't be taking the whole thing."

President Whaley's plan for Student Union renovations include (a) a movable wall to separate the present game room, (b) smaller area for ping pong, (c) pool tables in the front of the bookstore, (d) Counseling and Testing in the back of the bookstore, (e) a storage room for the ping pong and Good Wood tables, (f) a lounge in the present lobby, and (g) an expanded Good Wood Tavern.

President Whaley says that she would like to use whatever room is made available to put in the pool tables. This would leave more room in the Pub for concerts. Due to the fact that these tables cannot be moved without having them "levelled" again, they are only covered and left in place during concerts. (The "level-

Fewer Scholarships Are Given Student Groups

By Tim Bass

The UNCW Financial Aid Committee last spring made rearrangements in its program of awarding tuition scholarships to students. Fewer scholarship funds were allotted to some campus organizations, while the funds to a few academic departments were increased. The realignment, while leaving something to be desired by some of those organizations whose scholarships were cut back, gives some previously-slighted academic departments freedom to offer more scholarships as "recruiting tools" to incoming high school graduates, though the allotments were made too late—in the spring of 1977—last year to be used widely for this year.

The committee invited each organization and department to submit requests for a specific number of scholarships. Once all the requests were made, the committee, headed then by Dr. Dave Roy, reviewed the enrollments within the various departments and decided to allot more funds to the academic areas.

Mr. Joe Cappell, Director of Financial Aid, said that the scholarships are worth $270 annually. The awards, funded by the state, cover the cost of tuition plus the costs of the registration and academic fees; the fees are covered in the scholarships because the University of North Carolina-Chapel Hill considers them part of their tuition, and next year will be considered so by UNCW.

Next year's funds, expected to be increased due to UNCW's increased enrollment, are to be allotted at a November meeting of the committee. This earlier distribution of scholarships will make it possible for various academic departments to use their scholarships in recruiting gifted high school seniors for enrollment at UNCW. Mr. Cappell sees the new arrangement as a way to balance the scholarship program.

Seahawk Should Take Strong Editorial Stands

Letters

Question after question has arisen this year as to just how strong a role The Seahawk (or any student newspaper) should assume on campus with its editorial comments. In our opinion, this role should be as strong as deemed necessary by the editor and staff, with the decision based on the particular issue concerned and a judgement of what the effects of the editorial would be.

Page Two

October 5, 1977

We suspect that criticism of The Seahawk's editorial stands this year stem from the fact that they are in sharp contrast to past editorial policy. In effect, past editors have not chosen to deal with the real campus issues on the editorial page except in a few isolated incidences.

In so doing, we feel these editors also neglected a very vital part of their responsibilities to the student body. Well-directed editorials can provide the incentive for students to investigate and find out for themselves what the specifics of a certain story are. More importantly, they will serve as commentary and analysis that could never be achieved in regular news stories.

The Seahawk maintains high regard for the separation of editorial opinion and reportorial facts. That's why you will never read—and have not this year—a biased news story within our pages. We have no trouble separating editorial opinions from straight news reporting—our readers should not either.

It has been suggested that editorials which appear in The Seahawk be signed by the author. To a professional journalist, such a suggestion would be an insult since the opinion would then become that of one staff member and not the newspaper as a whole. We, also, are insulted by the suggestion.

To be certain, the editorials are written by only one person, usually the editor. But in theory—and in practice—The Seahawk's editorials receive feedback from several members of the staff before they are published, and appropriate changes are made through group consultation. Thus, the opinions expressed become a joint effort by staff members, though every staff member does not agree with any particular portion of the editorial.

The Seahawk views the recent criticisms with mixed feelings. We do not agree with the majority of them, but we welcome the reactions as a sign of students who are becoming concerned about the issues on campus.

Our editorial page will continue to be strongly opinionated. We will not accept the censorship of student government, administration, or faculty in regard to our editorial policy. No one from either of these three entities has ever attempted to censor our paper before and we do not seriously expect them to now.

At the same time, we pledge to the student body that we will exercise responsible judgement in regard to our editorials. We invite letters to the editor when you agree or disagree with our position.

Editorials are a very important part of this and all newspapers. It is vital that we retain editorial freedom if we are to fulfill our obligations to this university and its students. With that in mind, we ask for your respect; we hope—and believe—that we have earned it.

Senate Action On Atlantis Part of Duty

To the Editor:

It isn't always a wise or easy thing to disagree with one's boss. Nonetheless, it occasionally happens that all members of the newspaper staff don't agree with the policy line of their editors. So, with all due respect, with regards to "censoring" the Atlantis, Mr. Parker is wrong.

In last week's editorial, Bobby accused the Student Senate of censorship. The implication was that this was somehow an abuse of power and an attack on the first amendment. On the contrary, however, the Senate's action indicates the fulfillment of their stated duty as representatives of the student body.

Publications such as the Atlantis, Fledgling, and Seahawk have no claim to freedom of the press because they are not free publications, but rather subsidized government publications. In a free society publications may indeed publish anything without fear of censorship. The public, however, has the complimentary right of refusing to financially support any publication which offends the public taste or fails to justify its purchase because of a lack of quality.

Thus, the Wilmington Morning Star may publish whatever the editors deem important, but nobody is forced to buy that newspaper. Students at UNCW, however, have no choice. Activity fees are forcibly extracted from each of us and allocated to campus publications.

Like all consumers, the students of UNCW deserve the right to expect quality in the things they must pay for. It is the duty of the Senate to

Reader Agrees With Warren's Statements on Reverse Discrimination

To the Editor

I wholeheartedly agree with Mr. Warren's position concerning the upcoming Supreme Court decision on Alan Bakke. ("The Right Line", Sept. 28). Usage of any semantic trick does not change the essence of the situation, namely: discrimination is discrimination no matter whom it is directed against, or whom it supposedly benefits. What Mr. Warren fails to mention is the active role of government in legal discrimination.

Throughout the past, and now the present, the discriminations against certain groups, and the favoritisms of others has been accomplished legally with the passage of laws by various local, state, and federal governments. Governments, of course, are not entities in themselves, but rather, are collections of individuals who are often times pursuing political goals which are to the detriment of most citizens, and this is exactly what is happening at the University of California at Davis.

California state law, and now HEW "guidelines" have mandated the use of discrimination in college admissions. If politicians and bureaucrats were prohibited from passing favoritism laws the Constitution would be enough to guarantee equal opportunity for all to better themselves as their abilities warrant. Only the mutual respect of human beings for each other can accomplish long-lasting social equality which is not possible with mere political considerations.

Hopefully, the Supreme Court will uphold the equal treatment for every individual, but if it does not, the political activism advocated by Mr. Warren would be no better. Politics has caused the problem and is not the answer. Government cannot institute meaningful social change; it can only coerce.

Sincerely yours,
Jon D. Jones

Israel, Arabs Should Face Realities and Compromise

President Carter became the first American president to make a public statement of any substance toward recognizing the legitimate rights of Palestinians in the Mideast squallor. Not as a result of Mr. Carter's statement, but as a result of an increasing acceptance of that school of thought, a Geneva conference between Arabs and Israelis is now within sight.

The strained relations between the United States and Israel have been building since the election of rightwing Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin. The 'President was annoyed with the establishment by Israel of more settlements in the occupied West Bank territory and a continuing Israeli military presence in southern Lebanon.

Both actions are quite obviously an expose of muscle by Israeli leaders, as unnecessary as they are unwise. More of the same could only increase the tension in the explosive region.

Jerusalem seems to be as stubborn about getting a peace conference under way these days as the Arab states. Both are uncompromising in their demands; they can't even agree on how the conference should be staged and who should be the actors.

The use of the term "staged" is not an oversight. Any peace settlement of permanence is most likely to come out of "go-between" negotiations conducted individually with the leaders of each country concerned. But here again, both sides seem wary of allowing the U.S. to be the go-between diplomat—they want to run their own show, but they can't get their acts together.

The Israelis' main problems are the two personalities who are now running their half of the show—Begin and Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan. The two are less willing to compromise than Begin's predecessor, Prime Minister Rabin, who took a more realistic approach to the situation.

The realistic approach to the problem is a genuine recognition of the interests of both sides—Israeli and Palestinian. That the center of all the controversy is a difference in religious beliefs is the reason the atmosphere is so explosive.

Israel's refusal to recognize the Palestine Liberation Organization's right to represent the Palestinians at Geneva is understandable, but not in the interest of securing a lasting peace settlement. A settlement is built on compromise—from both sides of the coin.

The United States' role in the Arab-Israeli conflict is a muddled affair. A traditional and staunch ally of Israel, we still cannot close our eyes to Jerusalem's contribution to instability in the region. Their military exploits in Lebanon and settlement of the West Bank are the most recent testimony to that contribution.

As secretary of state, Henry Kissinger made great strides towards a settlement by talking individually with moderate Arab leaders such as Egypt's Anwar. Sadat. It would not be unwise for the Carter administration to recall Kissinger into active service to help ease the tensions between the leaders of these various nations.

With Begin in charge of the Israeli brigade, it will be more difficult now than before to establish a dialogue among the Mideast states. He and Dayan seem unsure of whether they want the U.S. to assume a dominant role in getting a Geneva conference under way.

It seems certain that Begin and Dayan will have to accept the fact that Israel, like the Arab nations, will have to yield something in exchange for a permanent settlement of their differences. The United States can hardly continue to support them wholeheartedly if they refuse to do so. President Carter, at last, appears to have realized that.

Minority Affairs Committee Asks More Money of Student Senate

By Bobby Falker

The Minority Affairs Committee requested a reallocation of $2000 from the Student Senate at the regular meeting of that body last Thursday night. Committee Chairman Ron Coley said that the funds, which would double the original allocation to $4000, would be used for programs throughout the year, not spent solely in Black Week activities.

Coley told the senators that "$4000 would be a rock-bottom figure" for his committee to operate with. The Senate voted to refer the request to the Finance Committee, which will give its recommendation on the matter to the Senate at tomorrow night's meeting.

The Minority Affairs committee is currently comprised of three members, Coley said, and he has reached out to minority groups other than blacks to become active on the committee. He cited specifically that he had been approached by a handicapped student and that plans were tentatively under way for sponsoring a program of Indian culture this year.

Coley said that it was his understanding last year that if more funds than anticipated were collected by the SGA, Minority Affairs would be given high priority in any request for reallocations. The SGA currently has more than $12,000 in unencumbered funds, but several groups have requested reallocations.

Senior President Barbara McKay asked Coley to provide a tentative budget that would be a "concrete" proposal for spending the money. She noted that last year's Black Week, traditionally the biggest effort of the committee during the year, was "poorly organized."

Coley countered by questioning whether a budget is binding after funds are allocated. "When you give me the money," he said, "I'm not obligated to spend it as specified in the budget."

The Senate heard Darrell Hope of S*E*X report on that club's recent science fiction convention. Hope said that total receipts from ticket sales of $971 would enable the club to repay $930 given it by the SGA.

On the matter of an alleged missing film, Hope said that as it turned out there is no chance of a law suit filed against S*E*X because the film was copyrighted and it would have been illegal to have shown it at UNCW.

Senator Greg Musselwhite denied a charge that he and Senator David Harris threatened S*E*X members with the revoke of their charter if the SGA was not reimbursed.

"What we said was if (convention) attendance did not pick up," Musselwhite stated, "(S*E*X) would have to answer to the SGA."

The S*E*X members concerned, however, maintained that their original charge was correct.

SGA President Karin Whaley nominated five students to fill vacancies on the student courts. All was approved by the Senate. They are: Frank Zerbino (Chief), Ray Blackburn, Ray Warren, Wayne Dunlap, and Victor Morgan.

Whaley said that the justices had already begun work on a revision of the SGA constitution. She also nominated Mark Sanchez as chairman of the Dance Committee.

Several club charters were approved by the Senate as presented by Charter Committee Chairman Tom Hunt. The approved charters were: English Club, Young Democrats, (as a non-funded group), Government and Politics Association, Fencing Club, Chemistry Club, Biology Club, Earth Science Club, Rowing Club, and Surfing Club.

In other Senate action, Robby Anderson presented a request from the Pep Band for $250 to buy music and folders. The request was approved.

Those senators absent from the meeting were David Harris, Dan Allen, Wayne Bryant, and Francis DeLuca. The Senate will meet tomorrow night in C218 at 7:30 p.m.

More Ways to Stop Campus Crime

By Tim Bass

Last week we told you about UNCW's rash of crimes concerning bicycles and automobiles, and about helping to prevent further troubles by being suspicious. Although our particular problem is not greatly being sustained or worsened by owners' negligence, there are instances when a small more of carelessness—made consciously or unconsciously—results in a big headache for the rightful owner of a valuable item. So here are some prescriptive suggestions concerning you, your bike or car, and your continued possession of it:

Register your bike with the school or the city. Keep a record of the bike's description, serial number, and registration number. Engrave your social security number (or name) somewhere on the bike's frame.

Park the bike in a crowded area.

Lock your bike to a bike rack, a tree, a light pole, a street post, a sleeping dog—somewhere; never leave it unattended. It's best to keep the bike indoors, where possible.

Lock doors and trunk of your car when you park. Be sure all windows are fully closed. Either lock valuables in the trunk or take them with you. Park in well-lighted areas. If you leave your car at a garage, leave only the ignition key.

Check your car when you return.

Graduate Record Examination Board Will Offer Fee Waivers

During the 1977-1978 academic year the Graduate Record Examination Board will offer approximately fifty fee waivers to UNCW students for the Graduate Record Examinations. The Fee Waiver Program is made available for the benefit of students who aspire to graduate school, but find the GRE test fee an economic barrier. Students eligible for fee waivers are those currently enrolled as seniors in college, receiving financial aid, and with an estimated parental contribution of $200 or less for their senior year of college study.

Fee waiver certificates may be used by students to register for the National Administration (including walk-in registration), Special Administration Service, or the Summer Institutional Testing Program of the GRE. The certificates are submitted in lieu of the basic test fee of $13.00 for the Aptitude Test or an Advanced Test or $26.00 for both. Surcharges for walk-in testing ($10.00 over the test fee) and the Special Administration Service ($5.00) are not waived, nor are charges for late registration or additional score reports.

Fee waiver certificates for the Graduate Record Examination are available in the Student Affairs Office, Room 113 of the Administration Building.

Second Workshop Offers Test Techniques

Test Taking Techniques, the second of a series of workshops on developing study skills, will be offered by the Counseling Center on Thursday, October 6, from 2:30 to 4:30 in room 214 in the Alderman Administration Building.

Tests are a necessary part of college courses. Both the instructor and the student use them to check on progress. Tests can be a source of anxiety and undue pressure. Any athlete will tell you that pressing is a sure way to lose control. How can you learn to keep control and do well on tests?

Skills can be learned to help a student be more perceptive and effective in taking tests. If you are interested in learning these skills, plan to attend the Test Taking Techniques Mini-Workshop. Sign up in the Counseling Center, room 217, Alderman.

Candidates to be Selected for Fellowships

The National Research Council will again advise the National Science Foundation in the selection of candidates for the Foundation's National Needs Postdoctoral Fellowships. Panels of scientists and engineers appointed by the Research Council will evaluate applications of all candidates. Final selection of Fellows will be made by the Foundation, with awards to be announced in March 1978.

Approximately 140 National Needs Postdoctoral Fellowships will be awarded for research and study on scientific problems related to national needs in the mathematical, physical, medical, biological, engineering, and social sciences, as well as in interdisciplinary areas. Awards will not be made in clinical, education, or business fields, nor in history, social work, or public health.

Applications may be made by persons who will be earned by the beginning of their fellowship tenures a Ph.D. degree in one of the fields of science listed above or have had research training and experience equivalent to that represented by a Ph.D. degree, and who will have held the doctorate for no more than five years as of December 5, 1977. All applicants must be citizens of the United States, and will be judged on the basis of ability.

The basic stipend for Postdoctoral Fellows is $1,000 per month; a limited travel allowance is also provided. In addition, the National Science Foundation will provide the fellowship institution, upon its request, with a cost-of-education allowance on behalf of the Fellow to assist the institution in meeting the cost of tuition and fees, and in providing the Fellow with space, supplies, and equipment. No dependency allowance is available.

The deadline date for the submission of applications is December 5, 1977. Further information and application materials may be obtained from the Fellowship Office, National Research Council, 2101 Constitution Avenue, Washington, D.C. 20418.

Poetry Deadline Announced

The deadline for entry in the 1977 University Poetry Contest is October 13, 1977. All UNCW students are eligible to submit as many as three poems in this contest, sponsored by the UNCW Department of English.

Prizes will be awarded on Thursday, Oct. 20, in the SRO Theatre. The first place poem will be awarded $50; second place, $30, and third, $20. No entry fee is required.

Poems should be submitted to the secretary's office of the English Department, upstairs in Kenan Hall.

Pharmacy Interviews Conducted

Mr. Joseph Hodge, Assistant Dean of the School of Pharmacy, Medical University of South Carolina at Charleston, will be at UNCW on Thursday, Oct. 6, from 9:00 a.m. to 1:00 p.m. conducting interviews for prospective pharmacy students. Any student interested in a career in pharmacy is encouraged to talk with Mr. Hodge.

A sign-up sheet for interview times will be posted on the door of C-106, Dr. Ned Martin's office, where the interviews will be conducted.

Scandinavian Seminar Accepting Applications

Scandinavian Seminar is now accepting applications for its study abroad program in Denmark, Finland, Norway, or Sweden for the academic year 1978-79. This living-and-learning experience is designed for college students, graduates, and other adults who want to become part of another culture while acquiring a second language.

An initial 3 weeks language course, followed by a family stay whenever possible, will give the student opportunity to practice the language on a daily basis and to share in the life of the community. For the major part of the year he is separated from his fellow American students, living and studying among Scandinavians at a "People's College" (residential school for continuing adult education) or some other specialized institution.

"Who's Who" Nominees Sought

Nominations for the 1977-78 publication of Who's Who Among Students in American Universities and Colleges are now being solicited.

Qualifications include upperclassmen whose academic standing, participation in extracurricular activities, and campus and community service are decidedly above average.

All Seminar students participate in the Introductory, Midyear and Final Sessions, where matters related to their studies, experiences and individual progress are reviewed and discussed. The focus of the Scandinavian Seminar program is an Independent Study Project in the student's own field of interest. An increasing number of American colleges and universities are giving full or partial credit for the Seminar year.

The fee, covering tuition, room, board, one-way group transportation from New York and all course-connected travels in Scandinavia is $3,800. A limited number of scholarship loans are available. For further information please write to: SCANDINAVIAN SEMINAR 100 East 85th Street (New York, NY 10028).

Nominations may be submitted by students, faculty, or administrators. Each name submitted should be accompanied by a brief biographical sketch emphasizing especially the qualifications of leadership, scholarship and service. Nomination forms are available in the Office of Student Affairs.

S*E*X Will Not Face Law Suit Over Missing Film

Officials of the Society of Enterprising Xenophiles report that the danger of a lawsuit against their organization, resulting from their recent science fiction convention, has practically ceased to exist. According to executive board member Cindy Johnson, a film, which a visiting vendor claimed to have given to S*E*X officials, never existed. "We never saw the film," she said, and added that the Star Trek episode in question was copyrighted and therefore would have been illegal anyway.

Ms. Johnson also reported that the convention netted $971.78 which will allow the club to pay back its "GA" loan.

The S*E*X has planned, as its next project a "wrong show" in connection with the Bob Hope search for talent, which will be patterned after last year's successful "gong show" but with an eye towards identifying good talent to represent North Carolina in the national search for talent competition.

With regard to the future of S*E*X, Ms. Johnson reported that former chairman Darrell Hope had taken a two month leave from S*E*X and would be replaced on the executive board by Carol Humphries. She admitted to problems with the organization's recent convention, but reported that "all differences are now settled" and emphasized that the club was looking forward to the upcoming Wrong show. Referring to the past two weeks, she stated that "even though we've been through all this we are still the most active and well known club on campus."

Hawks Upset by ACC

Illnesses and an unprepared mental attitude proved too much for the Seahawk soccer team, as they suffered only their second loss of the season. A strong Atlantic Christian College team downed the Hawks 2-1.

The visiting Bulldogs scored first at the 34:30 mark of the first half, scoring the only goal of the half. Head Coach Calvin Lane said his team played "sluggishly" in the half.

ACC scored their second goal twelve minutes into the second half. Gil Castella scored the only UNCW goal with ten minutes left in the game.

"We got better the second half," said Lane, "and dominated the game." The Bulldogs packed the penalty area though, preventing a tying goal by the Seahawks.

UNCW dominated the statistics. They had 23 shots on goals, compared with 11 for ACC. The Seahawks also had eight corner kicks, with only one for the visitors.

Though Coach Lane refused to make excuses for the loss, illnesses and injuries proved to be decisive in the game. The current plague of mono here on campus hit the soccer team hard, with several players missing the game due to the illness.

A few players are still out with either mono or a virus. Among these are Danny Winter, Doug Powell, and Jerry Rebert, whose playing conditions are strictly on a week to week basis. Rod Becker is out for the year due to mono.

Ted Kort's injury has been diagnosed as a stress fracture (a bone split in the right foot), and Lane indicated it would probably be some time before Kort would return to action. Mino Fleri, the team's second leading scorer, is also on injured list. He hurt his knee in the ACC game, and is a doubtful starter this week.

In team statistics, Gil Castella is on top with eight goals and three assists for a total of 19 points. Fleri follows with 16 points, and Chi Chi Mercado is third with 9 points.

Defensive standouts include Steve Paul and Lenny Branson as well as newcomer David Hambrick.

This week the Hawks face some tough competition. Wednesday they travel to Raleigh to face N.C. State, and Friday they return home to host Duke University.

Last year, the Seahawks beat State here in Wilmington, and lost to Duke in overtime.

"We can't afford another loss," said Lane. "We still have a chance at a playoff berth."

"We can't let our physical problems get us down mentally," Lane added. "I convinced we can still win the rest of our games."

Football Club Suffers Third

In what can at best be described as an alleged football game, Virginia Commonwealth University defeated UNCW's football club, 40-8.

The game is an alleged football match, not because of the uneven score but due to the viciousness on the part of the VCU team. The squad was charged with 180 penalty yards, 165 of these coming on personal fouls.

Three Virginia players were ejected for fighting and malicious play.

UNCW coach Frank Zerbinos expressed his discontent with the game to both the VCU coaching staff and the crew of officials. "VCU coaches had no control over their players, as was made evident when one of their players took a swing at his coach. We went to play football, and found our opponents had come to have a slugfest."

Virginia Commonwealth scored first on a three yard touchdown run, with the extra point attempt successful. UNCW came right back with a nine yard sweep by Mark Doll, set up by a fumble recovery by Ricky Clemmons. The Seahawks went ahead with the two point conversion on a three yard pass from Carson Royal to David Hooks.

The host school later scored, however, on passes of 10, 29, 39, and 45 yards, plus a 78 yard punt return, to make the final score 40-8.

Women's Tennis Impressive in Openers

After only two games, the women's tennis team has equaled last year's number of victories in the fall season.

Last year, the women's team suffered a disappointing 1-9 fall season and 2-2 spring session to wind up with a combined 3-11 record. Head coach Jane Batson cited inexperience as a key factor.

This year, however, Batson has combined those veterans of the past season with some impressive freshman to form what appears to be an impressive squad. The team is currently 1-1 with an excellent performance at the Methodist College Invitational Tournament.

At the tournament, the normal six flights of singles and three in doubles were conducted. UNCW's Debbie Goulding reached the semi-finals in the top flight before being beaten by one of the top tennis players in the area. Carolyn Bender won the consolation round in her sixth flight at the tournament.

The Seahawks' first dual match was against Campbell College, which the team lost 9-0. "We just weren't mentally ready," said Batson. This was proved when the team downed Atlantic Christian 9-0 a few days later.

This week, the team plays Campbell away on Wednesday ("We're ready for them," says Batson) and Atlantic Christian here on Friday. Game time is 3:00.

The current number one seed is Debbie Goulding. Other seeded players, in order, are Teresa Hege, Brenda Kalivas, Theresa Reaves, Kim Canter, and Lowrey Sorenson. The team does have some depth, however, and Batson said she felt the seedings would change before the season ended, especially in the lower three slots.

Doubles pairings this week are Goulding-Reaves, Kale-vas-Hege, and Sorenson-Canter.

In a change this year, the team will play all their games in the fall, which is something Coach Batson has wanted.

In a change this year, the team will play all their games in the fall, which is something Coach Batson has wanted for years. "Having a spring schedule along with a fall one was bad," she said. "We lost all our enthusiasm and spirit between seasons."

Kill That Violent *!#/?!##!

I just got through reading the article about the football club's visit to Richmond, and to say I'm appalled is putting it mildly.

A lot of people say there is no violence in football. To those, I just ask them to look at this game. 165 yards in personal fouls and three players ejected! A player swings at his own coach! That is not excessive roughness; that is violence!

Now before I go any further, let me say I'm not trying to make football two-hand touch. Football was meant to be rough, and it should be. As I said before, though, there is a difference between roughness and violence.

This past weekend, I saw some replays of a football player named George Atkinson.

In one play, Atkinson deliberately leveled a forearm to the back of wide receiver Lynn Swann's head, taking him out for the season. In another, Atkinson threw a fist into the face of Russ Francis, breaking his nose. Let me add that these were not provoked attacks, but attempts on the part of Atkinson to "guard his man."

There's no excuse for this type of play. People like Atkinson, should be banned from the game and brought up on criminal charges.

Unfortunately, it appears as if the club football players at Virginia Commonwealth University have adopted George Atkinson as their hero. I'll bet they could make first team on Burt Reynolds's "Longest Yard" squad.

Volleyball Looks to Continue Winning Trend

Once again, it appears that UNCW will have an outstanding women's volleyball team, a tradition which dates back several years.

At this writing the She-hawks are 1-1, with three games scheduled for this week, all on the road.

The women's first game was Monday a week ago when they faced Peace and Meredith Colleges in a tri-match. Though both schools, which have outstanding volleyball programs, beat UNCW, all the matches were very close. Peace downed the Hawks 15-10, 15-11, and Meredith beat them 15-10, 13-15, 15-11. (In volleyball, a game decided by four points or less is considered close.)

Last Tuesday, the Wilmington team met N.C. Wesleyan and St. Andrews in a tri-match in Hanover Hall, and downed both schools with little trouble. Wesleyan was beaten 15-7, 15-

9, and St. Andrews was downed 15-1, 1-15, 15-5. (Editor's Note: Some explanation should be made of this unusual score. Due to the one-sidedness of the score, UNCW coach Ann Kraft put all her new players into the game. After the lopsidedness of that score, Kraft then put back in her original line-up.) Kraft felt the squad's successes have been a team effort. She singled out captain

Betsy Massauri, though, as a key factor. "Her serving really helped us," she said, "and she was really hustling."

Yesterday, the She-hawks traveled to Louisville, which last year was ranked fifth in the nation among junior colleges. Tomorrow they travel to Durham to face N.C. Central and Elon, and Saturday the team visits Conway, S.C., when they face USC Conway, Benedict College, and Furman in a quad-match.

Golfers Open Season

WILMINGTON—The University of North Carolina at Wilmington golf team, under first-year coach David Royce, opened its fall campaign last weekend in the prestigious James Madison University Invitational in Harrisonburg, VA.

The three-day, 54-hole tournament began Friday and lists Maryland, North Carolina, Virginia Tech, Richmond, UNC-Charlotte, and William and Mary among its entrants.

The Seahawks are inexperienced, having lost five of last year's top seven players, but Coach Royce is anxious to see his youngsters in competition.

"We are young, but eager," Royce says. "This tournament is one of the best events in this part of the country and will be an excellent opportunity for our players to gain valuable experience."

Fishing for Help

The Seahawk sports staff is planning an article about U NCW's fishing club. Anybody who has information about the club should leave their name at the Seahawk office upstairs in the Pub.

Silver Spring Trio Shine for UNCW

Two years ago they were together on a state championship soccer team in Silver Spring, Md.

Today, they are still together, and still winning soccer games—this time, though, for the University of North Carolina at Wilmington Seahawks, currently the fifth-ranked team in the South.

They are Gil Castilla, Tim Gribbin, and Edwin (Chi Chi) Mercado, three talented players, who have each, in their own way, contributed to the success that the UNCW program has enjoyed this fall. Success in the form of defeating top-ranked teams North Carolina and Rollins on successive weekends, and an overall 5-2 record.

Coach Calvin Lane, who recruited the trio out of Montgomery Blair High in Silver Spring, is understandably proud of the threesome.

"With Gil, Tim and Chi Chi, who are just sophomores," he says, "we have a solid nucleus for our team for the next two years. The boys are happy here and are certainly all positive examples of our soccer program."

Castilla, of the three, is the most dynamic. The squad's leading scorer in 1976 and once again this season, he performs with a flare and fervor all his own.

An intense competitor, Castilla has scored or assisted in every Seahawk game since the season opener. Through six contests, his totals reached eight goals and three assists for 19 points.

Gribbin, like Castilla, is a two-year starter at UNCW. Assigned to the fullback position, his role does not receive the fans' attentions as do the offensive plays of his teammates. But Coach Lane realizes the importance of a dependable back and inserts the extremely fast youngster at that position for a purpose.

Mercado, on the other hand, is a true crowd favorite and pleaser. Shouts of "Chi Chi, Chi Chi" pierce the air whenever the quick-footer Mercado is even near the ball.

Hampered much of 1977 with a knee injury, Mercado has come on to rank third on the club in scoring with three goals and a like number of assists. Though he is presently playing at wing, Lane hopes to move Mercado to halfback soon, where he can better utilize his quickness and excellent ball control.

"All three of these fellows are good players," their coach points out, "but even more importantly, they are fire young men. I look forward to having them at UNCW for two more years."

Seahawk opponents might not feel the same.

Professor Richard Steen Featured in Concert at Kenan Next Week

Richard Steen, baritone, will perform a concert of art songs in Kenan Auditorium on Monday, October 10, at 8:00 p.m. Mr. Terry Wallstein, a composer and pianist from New York City, will accompany Mr. Steen at the piano.

The program features selections from Robert Schumann's "Liederkreis," Opus 39, sung in German, settings of poems by the late romantic, Joseph Eichendorff, depicting moods of love and the mysteries of nature.

Steen will begin the concert with Italian art songs of baroque composers Giovanni Bononcini and Giuseppe Torelli.

rose, upon awaking in the morning, shall glow with the rapture of the night!"

The recital will conclude with a group of highly contrasted songs by the twentieth century American composers Charles Ives and Aaron Copland. Among these, a song titled "The Indians," composed in 1921 to words of Charles Sprague, displays remarkable sagacity for its time as it laments the plight of the American Indians, who with the coming of the pale man's plough and axe and sail, go to meet their fateful death beyond the mountains of this west. Juxtaposed with this university, Steen studied voice in New York City, while performing oratorios, opera and a solo concert at Carnegie Recital Hall. Of his New York recital debut, New York Times reviewer Joseph Horowitz writes, "Richard Steen is a singer of obvious intelligence and musicality. He possesses a light but resonant, well equalized baritone with a bright, open top of considerable beauty. The major work on Mr. Steen's program, Schumann's "Liederkreis", Op. 39 (Eichendorff), was nicely sung and conscientiously interpreted."

This past summer Mr. Steen

hoined a 'scena-fantasy in the form of a practice session' that incorporates texts from 'Bartlett's Familiar Quotations' along with a smattering of vocal exercises. It is a likeable idea, and Mr. Wallstein has handled it with wit and imagination." Mr. Wallstein resides in New York City where he has taught on the faculties of the New School, the Ethical Culture Society, and St. Bernard's School.

Monday evening's concert is sponsored by the UNCW Music Department and is open to the public with free admission.

Rendered in French, Steen will also sing the hauntingly beautiful and lyric "L'Invitation au Voyage" with text by the famous poet Charles Baudelaire, and "Phidyle," well known songs by Henri Duparc, a late nineteenth century composer, unheralded in our times as he destroyed most of his life's musical output prior to his death excepting some fourteen songs which are regarded as musical gems.

The program includes other German Lieder by composer Richard Strauss. In the humorous song "Nichts!," translated "Nothing!," the title suggests a flippant retort to the query, "What do we know of the sun as the source of all life, and all light?" while Strauss' ecstatic "Staendchen" (Serenade) depicts a young romantic's overtures that his love may "fly away quickly to their tryst in the garden below where the powerful statement, are songs of humor and patriotism which demonstrate varied aspects of Ives' creative capacity, who as a mere amateur musician (by profession he headed an insurance company), has gained recognitions as one of America's greatest composers. The American selections will be climaxed by the singing of a lovely ballad and a rousing minstrel song composed by Aaron Copland.

Performer, Richard Steen, is an Assistant Professor of Music at UNCW where he teaches voice and directs the university's Concert Choir. Mr. Steen earned his Bachelor of Arts degree from Saint Olaf College and Master of Musical Arts degree from the Yale School of Music where he is presently a candidate for the Doctor of Musical Arts degree.

This past year, while on leave of absence from the appeared as a soloist with the Detroit Symphony Orchestra at the Meade Festival in two performances of Penderecki's "Magnificat" with the composer conducting.

Mr. Terry Wallstein holds Harvard's B.A. and M.A. (Composition) degrees, where he was granted the Paine Traveling Fellowship for study abroad. Among several of Wallstein's recent compositions performed in New York was the premiere of the work "Bartlett's, on Singing," performed by Mr. Steen on his Carnegie recital. The New York Times review stated, "Mr. Wallstein has fas-

Tuition hike fought in court

By Campus Digest News Service Nearly everyone is tired of constant tuition hikes. And now some students are doing something about it.

Recently, the Medical School at Northwestern University hiked its 1977-78 tuition by 87.6 per cent-to $6,855.

The faculty protested. The university ignored them.

Now the students have taken a hand-in a unique way. They had hauled their alma mater into court.

A group of 284 second and third-year students, already burdened with a $4,350 tuition, the third highest in the country, filed suit in Illinois circuit court. They say the increase is too high and should be reduced to around 10 per cent, the average for the past few years.

One student said, "The medical school is doing what the public accuses doctors of doing-overcharging."

Northwestern officials say the increase is necessary to free itself from dependence upon government funding. But the students-who, incidentally, really cannot leave, since medical school transfers are not often accepted-say the public will ultimately foot the bill anyway. According to a med student name Michael Miles: "Increased tuition fees increase the pressure on young physicians to raise money."

The court's response is uncertain. But whatever it is, the resort to court is apparent catching on among med students. A similar lawsuit filed last February against the New Jersey College of Medicine and Dentistry is still pending.

Faculty Salaries Keep Pace

By Campus Digest News Service If students have little to be happy about, at least the faculty might be able to muster up a cheer or two. For the first year since 1974, faculty salaries at colleges and universities have kept pace with the cost of living. The American Association of University Professors (AAUP), has completed its annual survey of faculty earnings. It reports that total compensation (salary plus fringe benefits) increased by 5.8 per cent-which happens to be precisely the jump last year in the consumer price index.

ing" of a table is a very expensive proposition and the people who do it are usually called in from Raleigh or Fayetteville.) Once moved into the old bookstore there should be no need for further movement of these tables.

Whaley indicated that she would like to see at least part of the game room used to expand the food service area of the pub. Her plan would be to place a movable wall in the center of the present room. The front portion would effectively become part of the Good Wood Tavern. The back portion would house the ping-pong tables. For concerts, the ping pong and eating tables would be removed, the wall pushed aside, and the entire space used for the show.

In order to give students a more comfortable place to relax, the president would also like to remodel the present lobby area of the Pub. She envisions a carpeted area with nice furniture and good music. All this she says will help "turn the lobby into a real lounge."

Another plan Karin would like to pursue would be to enclose the area at the top of the stairs in the pub to make a small conference room. This room could be used for finance committee meetings and other such activities requiring only a small space.

President Whaley expressed satisfaction that the students had received a fair deal with regards to the bookstore space. Though disappointed that some of the space will be used for offices, she admitted that the move would clear the way for use of state money on renovating the pub.

"There is absolutely no way they can say 'you can't use those funds,'" she stated, referring to the money the state set aside for "the creation of administrative offices."

The Office of Continuing Education, which may have also been placed in the student union, will be placed in the biology study room in Hoggard Hall. Whaley was the first to suggest such a move.

Before presenting a new plan for the consideration of Dr. Malloy, Karin would like to hear from students about her plans or alternative proposals and any interested students are urged to contact her in the SGA office on weekdays between 2 and 4 p.m.

Nina Kahle Produces Lyrical Emotions

Overcoming a brief loneliness caused by the meager turnout of students, Nina Kahle sat down at the piano and gave an excellent performance Tuesday, September 27, for the faithful few.

Not to be frustrated, she touched the keys to produce songs full of instrumental emphasis and lyrical emotion.

In her own world now, she then expressed her thoughts with a voice that rose in tonal beauty and fell to spoken words, only to gather momentum again as she gently obtained the greatest possible impact with every word.

The piano sang imaginative melodies as her fingers guided its tongue through the hills and valleys of its emotions. A beautiful couple.

Their closeness was especially apparent in "You Use To Take Me To Town," a lament about a guy who keeps his girlfriend hanging on while he goes out and fools around with other women, and "Gypsy," a story about a spry old Hungarian grandmother who teaches her granddaughter the folk dances from the old country.

Nina also played several songs on dulcimer and guitar with equal energy as on the piano, but her piano tunes were considerably better.

Missoula, Montana is where Nina finds her husband and daughter waiting for her when she gets off the road for a rest.

The town, whose main industry is a lumber mill, is only ten minutes from the Rocky Mountain wilderness where Nina finds solitude at one of her favorite places, Flathead Lake, a crystal clear body of water, which admits to the purity of Nature.

But Nina also has a special love in her heart for the big cities because she appreciates the creativity and inspiration that can be found in them.

From all this and more, Nina Kahle is one woman and one voice that I am glad to have met.

The Carpenters: PASSAGE to Adventure

Have you noticed how the Carpenters haven't been on the radio lately? It used to be that they'd no sooner have one than another would be blowing at its heels. The son behind the Carpenters' success is not that they have released any records. Their singles have been coming out, but they no longer put it into the Top Forty. The lack of success has finally shed Karen and Richard Carpenters trying something new. It's bad they hadn't started a few years earlier. Without even playing the record you can tell a change has come over the Carpenters. There is no picture of the Carpenters smiling to be found on the entire cover. As a matter of fact, there is not a single picture on the whole album. Instead the cover has some fancy artwork with colored notes blurring together. Inside are lyrics, historical notes, and liner notes. Somewhat different from past releases.

A greater change can be found once you play the record. The "wall of sound" is still present, but it's not all the Carpenters. Even their trademark, "overdubbing" has been replaced with outside singers; a whole choir in a couple of cases. Also there is some different sounds present.

Closing either side of PASSAGE is a long number that is done with full production. With "Don't Cry For Me Argentina" the Carpenters make their entry into the rock opera EVITA follies. Unfortunately this tune has been done already by quite a number of artists.

An excerpt, "On The Balcony Of The Casa Rosada", precedes the number, but only drags out things. The same sort of thing mars the start of "Calling Occupants".

This Klastu tune begins with Carpenter guitarist Tony Peluso playing a dj. While trying to get a plover to make a request: Peluso is confronted with some extraterrestrial visitors. You might recall a sort of similar routine of NOW AND THEN. Like that album the routine is fine the first time, but can be disturbing when heard repeatedly. It is the type of thing that should be left to shows not records. The tune itself is a fine cut though releasing it as a single is a bad idea.

Another problem: with some of the tunes is that Karen's voice just doesn't sound right with the material. With "I Wanna Be Like You" and "Man Smart, Woman Smarter" Karen's middle-class voice doesn't fit the native settings. What she really does well is the ballads like "I Just Fall In Love Again." There must be other forms of music that her voice could fit, but this album doesn't really have any.

Still the Carpenters are to be admitted for at least trying some new things. In this day and age it is all too tempting to repeat a musical style once it is successful. If the Carpenters continue experimenting they are bound to break out of their old role and into something new.

Cinema '77 Series Features Excellent Films

Cinema 77 will offer six excellent films this fall. This is a wonderful way to complement your Saturday nights in the air-conditioned comfort of King Auditorium. Drs. Terry Rogers of UNCW's Drama & Speech department and Dennis Robbins of the Philosophy & Religion department are offering this program. The membership cost for the entire six-film series is $10.00. Guests accompanied by members may attend for $2.00 per film. Unaccompanied guests must pay $2.50 for each film.

The Films for Cinema 77 will be:

'October 8: Francois Truffaut's "Jules and Jim". Although the film evokes the romantic nostalgia before WWII, it exquisitely illuminates a modern woman.

October 15: Claude Goretta's "The Invitation". A fine delicately realized Swiss comedy which appears to be a harmless office party that begins idyllically and goes to pieces.

October 22: Alec Guinness in "Kind Hearts and Coronets". A blue-ribbon British comedy filled with wit, irony and impudent fun.

November 12: Ingmar Bergman's "The Virgin Spring". "The Virgin Spring" grimly depicts a father's ruthless vengeance for the rape and murder of his virgin daughter.

December 3: Marcel Camus' "Black Opheus". Considered one of the most beautiful films ever made, it retells the legend of Orpheus and Eurydice in a modern setting.

December 17: Jean Renoir's "Rules of the Game". This film frankly delineates the erotic charades of the French leisure class before WWII.

Membership fee may be paid and Registration from obtained at the Office of Continuing Education. A total of 80 paid memberships must be received in order to proceed with the program. Respond quickly. Let's make this series a success.

Ping Performs

October 9, Sunday at 4 p.m. Nancy R. Ping will have a recital of virginal music at the First Presbyterian Church (small chapel) in Wilmington.

Sanford and Townsend are Late Comers to World of Music

The dreams of the countless would-be rock stars who flood Los Angeles every year more often than not turn into nightmares of despair. Many are stalled; few chosen. But Ed Sanford and John Townsend took on the gamble and proved more than equal to the task. Witness Exhibit A-1: their Warners debut, SMOKE FROM A DISTANT FIRE.

No proteges, they took up music rather late. Ed was halfway through Auburn University studying graphic design, when the muse struck: John joined a band late in high school. R & B was the dominating influence in both their lives, with Wilson Pickett, Allen Toussaint, Bobby "Blue" Bland, and Ben E. King among those creating the biggest impact.

They migrated to L.A. several years ago each with the belief that, while musical careers weren't as plentiful as oranges in Southern Cal, it was at least better than sitting around the Yellowhammer State wishing somebody would build a recording studio. Each had headed popular local bands at home and when Ed arrived on the West Coast, he brought his group along, minus its lead singer. Townsend, who came out to visit "musician friends" (a good rationale for his real intent), wound up filling the lead vocal post. It wasn't long, though, before the group returned to the South, leaving our heroes to fend for themselves in L.A.'s musician-strewn expanse.

Sanford for a time worked with Larry Sims and Merle Bregante, who later teamed up with Loggins & Messina, while Townsend got some moderate chart action as a member of Feather, on Columbia. When those groupings collapsed, the band business had begun to seem a fruitless road, so they opted out of the performing scene and switched to songwriting.

There followed some lean times but also clear signs that the partnership would pay off.

Confirmation came when they landed a staff writing slot with Chappell Music. In quick succession they won first place (out of 60,000 entries) in the professional rock division of the 1974 American Song Festival with "Oriental Gate" (written with Kenny Loggins) and 2) made the semi and quarter finals at the 1975 American Song Festival with two songs "Squire James" and "In For The Night" (both, like "Oriental Gate," appear on SMOKE FROM A DISTANT FIRE. By 1976 artists such as Loggins and Messina, Nigel Olsson, and Bernie Taupin were recording Sanford-Townsend material.

The lyrical policy of the band is one of "cautious optimism," a perspective that is immediate without revealing everything.

The years of Sanford-Townsend teamwork have forged a songwriting bond of uncommon wit and facility. "Writing is the easiest part of what we do," says Sanford. "We both have ideas constantly."

Those ideas flowed freely in the Muscle Shoals studios where SMOKE FROM A DISTANT FIRE was created. Jerry Wexler produced, along with Muscle Shoals keyboard man Barry Beckett. This was a pairing in keeping with Sanford and Townsend's R & B background. "We cut our teeth on that early Wexler stuff—Ray Charles, The Drifters," says Townsend. "He knows all the tricks."

The two have developed a sound reminiscent of really no one. Songs such as "Moola Moo Mazuma" ("three ways to say 'money'") and "Shake It To The Right" show a gripping degree of sophistication rarely achieved with debut efforts.

The album also spawned the "overnight" smash single "Smoke From A Distant Fire," a song which first hit the charts nearly a year after the album's initial release.

The future has never looked brighter for Ed Sanford and John Townsend, who filled in their datebooks for the Summer and Fall of '77 touring with Fleetwood Mac and Dave Mason, all the while watching "Smoke From A Distant Fire" rise higher and higher.

ter, initially studied the arts in Northwestern universities for two years concentrating on short story writing, aimed towards childrens books and illustration. The blonde younger sister joined HEART after Ann did, at a time when the group first began achieving some recognition. Already proficient on the acoustic guitar when she became a part of HEART, she has played electric guitar as well as contributing vocals to the band. Her musical tastes often lean toward a more classical style.

Roger Fisher was one of the founding members of HEART. He is the band's lead guitarist, providing the powerful soaring riffs for the heavier songs, as well as the subtle nuances for the more delicate material. Since the first album Roger has contributed significantly to the composing of numerous songs recorded by the group. Roger and Steve Fossen have been performing in various bands together since they were both teenagers in Seattle. HEART is the culmination of their 11 years of musical experience together.

Roger, when he isn't working with the band, is often trying new innovations and designing new instruments. Among them is the "Zohn," an electronic, guitar-like instrument designed to uniquely capture the acoustic sound.

Steve Fossen, another notable member of HEART, is a PART-TIME HELP WANTED: call Sports World of Wilmington 791-6000 of Seattle, is HEART's talented bass player. As a youngster, he studied the trumpet and the guitar. When he attended Shoreline Community College in Seattle, he majored in music. However, when he and Roger began making names for themselves as local musicians, Steve gave up any additional theoretical training, choosing instead the practical application of what he had already learned.

Michael Derosier joined HEART in 1975. As the group's percussionist, he had studied music through college and was the recipient of two music scholarships. He credits Joe Morello and Buddy Rich as the major influences on his style, which he refined while playing with many regional groups. Less than two weeks after joining HEART, he performed his first major concert appearance. In his leisure time Michael pursues his love for classic sport cars.

Howard Leese, a keyboard and guitar specialist, is the most recent addition to HEART. He was born in Los Angeles and studied music at Los Angeles City College. He moved to Vancouver B.C. at age 19, quickly earning a reputation as one of the West Coast's most talented studio musicians. A close friend of producer Michael Flicker, Howard was asked to perform as a musician on HEART's debut album. Shortly thereafter he became a member of the group and he now also composes and conducts the band's string arrangements.

The members of the band, originally from the West Coast of the United States, formed the group in Vancouver B.C. in 1972 and were based there for over four years. When they found themselves touring more in the U.S. than in Canada, they returned to the States, making Seattle their home. They feel a special closeness for Canada since it was there that much significant musical experience was gained which helped them a great deal with their careers. HEART is a tight-knit group, much in demand on the touring circuit in the U.S. and abroad.

In 1976, HEART spent 10 months on the road, playing 150 dates with groups like the Beach Boys, Loggins and Messina, Jefferson Starship and the Doobie Brothers. But now that the band has assumed the role as a major rock group in its own right, it is now headlining its concert appearances. And as its record sales continue to soar, the "Sold Out" signs are becoming as much a part of HEART concerts as is the dynamic music. The concert is Tuesday, October 11, in Brogden Hall. Tickets are on sale in the Pub Monday through Friday from 10-2. They can also be bought at Record World, Pony Express, McGrath's, Atlantis Sound Company, Sweet Country Frozen Yogurt, and WGNI Radio.

English Club Seeking Stories

The UNCW English Club requests any suspense or horror short stories to be submitted to the English Department no later than Wednesday, October 19.

These horror stories will be published in the "Apparition." This publication is specifically for Halloween and will be distributed on October 31. All stories will be appreciated.

If there are any questions, please call Bill Rapp at 799-2500.

Atlantis, the UNCW literary magazine, will be holding an organizational meeting Thursday, October 6, at 11:30 in the Seahawk office (upstairs in the Pub).

Anyone interested in working with the Atlantis, regardless of major, in the short story, poetry, or art areas is invited and needed.

If you cannot attend the meeting, leave your name, Number, and area of preference with the English Department or call Bill Rapp at 799-2500. Your participation will be appreciated.

Democrats to Discuss Projects

The Young Democrats will hold a meeting Wednesday, Oct. 5, at 4:30 in room H-227. Current projects and plans for forthcoming ventures will be discussed.

Young Democrats have already sponsored an All-Party Night in which guests spoke on the proposed constitutional amendments and on the bond issues that will be up for a vote on November 8.

All Young Democrats are invited and encouraged to attend so that we may plan our future endeavors.

ICC Strives to Improve Cooperation was requested to send one representative to the meetings (not necessarily the same one each time). Average attendance was around twenty-five, according to the current council president Greta Lint.

Ms. Lint said that the Council is again in danger of extinction because of declining interest. Presently, only seven of the thirty-four clubs on campus are represented. Of the seven, 3-4 people came to the first meeting of the year.

Without participation, the Council will not be able to fulfill its function as a liaison between the College Administration, the SGA and the various clubs, nor will it be able to conduct its major project—making floats for the Homecoming Parade. Without floats there will be no parade.

Ms. Lint said that this reflects directly on the clubs: "They don't have the initiative!"

Republicans Begin Planning for Convention

Convention time is upon us! The UNCW College Republican is preparing for the fall convention of the North Carolina Federation of College Republicans. At this convention the N.C.F.C.R. will adopt its 1977 platform. This year's gathering should feature such important issues as the American canal in Panama, National health insurance, and a permanent federal tax cut.

UNCW's delegation to the state convention will be determined by signed membership cards. These cards must be turned in immediately! Therefore, all C.R.'s and prospective C.R.'s should attend tomorrow night's meeting in Room 218 of the Chemistry building. Plans for the convention will be discussed and light refreshments served. Y'all come and bring a friend.

Local Fraternity Becomes National Chapter

— This past Friday, Sept. 30 the local fraternity Un Kappa Fifth officially became the Gamme Zeta Chapter of the Chi Phi Fraternity.

The Un Kappa Fifth Fraternity was started in 1975 and has been very active in campus and community functions. Now as Chi Phi the fraternity will have the national backing to expand their activities on campus.

Initiations took place at the state's two other chapters at Chapel Hill and University of North Carolina at Charlotte.

Those initiated at Chapel Hill were Willie Daniels, Chip

Plyler, Dan Allen, Hobbie Greene, Al Ludlum, Tommy Williams, and Neil Murphy.

Those initiated at UNC: Charlotte were Dave Davis, Mark Sanchez, Kent Sink, and Tom Hunt.

Initiated this summer at the Chi Phi National Congress in Miami Beach, Florida, was Greg Larrimore.

Two charter members not able to be initiated due to problems at that time were Mike Birkhead and Don Smith.

New Members in Rowing Club

The Rowing Club acquired two new members for the meeting on Wednesday, Sept. 28. This brings membership up to thirty. All members are involved in rowing or in the process of learning the techniques.

The team has been practicing every morning—getting on the water sometimes before eight. Sore muscles and many blisters are not uncommon.

The Rowing Club is in the process of requesting an allocation of approximately $2,000 from the SGA. This amount is desperately needed for new oars and a coach boat. New members are still more than welcome.

WHY IS SIGLINDA STEINFÜLLER DEAN OF BEER? WHY NOT?

Fellow Beer Persons,

Life is full of unanswered questions such as: Is there intelligent life elsewhere in the universe? And if so, do they wear socks?

In beer, however, there are no unanswered questions. Because there is only one word for beer, and you know it.
Schlitz.

Therefore, as your Dean of Beer, I suggest you research the essential rightness of the word for yourself at your next social function. Or even your next antisocial function.

And please note: The recommended source material for locating the word can be found in any phone booth. In other words, look in the Yellow Pages. Under "Beer."

Thank you.

THERE'S JUST ONE WORD FOR BEER.

Associate Editor Bill Rapp Discusses Atlantis

By Betty Salyer

The Atlantis is a literary magazine put out completely by UNCW students. It is published twice a year along with the Atlantis calendar, which is printed at the beginning of every year.

I talked with Bill Rapp, the associate editor of the Atlantis, to get some detailed information on the magazine for interested students.

The Atlantis is made up of short stories (prose), poetry, and art. Bill stresses the fact that any student, regardless of year or major, may submit articles to the magazine. Also, any student may be on the Atlantis staff. The staff consists of an editor, an associate editor, with an editor for each prose, poetry and art staffs. Any student is eligible, at the end of the school year, for the editorship of the Atlantis for the upcoming year.

Bill very patiently explained to me the process of selecting the entries for the Atlantis. The entries are submitted to the particular staffs anonymously, for obvious reasons, and are then placed into categories of poor, average, good, and excellent by the staff of students. (The submissions are judged solely on the merit of the work itself.)

The editors compile the staff's ratings and recommendations on a main chart revealing the best works. Bill says,

"The art, prose and poetry quota is filled with the best of the recommended works, fitting into the magazine, thus making an integrated work that is representative of the students' submissions."

There is a meeting for anyone interested in working on any staff on Thursday, October 6 at 11:30 in the Seahawk office (upstairs in the Pub.)

Bill stresses that "This is a good way to become involved in the literary trend on the campus and sharpen literacy and organizational skills."

Committee Chairman Must Give Reports

All standing committees of the SGA will be required to report to the Student Senate at least once each month. Vice-President Ken Lilly is preparing a schedule to arrange for two of the eight committees to be represented at each meeting.

Chairmen of these standing committees should sign up in the SGA office so this schedule can be arranged to accommodate each committee.

Legal Aid

By E.J. DEMSON, J.D.

Families are often split up in today's mobile society, and a minor child may go on his own. But until a minor becomes legally emancipated, his or her bills are still the responsibility of the parents.

Q. We live in Arkansas and last year our 15-year-old daughter went to live with a family in Indiana. A 19-year-old son in that family got our daughter pregnant. She had a miscarriage after three months, and the hospital bills were high.

Now the hospital's lawyer is demanding that I pay the bills. All this happened in Indiana, and we didn't know anything about it until it was all over. Neither my wife nor I signed any releases or permissions. Can I be forced to pay these bills?

A. The boy said he would marry our daughter, but he's changed his mind.

A. Since your daughter is a minor child living in Indiana with parental permission, her parents are responsible for her debts. It is the law in all states that the parent has the duty to control, protect and support the child (Am. Jur. 2d Parent and Child Sec. 1-13, 46.99, 88-106).

If you are required to pay this hospital bill, you have the right to sue the 19-year-old man to recover the amount you paid, plus expenses. You may also include in your suit any damages he may have caused your daughter. The suit is filed for her in your name.

Q. I'm having severe financial difficulties. My take-home pay is only $138 a week, and my debt payments are nearly $180 a month. I feel the only way out may be bankruptcy. I'm supporting a teen-ager and myself on this salary, with no other income.

What I want to know is, can I avoid losing my bank job and my personal property if I take bankruptcy? I have four rooms of furniture and a 1964 automobile. Losing them would make me worse off than I am now.

Too much pressure, too many years. Can you help me?

A. The law affords you the benefit of voluntary bankruptcy filed in the federal court if you are financially unable to meet your previously made obligations (108 U.S. 66).

You may also file under the wage earners' section of the bankruptcy law. This stops all your creditors from garnishment and repossession of your personal items. In this arrangement, the referee in bankruptcy appoints a committee of your creditors to work out a monthly payment plan until your debts are paid (Bankruptcy Act, Sec. 601).

Talk with the credit manager of one of your creditors. He will advise you.

Q. Can my son sue his father, who ran a red light and caused a collision which crippled the boy for life? We need the money from the insurance company for doctor bills, and we're told a suit is necessary to collect.

A. In your state, Florida (237 So. 2d 142), lawsuits to collect damages for torts (wrongs) are not allowed among members of the same family. Spouses may not sue each other, nor children their parents.

Whaley Supports Senate

Atlantis Circulates Petition

By Bobby Parker

Controversy surrounding the student literary magazine, the Atlantis, resurfaced this week with the circulation of a petition to request that the Student Senate provide funding for Atlantis beyond the fall semester. The Senate had previously allocated $1750 to the magazine to be used for a fall issue while stipulating that any further funding would come after the fall issue is published and a student referendum in the matter is conducted.

Atlantis Associate Editor Bill Rapp appeared before the Senate last Thursday night to ask that money be allocated now for a spring issue and to answer questions from the Senate. The Senate voted against a motion to refer the motion to the Finance Committee, and no other action was taken.

SGA Treasurer Paul O'Bryen said Monday that there is $2000 in SGA funds set aside in the event the Senate decides to reallocate money for a spring Atlantis. The money has not been included in figures of unencumbered funds this year, and it will be readily available for the Atlantis should the Senate decide to approve the reallocation.

Senators have alleged that the Atlantis is not popular among the student body to a degree that warrants a significant spending amounts of SGA funds in the magazine. They also cited that improvements should be made in the content and diversity of material published in Atlantis. Prose, poetry, and artwork in Atlantis have been described as "morbid" and pertaining to the same general subjects by some senators.

At last year's budget hearings, the Senate refused to eliminate Atlantis outright from the budget, instead voting to fund a fall issue and hold the student referendum for advice on where to go from there. The referendum will not be a binding decision, but is hoped that it will give the senators a general opinion from the student body.

Atlantis staff members have countered that they have no control as to what stories or poems are submitted, and that these works are judged without bias to select the best ones for publication. They also note that they do not fully understand the reasons or possible consequences of the Senate action.

The Atlantis staff has expressed concern that any reduction in funding would severely hamper publishing a magazine of the caliber of recent issues. Charges that the

Who's Who Deadline

Extended to October 14

The deadline for nominations to the 1977-78 "Who's Who Among Students in American Universities and Colleges" has been extended to October 14, 1977. This is a result of only receiving 11 nominations by the original deadline of October 5.

UNCW has been granted a quota of 45 nominations. If more than that are received, the nominations will be sent to a screening board, which is a sub-committee of the Student Affairs, for final selection based on overall merit.

The basic guidelines for selection are:

1. At the time of nomination a student must have attained at least junior standing and an overall G.P.A. of at least 2.5.

2. A person may be nominated only once as a junior and once as a senior.

3. Nominations may be made by all faculty members and students. (Students may nominate themselves.)

4. Nominees should preferably be upper classmen whose academic standing, participation and community service are decidedly above average.

Each name submitted should be accompanied by a brief biographical sketch emphasizing especially the qualifications of leadership, scholarship and service.

Nomination forms are available in the Office of Student Affairs (A113).

VICE - S*E*X Host "Wrong Show" in Search for Talent

By Ray Warren

Last year the "Gong Show" was one of the entertainment highlights of the school year. This year's "Wrong Show", sponsored by the Society of Enterprising Xenophiles (S*E*X) and the Video Incorporated Campus Entertainment committee (V.I.C.E. squad), could be even bigger, however, as one talented student could be launched on a national entertainment career.

Although sponsored by S*E*X and V.I.C.E., this year's program will not be a stage show, but an official part of the "Bob Hope Search for Top College Talent." This nationwide competition is sponsored by Mr. Hope and New Mexico State University and is endorsed by the National Entertainment and Campus Activities Association.

The contest will consist of a campus competition (the "Wrong Show"), a state competition (also to be held at UNCW), and national competition. Hope will select eight to ten finalists to appear on a nationally televised special in 1978.

The purpose of the "Wrong Show" is to select an act to represent UNCW at the State-wide competition which will be held here in November. Linda Moore, Director of Student Activities, reports that "all the standard gags and jokes" will still be presented, but that this year's show "will have a different dimension than last year's due to the search for talent."

Students wishing to enter an act in the Wrong Show should fill out an entry form and return it to the S*E*X mailbox in the Pub. (This box is near the candy machine). The forms may be obtained around campus on bulletin boards, from

Ms. Moore, or from any S*E*X member. Students who are under professional entertainment contracts, who derive over 50 per cent of their income from any field of performing entertainment, or who perform under an assumed name are not eligible.

The Wrong Show will be held October 20 in Kenan Auditorium at 8:00 p.m. Admission charge will be 50 cents. Entry forms should be in by Monday, October 17. Any type of act—dance, drama, comedy, etc.—is allowed, so get your act together and there is no way to go "Wrong"!

Students Should Support Atlantis in Petition Drive

The controversy over the Atlantis continues to swell this week with the circulation of a petition to request that the Student Senate continue to fund the student literary magazine. It is our position that UNCW students should find a copy of that petition and sign their names in support of a campus literary tradition.

The Senate has acted with haste on the matter of Atlantis' budget. There is little foundation for their arguments that the magazine is not well-read throughout our university community.

Atlantis staff members have been frustrated in their attempts to find out exactly what the Senate would have them do to improve the magazine. The Senate's proposal to have the question of funding for Atlantis put to a student referendum is just short of ridiculous. If the senators feel that Atlantis should be axed, let them do it and bear the responsibility. A referendum would be a poor representation of student sentiment anyway since less than 10 per cent would probably vote.

With this petition, those students who want a quality literary magazine on this campus have a chance to send that message to the Senate. The more signatures, the louder the message.

Go find a petition and sign it.

Renovation Plans for Pub Labelled as Unnecessary

To The Editor:

In both the Sept. 14 and Oct. 5 issues of this paper SGA President Karin Whaley's plan to "redecorate" the student union has been presented. I feel that it is my duty to speak out for the silent majority of students who make use of the Pub's recreational facilities:

We don't want it changed!

Ms. Whaley cited student complaints about the "pool hall" atmosphere. Obviously, neither Ms. Whaley nor her anonymous remonstrants have frequented one of our local billiards parlors with their dimly-lit tables, stuffy smoke-filled rooms and belligerent drunks.

Conversely, the Pub's game room is a large, freshly-painted sunlit room whose major drawback is its over-population of flies.

Pool and ping-pong require a relatively large sized playing area. President Whaley plans to jam the pool tables in the inadequate space provided when the school store is vacated. The ping-pong tables, however, will be allotted approximately one half of the space in the present game room--an unnecessary amount. Furthermore, the pool tables are to be located directly next to a Counseling and Testing Office (which may decide to take the entire store). The disturbance created will not be conducive to good testing or counseling.

Could it be that Ms. Whaley just doesn't like pool (because she has a stereotype of the individual who plays it) and could care less where the tables go? Is it possible that she, along with a handful of supporters, is trying to ram through a plan desirable to a small minority of students? I suggest:

1. A survey of students to determine whether a change is necessary/desired.
2. A committee of students and administrators be set up to determine the feasibility of any and all prospective renovation plans.

Robert Douglas

(Editor's Note: In last week's Seahawk, the plans for renovation of the Pub were identified as those of SGA President Whaley. Actually, they are the result of collaboration by Ms. Whaley, Student Activities Director Linda Moore, SGA committee chairmen and others.)

Letters

Associate Editor Defends Role of Atlantis as Important One

To The Editor:

The controversy over the campus literary magazine Atlantis, continues, as seen in the last issue of Seahawk when an insipid letter to the editor bumbled an equated Atlantis with toilet paper. But the most threatening attack on Atlantis is seen by certain SGA senators' obstinate refusal to approve allocations for a spring Atlantis while holding a reserve of funds out like a proverbial carrot to ensure that the fall Atlantis will meet their approval in some obscure form of logic.

At a Senate meeting on October 6, the Senate was well divided about what to do with Atlantis. I spoke at the meeting in an attempt to dispel any distortions caused by the lack of understanding of the objectives, processes, organization and philosophical value of a literary magazine on campus. There was a solid support for continued publication of Atlantis, but a few senators traded obstinance for understanding as is epitomized in this remark about Atlantis from a senator: "I don't want to do nothing with it."

I shudder to think that the intellectual myopia of a few senators could deprive the students at UNCW of the real and tangible advantages of a campus literary magazine published by and for students with students' own literary efforts. Perhaps the senators blocking the funding of Atlantis feel that our campus would be a better place to live and learn without this sort of literary tradition and that they would like to cork this outlet for the prose, poetry, and art that is created on campus.

Not only does Atlantis provide all students with an outlet for literary, artistic and poetic creativity, it provides to other students an expression of their peers' hard work. It provides involvement, entertainment, and perhaps the first chance a student may have to publish something he has worked so hard to create. Atlantis provides intangible values that are inextricably woven into the

REPEATING A SIMPLE MANTRA IS SAID TO PRODUCE INNER PEACE

The Right Line

By Ray Warren

Conservatism, in the modern political use of the word, is an American enigma. Few people outside of the movement understand its philosophical base or vision of America. Certainly, the standard caricature of the conservative as a middle aged redneck male, with fascist leanings and traditional bigotry, is far from factual. Still, explaining in one column, what men and women write whole books to describe, is a perilous quest, and I undertake it with serious foreboding. Nonetheless, the myths must be dispelled if we, the conservative majority, are to ever see our vision of freedom become a reality.

To begin with, "conservative" is a poor designation for the capitalist/individualist philosophy identified with that term. There is very very little that true conservatives would like to "conserve" in the present "welfare state" system of U.S. government. Indeed, we propose some of the most sweeping changes and reforms in American political history.

The basic difference in the conservative and liberal philosophy in their conception of society. To the modern liberal, the most important consideration is society itself, epitomized by the power and prestige of the state. The conservative, however, as the true heir to classical liberalism, defends the rights of the individual and opposes excessive growth of government. Thus, the conflict comes in achieving two cherished concepts of American democracy—the equalitarian society and the free society. Both conservatives and liberals concede the desirability of these objectives. Liberals however, are willing to destroy the latter to achieve the former. To conservatives, this is anathema, for freedom from compulsion is what the American Revolution was fought to achieve.

A common fallacy is to equate social conservatism with economic conservatism and to assume that the movement is homogeneous. Thus, Time magazine recently declared that conservatives were uniting around the issues of Marijuana, abortion, and pornography. Bullshit! These are precisely the issues on which conservatives disagree.

Conservatism is basically a coalition of libertarians and traditionalists. The traditionalists probably fit most people's idea of conservative because he will admit the right of the government to enforce social morality. The libertarian, however, holds to the philosophy that "men can do anything so long as they don't infringe on the rights of others." Conservatism is gaining an increasingly libertarian tinge which has led William F. Buckley to come out in favor of legalized marijuana, Ronald Reagan and Barry Goldwater to condemn a draft, and other conservatives to oppose laws against victimless crimes like gambling.

Why should a libertarian (like myself) support traditionalist conservatives over modern liberals? The answer is simple. Freedom is indivisible. Without economic freedom—the right to utilize the product of one's labor and to compete freely in the marketplace—there is no freedom. President Carter's call for human rights has a hollow ring when one considers that in this country a man must work for four months out of the year solely for the government.

Stated in other terms, suppose a man were to rob you at gunpoint and give the stolen money to the poor. Would this modern Robin Hood be morally justified in using your labor to soothe his conscience? If you say "yes" then society has no real basis because nothing will be safe from such robbers. If you say "no", however, how can we justify doing the same thing (taking money by force) merely by legalizing the action through "taxation." Thus, how free are we when we can only work for our own benefit when the government allows us to do so? If we labor only for "the good of society" then we cease to be free men and become as the serfs of feudal times.

The basic choice confronting Americans today is between those advocating the supremacy of government and those favoring the supremacy of the individual. The end result of liberal philosophy is a tightly regimented society where the state becomes the lord and men its serfs: The dream of the libertarian/conservative, however, is the dream of Jefferson and the Revolution where men and women exist, not for the state, but for their own sake. Yes, we can have a society where we are all equal... equally mediocre, equally poor, equally oppressed, and ultimately, spiritually dead. This, however, should not be the destiny of the nation that declared "the pursuit of happiness" to be an inalienable right.

Students today should also avoid the pitfall of replacing platitudes for reason. Many of the oppressive laws affecting us today were passed off as being "progressive." The reason that liberals were able to do this is because nobody questioned such a designation. Before considering such men as Ted Kennedy, who keeps a tidy fortune while debasing the currency (causing inflation for the average working man) as a "compassionate" man and Ronald Reagan as a "reactionary" one should question the validity of such designations.

The only hope for reversing the centralizing trend in American society is for students to recognize that political decisions should not be made on the basis of irrational emotions (he is a redneck, etc.) but on the basis of fact. The fact is, that for too long, politicians have, in the name of the people, created a bureaucratic monster and it is time for the people to say "enough." Thus, "conservatives" are conservative—they're revolutionary and fighting that the gains of the 1770's may be regained in the 1970's.

Murder in Galloway Hall: Epitaph for Fred, The Docile Pigeon

to The Editor:

Last Wednesday, something happened at Galloway Hall. Certain individuals, or a certain individual, satisfied a blood lust by murdering Fred, the docile dormitory pigeon. But that's understandable and forgivable because it is only human nature to want to hurt and kill and destroy. But what is totally unforgivable and unfathomable is the reaction Fred's death caused among the students residing in Galloway.

Most laughed and joked off the incident, but if one chose to really look closely, behind the jokes and sarcasm were tears! I mean it is really fascinating that people would be so moved over Fred's demise. After all, he was only a bird—right?

So what if he did make the Galloway residents smile when they sometimes didn't feel like smiling. Smiling is only a dumb waste of the facial muscles anyway. What if he added color into what is usually a dull gray existence. Dull gray can be nice after your eyes are hurt from too much exposure to color.

Why should people waste their love on such a simple bird as a pigeon anyway. It could be different if he was a symbol of war like an eagle or a hawk. But Fred was just a pigeon—a bird related to the dove. A bird of peace and tranquility. All that bird did was to spread peace and tranquility by just being there for the students to look at. How sick can you get? Peace and tranquility—good grief!

So what if Fred was pure and innocent as are most of the small wild animals loved by man. He still had some idiosyncrasies too. He was so tame that he trusted humans enough to take food from their hands.

Now it stands to reason that this is silly on all counts. It is silly from the standpoint that college students should have spent their time more constructively like extra hard studying, or NeoNazi rallies, or writing home to Uncle Jake and Aunt Myra—wasting precious time and food feeding a pigeon for the unheard of reason that it made them feel good.

It was also silly to trust human beings anyway. That's what killed Fred—his own stupidity. He was much too trusting.

But still that does not excuse the fact that the reactions to the murder of Fred are all out of context. The murderer or murderers of Fred should not be despised. They were only fulfilling the natural human instinct to do evil. They should come out into the open and be applauded as being prime specimens of the cream of humanity. Maybe someday they'll be national and international heroes like Genghis Kahn and Adolf Hitler.

But those poor sick humans won't see it that way. I mean, the next thing you know somebody will be taking up a collection for some type of memorial fund for Fred. Knowing them it would probably be some sort of plaque displayed in the lobby with an inscription like:

"In Remembrance of Fred, a bird who never did anyone harm but spread joy and love to all lives he touched. We shall surely miss him."

All that trouble over just a bird. Totally unbelievable. C. V. DeLance very fabric and meaning of being a student at a first-rate university.

The diploma we receive at UNCW is only as good as the reputation of the institution backing it. This reputation is the degree of quality and the culmination of the professional skills that our instructors communicate to us, the students, enabling us to broaden our perspective of the world and participate in its meaningful existence with all the social, technical, and intellectual skills we develop.

This is what differentiates us from a second-rate school—we are here to become more capable than when we first arrived. Any narrowing of the opportunities existing to us on our campus necessarily narrows us and the horizons of our minds. When you consider the total intellectual and creative environment on our campus, you then understand the necessity for a literary magazine such as Atlantis for what it truly is and is becoming. Atlantis is also the silent envoy to other campus libraries about the state as we exchange publications.

I am pleased that the SGA does not automatically rubber-stamp allocations and that they run a zero-based budgeting system. But the inordinate hostility and friction being encountered by Atlantis since last semester in trying to accomplish goals strikingly synonymous with the university itself is without precedence and foundation in logic as we know it.

Atlantis has always tried to provide a tradition of quality and opportunity for any student. It is student-oriented, and as long as students want and need a literary magazine, this will transcend any effort to abolish it.

Last spring, about 2100 copies of Atlantis were put out at various points on the campus. After three days, a quick check revealed 150 copies remaining.

I brought this point up at the Senate meeting but some senators had their minds made up to block the funding of Atlantis on the grounds that the students "really don't want it."

The elimination of Atlantis would be a curtailment of valuable opportunities and involvement and would create a void that would have serious repercussions. The Atlantis staff intends to circulate a petition throughout the campus allowing the students to speak to the Senate through it. I believe then the senators blocking the funding of Atlantis will have to listen to the students at UNCW.

Award Winning "Taxi Driver" is Fine Arts Movie of the Week

On Tuesday night, October 18, the UNCW Fine Arts Committee will present "Taxi Driver" at 8:00 p.m. in Kenan Auditorium. This is the seventh movie presented so far during the 1977-78 season.

"Taxi Driver" won the Grand Prize Award for the Best Film at the 1976 Cannes Film Festival. Also the movie, directed by Martin Scorsese, won for its star, Robert De Niro, the Academy Award for acting and recognition for Cybill Shepherd.

Robert De Niro in this film is a New York City cabbie who becomes compulsively involved with the city's "night people" while driving his "beat" through the seamy parts of the city.

This controversial movie shows the explosive results unleashed from one man's intense loneliness. He moves alone through the crowd-jostled, brushed, ignored, abused, and hassled, and all the while detached-until his trigger for violence finally gives way. The scenes that follow are some of the most startlingly violent of any in recent years.

Judy Crist of Saturday Review stated "Taxi Driver" is a "stunning study by De Niro" in "a brilliant and heart-breaking performance." Variety wrote the shootout sequence is "brutal, horrendous, and cinematically brilliant." "Feroocious! Volatile! No other film has ever dramatized urban differences so powerfully," reported Pauline Kael of The New Yorker.

For the general public "Taxi Driver" is given an "R" rating. However, with the awards and critical acclaim lauded upon the motion picture, it is felt by the Fine Arts Committee that UNCW students will find this a worthwhile and rewarding motion picture.

Admission is by season membership, UNCW students with ID cards - 50 cents, and non-students, $1.00.

Movie Schedule

Oct. 18 "Taxi Driver"
25 "Silent Movie"

Nov. 1 "The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes" Smarter Brother"
8 "Family Plot"
15 "Obsession"
29 "The Omen"

Prismacolor Exhibition Shown at St. John's Gallery by Connors

An exhibition of Prismacolors by Ann Connors, an assistant professor of art at UNCW, will be on display at St. John's Art Gallery until October 29.

The Prismacolors are unusually sensitive because the color, structure, and surface are carefully controlled to achieve a delicate balance. The colors used are very few in number. However, they are carefully applied to produce a wider range of hues and values.

Representational images are juxtaposed against angular shapes, which appear to be quite abstract because of the use of the small diagonal applications of color each drawn separately onto the paper. Although the paper size of all the compositions is the same, the viewer becomes aware of the variation created by the combination of soft hues, fine lines and different image sizes.

Many of her titles suggest Southwest Indian motifs, while her work reflects the influence of the Southwest Indian designs on rugs, pottery and jewelry.

She has an impressive record of one artist's exhibitions, which includes her October 1976 showing at the West-broadway Gallery in New York City. She has been included in major group shows in the Southeast and exhibits regularly in New York, D.C. and Raleigh.

St. John's Art Gallery is located at 114 Orange Street, Wilmington and is open on Tuesday through Saturday from 10 a.m. until 5 p.m.

Annual Coin Convention Chooses Wilmington as Host for Nineteenth Meeting

For the first time, the North Carolina Numismatic Association has chosen Wilmington for the 19th Annual Coin Convention. This event will be October 14, 15, 16, 1977 at the Hilton Inn, 301 North Water Street. It is expected to draw a number of dealers and collectors from around the eastern part of the United States.

Every effort has been made to assure this show will be as good as any ever staged before and every one connected with it has worked hard to make certain all visitors will enjoy outstanding exhibits that are both interesting and educational. Some of the foremost dealers in the coin business will set up shop in the bourse area, thus assuring those spending hobby dollars of getting competitive pieces and quality merchandise.

Ed Quagliana, a representative of the Franklin Mint, will have a booth showing many of the Franklin Mint products.

The rare Bechtler Gold set of coins will be exhibited by Mr. Keith Strawn of the North Carolina Museum of History.

Admission will be free of charge and there will be two drawings for a $20.00 and a $10.00 gold piece.

The Lower Cape Fear Coin Club is proud to be host of this Coin Convention.

Keith Strawn, Collections Director for the State of North Carolina Museum of History, has accepted on behalf of the Museum an invitation issued by Mrs. Autence Basom, Chairperson of the Exhibit Committee, to exhibit the Museum's collection of Bechtler Gold Coins at the forthcoming convention.

Several years ago, the Museum of History purchased 171 Bechtler Gold Coins and a number of North Carolina Bank Notes, many in uncirculated sheets, from the collection of Dr. Walter Lee Crouch at a cost of $270,000. Unfortunately, budgetary problems at the Museum have prevented the development of a numismatic display in the Museum, not only for the Bechtler Gold but all other numismatic items.

The consequence of this is that the numismatists and people of North Carolina have had no opportunity to view the collection, excepting a limited showing of a part of the Bechtler Gold at the Raleigh Coin Club Show in late 1976.

Late last spring a representative of NCNA discussed the possibilities of the museum developing a "traveling show" of state owned numismatic items that could be displayed at coin shows throughout the state, with Mr. Strawn. Mr. Strawn indicated that the museum could entertain such a show idea if sufficient appropriations for personnel time and travel became available. Otherwise, such an activity would have to be restricted to major numismatic events, such as the NCNA Convention.

Although the Bechtler Gold Coins were a private issue minted in Rutherford County, N.C., by Christopher and Augustus Bechtler between 1830 and 1852, they have the distinction of producing the first gold dollar in the United States.

Student-Faculty Seminar Features Dr. McCall

On Monday evening, October 17, Dr. Dale McCall of the UNCW Anthropology Department will lead the second in a series of student-faculty interdisciplinary seminars. The topic to be discussed in Dr. McCall's seminar is "Heredit and Human Affairs," focusing on contemporary issues relating to heredity and genetic engineering. Both students and faculty are cordially invited to attend and to discuss this important topic. No prior knowledge is required.

The purpose of this seminar series is to get students and faculty to talk together as equals outside of the pressures of the classroom. The first seminar in September was extremely well attended and proved to be a worthwhile experience for participants. This will be an excellent opportunity for students to get to really know faculty members as human beings not just as teachers. You are encouraged to attend, participate, or just listen.

For further information, please contact Dr. Dale McCall in the Anthropology Department.

Reallocations Made to Three Groups by Senate

By Bobby Parker

The Student Senate approved reallocation requests from three campus groups in its regular meeting last Thursday night. All three groups had appeared before the Finance Committee, and each reallocation coincided with the committee's recommendation.

Sophomore Senator Glen Downs, a member of the Finance Committee, presented the committee's recommendations which included $1700 to the University Lecture Series Committee. The committee had previously received $1700.

The Lecture Series will sponsor four to six programs this year, it was reported, with the biggest scheduled for November 21, with Julian Bond, Georgia State Senator and civil rights leader.

The Rowing Club was reallocated $1775 to be spent on new training equipment and eight oars. The Football Club received $1470 for equipment and travel expenses.

Sophomore Francis DeLuca questioned SGA funding of athletic groups, noting that it should be shared by the Athletic Department. Non-degree Senator Tom Raines, however, stated that "this could not happen until someone 'stands up' to Athletic Director Bill Brooks. He added that "it's going to take this Senate to do it."

Associate Editor Bill Rapp of the Atlantis appeared to request a $2300-2500 allocation to the student literary magazine to be used for publication of a spring issue. Rapp called Atlantis a "creative outlet" which benefits both students and the university.

Senator G. T. Hardy suggested that the magazine be printed on newsprint to hold down production costs. A motion to refer the request to the Finance Committee was defeated.

"I don't want to refer it to the Finance Committee," stated Senior President Barbara McKay. "I don't want them to do nothing with it," she continued.

Absent from the meeting Thursday were Senators Jim Franks, Mike Watts, Don Allen, Herman Smith, and Jack Allen. The Senate will meet tomorrow night at 7:30 in C218.

Legal Aid

To recover damages in a court action for a breach of contract, the cost may be more than the amount recovered. For example: Q. My husband had a garage in Paramus, N.J., install a new transmission and driveline in our 1971 Ford van. The garage put in the wrong transmission. We had it replaced in Phoenix, Ariz. where we now live. We have written to the New Jersey garage for what we paid them, but we get no answer. What's our next step?

A. The law says you have a court action for damages against the New Jersey garage arising out of a breach of contract for a transmission which has proved to be the wrong transmission improperly installed (Am. Jur. 2d Ref. Damages Sec. 46-79).

To obtain services of the court action on the defendant garage you would be required to file your case in Paramus, N.J., and appear personally to testify with an expert in automobile mechanics and a lawyer retained in New Jersey to prove the breach of contract.

For this the expense would probably exceed the amount you could recover in your lawsuit; that's probably the reason the garage does not respond.

Q. Within three years before my husband's death, I transferred, without his knowledge, savings bonds and bank accounts held jointly by us to my name only. The Federal IRS has included the bonds and the bank account balances in his gross estate for estate taxes. Is this right by law?

A. The U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals ruled in a similar case that IRS was within the law to include the items you transferred to your name alone into your husband's gross estate for estate tax purposes (C.A. No.'s 76-12, 78-76).

If your husband died (you didn't give his date of death) in 1977 under the new Tax Reform Act of 1976 operative in 1977, all gifts given by decedent during his last three years of life are included in his gross estate except the exclusion of $3,000 a year to each donee (IRS Code Sec. 2038).

Q. My husband and I added three rooms to our home in Hawaii after our son's marriage, he and his wife now occupy the rooms. We are behind in our mortgage payments. The bank has sent us a notice of foreclosure.

We paid in advance to the contractor of the addition. The contractor says he can separate the addition from our home if it's not included in the description in the mortgage. Is this legal?

A. If the mortgage on your home provides that all additions and improvements to your home become a lien, then such additions as you have described become a part of the original mortgage lien. To remove the addition would violate the provisions of the mortgage (Haw. Rev. Stat. SEcv. 606-2).

Q. I live in town. I sold my car. A day later the new owner had an accident in which two persons were seriously injured. The son of one injured person called me to say they will hold me as well as the driver. I thank you to tell me the law on this situation.

A. The former owner who has made a bona fide sale of the vehicle is not liable for its negligent operation regardless of whether the certificate of title has been transferred. (Code of Iowa Sec. 321-498)

Ch. Fellowship Meets Weekly

Because He loves you, Jesus humbled Himself by obeying God to the point of death on a cross. Therefore, God highly exalted Him and gave Him a name that is above every name, that at the name of Jesus every knee should bow and every tongue confess that Jesus Christ is Lord.

The Campus Christian Fellowship invites you to meet with us every Tuesday night in 103 Hoggard at 7:30 p.m. to get to know Jesus better and enjoy fellowship with His believers. Remember, Jesus loves you!

The Still Porat

Vivan Martindale
Campus Minister

I had another column ready to go in this place but something happened last week to change my mind. A tragedy struck this campus and we have given up a valuable part of ourselves. Robert J. Robinson, Jr., Rob to many of us, was buried beneath the sod last Wednesday after an unexpected death and a very moving memorial service.

I'd like to share a few personal observations. Rob was a friend. We talked many times about this campus; about commuter problems and dormitory issues; about minority faculty and relationships between black and white students; about the Minority Affairs Committee, and Black Cultural Week. We spoke of our personal beliefs and our children. He was concerned about this little cloistered community and its people. He was respected by fellow students, faculty and administration.

He was concerned about the needs of the broader community of Wilmington and New Hanover County. We spoke of employment problems for young people, of getting drama and the arts into the streets of the inner city children and of better human relations for our city. Rob was not without his personal hassles (for none of us escapes that) but he was most certainly a young man of commitment, vision, and dreams.

I would wish that as a campus we might capture some of Rob's vision and commitment to bettering our community for all people and a sensitivity to the needs of people around us. William Barclay in his new little book A Spiritual Autobiography says, "When things like that happen, we are not meant to accept them with folded hands; we are meant to do all that we can to see that we do not allow them to happen again."

Some of Rob's friends are setting up a trust fund for the education of his children.

When you hear more, lend your support so that his sons and daughter might share some of his dream.

Finally, I would like to suggest that one of the new dorms now under construction be named "Robert J. Robinson, Jr. Hall" and be dedicated to his memory. Rob has been a dorm resident and a precedent was established with Galloway (Edmond G.) Hall.

Rob was a friend and I shall miss him.

Martindale Participates in Congress

Reverend Vivan H. Martindale, campus minister of UNCW, was among participants in a Congress on Science and Ethics convening at the University of Denver October 9-12.

The Congress was the first of a series of international debates concerning pressing ethical questions, such as abortion, mind control, medical ethics, death-and-dying, genetics, and biomedical experimentation. Participants include leading biologists, religious leaders, philosophers, physicians, educators, humanists, and community leaders.

Reverend Martindale will discuss "Education for Death During Life" in a series of morning topics on Wednesday. As a professional counselor for terminal care patients and as an educator on thanatology, he has worked closely with UNCW, the North Carolina Area Health Education Center, New Hanover Memorial Hospital and its Association for Mental Health, the North Carolina Funeral Directors Association, and various other community and church organizations.

Sponsors of the three-day conference include the American Association of Retired Persons, the National Conference on Christians and Jews, the National Jewish Hospital and Research Center, the University of Denver, Duff School of Theology, Regis College, Loretto Heights College, and various Denver-headquartered civic and religious organizations.

A second series of debates will be held in Israel in February 1978.

Pi Kappa Phi Extends Invitation to Sisters

The Red Cross blood drive scheduled last week was cancelled. The reason being that Dr. Jordan, advisor to the Red Cross, stated that a near epidemic outbreak of mono on campus made it unwise to have the blood drive at the scheduled time. Pi Kappa Phi and the Red Cross would like to express their appreciation to all the students who planned to donate.

The brothers of Pi Kappa

Phi would like to extend an invitation to all girls interested in becoming Little Sisters of the fraternity to call the house 763-9232 or call Debbie Hunter 791-1310. The fraternity is also planning to have a second rush this semester for all interested men on campus.

The brothers of Pi Kappa Phi would like to congratulate the brothers of Chi Phi fraternity on their recent initiation.

Republicans to Elect Delegates

The UNCW College Republican Club will meet tomorrow (Thursday) night to elect delegates to the C. R. state convention which will be held at Meredith College October 22. The meeting will be in Chemistry 218 at 6:00 p.m. All C. R. members are urged to attend.

Congressional candidate Ray Schrupp will be down from Fayetteville to discuss his campaign and refreshments will be served. Remember, some people have it worse than we do. Jimmy is only our president. Billy has him for a brother. See you Thursday.

APO Has Largest Pledge Class

The pledges of Alpha Phi Omega were ritualized as pledges last Thursday night. APO is proud to announce the largest pledge class in several years. The first service project, primarily for the APO Brotherhood, was ushering the Heart concert last night.

Rec Majors to Meet in Gym

The next meeting of the Recreation Majors Club will be held in Room 143 in the Gym on October 26, from 6:00-7:00. We will decide where and when our club pictures will be taken; any suggestions before the meeting will be welcomed.

Most importantly, we need to discuss the issues pertaining to the Statewide North Carolina Parks and Recreation Convention that will be held at the Wilmington Hilton Nov. 7, 8, 9. Attendance is imperative for us only have a couple of weeks from the meeting date to the convention!

Homecoming Meeting

There is a Homecoming '78 Committee meeting tonight at 6:00 p.m. in 302 Belk Dorm. All members are asked to bring all the collected materials they have thus far. The meeting will not last long but please be there.

Woodhouse to Open Lecture Series with "Spain's Emerging Democracy"

Dr. William Woodhouse of the Department of Modern Languages will present the first program of the 1977-78 University Lecture Series this Thursday night at 8:00 p.m. in King Auditorium (Education-Psychology Building.) Dr. Woodhouse will speak on the topic "Spain's Emerging Democracy."

The lecture will focus on the national elections in Spain this past June which were the first free elections in that country in forty years. With the death of Generalissimo Francisco Franco, Spain's new leader, King Juan Carlos, has been slowly moving the country toward democracy again.

Dr. Woodhouse was visiting in Spain during this recent campaign and election. He says that the most notable changes since his last visit in 1963 are that the people have taken a renewed interest in the affairs of their country and express their opinions freely. The press has also become free of censorship. Dr. Woodhouse adds.

A graduate of the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, Dr. Woodhouse attended graduate school at New York University. He has taught at UNCW for two years.

The lecture tomorrow night is free to UNCW students and the general public.

Other lectures planned by the University Lecture Series this semester are Alma Graham on November 10, who will speak on "Sexism in Literature," and Georgia state senator Julian Bond on November 21, who will present a lecture entitled "What Next?"

Parents Called the "Sandwich Generation"

By Campus Digest News Service

They called our older brothers and sisters the "Now" generation. They're calling us the "Apathetic" generation. And now they've even come up with a generic name for our parents: the "Sandwich" generation.

This is because most parents today are a "new breed," usually in the middle class, 35- to 60-year-old range, and they're beginning to voice frustration at having to assume two burdens at the same time: their children and their parents.

Due to major strides in modern medicine, parents are living longer—often to age 80 and beyond. And at that advanced state, many require extensive support and attention from their now-middle-aged children who are themselves parents—not to mention the elderly "Gray Panther" types who demand it. The support is in both time and money, since Social Security is rarely enough to keep the elderly going, even in the most Spartan of conditions.

Thus, middle-aged parents are finding their Mom and Dad a major financial and emotional burden—while at the same time having to cope with raising their own children. They are in this manner "sandwiched" between the two burdens. And some are finding the resultant financial and emotion squeeze intolerable.

For example, listen to the all-too-typical words of "Charlotte," a fairly representative middle-aged victim of the "Sandwich" Generation:

"One one side I have my parents telling me what to do, expecting me to call every day, depending on me to do things for them—they can't do themselves, like shop and drive them to the doctor. They make me feel guilty because I'm never as good to them as they would like me to be."

"And on the other side, I have my teen-aged kids, who have become a bigger burden every year. They take up so much of my time, thoughts and money. Even the 20-year-old. He still costs us quite a lot because he's going to college. He uses my car and leaves me stuck in the house."

According to Dr. Bernice Neugarten, a specialist on aging with the University of Chicago, more and more middle-aged parents are having to take care of their parents as well as their own kids.

"It looks to us now that a major concern of middle-aged people is the care of their aging parents," she told the Chicago Daily News. "And children may depend upon their parents longer, too, because their educations often go on longer than they used to."

The woes of the "Sandwich" generation were recently aired in a study by Dr. Morton Liberman, also of the University of Chicago, and his wife, Grace. They talked to some 2,300 persons aged 18 to 66 in the Chicago area to find out their major stresses and strains of everyday life and how they cope with them.

According to Dr. Liberman, "We weren't looking for 'parent-caring,' but next to their own mental and physical health, that's what people most worried about (sic) and were most burdened by. We found that some began worrying about their parents in their last 20s and early 30s, and the burden increases 10 per cent in middle age."

"We also discovered that women particularly feel their spirits rise during the years immediately after their last child leaves the home. Perhaps this new trend of young adults staying home longer or returning to the home after college causes more depression. We haven't studied that yet."

Give them time. With what evidence they have collected, it looks like the "Sandwich" generation might well become the next sociologically "chic" fad—like the hippies once were. One can almost imagine what Hollywood will do about it—"The Geritol Statement," perhaps, or even "Fear of Retiring."

Seahawks Edged by State, Rip Duke

UNCW split two important games last week, losing to State 3-2 and beating the Duke Blue Devils 4-2.

"The State game was a very frustrating game," said Calvin Lane, head coach of the soccer squad. "We controlled the ball most of the game, and missed several good scoring opportunities."

The Wolfpack scored two quick goals in the first half before the Seahawks could score. Their first goal came at the 32 minute mark on an unassisted shot by Chi Chi Mercado. State came back, though, to score again before the half ended to make the score 3-1.

In the second half, the Hawks rallied to hold the host Wolfpack scoreless and kick in a goal for themselves. Gil Castella, UNCW's leading scorer, made the point at the 41 minute mark of the half. The Wilmington club failed to make the tying goal, however, and the final score was 3-2 in favor of State.

"I'm not pleased with the loss, of course, but I'm not upset," said Lane. "We played well, and could easily have won. Our main problem was our failure to score, when we had the opportunity." Lane added he thought his team had more overall skill than the Raleigh squad.

According to Lane, the team had two major problems: failing to use their wings on defense effectively and a non-aggressive defense. In an effort to change this by the Duke game, Lane and his staff changed strategy. "Our main problem this year," said Lane, "is not scoring but our preventing the other team from scoring." To stop this, an extra defensive man was added to the starting lineup, and a forward slot was dropped.

This strategy apparently worked, as the Seahawks downed Duke University 4-2, in action at Brooks Field. One of Duke's goals came on a clear goal shot 25 yards out, and the other was scored on a free kick.

The Seahawks opened the scoring when Castella clipped the ball to Mercado, Mercado, going one on one with a Duke defender, took it in for the score at the 25 minute mark of the first half. In just over a minute, UNCW scored again on another goal shot by Castella, with an assist by Ashley Dixon. The half ended with the score UNCW - 2, Duke - 0.

"Up until that first goal, Duke had pretty well controlled it," said Lane. "After the goal, we got the momentum and took over for a while."

After just over eight minutes into the second half, Castella once again teamed up with Dixon for the pair's second goal of the day. Duke came right back, though, a minute later when Bergen booted a 25-footer from open field.

Duke's second goal came with 23 minutes left in the game when Murray scored on a free kick. The Hawks came right back, though, when Mercado also scored on a free kick. David Hambrick provided the assist. Mercado's goal gave the Hawks a 4-2 win over their Atlantic Coast Conference opponent.

"The win over Duke really helped us," commented Lane. "It came at a time when we really needed it." The Seahawks had just lost two games by one goal. "This'll give us a chance to regroup," he added.

The injuries and illnesses that have previously plagued the squad seems to be dying down. Ted Kort's foot injury is getting better, and while he's not up to 100 per cent, he is playing (He played the entire game against Duke). Nino Fleri, the team's second leading scorer, has a hurt knee and is out indefinitely, but Lane feels he'll be back soon.

The team is slowly coming out of its mono plague. Two players are out for the year, and four others are still sick, but Lane says the team's over the worst and the four who are sick are now seeing limited action.

Last week, a rumour was circulating that Lane would disband the squad and forfeit the rest of the games due to mono. Lane discounted this, saying neither he nor the athletic department the team ever even considered it. "It (mono) would have to reach epidemic proportions before we would do something like that," he added.

Coach Lane also thanked the fans for their support of the team this year. He reminded them, though, that they should keep a "positive attitude" throughout each game and remember that they are representing UNC-Wilmington to the visiting school.

The next home game, and last of the season, for the soccer Seahawks is Saturday, when they face East Carolina. Game time is 2:00.

Gibson to Speak at Durham Clinic

University of North Carolina at Wilmington head basketball coach Mel Gibson will be a featured speaker at the 16th annual Durham Basketball Clinic Saturday and Sunday (October 15-16) at Durham High School.

The veteran Seahawk mentor will open the two-day affair with a lecture on his highly successful double stack offensive strategy. Gibson returns to the program on Sunday, speaking on individual and team defensive concepts.

Eight of Gibson's UNCW players will accompany their coach to the two sessions and assist in demonstration of the various drills.

More than 400 high school and collegiate coaches are expected to attend the clinic. Other speakers on the agenda include Sonny Smith, head basketball coach at East Tennessee State, and former Duke University standout and professional star Jeff Mullins.

Lady Netters Shine in Rerun

By Steve Wallace

The women's tennis team of Coach Jane Batson continued to show improvement as the Seahawks evened their record at 2-2, splitting matches with Atlantic Christian and Campbell.

In a repeat match with Campbell College at Bules Creek on Wednesday, the UNCW lady netters were again blanked 9-0. UNCW's Theresa Reaves, the fourth seed, lost 6-4, 4-6, 6-4, in one of the closer individual matches.

The Seahawks then rebounded at home last Friday, with a strong 8-1 victory over Atlantic Christian. It was a strong showing by the team, which by all indications, will surpass last year's 3-11 mark.

Indicative of the team's depth is the continual shakeup of the lineup, which was evidenced in the recent matches. Carolyn Bender, who played the number five position against Campbell, moved to the number six slot against Atlantic Christian. There were also changes in the doubles pairings as well as changes in the format. In the Wednesday match the doubles were scored with the single pro set (8 games), while the best-of-three sets scoring was used in the Friday doubles matches.

The next action for the Seahawks will be at home against Pembroke at 3:00 p.m.

Corection

In the October 5 issue of The Seahawk, there was an article on page seven titled "Kill That Violent #1/11." This was in fact not an article but the "Benched" column written by the sports editor, George Benedict. The column's name and author were accidentally left off the page during production.

Also in the October 5 issue, on page 6 there was an article with the headline "Football Club Suffers Third." Actually the headline should have read "Football Club Suffers Third Loss in Slugfest." The rest of the headline was lost in printing.

She-Hawks Finish Rough Week With Upset

In a week which head coach Ann Kraft called "A real test" for her squad, the women's volleyball team started off in a slump, kicked out of it, then finished the week with an upset.

The SHE-hawks began the week by traveling to Louisburg to play Louisburg College, ranked fifth in the nation last year among junior colleges.

The trip proved disastrous, however, as the squad lost the first three of their five-match series. "We just played bad," said Kraft. "We couldn't get anything going."

On Thursday, UNCW was on the road, meeting N. C. Central University and Elon. This night ended on a better note, as they downed NCCU 15-11, 15-10. Elon proved awesome, however, as they defeated the Wilmington squad 15-1, 15-5. "We were just off," said Kraft, in explaining the loss, "and Elon does have a good team."

The Hawks then journeyed to Conway, SC, for a weekend quad-match. Contrary to the Louisburg game, this proved to be a trip worth taking as the She-hawks downed all three schools. Benedict College fell 15-11, 15-10; Furman College was beaten 15-7, 14-16, 15-1; and USC-Conway was upset 15-10, 15-13 by the Wilmington squad.

After last week, the team's record is 6-4, which is about where Coach Kraft thought the team would be. She's still extremely optimistic about the squad. "The girls are working hard and making progress every day," she said. "We're playing with two freshmen in the starting lineup and still holding our own, which pleases me a lot."

Next home game for the Hawks is Tuesday, October 18, when they face USQ Conway and Pembroke. Action begins at 6:00.

Gemborys Leads Seahawks in Fall Tennis Invitational

Paul Gemborys, a sophomore from Jacksonville, was the outstanding Seahawk performer in this past weekend's UNCW Fall Invitational Tennis affair.

Playing at the #2 singles slot, Gemborys captured all three of his matches versus opponents from East Carolina, Campbell and USC-Conway.

No actual team or individual championships were awarded, but ECU came away with a 3-0 mark in the two-day, round-robin competition. UNCW, Campbell and USC-Conway were all 1-2.

The Seahawks defeated Campbell 6-3 on Saturday, but dropped two matches on Sunday to ECU, 7-2, and USC-Conway, 5-4.

Swim Team Debuts Successfully [Almost]

WILMINGTON--With one event remaining, the University of North Carolina at Wilmington swim team appeared on the verge of victory in its first-ever dual meet competition last Saturday at UNC-Greensboro.

But it was not to be. The Seahawk freestyle relay team was touched out by a second and dropped the contest, 69-57.

Coach Dave Allen, however, was more than pleased with his coed squad. "This was the first real competition for most of our people," he pointed out, "and I am very proud of their effort and most of the results. The kids were excited by the actual competition and I feel this will carry over into our practice sessions from now on."

Three Seahawks--all freshmen--were triple winners. Linda Rutten won the 50-yard breast, 200 and 500 freestyle events, Jim Baker took the 50 and 100-yard butterfly, plus the 200 free, and David Sherwood finished first in the 100-IM and the 50 and 100-yard freestyle competition.

Allen was surprised by the team's outcome. "When I saw them in warmup, and looked at their records, I thought we'd be in trouble."

This is the first season ever for competitive swimming and diving at UNCW. Only five swimmers, including Rutten, Baker, and Sherwood, have any experience in competitive swimming. "Most of our people are very, very interested, though," Allen added.

Coach Dave Allen is in his seventh year coaching swimming. He was coach for one year at Allegheny College in New York, and for the past six years he served as head coach at State University of New York at Potsdam.

Allen is very pleased with his brand new swimming facilities at UNCW. "This is a very nice facility," he said. "We're getting the finest equipment available... including automatic judging instruments."

All in all, Allen is very optimistic about the prospects for competitive swimming here in Wilmington. "The potential is here," he said. "In a few years, we should have an outstanding swimming program."

2026 EASTWOOD ROAD

Randy Newman Cops a Plea

Most of you probably are unfamiliar with Randy Newman. He has never had a hit on Top Forty and FM radio only plays his music occasionally. Three Dog Night had a hit with his "Mama Told Me Not To Come," but failed to carry the humor of Newman's version. Peggy Lee also hit it big with "Is That All There Is?" which Newman did not write, but did orchestrate beautifully. If you check Linda Ronstadt's latest album you find Newman's "Political Science." Newman's got his admirers, but the public has yet to discover him.

Part of Newman's problem is that he doesn't fit the part of a recording star. The cover of his latest album, LITTLE CRIMINALS, has a gray and white spot of Randy standing on a bridge overlooking a freeway. It is hard to take someone who looks like a driver's ed instructor for one of America's greatest wits and songwriters. Another problem is that Newman has the ambition of a snail. If you had to label Newman's hunched-over-the-piano approach to music "sloth rock" might be a fitting tag. This album is his first in three years. The last album, GOOD OLE BOYS (a marvelous look at the South and Huey Long,) arrived after a three year wait as well. An overnight success is definitely not in the stars for Newman.

Considering the material content of LITTLE CRIMINALS, has a more apt title for the LP might be RANDY NEWMAN PICKS A FIGHT. In just one album Newman takes on short people, a fat loan shark, cops, small time crooks, Sigmund Freud impersonating Albert Einstein, a newly-orphaned Texas girl, and the city of Baltimore. Not an easy task, but an amusing one for anyone who listens.

"Short People" is the stand-out of this LP and is also the highlight of Newman's current tour. The music is quite catchy but the lyrics beat it by a mile. In a humorous way Newman states very frankly that "short people got no reason to live." To back up his argument Randy lists all the faults of short people from "little noses" to "little teeth" to "platform shoes on their nasty little feet." While Newman might receive a knife in the kneecap for this particular effort, it stands out as one of his best ever.

Two other excellent tunes are "I'll Be Home" and "Jolly Coppers on Parade." The former is a classic ballad Newman wrote years ago. Despite a good rendition of it by Barbara Streisand this tune has been erroneously ignored. "Jolly Copper on Parade" got its title from a Swedish mystery novel Newman happened across. In short it is a parade of cops through the eyes of a child. The music is almost hypnotic in its delivery.

Occasionally Newman fails to provide a memorable tune. In these cases the lyrical content makes up for the loss. Most noticeably is the story behind "In Germany Before The War." Using the plot from "M," a classic German film from the silent days, Newman recreates the role of a child molester/murderer. With this tune you get the murderer's viewpoint which Peter Loore's film role lacked. Quite a strange topic.

If you need some sort of motive to buy this album check out the sidemen. Albums with the Eagles as sidemen are few and hard to come by. Steve Harvey

Barry Drake: A Well Kept Secret

by Robert S. Brown III
Is it irony or arrogance that makes a man from the hear- of the North write about a man in the South's defiance of Yankee democracy?

It's probably neither. In Barry Drake's song "I Won't Be Reconstructed" we can see more than just a post-Civil War story. We can see his whole philosophy of life. That is, that he will be ruled by no man's mind but his own.

You might call it a freedom song.

It's a song that plays lead to the dance of his soul and shares that dance with the people who hear it.

And yet, Barry Drake is a well kept secret.

Due to almost no advance advertising, very few students were aware of Barry's performance at all. Luckily, however, a small group of hardcore music lovers managed to find their way to the Good Wood Tavern Friday and Saturday nights to enjoy the fun. So, it wasn't a total loss. But it was a good show.

There seemed to be an internal laugh which made Barry able to bear any disappointment but he didn't disappoint the crowd.

He stood on stage with his guitar and a smile and the rest of the evening was under his control.

He sang many original compositions as well as some borrowed ones.

In one song "Ragged But Right," he tells the plight of some of the more unfortunate people in our society who managed to get by on artificial stimulants.

Another impressive song was "Windigo," an Indian legend about a spirit that flies above the treetops with feet of fire.

And last but not least, "Crazy Mary," a cute little song with a bouncy beat that tells of an old woman piano player who says that before she goes she wants to leave us a little melody to help us through the blues. And it goes, ba-na-na, na-na-na-na, na-na-na-na.

It's the same happy, almost invincible melody that Barry

Drake gives to us and we will not forget his generosity.

Barry Drake is a native of Jersey City, New Jersey, who now lives in the small town of Fleischmanns, New York. His latest album is called "Roadsongs" and is on Catskill Mountain Records.

He's been playing on the college circuit for about eight years and has learned that the trick to surviving is to keep putting energy into the act. He said that you have to spend everything you earn to improve the sound. For instance, you have to keep buying better equipment, maintain your car, or buy new clothes. He said that the moment you stop putting energy into it is the moment you start to lose it all. Apparently he was quite attached to his old Martin guitar and didn't want to get rid of it because of the energy it contained.

I'm only sorry that more people didn't get a chance to hear him. But for those of you who missed him, just remember, ba-na-na, na-na-na-na, na-na-na-na.

Advanced Placement Test Start Early

By Campus Digest News Service
Here's one for the ever-growing "Why didn't I come out when I needed it?" column:

The College Entrance Examination Board (CEEB) theorizes that the students who brought you the SAT test had now come up with a marvelous way for you to literally save thousands—yes, thousands—of dollars on college.

But the only catch is: you have to be in high school to take advantage of it.

It's an off-shoot of the CLEP test, called Advanced Placement (AP) courses. Above-average high schools can take these courses, administered by the CEEB, while in high school and earn up to a full year (two semesters) of college credit.

Depending on the college or university, that can mean a real savings of between $5,000 and $7,000. And this is not to mention the savings in time and effort and the jump-in getting a job shaving off a year of college can provide.

Here's how it works: High-school students who qualify can enroll in college-level courses at their high school in subjects ranging from art to Spanish—in other words, typically freshman-level courses. Then, in May, the students take one or more of the 18 AP exams administered by the CEEB. With a passing score of 75 per cent or above, the resulting awarded college credit will be accepted at over 1,800 colleges and universities. That's all, folks.

Your younger brothers and sisters will love it.

Wilkins Presents Senior Show

The neutral walls of Kenan Hall will be warmed until October 21 with a collection of paintings by John S. Wilkins.

The collections, which is Wilkins's Senior Art Show, represents his experimentation with color combinations, the composition of his works and variations and improvements of his drawing style.

The show contains the works he has produced since changing his major from Biology to Art in the Fall of 1974.

By the Spring of 1975, he had become very content with his new major and consequently made the Dean's List.

He has entered various Art Shows since 1975 and won an Honorable Mention for his silkscreen "Sitting Girl—Minda's Sister" in the Fifteenth Annual Lower Cape Fear Exhibition in February 1977.

The Senior Art Shows planned for this semester include:
John Wilkins October 7-21
Donna Purvis Oct. 24 - Nov. 7
Gwen Grant November 8-22
Ann McGhee Nov. 30-Dec. 13

Spanish Club to Sponsor Various Activities

On Thursday, Sept. 29, the Spanish Club had their first organizational meeting. The elected officers were as follows:

President - Allyson Kyle
Vice-Pres. - Debbie Ryan
Sec. - Sharon Currie
During the second meeting, Oct. 6, the Spanish Club decided on their 1977-78 activity calendar. Various activities such as typical Latin dinners, a Latin dance in a local discotheque, Latin outings and parties, will be open to club members and their guests. All club activities are open to the foreign language department faculty and the Latin community.

Expenses will be taken from the club treasury or split among the club members. Club functions are as follows: Meetings will be on Wednesday nights only when they are announced. The dues will be $3.00 a semester to help cover expenses. First semester dues must be paid to the Secretary no later than Wed., Nov. 2. The club will participate in various University functions, fundraising and other projects.

The next meeting will be Wed., October 19, at the skating rink. Directions and information will be posted on the bulletin board outside the Modern Languages Department in Kenan. If you have any questions, please contact Allyson Kyle, 423 Bell Hall, 392-1676. Please join us Wednesday, Oct. 19 for an evening of friendship and fun. Help make this year a successful one.

Tau Kappa Epsilon Enjoys Weekend

The brothers of Tau Kappa Epsilon and Chi Phi fraternities sponsored "High and Mighty" at the Raintree Connection last Sunday night. The party got under way at 9:30 as "High and Mighty" opened with one of their own compositions. It took everyone a while to get rocking with the band, but as the night wore on, more and more people found it harder to find a place on the dance floor.

Wednesday night, the brothers of TKE had a meeting with our pledges to find out how much they had learned about the fraternity system over the past week. Our chapter's history was also discussed. The pledges had a meeting afterwards to discuss ideas for their pledge class projects. Several of the pledges mentioned a liquor raffle.

This past weekend the alumni and brothers of TKE went on a camping trip to Linville, NC. Everyone hit the road as early as possible on Friday so they could leave Friday night again. Everyone had a great weekend.

This weekend, we are planning a service project at Snipes Elementary School. The brothers and many of the alumni plan to set up athletic equipment for the school. After everything is set up, we will go over to the fraternity house to get ready for a party. The brothers and alumni hope to see all of you there!

Circle K Extends Deadline

The Monday, October 17 meeting of the UNCW Circle K Club will be the last day district dues will be collected. This date has been extended to those who have not yet paid are encouraged to do so. The meeting will be held at 7:30 in the Chemistry Building.

The club will also hold its induction banquet at Bonanza Steak House on October 15 at 7:00. Members are reminded to come to this important event.

Interested Fencers to Meet

There will be a meeting of the Fencing Club on Wednesday, October 12, at 7:00 in the new gym, room 117.

Anyone interested in fencing or learning how to fence is invited to attend. For more information, contact Jeff Hosler at 392-0237.

Biology Club Lecture is Set

The Biology Club is pleased to announce that Mr. Jack Dermid will be speaking on the topic of wildlife photography Wednesday, October 12, at 7:30 p.m. in M151. We are also organizing an overnight camping trip to Raven Rock October 22. Anyone who is interested is asked to please leave their name and phone number with the secretary of the Biology Department. The club will also be sponsoring a plant sale Friday October 15, in front of the cafeteria from 11:30 a.m. to 3:00 p.m. Also, for those interested, the club is sponsoring a social hour at the Patio every Friday at 3:00 p.m. A splendid time is guaranteed for all.

Chemistry Club Organizes

The Chemistry Club held their first organizational meeting Thursday, Sept. 29. The officers for 1977-78 are: President - Sandy Hales
Vice-Pres. - Joan Rovinski
Sec. - Mary Worrell
Treasurer - Hong Nguyen

The next meeting will be held Thursday night, Oct. 13 at 7:30 p.m. Plans will be discussed for the upcoming Physics club-Chemistry club softball game. New and old members are welcome to attend.

Don't forget Thursday is the deadline for ACS membership dues. Applications will be filled out at the meeting to be sent off no later than Monday. Please be there!

FCA Holds Meeting

The UNCW chapter of the Fellowship of Christian Athletes will meet Thursday at 7:30 in room 117 in Trask Coliseum. All interested persons, athletes or non-athletes, are invited to attend.

YDC Will Meet

The UNCW Young Democrats Club will meet Wednesday, October 19, at 4:30 p.m. in Hoggard 227.

English Club Wants Stories

The UNCW English Club requests any suspense or horror short stories to be submitted to the English Department no later than Wednesday, October 19.

These horror stories will be published in the "Apparition." This publication is specifically for Halloween and will be distributed on October 31. All stories will be appreciated.

If there are any questions, please call Bill Rapp at 799-2500.

Sigma Alpha Beta Will Meet

Sigma Alpha Beta will hold its October business meeting Thursday, October 13, at 3:00 p.m. in B111.

The yearbook photographer will also be at this meeting to get the club picture. All members are urged to attend this meeting.

"Yeoman of the Guard" Will be Presented as Joint Effort of Drama-Speech and Music Departments

The Yeoman of the Guard, which will be presented November 4, 5, and 6 in Kenai Auditorium, is the first production scheduled for this fall. The play, under co-production of the Drama and Speech and Music Departments, presents a mixture of humor and pathos in a lively entertaining framework.

The cast includes some of the more talented members of the faculty, student body, and local community. Complementing the action on stage will be a tremendous amount of equally talented and dedicated people who will form the Concert Choir, the Chorus of Yeomen and the orchestra.

In the play, Colonel Fairfax is under sentence of death, and this is the day fixed for his execution. A scornfully relative has preferred a charge of sorcery against him in order to inherit the fortune which comes to him should Fairfax die unmarried. Fortunately, the Colonel has two good friends in the Tower, the Lieutenant in charge and Sergeant Meryll of the Guards, to say nothing of the latter's daughter, Phoebe, who is in love with the dashing and handsome prisoner. Meryll's son, Leonard, has been appointed a Yeoman, and his father plans to keep him in hiding, get Fairfax out of his cell, and introduce him among the Yeomen as his "brave son, Leonard, with whose exploits all England is ringing." To Phoebe is entrusted the delicate task of getting the dungeon keys from Wilfred Shadbolt, the jailer, described by her father as "thy sour-faced admirer."

Meanwhile, Fairfax has explained the reason for his predicament to his friend, the Lieutenant, who undertakes to find him a wife in a hurry, so that the unscrupulous kinsman may be thwarted in his scheme to inherit. A reprieve has been issued, but the said kinsman has succeeded in delaying its delivery until after the time fixed for the execution.

And now a pair of wandering comedians come into the story—Jack Point and Elsie Maynard—and the Lieutenant arrives on the scene in time to prevent their being roughly handled by a boisterous crowd. He induces Elsie to consent to a brief marriage with Fairfax by the offer of a hundred crowns, badly needed by Elsie for her sick mother. Jack Point designs to marry Elsie himself, but on being assured that the bridegroom will certainly be dead within the hour, agrees to the plan, and shortly thereafter is appointed Jester to the Lieutenant.

The wily Phoebe successfully steals the keys from Wilfred, Fairfax is shaved and dressed as a Yeoman, the crowd assembles, the Yeomen are drawn up in line, the headman and the block are in place and all is ready for the execution when, amid a scene of wild excitement, it is discovered that Fairfax has escaped. Jack Point is in despair and Elsie, stunned by the realization of her position, faints in the arms of Fairfax as the curtain falls on the first act.

The second act opens with the confession of the Yeomen that their search for the criminal has been in vain, while Dame Carruthers and the crowd deride them for their failure. Elsie has been nursed back to health by the Dame, who reveals that the girl has talked in her sleep, and that from her disjointed murmurs it can be clearly gathered that she was married to Fairfax, who, still in his character as Leonard, is agreeably reassured to find that his bride is the lovely Elsie.

Now Point concocts a scheme with Wilfred to free Elsie from her present quandary, in pursuance of which scheme Wilfred fires a shot, and when the whole crowd gathers to find out what is the matter, the two conspirators declare that they discovered Fairfax in the act of escaping and shot him dead as he tried to swim the river. Whereupon the citizens hail Wilfred as a hero, and carry him off shoulder-high.

Point eagerly proposes to Elsie, but Fairfax, as Leonard, calmly steps in and carries her off, leaving both Point and Phoebe in despair. From the hysterical outburst of the latter, her lover Wilfred learns the truth, and Phoebe consents to marry him as the price of his silence with regard to the plot. The Dame has also heard the revelation, and promptly takes possession of Meryll, whom she has been pursuing for years, on the same terms.

Elsie enters for her wedding to the supposed Leonard. But the delayed reprieve has arrived—Fairfax is alive and free. Once more she is plunged into despair, but soon recognizes her husband, and all is set for a happy ending when the disconsolate Point arrives and the curtain falls upon his sorrow and his final collapse amid the merriment of the crowd.

Veterans Office Outlines New Regulations Governing VA Benefits

The Office of Veteran Affairs would like to welcome all returning and new students to the UNCW campus. We hope that the upcoming year will be a successful one for you, academically as well as social.

Those veterans and dependents who have not come by the Office of Veteran Affairs (OVA) should do so as soon as possible. The Veterans Administration has changed its policy concerning enrollment certification. In the past it was possible to be certified for more than one year at a time. That no longer is true. Certification can only be done for a one-year period. At the end of that year one must be certified again.

What does all this mean? For example: a veteran registers in school for the first time and applies for VA benefits. That person can be certified for the fall and spring semesters and both sessions of summer school. This is a one year period and the veteran/dependent must be re-certified for the fall semester of the next school year. This policy does have drawbacks in that one must experience the waiting period of 45 to 60 days from the day the VA regional office receives certification.

This year is the first year of this policy and many of you have learned about it the hard way! NO CHECK! So please keep this in mind. Remember, it is up to you to keep the OVA informed of any changes in your status, dependents or address.

The OVA has compiled a list of those veterans and dependents that now have current certification. If you are a veteran and/or dependent and wish to receive VA educational benefits, please check the bulletin boards in the buildings you frequent the most.

The Office of Veteran Affairs would like for all veterans and dependents receiving VA educational benefits to be well informed and up-to-date on matters affecting you as a recipient. The OVA has an excellent handout available upon request. Please come by Alderman 205-H and pick one up. We also would like to remind you of our bulletin board which is located near the Chancellor's office of the Alderman Building.

The Tutorial Assistance offered by the VA has been increased to a maximum of $65.00 per month. If you are having difficulty in any subject area please utilize this service.

It is not counted against your basic entitlement. To utilize Tutorial Assistance, one must:

(1) acquire a statement from the OVA for the instructor to verify your need for tutorial assistance. (2) Come by the OVA for necessary forms and a listing of persons qualified to tutor in the subject area in question. (3) If you have an individual in mind who is not on the OVA listing, make sure he or she is certified to be a tutor by the department chairman in that subject area.

Requirements for tutors are: (1) Enrollment in or completion of course. (2) Better than satisfactory performance in that course. (3) Availability to devote a sufficient number of hours per week for tutoring. (4) Signed certification from the department chairman granting approval of your services as a tutor.

(Note: Tutors can be a student, instructor, or graduate, as long as they are certified by the department chairman of the subject area.)

Veterans and dependents receiving VA educational benefits who are not enrolled through Continuing Education (non-degree) are required to pass at least three hours their first semester in attendance and maintain the following grade point average:

Hours	GPA
1-6	1.20
7-12	1.50
13-18	1.80
19-27	2.00

If you are currently below your respective average you are required to bring this average up by the end of the spring semester 1978. Failure to attain this required average will result in termination of your VA educational benefits. After a probationary period the VA may request that you go to Winston-Salem for counseling before resumption of your entitlement. So stick with it and don't let this happen to you.

As many of you know, the OVA has a new director, Tony L. Caulder. He is a former student at this university and looks forward to serving the campus now and in the future. His extension is 263.

Petition Circulated in Support of Literary Magazine

SGA President Karin Whaley issued her support for the Senate's stand. "If I were in the Senate, I would have voted with the majority of senators" on the Atlantis question, she stated. "I agree with what they did last week," Whaley said in support of the Senate's stand behind its original position. "They're the same senators" who voted last year on the same matter, she continued. Dispelling any suggestion that the Senate action was a form of censorship, Whaley indicated that such considerations should not be taken seriously.

Whaley applauded the Senate for not voting the Atlantis totally out of the budget, saying the senators had been right to "give them (Atlantis staff) a trial period." She added that the Senate should see the upcoming fall issue and "if it's good . . . in the opinion of the majority of students," a reallocation should be made.

The President expressed doubt that a student referendum would be the best measure of student support, however. She noted that it would likely be biased, probably in favor of Atlantis.

Whaley said that she, like many senators, had heard comments from students who were not impressed by recent Atlantis issues. Of the senators, she stated, "They are not just blindly cutting out Atlantis. They're doing it for reasons . . . (and) responding to student likes and dislikes." She noted that of those students who had expressed approval of Atlantis to her, most were "English-oriented."

"I don't have any magic solution," Whaley stated. She added that having students pay for a copy of Atlantis would not be a good idea.

For Freshman President Harry Pilos, last week's Senate meeting was his first. While conceding that he does not know all the reasons behind the Senate action, he expressed "shock" that they would consider eliminating the magazine, adding that his opinion was "from an outsider's point of view."

Pilos said that he considered a literary magazine an "important part" of a university and that it "relates more to school" than several other groups who have received SGA funding. He noted that he had requested more information about the situation "for the benefit of all freshmen" at last week's meeting, but that no specific details were offered.

President Whaley said that the SGA would be "giving Atlantis a chance to prove the Senate wrong" by waiting for the fall issue and then deciding on the magazine's future.

With the circulation of the petition this week, it appears that the Atlantis staff is not willing to wait that long.

English Club Off to a Good Start

The English Club of UNCW got off to a good start with the completion of a successful book sale. The club sold hundreds of books, raising money for the UNCW Jessie Rehder Memorial Fund.

The officers for the English Club have been elected as follows:

President - BH/ Rapp
Vice-President - Betty Salyer
Secretary-Treasurer - Laura Hales
Publications Coordinator - Ellen Honeycutt
Program Coordinator - Bobbie Padgett

Everyone is invited to join the English Club, regardless of their major. The meetings are held every other Thursday in Kennan 201 at 3:00. (Notices will be posted beforehand.)

There are many activities planned throughout the semester for the English Club, such as Halloween and Christmas parties and poetry readings (one each semester).

There will also be a film series entitled "Film from Literature." The purpose of the series is to show films based on well-known literary works. Students and the general public are invited to attend the films free of charge.

The fall film series will include the following three films:

Animal Farm will be shown

Monday, October 24, at 7:00 p.m. in the Randall Library auditorium. The film, in color animation, is based on the novel by George Orwell.

On Wednesday, November 9, Ulysses will be shown at 7:00 p.m. in King Hall auditorium (Education-Psychology building). This is a film version of James Joyce's Ulysses, one of the most controversial novels of the twentieth century.

Great Expectations, the film adaptation of the novel by Charles Dickens, will be shown Thursday, December 1, at 7:00 p.m. in King Hall auditorium. The film stars John Mills and Jean Simmons.

Guard Against Crime in Your Room

By Tim Bass

From 1960-1973, crime ballooned to shivering altitudes. In the '60's alone crime rose 176 per cent, our population grew 13 per cent during this time. Specifically, murder was up 90 per cent, assaults up 156 per cent, rape up 174 per cent, and robbery up 248 per cent. And in the past two years, UNCW is no exception to these statistics—we've told you about the campus crime craze. Here are some more hints that hopefully can help you hack those horrible headaches.

Protect yourself in your room:

Keep your door locked. An open door is an invitation to robbery; the only incompleteness is the fact that it is not engaged.

Lock your room or office door if you're working alone after hours at night.

Check for who is knocking before you open the door.

Never leave doors propped open for friends who are coming over later.

Hang onto your keys:

Don't lend your keys to anyone.

Don't leave keys lying around in your room. Your pocket is the safest keeping place.

When leaving your car at a repair shop, leave only the ignition key.

If your keys are lost or stolen, report it. It is possible, and advisable, to have your lock replaced.

Next week—protecting yourself while you're walking or driving.

Students Hope for Grant

Several Marine Science students at UNCW are preparing two proposals—with hopes of obtaining grants for estuary research from the National Science Foundation.

The proposals concern:

1. The migration of larval (young) menhaden in estuaries.
2. The influence of dredgings and barriers on the distribution of commercially important fisheries, i.e., shrimp, oysters, clams and fishes.

The proposals must include a brief narrative on the purpose, methods, possible findings and the economic importance as well as proving that there is adequate manpower, facilities, knowledge, ability and desire to accomplish the proposed research.

The students advisor, Dr. Bane, urges them to prepare the proposals as part of their student projects.

UNCW is one of the few schools who managed to obtain one of these grants last year.

Court Justices Meet Briefly

All members of the Student Superior Court are asked to meet in the SGA office on Thursday, October 13, at 4:00 p.m. This will be a short meeting.

Fire Damage to Trask Coliseum Estimated Between $5,000 and $7,000

By Ray Warren

UNCW's new Trask Coliseum, not yet officially dedicated, was damaged by fire last week. The fire, which broke out Monday afternoon (Oct. 10) caused moderate damage to the outer side of the building facing the tennis courts on Reigle Road.

According to Mr. Tyroane Rowell of the Information Services office, the fire began in a pile of debris and boxes piled next to the building. The boxes were placed there by workmen installing lockers in the new facility.

The fire was apparently quite intense, as the heat was sufficient to crack seven of the limestone caps on which the building rests. In addition, a large area of brick was discolored and approximately 20 to 30 feet of cornice work along the roof damaged. Fortunately, no interior damage to the building was reported.

Comptroller Bob Walton reports that it will be several weeks before an estimate of damages can be completed. Due to the newness of the structure, the repair work will probably be done by the building contractor, E. W. Jerdon Co. of Myrtle Beach. Mr. Walton said he believes the cost will be between $5,000 and $7,000. As for who will pay for the repairs, Mr. Walton reports that "it is still under discussion." Either the insurance company for the contractor, or for the sub-contractor in charge of installing the lockers, may have to foot the bill. Walton emphasized, however, that "somebody's insurance will pay."

The exact cause of the blaze has not been determined. According to the office of security, however, arson has not been ruled out. The fire is not expected to delay the opening of the new coliseum for the Wake Forest game November 26.

BOG Ruling Eliminates Music Degree

by Robert S. Brown III

A year-long study by a review committee of the Board of Governors has recommended that the Music Education Program at UNCW be eliminated, along with 45 other teacher education programs in the 16 campus University of North Carolina system.

What this means to UNCW is that no new students will be allowed to enter the Music Education Program after July, 1978, and the Music Department will discontinue at least three method courses next fall. Those students already involved in the program will be carried through till they complete their degree.

The cutback comes just when the Music Department was beginning to gather momentum as a result of a renewed emphasis in music courses and greater student involvement.

It is feared that with the loss of the program the people who would normally take those courses will go elsewhere and the talent will be lost to our campus.

The finding of the committee showed that there were only 3.4 graduates per year from the Music Education Program in the last 10 years. This percentage placed it in the "unproductive unit" category.

However, this finding failed to measure or include the high quality of graduates acknowledged by all, the large number of students who begin working on their Music Education degree here and later go elsewhere to complete the degree, or those who come to UNCW after receiving a degree to pick up some Music Education courses.

If there was a way to investigate these instances and the demand was found to be great enough, UNCW could petition the Board of Governors to retain the program.

Fortunately, this decision does not toll destruction for our Music Department. The department still offers a B.A. degree in Creative Arts (Music), which includes mostly music courses and 12 hours of art and drama.

And obviously, since the core of any music degree is the same, the department could still train people with the faculty and facilities here for the Music Education degree and they could take the courses they lacked at some other university.

Dr. Richard Deas, chairman of the Music Department, commented that the decision by the committee will certainly "take the wind out of the sails of the whole faculty but I don't know how much."

Senate Meets Thursday

By Bobby Parker

The Student Senate met in regular session last Thursday night with Vice-president Ken Lilly presiding. The Senate heard reports from two standing committees, allocated funds to the B. Frank Hall Philosophy and Religion Society, and were given a report from the campus radio station, WLOZ-FM.

In her president's report, Karin Whaley discussed the recent Board of Trustees meeting at which she learned of use policies for the new gymnasium. She stated that a basic cost of $400 would be charged for a concert or similar activity and added that 8 per cent of gross ticket sales would also be paid for use of the facility.

"I think that 8 per cent is ridiculous," Whaley said, noting that some members of the Board "had no knowledge as to what was reasonable" to charge in comparison with other universities.

Steve Chiappi, chairman of the Fine Arts Committee, reported on that group's financial affairs this year. He stated that of the $10,000 original (See Allocation, page 4)

Senator Says Students Subjected to Biased News Accounts

To the Editor:
As of late, the student body has been treated to great deal of news concerning the Atlantis, in the Seahawk. Unfortunately, many distortions and conflicting statements have been made concerning this publication, several of which I would like to address myself to at this time.

The first and perhaps most severe distortion has been the assertion that the attempts of the Senate to insure that work in the Atlantis has a broad appeal constitutes a breach of their First Amendment right to freedom of the press. Nothing could be further from the truth.

The Atlantis is in no way a free publication. It is funded in entirety by the SGA, and is therefore a government publication.

The Senate, like any other publisher, naturally reserves the right to decide what type of work it will, and will not, publish.

A second example of the type of distortion made by the Seahawk concerning the Atlantis may be taken from the paper itself (Seahawk, October 12).

"The Senate's proposal to have the question of funding for Atlantis put to a student referendum is just short of ridiculous. If the senators feel that Atlantis should be axed, let them do it and bear the responsibility. A referendum would be a poor representation of student sentiment anyway since less than 10 per cent would probably vote."

Referendum Advisory

In the first place, the proposed referendum would be merely advisory. It would have the same effect as the petition that Atlantis supporters are currently circulating, except that it would be conducted by an unbiased pollster (the Board of Elections), as opposed to a group of heavily biased Atlantis staffers and supporters.

In addition, a petition, conveniently, only registers positive support; leaving the Senate without any idea of how many students desire the Atlantis vs. the number of students who oppose its publication.

Secondly, the Seahawk, for some reason, seems to feel that a ten per cent vote in a referendum is not representative, while a majority vote in the Senate is. What the Seahawk fails to realize (or simply chooses to ignore) is the fact that the senators were elected by that same ten per cent minority.

One must assume that the other ninety per cent of the student body is neutral on the subject (and, unfortunately, practically every other subject) leaving the remaining active students to cast the deciding votes. Therefore, a ten per cent vote would be as much or more representative than any vote of the senators.

Exaggerated Demand

Another major misrepresentation on the part of the Seahawk and Atlantis staffers alike, is an overexaggeration of the demand for the Atlantis.

The classic argument of the Atlantis supporters goes something like: "Last semester we put 'X' Atlantises all over campus, and after only 'Y' days there were only 'Z' left." There are several reasons why this logic is not an accurate indication of demand for Atlantis.

If the SGA were to place several thousand Osmond Brothers albums around campus, a great many students (myself included) would undoubtedly take a copy. This phenomenon, however, would not signal a surge in demand for Osmond Brothers records here on campus. All this would indicate is that since these students had no voice in SGA spending policies, and since they had already been forced to pay for them, they would of course go ahead and pick a copy up.

So it goes with the Atlantis as a matter of fact, the Atlantis staffers have wholeheartedly rejected any test (such as subscriptions-students desiring an Atlantis to pay for a small fraction of publishing costs, and a student referendum) which would serve as a true indicator of demand for that magazine. One can then only assume that the Atlantis staff and supporters have severe doubts as to the true popularity of that magazine, and find it much easier to beg their case to the Senate than to even attempt to raise a portion of their own funds, as other organizations do.

Quite frankly, I find it hard to believe that the Atlantis staffers have anything other than their own best interests in mind. If anything else were the case, they would both accept and welcome some sort of popularity test for the Atlantis other than their own staff members and supporters circulating a petition which fails to accurately demonstrate a ratio of supporters versus detractors of their publication.

UNCW Becoming Technical School?

To the Editor:

What is the difference between a technical school and a university? Could the difference lie in the pragmatic value assigned to intellectual opportunities? Does the difference lie in the range of questions to be answered and concepts to be explained? I hope so, because if certain members of the Senate have their way, we are due for a name change. I'm tired of the old one anyway.

Everyone knows that a dozen "literary" publications, such as Atlantis, are not worth their weight in beer. If only those poor, misguided neurotics of the past could have been more practical minded, they would have been happier and so would we.

If Poe would have directed his energies to more practical applications, we wouldn't have to be required to read the nonsensical confessions of his soul. If Socrates had only drank Coors instead of hemlock, we would not be confused with his useless questionings of truth, goodness, or beauty. We could instead direct ourselves to more important questions concerning our lives such as finding the easiest way to get a degree and find a job, or when the next steak night in the cafeteria is.

Best of all, I am glad we are fortunate enough to have representatives of the students (the Senate) who are capable of knowing both what art is and whether it is good or bad. They also know that "might makes right" when the majority speaks.

I think we should let our majority (students of economic and science technology) not only decide whether the next issue of Atlantis is good or bad, but whether it should be continued at all. Next, we should work on the Fine Arts Committee because I am sure the majority of us could care less whether Twyla Tharp's of Paul Taylor's dancers come here again.

When we have accomplished this, I think we can justifiably strike the name "university" from the title of our institution.

"The Technical School of North Carolina at Wilmington" doesn't sound so bad after all. I guess I may as well get used to it.

Note-Senators referring to the subject matter of Atlantis as redundant and morbid fail to see that their opinion concerns a publication that is as much a reflection of this institution, and themselves in particular, as it is of the "English-oriented."

If we have that talk and complain about the quality of Atlantis, then let the consumers become the producers . . . if they can.

Petition to Show Student Interest

To the editor:

Rather than write a lengthy letter defending the Atlantis, I would just like to say, as editor of Atlantis, the following to the SGA.

The purpose of the Atlantis petition is to gain enough UNCW student signatures to convince you that there is more than enough interest in the Atlantis so that, by allocating the necessary funds to publish a quality magazine in quantity to match student interest, you will be representing a large percentage of the student body-especially a larger percentage than the 5 to 10 percent that elected you to your office.

Bakke Case Is Not One of Racial Discrimination

Can anyone really believe that Allen Bakke—today a conservative cause celeb—was a victim of discrimination? Call it "reverse discrimination" or what you will, the idea that white males are being deprived of their constitutional rights because of the color of their skin is a mockery of what the civil rights movement for American blacks is all about.

Bakke is the medical student from California who was not admitted to that state's medical school because there simply wasn't room for him. There were 100 class positions available when Bakke applied, but 16 of those were reserved for minority students. Bakke was not included on the list for the remaining 84 seats, and now contends that he was more qualified than many of the minority students.

Bakke claims that because of the "quota" of 16 minority students per 100-member class, he was not admitted to the med school by reason of the color of his skin, an opinion with which the California State Supreme Court has agreed. Never mind, Bakke says, that his "qualifications" outmatched the minority students; his is a clear case of discrimination.

So he says.

At least now Bakke will not have to worry about a livelihood if he doesn't make it to and through med school. By the time he writes a book, completes a turn on the lecture circuit, and, perhaps, sells his soul to a television producer, he'll be able to do pretty much what he wants to do.

Behind Their Martyr

As usual, Bakke and the nations conservative elements, who are wholeheartedly behind their martyr, are taking a very shallow, dim look at the reality of his case. Their simplification of the complications serves their purposes fine—anything to challenge authority. But they also miss the crucial specifics of this important social question.

The Bakke case is not one of discrimination at all. Just like the 100 students who gained entry into the California medical school, he was judged on his qualifications, and his qualifications alone.

The question that may be raised here can be answered with a clarification of the definition of "qualifications." The qualifications of those medical students were not limited to previous grade performance or test scores. By necessity, they included the expectation of the role that any one student might perform as a doctor in modern society.

California and the nation need qualified minority doctors—blacks, Spanish-speaking, Indian, etc.—in numbers which reflect that particular group's percentage of the population. This does not mean that if California's population is 10 percent black, the practicing physicians of the state should also be 10 percent black. But one percentage should—reflect—the other.

Other Qualifications

Other important factors to consider when qualifications are weighed include the disadvantages one has suffered on the way to a professional school. Poor blacks—many from the socially and culturally deprived families of the inner cities—are to be given special consideration because they did not begin on equal footing with their affluent white counterparts.

This same principal works with a golfer's handicap—figures are juggled to start things off on an even level.

Bakke's defenders seem quite pleased that they appear to be on the side of "equal justice for all" and against discrimination. But they are so only in their own eyes. They are forgetting the horrendous history of discrimination against blacks for which our country is infamous.

Some would argue that individual citizens should not have to "pay" for oppression that occurred in the past. No, individuals do not have to pay; society does. And as a member of society, any individual may at some particular time feel that he is being singled out to bear society's debt on his own. But we must remember that they were also individuals who suffered the humiliations of racial injustice through the years.

To those who see this opinion as vindictive and simplistic, I have made a major point. It is indeed simplistic to view discrimination as the mere acts of individuals.

We should not see past discrimination as against individuals, and we should not see the case of Allen Bakke in terms of one individual's suffering. Any attempt to reverse the discriminatory trend should not and can not be seen as an attempt to punish individual men. Such are the efforts to correct social wrongs and are aimed at society as a whole.

UNC Case Differs

I have previously argued, in this newspaper, against the recent HEW regulations which the UNC Board of Governors received from Washington for the purpose of speeding desegregation. I stand against those guidelines now, but some of you may wonder what the difference is between the UNC case and the Bakke case.

Of the 16 minority students who were admitted to the California school, all were qualified (academically) for admission. Not even Bakke has disputed that.

But under HEW guidelines, the UNC system would have been forced to offer compensatory instruction for those blacks admitted to the school who could not otherwise remain academically eligible. Obviously, if make-up work has to be instituted, some of the students are not qualified for admission.

The decision of the Supreme Court will answer some very vital questions that will have a tremendous impact on the future of numerous social issues. It is good that this test has finally come before the high court so that, once and for all, those questions will be answered.

Bakke Never Rode in Back of a Bus

By Jon East

Reprinted from the Daily Tar Heel

Homer Plessy had a mixture in his blood: seven-eighths white, one-eighth black. He was arrested when he refused to ride in the "colored" coach of a railroad train as Louisiana statutes required in 1895. At first he denied being Negro, but then he decided to go to court. Plessy said the statutes violated the 13th and 14th Amendments and told the court that state-enforced segregation stamped Negroes with a badge of inferiority.

The court said no. It told him that separate was equal.

Allen Bakke wasn't born when the decree was made. "Separate but equal": a simple enough proposition. But the power was monstrous: a legal sanction for racism; a barrier between races, a world geared for whites.

William Grier and Price Cobbs were trying to describe to the nation what they called the "Black Norm". Grier and Cobbs were black psychiatrists who studied black behavior and found character traits in blacks that were considered pathological. However they called such traits "adaptive devices." They said that every black must develop a "cultural paranoia," a profound distrust of whites. He must be on guard to protect against hurt for his own survival.

Grier and Cobbs said that every black suffers, but must hide the misery. He develops a sadness, a cultural depression, normal, they say, for a black.

Allen Bakke concerns himself with defining the degree of special help owed to minorities—"all deliberate speed" is enough. Allen Bakke never rode in the back of a bus.

"It could have been any black man that night, I guess. It was at the time civil rights protests were everywhere. I was walking down Tarron City Road to go to the store for a loaf of bread to make sandwiches. This car drove up with seven white men in it, and they started shouting at me, but I kept walking.

"Nigger come over here . . . Nigger, you one of those loud-mouthed Martin Luther Kings niggers?"

"I felt sick. They knocked me down and jumped on me. I tried to scream, but the heaviest man pressed a crowbar across my throat . . . they stripped my clothes . . . the pain."

Aaron slowly unbuckles his Army jacket and strips to the waist. Cut into the flesh across his chest are the letters KKK. Then he unbuckles his belt and let his pants fall to the floor. Heavy scars cover Aaron's groin, and where testicles once were is a mesh of crude scars that crisscross his crotch.

Tears stream down his face.

The talks of goals and quotas, of quality point averages and test scores. Allen Bakke never knew Jim Crow. He never knew fear.

Linda was only 11, a small girl whose bright eyes lit up and whose pudgy cheeks parted when she smiled. But she didn't like walking 55 blocks through railroad tracks and crowded streets to attend the black schools across town. She wanted to go to that white school five blocks from her home. Being that young, it was easy enough to dismiss her desire as naive. And maybe she would have given up trying if her dad, Oliver, hadn't insisted. And maybe she would have gone on wondering why it had to be that way, why the white kids had to learn by themselves, why her skin placed her in a different school, why she couldn't have what the white kids had.

So, perhaps she was oblivious to what happened on that day in late May 1954. She didn't know that her name would be recorded in history books. She couldn't feel the revelations, the power of the precedent. She didn't understand all of that. She just wanted to go to that white school five blocks away.

And she did.

Allen Bakke talks of discrimination in reverse. He says it's unjust. Things aren't fair. He was too young to know Linda

Libertarianism Not Conservatism

To the Editor:

I was heartened to read of Mr. Warren's pronouncement of himself as a libertarian in the last issue of the Seahawk, but unfortunately, he chose to equate libertarian philosophy with conservatism, which it definitely is not. Although the two ideologies share some viewpoints concerning economic freedoms, libertarian philosophy also bases itself on many premises favored by liberals.

Philosophically, libertarianism is a distinct line of thought in itself rather than simply a combination of the two traditional branches. There are so many similar ideas condoned by both liberals and conservatives that it is actually easy for a person to switch back and forth as exemplified in the statement, "yesterday's liberals are today's conservatives."

Wholehearted agreement is expressed by both groups on the most basic and important question of human actions; that is, as the final solution to any argument of freedom some higher authority has the right to dispose of an individual and his property for the supposed benefit of some esoteric social cause. Some higher authority is defined as government, society, or specifically, any one other than one's own self.

Libertarians refute this travesty of freedom completely. There never have been, are, nor ever will be social rights which supercede the natural rights of individuals to live their lives as they so desire as long as they grant this same right to all others, and NO ONE has the moral right to deny individuals from living thus.

Conservatives and liberals each deny so many of these basic individual rights as to be synonymous terms with oppression and coercion.

Conservatism is definitely not a misunderstood movement, but is only one side of the same coin. Belief in liberalism and conservatism is to condone as correct the use of force by one group over another, and the sacrifice of some for the votes of others.

New Counselor Joins University Staff

New to the UNCW campus, Nancy H. Williams is a counselor in the Counseling and Testing Center in the Alderman Administration Building. Nancy received the Master of Education degree from UNCH in 1969 with a major in Counseling and Personnel Work. She completed an internship in the Counseling and Testing Center at Chapel Hill. Since that time she has been working with students in the areas of personal/emotional counseling and academic and vocational planning. Before coming to UNCW this fall, she was involved with secondary school systems in Raleigh and Wilmington. In addition to counseling with students, the work included serving as a consultant with teachers, parents, and school staffs.

Originally from Jackson, Tennessee, Nancy moved to North Carolina in 1953 where she has lived and made a home for her family. The family now consists of two sons and a daughter who are attending universities in this state. The daughter, Sally, is a student on our campus. Having three of her own, Nancy feels that she has an inside view on the needs and aspirations of college students.

In addition to counseling and testing the new counselor has been involved with special skill workshops on the UNCW campus. With the aid of Nancy and other counselors, recent workshops have been conducted in study skills and in test-taking techniques. Presently the counselors are working with a training group to prepare special practicum students to conduct rap sessions with UNCW students in the area of human sexuality; the sessions will be held at People to People Learning Experience About Sex (APPLES.)

Presently living at Wrightsville Beach, Nancy likes residing in this part of the state. She is especially happy with the new job in the Counseling Center, and she looks forward to a continuing relationship with the students, faculty, and staff at UNCW.

Mark Sanchez, newly appointed chairman of the Dance Committee, stated that none of that committee's funds have been spent to date. Sanchez said that three dances are being planned for this year—in November, at Homecoming, and in the spring.

Charter committee chairman Tom Hunt presented that charter request from the B. Frank Hall Philosophy and Religion Society, which was approved by the Senate.

Greg Larrimore of radio station WLOZ-FM reported on the progress toward FM broadcasting by the station. He noted that testing was still in progress last week and approval for permanent FM

English Club Wants Stories

The UNCW English Club requests any suspense or horror short stories to be submitted to the English Department no later than Wednesday, October 19.

These horror stories will be published in the "Apparition." This publication is specifically for Halloween and will be distributed on October 31. All stories will be appreciated.

If there are any questions, please call Bill Rapp at 799-2500.

The Student Senate will meet this week at 6:30 p.m. instead of the usual 7:30. The meeting is in C218 and is open to all students.

broadcasting would come within one week or ten days. Larrimore said that the station presently has eight licensed disc jockeys and also that the facilities are not complete but are operable.

Dennis Robbins of the Philosophy and Religion Department spoke on the P&R Society to request the funding from the Senate. He requested $200 for a lecture series, $200 for club activities, and $134 for expense money for nine students to attend a philosophy conference in Ontario, Canada.

In response to Senate questions, Robbins said there are no departmental funds available for the club's needs and that the conference would offer UNCW a chance to be represented at an international event. The Senate approved a $200 allocation to the society for its lectures.

Senators Jim Franks, Shirley Bryant, Wayne Bryant, Steve Bowen, Brad Williams, Pam Williams (exc.), and Herman Smith (exc.) were absent.

In order for senators to attend the "Wrong Show" next Thursday night, the meeting will begin at 6:30 p.m. in room 218 of the Chemistry Building.

Biology Club Plans Camping

The Biology Club would like to thank everyone who supported our plant sale. It was a complete sell-out. We are also planning an overnight camping trip to Raven Rock on October 22. Those interested are asked to leave their name and phone number in the Biology Club box in the department office no later than today.

We would also like to remind everyone of our social hour at the Patio every Friday at 3:00 p.m. A splendid time is guaranteed.

Fledgling to Have Picture Sale

There will be a picture sale in the Fledgling office on October 24 through October 28. The pictures on sale are from the 1977 yearbook for those who are interested.

Subscriptions for the 1978 yearbook are still on sale for the low price of $3.00. Get yours now before the price goes up to $4.00.

All organizations should get in contact with the Fledgling office to have their pictures taken for the 1978 Fledgling. If there is no one in the office, please leave a note on the office door. Hurry, because layout deadlines are nearing.

Hawks Return to Win Column

After some disappointing losses which cost them a spot in the southern rankings, UNCW's soccer squad got back on the winning track by beating both Pembroke and East Carolina in games last week.

Last year, the Seahawks routed Pembroke 16-0 in a game which also got the Hawks back into the win column. Though this year's victory margin, 9-0 was not as big, it still gave the Wilmington squad a big emotional lift.

"It was a good game for us," said head coach Calvin Lane. "As for others...have been tight. There was no pressure on us, and we could enjoy the game more."

Lenny Branson lead the UNCW scoring with a three goal hat trick, with all three goals coming in the first half. Gil Castella followed with two goals. Rick Hayes, Chris O'Neil, Steve Paul, and Mike Schaeffer all contributed one goal to the winning effort.

It really can go without saying that UNCW controlled the game. Their domination of the statistics, however, is unbelievable. The Hawks had 44 shots on goal and twelve corner kicks, compared with only 4 goal shots and two corner kicks on the Warriors of Pembroke.

After the Pembroke win, the Seahawks looked to ECU, their last home match of the season.

"We really wanted to win," said Lane, "in order to get back in the ratings."

Though the Hawks took a 2-0 halftime lead (they went on to win 3-0), Lane felt his team was "flat" much of the first half. "We couldn't generate much offense," he added.

UNCW opened the scoring very early in the game when, after 3 1/2 minutes of play, Gil Castella grabbed the ball on a Tim Cribbon throw-in and booted it in for the score. Twenty minutes later, Castella scored again on an assist by Steve Paul. Paul took the ball right to the goal, and when he found himself covered by the Pirate goalie he merely passed it off to Castella, who was wide open with a clear shot at the goal.

The Hawks third and final goal came after only 45 seconds into the second half. Eddie Brock made the goal, with an assist by Castella.

"We had many scoring opportunities," said Lane. "Our passing and field play was very good." Lane also congratulated goalies Charlie Ingold and Rusty Russ and his defensive fullbacks for posting another shutout. The squad has six shutouts in the eleven games they've played.

Their record at this point is 8-3. They dropped out of the southern rankings after the loss to State two weeks ago, but it is hoped they will jump back into the ratings after the two impressive victories last week.

UNCW's next games are both this weekend in Virginia. On Saturday Wilmington faces William and Mary, and Sunday they meet the University of Richmond. The William and Mary game should be extremely rough for the Hawks, as the Virginia school has a record of 8-1 and is ranked fourth in the Mid-Atlantic region. "We're looking forward to it (The William and Mary game)," said Lane. "It seems like we play well against good ball clubs."

In team scoring, Castella holds a commanding lead with an unofficial 16 goals and 5 assists for a total of 19 points. Nino Fleri is second followed closely by Chi Chi Mercado.

Intramurals Off to Slow Start

The intramural program admittedly is off to a slow start. This has been due to many reasons; moving to new facilities, the director incapacitated for several months from surgery, and the usual student apathy. At least part of this is out of the way and flag football and soccer are scheduled for the rest of October and part of November.

Six teams turned in rosters by the deadline dates. Five soccer teams have turned in their rosters and play for them begins October 17.

The big sport of basketball for men and women will begin in the middle of November and continue until March 1. Last year 30 teams participated in the four leagues of teams of comparable abilities.

Other activities to be announced later will include the swimming program of races, a moderated form of water polo, and innertube basketball.

There is expected to be big turn out for the about to be announced racquetball tournaments. Handball will be a new addition if there is sufficient interest.

Volleyball will feature mixed teams of three men and three women as well as tournaments for men and women if there are requests.

In the past, archery has been lightly supported as has badminton. Punt, Pass and kick for men and women will held later in the fall with the spring featuring the ever popular softball. Don't forget tennis and other activities such as cross country and golf.

Some students will ask how they may get into these activities? There is an official intramural bulletin board as you enter Hanover Hall (old gym) by the side door near the entrance to the women's locker room. All official notices of activities are posted well in advance of the sport and further information may be obtained by seeing the intramural director, Mr. "Pop" Warner in Hanover Hall.

Come on out and enjoy an activity. Your change of pace may be your first step to physical, mental and social improvement. GO INTRAMURALS!

Fleri Still on Injured List

Injuries and illness have plagued the Seahawk soccer squad this year, but none have done so much damage as the injured knee of Nino Fleri.

Fleri hurt that knee in the Hawk's 2-1 upset loss to Atlantic Christian College. Since then, he has seen little playing time and is a doubtful starter the rest of the season. "He is trying to play," said head coach Calvin Lane, "but he just can't run very well."

He is currently the season's second leading scorer, and Lane lists him as one of the program's all-time scorers.

"Nino just has a knack for scoring," added Lane. "He gives the game a whole new dimension. When he's out, it puts more pressure on Castella to score."

A truly outstanding player, Fleri was a standout his first two years at UNCW. This year and last year, however, injuries have severely curtailed his scoring. A knee injury sidelined him much of the 1976 season, as the Hawks dropped to 1-5 before coming on with strong finish toward the end of the season.

She-Hawks Face Tough Week

This week will offer a severe test of skill and stamina for the UNCW Women's tennis team, as they play four matches in five days, and without the services of their number one seed.

Debbie Goulding, the number one seed, will be out for the whole week with an ankle injury. Debbie also missed last week's ECU match, which the She-hawks lost 9-0. The ladies are now 2-3 on the season. Due to the loss of Goulding, everyone will move up in the lineup.

The reason for the rough week lies in the cancellation of two of last week's matches because of bad weather. Matches with Pembroke State and Methodist College will be made up this week along with regularly scheduled matches against St. Mary's and the UNC JV team. The She-hawks will face St. Mary's College in a 2 p.m. home contest and return home Friday for a 3 p.m. match against Methodist College.

Looking towards the upcoming week, Coach Jane Batson commented, "This week is definitely going to be a challenge for our girls. The schools we are playing all have talented people which should help our girls improve and should make for a high level of play for every match."

Mistakes Prove Costly for Gridders

The UNCW Football Club committed four crucial turnovers, and UNC-Chapel Hill took advantage of them to hand the Seahawks their fifth straight loss of the season 19-6.

UNCW opened the scoring with a one-yard plunge by Linder on their second series with the ball. This capped a 37-yard drive in 13 plays. The conversion attempt failed.

A clipping penalty against Carolina gave the Tar Heels the ball on their own 25-yard line. On first down, the Heels attempted to run the option but were thrown for a fifteen yard loss by Bill Morris, Tom Brown, and Hooks of UNCW. Three plays later, Carolina punted, giving the Seahawks the ball on the Carolina 37. UNCW quickly drove ten yards in two plays before quarterback David Moore fumbled and the Tar Heels recovered.

Carolina then took the ball and drove 68 yards to score on a pass from Rick Tambouri to Kip Frassa. The extra point attempt failed.

Shortly, the Tar Heels were again knocking on the Wilmington goal line. A Carolina fumble on the Seahawk 2-yard line, was recovered by UNCW co-captain Tom Brown to stop the drive, however. Unable to move the ball, the Hawks were forced to punt, giving Carolina the ball on the Wilmington 48-yard line. On the next play, a UNCW defensive back slipped on coverage, and Tar Heel quarterback Tambouri hit Bennie Goldstein with a touch-down pass. This time, the extra point attempt by Buck Wells was a success, giving Carolina a 13-6 halftime lead.

The second half began with the Seahawks receiving the Carolina kick-off, returning it to the 32-yard line. After failing to move the ball, Seahawk Jimmy Montague boomed a punt 60 yards to give Carolina the ball on their own seven yard line. The Hawk defense jarred another fumble loose, however, this one being recovered by Bill Morris on the 20. Again UNCW could not get moving, fumbling the ball away once more. Carolina's drive was stalled on the Seahawk 46, where they punted. The Seahawk deep back signaled for the fair catch on the 21-yard line, but fumbled the ball away, giving Carolina the ball. The Tar Heels then scored on a 21 yard pass play from Tambouri to Frassa. The extra point attempt failed.

UNCW was not through with their mistakes, as the next drive was halted by a lost fumble on the 'Hawks' 41. Carolina was unable to move the ball and Wells attempted a 46 yard field goal which was unsuccessful. Neither team could muster any offense until Carolina pushed to the UNCW 41 and tried a 61 yard field goal, which was blocked by Bill Morris. The game ended shortly afterward with Carolina winning 19-6.

Coach Frank Zerbinos expressed his satisfaction in the greatly improved punting game. Punter Jimmy Montague had 5 punts for a 41.8 yard average, his longest traveling a whopping 75 yards.

Football Club to go NCAA?

Right now if you were to mention that UNCW could have a competitive NCAA football team, most people would question your sanity. However, for some, this is more than a pipe dream.

While UNCW's football club has thus far a far from successful record, the team has generated a great deal of interest both on campus and in the city of Wilmington. One of those who has become involved is Bill Humble, a local sports promotor. At a press conference Thursday, Humble announced his desire to expand the football club into eventually a part of the athletic program.

Humble pointed to East Carolina University as an institution whose football program was similar to UNCW's. When the Pirates began their football program, they had approximately 3200 students attending the University. Today, of course, the football program is one of the biggest in the state. Their home games draw in excess of 20,000 people and they've been featured as part of ABC-TV's Regionalized College Football coverage.

Humble added that the university is rapidly growing at the present, and club football could be the foundation for a very successful program here. He also stated that an expanded football program would not take away from any present programs, but would add to the athletic department and the campus as a whole.

Needless to say, Humble doesn't advocate jumping to Division I football right away. Instead, he wants a very slow and gradual step-up.

Corection

Last week, it was reported that the UNCW swim team lost its first match over 69-57, with UNC-Greensboro emerging the winner. That score was actually 59-57. An evil force that deceives everyone and everything has been blamed for the error. Descartes is correcting the situation so it won't happen again.

Mel Brooks' "Silent Movie" Is Eighth Feature of Fine Arts Series

For the eighth feature during this academic year, the UNCW Fine Arts Committee will present the recently released motion picture that will please all: "Silent Movie."

Listed as the funniest comedy in fifty years, "Silent Movie" will be presented Tuesday, October 25, at 9:00 p.m. in Kenan Auditorium. Produced by 20th Century-Fox in 1976 it is eighty-seven minutes in length and carries the rating PG.

The outrageous genius of American comedy, Mel Brooks, has another laugh hit in "Silent Movie." Director Brooks continues to deliver the wackiest, funniest contemporary comedies in the American cinema. As in "The Producers," "Blazing Saddles" and "Young Frankenstein," nothing is too sacred to be joke fodder in "Silent Movie."

The plot (as if it matters) features Brooks as Mel Funn, a reformed alcoholic movie director on the comeback trail. He and his friends, Marty Eggs (Marty Feldman) and Dom Bell (Dom De Luise), convince producer Sid Caesar to finance a silent comedy, provided Brooks can supply big-name stars for the production.

Does he ever! In unbelieved appearances, Paul Newman, James Caan, Burt Reynolds, Anne Bancroft and Liza Minnelli have the time of their lives parodying their screen images.

With inspired lunacy like the madcap wheelchair chase through hospital grounds, it's no wonder "Silent Movie" is one of Brooks' greatest side-splitters.

The bouncy soundtrack, wall to wall music, crashes and sound effects, is the perfect accompaniment to the visual gags. It may be a silent movie, but it's one long laugh for all audiences.

Vincent Canby of the New York Times wrote "The only element missing is spoken dialogue, and the written titles, which often adopt a gentle tone as if to spare us the crude reality of the true dialogue, are among the funniest things in the film."

"Silent Movie" is brassy, incautious, and funny without mercy. For laughter, Brooks gives no quarter, and he disclaims the small change. As ever, he is "out to break the bank," so wrote film critic Jay Cocks of Time magazine.

Admission will be by season tickets, and UNCW students with I.D. cards will be charged 50 cents. For all non-students the admission is the usual $1.00.

Orwell's "Animal Farm" Opens Film Series

An animated color film based on George Orwell's novel, Animal Farm, will mark the opening of the series "Films from Literature." Sponsored by the UNCW English Club, the series will present film versions of well-known literary works.

Animal Farm will be shown Monday, October 24, at 7:00 p.m. in the Randall Library auditorium (upstairs.) Students, faculty, and the public are invited to attend free of charge.

This version of Animal Farm was made in 1974 and follows the general plot of the novel. It is a political satire in which a rebellion against one form of tyranny leads to the rise of another tyranny.

The main characters are the animals of Manor Farm, who overthrow the tyrant, Farmer Jones, and establish a republic. This parallels the rise of Russian communism.

The pigs, however, dominate the new republic and gradually form a dictatorship as tyrannical as the original system they rebelled against. The new tyranny represents the oppressiveness of Russian communism.

Despite the pessimism, the presentation makes the entire story like a humorous barnyard fable. Thus the film can be enjoyed on both levels—as political satire and as an imaginative tale.

Heart Attacks at Brogden Hall

Last Tuesday's concert at Brogden opened with the Sanford Townsend Band. This six men group offered a pleasant combination of R & B tinged rock. The instrumentation of the group is based on the two keyboards and accented with sax and lead guitar riffs. For most of their set the band received a polite hand from the audience. The only noticeable difference was with Sanford-Townsend's current hit, "Smoke From A Distant Fire." This was greeted with an enthusiastic hand.

It was obvious that the audience was there to see Heart. There was some restlessness as things were set up prior to Heart's appearance. However the Heart's performance made up for the delay. Much time was put into not only setting up the props (Dry ice and an explosion) but also miking the instruments. Since a lot of Heart's music is acoustically based this was extremely important.

Nothing emphasized this point more than the dual mandolin work of Nancy Wilson and Roger Fisher. The two started out alone on stage with their playing building up anticipation. Slowly they were joined by the rest of the band who filed out one by one. Behind them stood a bank of futuristic-looking, white amplifiers. In contrast to this was the minstrel apparel that the band wore. Once the whole band was present they broke into a number off their LITTLE QUEEN lp.

Aan Wilson did most of the front work for the band. There was very little stage patter outside of occasionally introducing the titles of the tunes. Sister Nancy had even less to say, but did sing once in a while. Nancy spent most of her time concentrating on her guitar playing and in one case some harmonica work.

The audience was quite familiar with Heart's material. Album cuts were greeted with the type of applause often reserved for AM hits. When Heart did play their hits, "Magic Man" and "Little Queen," the audience went wild. For a good portion of the concert the audience in the bleachers spilled out onto the gym floor. It was only towards the end that anyone made it near the stage.

As for effects the dry ice routine was used again. Oddly enough an erroneous report of great billows of marijuana smoke was placed in the Wilmington paper the next day. Evidently the party responsible for this accusation had missed Foreigner's performance last month. Had they been there then Heart's dry ice bit would have seemed like old hat and less formidable. Despite a few individuals Heart's performance was a smash. As far as the audience was concerned Heart's encore was hardly enough to satisfy Wilmington.

The Still Point

Martindale Introduces You to Area Churches

Your Parents said all your life, With the influence of wielding a knife, That Church was a must Despite creeds full of dust And now you won't go without strife.

Statistics from various surveys appear to indicate that attending church is not the favorite past time of today's college student (they seldom have a free keg). This is not entirely a contemporary problem for the chaplain to George Washington's army had difficulty getting the troops to attend vespers. However, he noticed that nary a single soldier missed the daily dispensing of ale. He hit upon an idea, became keeper of the juice, and announced that it would be dispensed immediately following vespers each evening.

From that point on, the good person never wanted for a receptive gathering at vespers. Now, I cannot promise a mug for anyone who attends a church service BUT (before you stop reading) there are several; no, many; well, actually, there is an almost unbelievable number of churches in Wilmington and New Hanover County.

Over the next couple weeks I'd like to introduce you to a number of congregations in our area. There are several different faiths and denominations and many variant styles and traditions within these groups. These do not pretend to be objective reviews but my opinions and reflections of what I have experienced and shared with others.

Let me start with a few geographically close to campus and list them in a brief annotated style.

St. Matthews Lutheran Church - A physically attractive white church couched in the pines across Rt. 132 from the south entrance to UNCW. This is a growing church with a welcoming attitude and a good mix of generations. It is the only Protestant church I am aware of which conducts a folk-style communion service the second and fourth Sundays of the month at 8:30 a.m.

Grace Baptist Church - Located almost next door to St. Matthews, this is an independent Baptist church of conservative style and will shortly be moving to a 40-acre sight for a new elementary secondary school and church complex.

Church of the Servant, Episcopal - a non-traditional congregation which meets in an unobtrusive all-purpose building just off 132 on Oriole Drive in College Acres. They have an informal social style which following the liturgy inserting contemporary music and developing innovative educational programs. Several faculty have spoken there.

St. Mark's Roman Catholic Parish - The University campus is now within the new St. Mark's parish, which currently meets in the Church of the Servant building on Saturday evening, early Sunday morning, and early Sunday afternoon. It has a mix of generations, a folk-mass and a number of students in attendance.

College Acres Southern Baptist - a very mod, block style, all purpose building on the corner of Cardinal Drive and Eastwood Road. A small youngish but traditional Southern Baptist Church.

Windemere Presbyterian [U.S.] - located on Eastwood

Road on the way to the beach. It is a fairly new congregation with some faculty and student members; family oriented and has a neat old pipe organ which has been restored and installed in the new building.

These are only a few and I'll share some more again.

Some parents remain legalistic Making mandatory church quite sadistic

But in spite of that cry, Won't you give it a try And not be so d— narcissistic.

GPA to Meet

The Government and Politics Association will meet Thursday, October 20, in Hoggard 225 and will have pictures taken for the annual.

Chemistry Club Sets Fundraiser

At the October 13 meeting of the Chemistry Club, the members voted to adopt a booth at Funky Fright Night for our first fund-raising project. Bring some ideas for decorations to the next meeting, which will be held Thursday, October 14, at 4:15 pm in C-127. All members that missed the last meeting are strongly urged to attend.

All ACS forms have been sent off, along with our request for becoming an ACS chapter. It's not too late to individually become affiliated with the ACS. Forms are available in the Chemistry Department. We should be hearing from them soon.

Republican Club Elects Convention Delegates

On Thursday, October 13, eight people were elected as delegates to the College Republicans fall convention to be held October 22-23 at Meredith College. The delegates are as follows: Patsy Warner, Mark Beanblossom, Beth Maney, Harry Pilos, Greta Lint, Sharon Henries, Karen Durda, Jeff Garrison, Sonya Holden, and James Scoggins.

These delegates will represent UNCW at the convention along with two of our state Executive Board members, Ray Warren and Chuck Balsar.

Also at the Thursday night meeting, three new committees were formed. They are: Publicity committee: Mark Davis, chairman; Communications committee: Carol Humphrey, chairman, Beth Maney and Cindy Innes; Projects committee: Harry Pilos, chairman, James Scoggins and Mark Beanblossom.

The next meeting is scheduled for October 27 at 6:00 in room 114 of the Chemistry-Physics Building. We are looking forward to an exciting convention at which UNCW will be well represented.

Induction Banquet of Circle K Club Held

The UNCW Circle K club held its induction banquet last Saturday evening at the Bonanza Sirloin Pit and by all accounts it was successful. The crowd of 20-30 persons enjoyed a fine meal, and then witnessed the installation of the new officers: President Steve Wallace, Vice-President Leon Turner, Secretary Rebecca Perkins, and Treasurer-

Robbie Seabock. A speech by Mr. Jim Storie, Kiwanis District Advisor to Circle K, highlighted the program.

The club has also completed its first service project: making playground equipment for the Cerebral Palsy Center, located at First Christian Church. Presentation of the project to the center will take place this week. Work on the Shine-a-rama, a fund-raising project for the Cystic Fibrosis Foundation, to be held here on November 19, has already begun.

The next meeting will be on October 24, 7:30 p.m., in room 101 Chemistry-Physics Building.

TKE Brothers Travel to Pembroke Soccer Game

The brothers of Tau Kappa Epsilon would like to congratulate the Seahawk soccer team on their sensational victory over Pembroke. Their win started our evening of celebration with the TKE's at Pembroke. Although their team lost, the TKE's at Pembroke extended a welcoming hand to all of us.

Several of the brothers loaded into George Erkes' car for the trying trip to Pembroke. If the win and scenery didn't keep us awake, Erkes' driving sure did! None expected it to be raining at Pembroke but we brought our hats and raincoats just in case.

The service project was a success and the party afterward was even more enjoyable. Everyone had a good time and the brothers would like to thank everyone for coming to help celebrate our busy day. The party was the highlight of the weekend.

Rowing Club Extends Thanks

The UNCW Rowing Club would like to extend its sincere appreciation to the Student Government Association and the Finance Committee for their promptness and open-mindedness in dealing with the allocation of operating funds for the club.

This money is being spent on new oars, first aid supplies, and a coach boat which is needed for every practice. Once again, thank you.

Opinions Offered on Atlantis Petition

by Betty Salyer
I talked to some of the students here on campus about their opinion of the Atlantis, UNCW's literary magazine. Here are some of the responses:

Allan Massey—"Where's the Atlantis?"

Gunnar Ditrch—"You have to have a literary magazine so people can express themselves in a more creative manner."

John Dillon—"I don't see any need for it."

David Busby (Buz) "There seems to be an apathetic feeling on the part of many students to have a literary magazine on campus. I don't know exactly what this tells us as far as our values go, but I hope the minority will be represented on this issue."

Mike Sellers—"I believe the student government is not being fair about the matter. The magazine is very interesting, and develops the writer's techniques."

Wendy Sharr—"If the money allotted for the Atlantis could be used somewhere else to our advantage, I'm for it."

Jolli Garrison—"I think U NCW should have a literary magazine on campus for scholars who enjoy good literary writing."

Willie Jackson—"I'm a former student of UNCW and when I heard about the literary magazine, I was thrilled, because during the time I was here, I thought that was something that was definitely needed."

Libby Streb—"I feel this magazine gives students an opportunity to express themselves through writing. Sharing feelings and a part of yourself is what life is all about."

Victor Morgan—"The SGA controls a budget of approximately $90,000.00 annually. In light of this, a request of money, especially for a worthwhile project like the Atlantis seems quite reasonable. Considering the thousands of dollars the SGA pans out to other clubs, the allocation for Atlantis even takes on an air of urgency and decency. Urgency to preserve our single artistically-inclined literary publication and decency to preserve it for the students who enjoy it."

CrimeWatch- Rules for Safe Walking

By Tim Bass

Walking, unfortunately, is more and more becoming a dangerous form of travel. Day or night, those of us strolling along, whether for pleasure or task, are often being found targets for robbery or attack. We're not trying to scare you into not walking, but we want you to know that there are hidden dangers often lurking around those sidewalks and roadsides. Here are some measures you might take for extended sidewalk safety:

It is advisable not to walk alone. Sure, this is not especially pleasing to the moody walker who prefers to walk and think things over, but it really doesn't hurt to have a friend along, especially at night.

Use public walkways; walk in well-lit areas. Short-cuts and dark or isolated spots should be avoided.

Dress for safety--you may need to run.

Don't overload yourself with packages or bundles. Women, keep your purses tucked tightly under your arms.

Don't accept rides with strangers. If a driver stops to ask directions from you, help him out, but from a distance.

If you're followed by someone on foot, cross the street, change your direction, or vary your pace. If the follower persists, go to a lighted store, home, or to a police station.

If you're followed by someone in a car, turn around and walk the other way, or go up a one-way street. If he persists, record his license-plate number and call the police. Keep an eye on the follower.

If you're held up, don't take any chances. Hand over your purse or wallet quickly and quietly. Afterwards, report the incident as quickly as possible.

If you're assaulted, don't panic. Scream (it's your no. 1 defense), make a scene--bite, kick, scratch and/or throw something. Run toward lights or people; attract attention. Report the incident to the police, being as detailed as possible in giving descriptions.

Poetry Awards Will be Presented Tomorrow

The awards presentation for the 1977 University Poetry Contest will be held in the SRO Theatre (Kenan Hall) Thursday, October 20, at 11:30 a.m. All students and faculty are invited to attend.

The prizes awarded will be: $50, first place; $30, second place; and $20, third place. Two honorable mentions of $10 each will also be awarded.

The winning poems will be read by Anne Fitzgibbon of the UNCW Department of Drama and Speech. The awards will be presented by Mrs. Jane Hubis, the Art Department chairman of the North Carolina Junior Scholastic, the organization that finances the contest. Judges for the contest this year are: Dr. Sally Bardon, Lecturer, UNCW Department of English; Mrs. Marjorie Megivern, Language Arts Instructor, Trask Junior High School; and Dr. Victor Zullo, Professor of Geography and Geology, UNCW.

The contest is sponsored by the Department of English.

The awards presentation will be conducted by Bill Rapp, President of the UNCW English Club.

Club Sports Not Funded Through Athletic Dept.

by Curtis Ward

Some Student Senators and SGA officers have recently questioned the SGA's financing of campus clubs associated with the Athletic Department, stating that the Athletic Department should take some of the financial responsibilities of these clubs.

Bill Brooks, Director of Athletics, defended the department's position stating that costs and eligibility requirements made it unfeasible for the department to finance athletic clubs. According to Mr. Brooks, the Athletic Department receives no state money and is financed through student fees, donations and box office revenues at athletic events. He went on to say that at the present time, the department is not even giving the total amount of athletic scholarships legally allowed.

SGA President Karin Whaley, however, pointed out that this year's entire increase in student fees went to Athletics, Intramurals, and the Physical Education Department and that "absolutely no increase in student fees in the past two years has gone to SGA." This year the Athletics Department is receiving $38 per student per year, a $12 increase over last year. Intramurals rose from $2 to $4 and P.E., $20 to $24. SGA is receiving $24, the same figure as last year.

Brooks stated a concern over the possibility that a club participating in a competitive sport and financed by the Athletic Department would come under NCAA regulations governing eligibility and insurance. NCAA regulations would place a restriction on the age of players and number of semesters a participant could play. The required insurance, he said, would provide another financial burden to the club. He also said that on any campus he knew of, all clubs come under SGA and Student Affairs.

Athletic Director Bill Brooks

The only athletic-oriented club to receive funds from athletics was the cheerleaders, which received $250 from athletics and $996 from SGA. Other clubs receiving funds from SGA are the Football Club ($1555), the Pep Band ($250), and the Rowing Club ($3325). None of these organizations received funds from the Athletic Department.

Ms. Whaley was concerned not only with the lack of financial support from Athletics for these organizations, but also with "moral support." "As far as the Cheerleaders are concerned they're not even willing to give them one hour credit" which is the procedure at many schools in the state, including Chapel Hill. She went on to say that other clubs, in particular football, have run into the same lack of support and cooperation.

"An alternative (to the present situation) would be an increase in student fees of about $1 to $2 to come to the SGA, or the Athletic Department picking up" these clubs.

The Football Club has another reason for needing support from the Athletic Department as well as the student body. According to Frank Zerbinos, the club's coach, the team is seriously considering becoming a varsity team in Division III within the next couple of years.

According to Brooks, a football team at UNCW would not be feasible at this time because it would "need to be Division I to get local support", and would require a budget five times the present Athletic budget.

Zerbinos, however, feels that a team could be self-supporting. "I believe we could raise the money and have a team at no additional cost to the school," he stated. With the help of a local sports promoter, Bill Humble, Zer-

Dormitory Project Aims to Alleviate Myths and Misconceptions of Sexuality

By Ray Warren

With the progress of the so-called "sexual revolution", many people have come to assume that today's students are highly knowledgeable about human sexuality. This is not necessarily the case, however, and many myths and misconceptions about the subject continue to create problems for students. Soon, a project will be launched in the UNCW dormitories which aims to alleviate this situation by allowing students a chance to discuss all aspects of their sexuality.

The program was initiated by one of the physician's assistants working in the student health infirmary, Catherine Vangelow. Ms. Vangelow became concerned with the number of pregnancies, and resulting abortions, involving students. In response to the situation, she contacted representatives from region "O" (a family resources agency) and crisis line/open house. The result was a coordinated effort involving six students, Cindy Joss, Mari Koreniowski, Ginger Hushes, Mark Lyman, Helen Pantazis, and Gail Powell.

Since early October, these students have been attending training sessions. These sessions, which last several hours apiece, are designed to inform the students on problems of human sexuality. The students will use this information to try and set up "rap sessions" among dorm students to discuss these problems.

According to Ginger Hushes, one of the students involved, the goal of the program "is to provide a comfortable atmosphere where students can share attitudes and feelings about human sexuality and exchange information." The sessions are not intended to be limited to birth control. In the words of Cindy Joss, another involved student, "We decided that the issue was human sexuality and we would reinforce human sexuality." She also indicated that she hoped that more than simple facts would be discussed. "We are dealing with feelings and attitudes" she added.

On November 3, the six involved students will meet with the resident assistants from each floor of the dormitories. They hope that the RA's will then be able to carry the information back to their halls. This, hopefully, will create enough interest to lead to the formation of informal "rap groups."

These "rap groups" will be limited to students only. According to Ms. Hushes, "Peers understand and communicate better with students than does somebody in an authority position."

For this semester the students' efforts will be concentrated on the two dormitories. They, however, hope to expand the program's scope in the future. According to Ms. Joss, "We had to start somewhere, and what we do this semester will determine the outcome next semester."

Five community groups have aided the program thus far. In addition to region 'O' and crisis line/open house, UNCW's counseling and testing office, the campus ministry, and Ron Knopf, of the department of social work, have also become involved.

Students with questions or desiring more information about the human sexuality program may contact Ginger Hushes at 791-6369.

New Bookstore Opens

The new student bookstore, located behind the cafeteria, will have its grand opening Monday, October 31, at 10:00 a.m. Chancellor William Waggoner will preside at the ribbon-cutting ceremony.

Bookstore Manager Arnold Siko said that free gifts will be distributed and door prizes will be given. In addition, free Pepsi's will be served and there will be special sales on bookstore merchandise.

Another series of prize drawings will be conducted using the receipt tickets from purchases on Monday as raffle tickets. Those who make purchases on Monday should save their receipt tickets for these special drawings.

All students, faculty, and staff are invited to the grand opening.

Fee Situation: A Lack of Respect

The Student Government Association has been in a pinch for funds this year to the point that all campus clubs and organizations (except the Seahawk) suffered cuts in their proposed budgets when the Student Senate held its budget

And past student leaders must also bear part of the responsibility because they have not taken a stand in the student's best interests.

This Newspaper's OPINION

October 26, 1977 THE SEAHAWK

hearings last spring. This occurred despite the fact that student fees have increased this year to $186 from last year's $168 per year.

Where are those extra dollars going?

The answer: to the Athletic Department, under one name or another.

Student fees are broken down into seven areas: Athletic Department, Student Government Association, Student Union, Intramurals, Physical Education, Health Services, and Debt Service. Of these seven, only three received a bigger share of student fees this year than last—Athletic Department, Physical Education, and intramurals.

The Athletic Department had already laid claim to the largest share (except debt service) of any area. Still, the increase that it received amounted to $12 of the overall $18 increase. Remember, that's $12 per student, per year.

On top of that exorbitant amount, the P.E. Department received a $4 increase, and the Intramurals share was doubled to a total of $4. (Are we really getting twice as much from intramurals?)

Thus, the Athletic Department was receiving $38 of your student fees, the P.E. Department got $24, and intramurals were allotted $4—a whopping total of $66 going to the same general area in the guise of three separate entities.

At the same time, all other areas were stalemated to last year's totals $24 each to SGA and the Student Union, $22 to Health Services, and $50 to debt service.

Now, we are fully aware that much of the increase is going into the new 6,000 plus seat gymnasium which will be the "pride and joy" of this university in years to come.

But we are also painfully aware that the two areas which are most concerned with student activities—SGA and Student Union—receive only $48 of student fees; that's a shamefully paltry sum by comparison with the Athletic fees.

This entire issue is complicated, in large part, by one man—Athletic Director Bill Brooks. Brooks has been with the university for many years and has gradually built up a reputation—among students anyway—of being the Athletic Department. What he says usually goes.

Nevertheless, Brooks can not be the only villain in this affair—although he is most visible. The university administration from the Board of Trustees and Chancellor on down have neglected the needs of students by mis-placing the priorities of student fee revenues for years.

With the growth of athletic-related clubs on campus—Rowing Club, Football Club, Surfing Club, Fishing Team and Sailing Club—it would seem logical that they might find a friend in the Athletic Department and receive some form of aid—if not money—from that department.

But these clubs have repeatedly run into dead ends in their search for both money and other forms of aid, not the least of which is moral support. They are told that an athletic department of a state university can not fund athletic clubs, that these clubs fall under the SGA. They are not allowed to use the facilities of the new gymnasium into which we have poured our student fees.

The one case which is most particular is that of the Football Club. Here is a group of students who have put their own money and time into making the program a success and they are repeatedly rebuked by the Athletic Department in their attempts to establish that sport with a Division III, NCAA team here.

Frank Zerbinos, Football Club head coach, believes that the money can be raised in the Wilmington area to finance a UNCW football team. He has the backing of a city sports promoter who says that the $150,000 to $200,000 needed is attainable.

Athletic Director Brooks has rejected the idea of football as an NCAA sport here. He doesn't believe that there is sufficient financial support in this area for such a team. We suspect Coach Brooks has other reasons.

Could it be that Brooks feels that a football team would somehow undermine "his" successful basketball program that he has been building for years? Quite possibly.

There is no reason to assume that the addition of a football team would damage basketball here. Schools throughout the state and nation have successful programs in both sports and many others besides.

Brooks has said that a football team would necessitate increasing the athletic budget five times over. Zerbinos and city promoters believe the money can be raised to fund football, and they have worked hard to encourage support of a team.

Whatever the case, the final decision will rest with Coach Brooks since the Football Club must go through him to obtain NCAA sanctions.

Another case in point is that of the cheerleaders. They were given $250 by the Athletic Department this year, which is not nearly enough. Thus, they were forced to go before the SGA to ask for $996 so that they could attend away games and buy needed uniforms.

It's ridiculous that the student government—already overburdened with student activity expenses—must bear the cost of cheerleaders. Such is strictly the responsibility of the Athletic Department.

But without SGA, there probably would not be any cheerleaders, simply because the Athletic Department doesn't see fit to take $1200 of its budget for this important part of the sports program. In turn, the students suffer when their funds are shifted from other clubs and activities to fill the void in the funding of cheerleaders.

What this entire situation boils down to is a general lack of respect for students on the part of administration officials. We have been shafted, re-shafted, and shafted again, and no one in a position to get some changes made has really tried to do so.

This is only one phase of the problems students face with the Athletic Department. Another big question is under what conditions will students be allowed to use the new gymnasium for concerts and such. SGA committees are currently trying to "negotiate" their way into Trask Coliseum. Surely, the student body can be given more respect than this.

Somewhere along the line, Mr. Brooks and others seem to have forgotten that this university exists for the students; these buildings are built for the students; these funds are spent for the students; and the faculty and administration is here for the students.

We're mad as hell, and we're not going to take it any more. But we don't really expect that to make a great difference. And that, perhaps, is our greatest problem.

Student Newspapers: Advertising Their Rights

by Carol O'Connor
(CPS) - The Wildcat News & Review in Chico, California joined the ranks of more than 100 student newspapers nationally late last spring when the paper severed its umbilical cord to the university and entered into a contractual arrangement with the school.

Over the past few years student newspapers which could possible support themselves on combined advertising revenue and student fees money have been increasingly opting for a contractual arrangement with the student government and/or the administration.

The arrangement benefits everyone. The student paper gets a healthy dose of reality as it learns that advertisers are the lifeblood of a newspaper.

The student government learns that with a contract it can not expect to manipulate the editorial content of the paper or threaten it with a funding cut the first time the president of the student government is criticized in print. The students also are freed to use and develop in their own skills as journalists without an instructor breathing down their necks.

Although many administrators over the years have treated their students as less than journalists, court rulings have not. Most censorship and harassment of the college media results from lack of information rather than from genuine power-mad malice.

The birth of The Wildcat News & Review is significant since it embodies the major issues that have been at play in the college media over the last year. The Wildcat had always had a stormy relationship with the school, especially as the Wildcat continued to wander off campus and increase its coverage of community events.

Struggles came and struggles went until last September. That was when newspaper baron Dean Leisher, also a member of the California

Board of Regents, had the regent's legal counsel prepare the infamous "advertising directive."

This directive informed the 19 student newspapers in the California state system that the papers had six months to cease discriminatory advertising policies. Simply stated the directive said that commercial as well as political advertisers enjoy First Amendment protections in their dealings with state campus newspapers.

What the directive didn't address was whose freedom was to reign supreme in a conflict situation.

The directive caused immediate problems on the campuses where anti-Gallo support is strong. Bob Speer, then general manager of the Wildcat at Chico put it this way, saying "the fundamental question here is whether a student editor has the right to control advertising content of their papers as well as editorial content."

The right of a privately owned newspaper to refuse advertising has long been established. Many major daily newspapers have restrictive ad policies on pornography, for example.

The Gallo issue soon took hold on all the California campuses where debates between Gallo representatives and student journalists were waged. The result was that student staffs were invariably split down the middle as to where they stood on the issue.

The Wildcat, tired of the continued harassment that accompanies any student paper, contacted the Center for the Rights of Campus Journalists (CRCJ), a Denver-based organization that provides legal research and referral to college editors facing censorship or other legal questions.

The Wildcat, which had already been exploring the possibility of independence, began moving toward the goal with increased determination as a result of the September ruling.

This spring the United States Supreme Court affirmed the right of the student editor to refuse advertising. By denying certiorari to the Mississippi Gay Alliance (MGA) v. Goudelock case, the Supreme Court affirmed and recognized the student editor's right to control of content both editorial and advertising.

The Goudelock case involved the editor of the Mississippi State newspaper refusing to accept a paid advertisement to the Reflector that described hours and services offered by a gay rights counseling service. After editor Bill Goudelock refused twice to print advertisement from the group, a suit was filed in US District Court that claimed that the refusal to print the paid advertisement was a violation of the gay rights group's First Amendment Freedom.

The MGA lost in US District court in 1974 when the court said that since there was no indication that the school or any university official had anything to do with the refusal of the advertisement, there was no lack of control on the university's part. The court ruled that since the decision to refuse the advertisement was based solely on the editor's news judgement that "no state action was involved." The court drew a distinction between government action and the private action of a student editor. On appeal, the Gay Alliance lost again when the court said "the editor of the Reflector had the right that the newspaper would not be involved, even peripherally, with off-campus homosexual-related activity."

The Court's homophobia aside, this decision and the subsequent denial of certiorari from the Supreme Court affirmed and recognized an editor's right to refuse advertising.

Kenan Hall Art Show Features Works of Donna Purvis

The galleries of Kenan Hall will feature the art works of Donna Evelyn Purvis from October 26 until November 7, as the second in a series of Senior Art Shows scheduled this fall.

The show contains paintings that Ms. Purvis has completed since coming to UNCW in 1976, after graduating from Peace College in 1974 and attending one year at Meredith College.

In the paintings you can see her movement from realistic painting to a more abstract and refined style of painting. She has concentrated on simplifying her composition and design; and her experimentation with color relationships has brought a sophisticated color sense to her works.

The public reception for this show will be Sunday, October 30, from 3 to 5 p.m. in Kenan Hall.

Correction

The following correction should be made regarding an article which appeared in the October 20 issue of The Seahawk (page 13) entitled "Veterans Office Outlines New Regulations Governing VA Benefits."

Veterans and dependents receiving VA educational benefits who are enrolled through Continuing Education (non-degree) are required to pass at least three hours their first semester in attendance and maintain the following grade point average:

Hours	GPA
1-6	1.20
7-12	1.50
13-18	1.80
19-27	2.00

The U. S. Navy Officer Information Team will be on campus October 26-27. Naval officers will be on hand to talk to interested persons concerning Officer Positions in Nuclear Power, Aviation, Supply Corps (business management), Line, and several scholarship programs. Drop by and see if the "New Navy" is for you.

Student Senate Hears Treasurer's Report

By Bobby Parker

Meeting in regular session Thursday night, the Student Senate heard reports from the SGA treasurer and two of its standing committees, and allocated funds to the newly chartered Surfing Club. Vice-President Ken Lilly presided.

Treasurer Paul O'Bryant presented a financial statement through October 1 of this year which listed total expenditures by SGA-funded groups during that period at just over $13,500.

O'Bryant told the senators that the Society of Entertaining Xenophiles (S*E*X) still has outstanding bills from its science fiction convention in September. The group was involved in a financial controversy when it requested a $930 reallocation in addition to $1500 which was granted to the group over the summer by O'Bryant and SGA President Karin Whaley.

"At the time of the reallocation, S*E*X officials had promised to pay back $930 to the SGA from receipts of ticket sales. However, attendance at the convention fell far short of S*E*X's expectations.

O'Bryant said that it is "very doubtful they will pay back the Senate much of anything." He noted that as of October 17, there was $894 in unpaid bills. These expenses include telephone bills and $450 to replace some tables which were broken by S*E*X members while they were being moved for the convention.

Another outstanding bill was for rental fees of film projectors in Kenan Auditorium. O'Bryant said that this amount, $212, would be going to another SGA group, the Fine Arts Committee. The treasurer termed these charges "a little steep" since they were between two SGA groups.

O'Bryant also commented on an allocation two weeks ago by the Senate to the B. Frank Hall Philosophy and Religion Society in the amount of $200. Noting that other campus clubs sponsor their own fundraising projects without SGA help, O'Bryant said "it might have been wise" for the Senate to tell the Society to raise their own money.

Chairman Walker O'Quinn of the Concert Committee reported on that committee's financial situation. O'Quinn stated that the committee has sponsored two concerts this year—Foreigner and Heart—and that UNCW student attendance has been less than 200 at each. Of 2800 at the Foreigner concert, 190 were UNCW students; of 2700 who heard Heart, 120 were from UNCW.

O'Quinn also said that his committee is "trying to negotiate our way into the new gym" for a concert this year. He noted several obstacles, including the question over how much will be paid by student groups for use of the gym.

Other projects in the Concert Committee this semester, O'Quinn stated, will be the upcoming Halloween party and the Bob Hope Search for Talent contest in November.

Homecoming Chairman Greta Lint reported on the planning progress of that committee. She said that $250 has been collected from solicitations to area merchants and that more has been pledged.

Lint said that homecoming is being planned the week of February 17 with the basketball opponent being Fairleigh-Dickenson. The dance is planned for the Hilton Inn which will cost $800 and accommodate a maximum of 1000 people. Tickets will cost $2.50 per person and will include all set-ups for the evening.

The chairman also told the Senate that it is still questionable whether there will be a Homecoming parade. She stated that the committee has tentative plans to have both a homecoming queen and king.

Rik Beitel of the Surfing Club presented a request for a $328 allocation to cover national and district association dues. By being affiliated with these associations, the club can compete with other teams in the nation.

Beitel said the UNCW club currently has 30 members, with both a varsity and junior varsity team. Each club member pays $5 dues and has also been paying his own expenses to surfing competitions. Beitel added that the eventual aim of the club is to establish surfing as a varsity sport here.

Senior President Barbara McKay stated, "I think (the allocation) is worthwhile. They have a lot to offer the school." The allocation was approved by the Senate.

Debate Team in Tournament

This weekend, UNCW Debaters will travel to Chapel Hill for the national Tarheel Tournament. Debaters going are: Greta Anita Lint and Charles Craft; Marge McLamb and Ray Blackburn.

The topic this year is: Resolved: that law enforcement agencies should be given significantly greater freedom in the investigation and/or prosecution of felony crimes.

Some teams present at last year's Tarheel Tournament are: University of Kansas, Georgetown, Harvard, Florida, Catholic, Middle Tennessee, William and Mary, Wake Forest, Northwestern, Emory, Johns Hopkins, and the Naval Academy.

In other Senate action, Sophomore Senate Jack Allen proposed that the Senate call a "meeting of concerned students" to discuss the recent controversy over Atlantis, the student literary magazine.

Freshman President Harry Pilos appealed to the Senate to provide background information on the situation for the Freshman officers. "I've asked several senators and several students," Pilos stated, but added that freshmen still "don't know any specifics about it."

The Senate passed the motion to request the Atlantis staff to call a meeting to discuss the problems involved.

Junior President Tom Hunt again requested that all campus clubs and organizations submit their charters to the Senate for approval.

Physics Film This Friday

The Society of Physics Students and Sigma Pi Sigma Honorary Society will present a film entitled "Journey Into Light" at their meeting on Friday, October 28, 1977 at 2:30 p.m. in Chemistry-Physics Building, Room C-218. This film will give the viewer a tour of Kitt Peak and CTIO Observatories. Faculty, students and any interested persons are invited to attend.

PSU Professor Speaks

Professor Robert Geist, Associate Professor of mathematics at Pembroke State University, will speak on "Placing Points Symmetrically on a Sphere" on Thursday, October 27, at 8:30 a.m. (that's not a misprint - a.m. it is!) in C-114.

Professor Geist will present an introduction to some interesting and important topological features of a sphere. Pitched at the mathematical level of a beginning college student, this talk will assume a knowledge of only high school algebra. All interested persons are invited to attend.

Professor Geist earned his bachelor's degree at Duke, and his Ph.D. in topology at Notre Dame. In addition to teaching at Pembroke State, he has been a visiting professor at UNC-Chapel Hill.

Fledgling Pictures to be Sold

All pictures from the 1977 Fledgling are on sale this week. So come on up to the Fledgling office and buy your favorite pictures. Also, the old '72, '73, and '74 yearbooks will be on sale.

Organizations should get in contact with the Fledgling office to have their pictures taken for 1978 yearbook. Layout deadlines are nearing for the organization section, so please hurry.

1978 Fledgling subscriptions are still being sold for $3.00. But before you know it, they will be selling for $4.00. This early in the year we have already sold 288 subscriptions and our goal is to sell 1000.

There will be a Fledgling meeting November 1 at 4:00. Please be there!

Prize Offered for Paper

A $500 cash prize is to be awarded by the American Health Foundation's quarterly journal, Preventive Medicine, to the student author of the best original paper on the subject of preventive medicine. A runner-up prize of $200 is also being awarded.

Winning papers will be published in the Journal.

For entry forms and information, students should write to: The Editorial Office, PREVENTIVE MEDICINE, American Health Foundation, 1370 Avenue of the Americas, New York, New York 10019.

Homecoming Plans Are Well Under Way

The Homecoming '78 Celebration will be the weekend of February 17 and 18. The dance is scheduled to begin at 8:00 p.m. and end at 1:00 a.m. at the Downtown Hilton. Tickets, $2.50 per person, will go on sale in the Pub February 1. Due to fire regulations, only 1000 people will be able to attend. The cover charge is primarily for unlimited mixers. There will be a coat check; dress will be coat and tie and long dress.

The Homecoming '78 Committee is tentatively planning on a parade for downtown Wilmington, Saturday afternoon. The theme is: UNC-By the Sea. Area merchants have been contacted for donations of cash or building supplies. However, the parade is contingent upon the response from those merchants.

Later on in the evening, during half-time, tentatively UNCW will crown a King and a Queen. Candidates for those positions will be sponsored by campus organizations. The tickets will be designed as to allow a vote to be cast for a King from one organization and a queen from another.

This is to allow a voter to select a candidate for each title individually.

The game will be against Fairley-Dickenson, from New Jersey. Other events for that week are still in preliminary planning stages.

VICE Seeks Help

The Video Incorporated Campus Entertainment Committee is looking for talented and innovative people. On Monday, October 31, a re-organizational meeting will be held in the VICE office at 7:30 to plan programs, specials, and instructional sessions. If you are interested and want to find out more, call me at 791-6660 or leave a note at the VICE office. See you Monday.

Government-Politics Meeting

The Government and Politics Association will meet Thursday, October 27, at 3:30 p.m. in room 225 in Hoggard Hall. Pictures will be taken for the Fledgling.

The association will discuss its involvement with the North Carolina Student Legislature and the Model United Nations Security Council meeting next year.

Several students will represent UNCW at this model council meeting which will be held in Greensboro next March.

The NCSL is open to every student regardless of discipline. Anyone who is interested should contact Butch Pegram in the Continuing Education offices or Dr. Sayed Ahmad in the Political Science offices.

The G.P.A. is open to all interested students, and further information may be obtained by contacting anyone in the Political Science Department.

Seahawk Soccer's Playoff Hopes End

Playoffs hopes for UNCW's soccer squad vanished Saturday as the Hawks were edged by a powerful William & Mary team 3-1.

According to head coach Calvin Lane, the William & Mary team was one of the best his squad has faced this year. "It was our first loss that I think we were beaten by a better team," he added. The Pirates are currently ranked fourth in the Mid-Atlantic region, with the Hawks ranked eighth in the South.

Coach Lane felt the team's major task was to keep the powerful Virginia squad from scoring. To do this, he employed the same strategy that was successfully used earlier in the season. An extra man was dropped back on defense. This of course weakens UNCW's offense, but at the same time it is designed to further protect the Wilmington goal.

This strategy worked during the first half, as the halftime score was 1-1. William and Mary scored first, when after 12 minutes and 9 seconds they knocked a rebound ball into the goal. The Seahawks came right back four minutes later on a "beautiful" shot by Lenny Branson from 25 yards out into the right corner of the goal.

"I felt very good at the half," said Lane. "The game had come off the way we wanted . . . and I thought we were still in good shape to win the game."

In the first twenty minutes of the second half, momentum and ball control switched from team to team. "We both had scoring opportunities," said Lane, "and it was evident whoever scored first would go on to win the game."

During this time, the Hawks had four goal shots—one by Eddie Brock and three by the team's leading scorer, Gil Castella. According to Lane, the only thing that prevented each from becoming a goal was a brilliant save on the part of the William and Mary goalie. "He (the goalie) was the best I've seen all year," said Lane. "Those saves were the difference in the game."

After twenty minutes into the half, the Virginia squad scored when UNCW goalie Charlie Ingold misjudged a loose ball and a Pirate player booted it into the open goal. "We felt it wasn't over," said Lane, and the squad changed tactics and increased their offensive manpower. Ten minutes later, William and Mary capitalized on the weakened Seahawk defense to score the final goal, making the final score 3-1 in favor of the Pirates.

"If I had it to do over again, I'd make the same decision," said Lane, referring to the change in strategy for the game. "Our leading scorer had three scoring opportunities, but couldn't capitalize on any of them because of their outstanding goalie."

The next day, the Hawks faced the University of Richmond. "Needless to say, we found it hard to get motivated," commented Lane, "especially after a tough loss which finished our playoff hopes."

Richmond opened the scoring on a 30 yard looping shot by Walleck within five minutes of the first half. Ten minutes later, Nino Fleri tied the score for the Seahawks with an assist by Castella.

After thirty minutes of the first half, Jerry Rebbert took the ball 40 yards on a beautiful run to score and make the halftime tally 2-1 in favor of the Hawks. "We were flat in the first half," said Lane. "We made poor use of our wings."

The second half was an entirely different story, however. "Our wings stayed wide and played the ball more," said Lane. "We took control of the midfield and put the ball on the ground. We played our game. He praised the work of Rebbert and Gary Wade in the wing positions and Doug Powell in the midfield.

Tim Gribbon started the Seahawk scoring ten minutes into the second half on a head shot off a corner kick by Rebbert. Ten minutes later, Chi Chi Mercado scored on a left-footer. Steve Paul assisted.

Rebbert scored again from the wing position, with an assist by Lenny Branson. Fleri contributed the final goal on a left-foot volley.

The Seahawks' domination of the game is evident by the statistics. The Hawks had a phenomenal 48 shots on goal.

The Hawks are currently ranked eighth in the south with a 9-3 overall record. They have two games left—today they face St. Andrews and Tuesday they meet Methodist College.

Cagers Begin Drills

With "enthusiasm aplenty" as their own coach phased it, the University of North Carolina at Wilmington Seahawks opened basketball drills here Oct. 17 in preparation for the 1977-78 season.

"We feel very good about what we have going for us this year," UNCW coach Mel Gibson says with pride. "We are entering our beautiful new facility, we have experienced players returning as leaders and our new people are quite capable of blending in very soon."

Gibson and his assistant, Rick Holdt, welcomed 14 players to the initial workout, held two days after the allowed beginning date because of Gibson's appearance at a Durham coaching clinic the past weekend.

Nine lettermen are back, led by four veteran seniors—6-8 postman Denny Fields, 6-1 wingman Lonnie Payton, and lightning-quick guards Billy and Bobby Martin. That quartet accounted for more than two-thirds of the point production on last year's 16-10 squad.

Other returnees who should see a great deal of playing time include juniors Dave Wolff and Delaney Jones, both inside performers, and Sophomore Garry Cooper, also a frontcourt specialist. All three started on occasion last season.

Junior Ralph Peterson and sophomore John McPhaul are back to bolster the guard slots after earning their letters a year ago.

"The overall size we have this year is a pleasant surprise," Gibson notes. "Fields, Wolff, Jones and Cooper are all 6-5 or better, and that isn't including our newcomers."

Not that the Seahawk coach would think of leaving out the talented foursome who will be wearing the Green & Gold for the first time this season.

Freshmen Chuck Verba (6-9), Danny Davis (6-6) and Jimmy Denton (6-6) all are capable inside men. Junior college transfer Glenn Morgan can play either guard or forward at his 6-4 height and should contribute right away.

Lady Netters Drop to 2-7

It was indeed a rough week for the women's tennis team as Coach Jane Batson's squad went 0-4 in last week's matches. Some victories, however, are in sight for this week's schedule.

In a Monday match against Pembroke, the team played week in a 6-3 loss, a match Coach Batson said, "We should have won." The number five-seed, Carolyn Bender, won her match 0-6, 6-2, 6-3 while the number six seed, Lowrey Sorenson, also triumphed by a 6-3, 6-1 score. Meanwhile, in doubles action, Lowrey Sorenson teamed with Kim Canter to win the number three doubles, 6-4, 6-1.

The remainder of the week proved rougher, as the Seahawks faces strong opposition from the UNC-JV's on Tuesday, St. Mary's on Thursday, and Methodist College on Friday. The team lost all three matches 9-0, dropping their season's mark to 2-7.

With 8 matches remaining this season, Coach Batson feels that the team's record will improve, foreseeing possible victories over Pembroke today and over Mt. Olive College on Friday. USC-Conway is of unknown quality. The return of Debbie Goulding, the number one seed, to action this week should greatly help the team.

This week will see the She-hawks involved in three matches. The ladies will face Pembroke in an away match scheduled for 3 p.m. today. Thursday, the team entertains Conway in a 2 p.m. home match, while Friday the team faces Mt. Olive College in Mt. Olive. Next week will involve return matches with St. Mary's and the UNC-JV's.

In spite of a losing record, the team attitude remains impressive. Coach Batson stated that "The team is working harder now than at the first of the year."

Football Club Edged By Robbins

In the UNCW Football Club's finest offensive effort this year, the Seahawks lost to Robbins 12-10.

The winning Robbins score came on a freak play involving Wilmington quarterback David Moore. Moore had been injured earlier in the contest but seemed to have recovered enough to go in for the last series of downs in the first half. As he dropped back to set up for a pass, his knee gave way, causing him to lose the ball. An observant Robbins defender scooped up the ball and ran 38 yards for the score.

(Moore's injury was diagnosed as severe cartilage damage. A knee operation is probable.)

Robbins' other score came on a three yard plunge in the first quarter. The two point conversion attempt failed.

The Seahawk's defense contributed their best to the losing effort by getting a safety. John McLeod caught the Robbins quarterback in the opponent's end zone for the two-point play.

UNCW's only touchdown came in the third period on a three-yard keeper by quarterback Carson Royal. The score was set up by a key interception by Joe Cook of Whiteville.

Brad Linder scored the two-point conversion on a run up the middle. Linder had an amazing afternoon, gathering a whopping 185 yards in 28 carries and two passes.

Statistics show that UNCW controlled the offensive part of the contest. They had 13 first downs, compared to four for Robbins. The Hawks racked up 276 yards in rushing with Robbins totaling only 51.

The club next faces Fairfax County on Sunday, October 30, at 2:00 p.m. at Legion Stadium. Admission is free.

UNCW Dynasty Nationally Known

Though UNCW has a number of outstanding athletic programs, there is one team here that is internationally recognized as one of the best and has created for itself somewhat of a dynasty.

That team is the UNCW Fishing Team, a part of the UNCW Fishing Club and an SGA-funded activity. In its three short years of existence, it has twice won an international fishing tournament and has been recognized by Field and Stream magazine as one of the best in the nation.

In the three years, it has competed in the Coastal Carolina Invitational Intercollegiate Sport Fishing Match and Seminar, held each year at Myrtle Beach, the team has won twice, in 1975 and 1977, and finished second once, in 1976. In that year, though, they won three of the four individual prizes offered.

The tournament involves schools from the Carolinas against schools in New England and Canada. It is six days of fishing (during the day) and seminars (at night), during which time national conservationists and fishermen come to speak to the group. It is held after commencement, so it won't conflict with other school activities.

Environmental concerns are emphasized at the tournament. For instance, in the King Mackerel event, ten points are awarded for each fish caught alive, tagged, and set free. On the first day, when the winner is determined by the total poundage of all fish caught, all fish are delivered to a local children's home, cleaned and dressed.

"The tournament has been a great experience," said Dr. John Scaif, adviser to the team. "We've gotten nationwide publicity from it." The publicity he refers to is coverage by magazines like Field and Stream and news reports by the Associated Press.

The team is recognized as somewhat of a dynasty in the tournament. In 1977, they caught by far more fish on the first day than any other team. They also won five of the six days. "We're established to the point that, no matter what happens, we'll always get an invitation," added Scaif.

As was mentioned before, the tournament is an international event. It was designed to invite three or four well-known Canadian fishing teams down to compete with a like number of American teams. It is hoped the tournament will eventually become a part of the Canadian/American Festival, held at Myrtle Beach every year.

Scaif said plans are underway for a fishing meet against Coastal Carolina this fall here in Wilmington. "The main problem," said Scaif, "is to get the local people to use their (35 to 40 foot) boats."

Scaif also added there are many other possibilities for the club. He stated that several handicapped students had approached him about a tournament for the handicapped. The New Hanover Fishing Club, of which Scaif is an Executive Board member, has expressed an interest in helping with such an event.

Team members are Joanne Gentry, Ted Sharp, Sara Winslow, and Steve Martin.

"Lack of Spirit" Plagues Women Volleyballers

These past two weeks have been disastrous for the women's volleyball team, as the She-hawks dropped four of their six matches.

"The main reason has been a lack of team spirit," said head coach Ann Kraft in explaining the disappointing two weeks. "We just can't get up for the matches."

Coach Kraft's squad began the slump at Pembroke, where they faced Pembroke and Guilford College. The She-hawks beat Guilford 15-3, 15-9, but lost to rival Pembroke 15-10, 4-15, 15-11. Pembroke, according to Kraft, has one of the better volleyball teams in the state.

Last Tuesday, Pembroke was once again the Hawk's opponent as the women played host to the Braves and USC-Conway, whom they upset a week earlier. In close matches, they lost to the South Carolina squad 15-13, 15-12. Pembroke repeated its previous victories, downing the home squad 15-7, 15-3. "We just played terrible," said Kraft.

Finally the Wilmington squad travelled to Chowan to face the host school and Elizabeth City State. ECS failed to appear, though, and UNCW won by forfeit. Two matches were then played against Chowan. They lost the first one 15-5, 11-15, 7-15, but came back to win the second one 15-2, 15-9.

Injuries are beginning to pile up for the squad. Two starters are more than likely out for the remainder of the season. "The whole team is plagued with knee injuries," added Kraft.

Coach Kraft did not rule her squad out for the rest of the year. "If we can get mentally together, we can beat all of our remaining eight teams except East Carolina," she said. (ECU is recognized as having an outstanding volleyball program.)

The She-hawks next home match is November 7, at 6:30 p.m., when they face ECU and Atlantic Christian.

Join the UNCW swim team in their first meet ever in the new Trask Coliseum as they take on UNC-Greensboro. UNC-G barely edged the Seahawks 59-57 in their last meeting.

The swimming starts at 2:00 on Saturday, October 29.

"The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes' Smarter Brother" Shown Tuesday

The UNCW Fine Arts Committee will present "The Adventure of Sherlock Holmes' Smarter Brother" this Tuesday night, Nov. 1, in Kenan Auditorium beginning at 8:00 p.m. Admission is by season pass, UNCW students - 50 cents with I.D. cards or $1.00 to non-students.

Looking very handsome in the dashing costume of Riccardo, Dom DeLuise was rehearsing, in fluent Italian, a dramatic scene from Verdi's opera, "Un Ballo in Maschera."

However he was not about to make his debut at the Metropolitan or Covent Garden: he was simply playing, with great relish, a role within a role for "The Adventure of Sherlock Holmes' Smarter Brother," the 20th Century-Fox film written and directed by Gene Wilder.

He plays the part of Gambetti, an opera singer with a penchant for blackmail-and with great gusto.

"My father was an Italian and I'm playing an Italian and an opera singer. So, Italian is fun, opera singer is fun, blackmail is fun. My father was a bombastic, loud, funny guy, who came from Naples, and until my late teens the only Italian I knew was curse words and loud screaming. Later I went to college and studied Italian, but I'm using a lot of my father's sounds and rhythms of speaking for this character. My mother, who is still alive, is also Italian, and so when I do an Italian accent it comes very naturally to me," said Dom.

He had just finished filming a long scene with Leo McKern, who plays Sherlock Holmes' arch enemy, Moriarty. Actually the scene was more like a pitched battle: "We fought for what seemed like days; he twisted my ear and choked me, I pulled his hair and bit him on the nose. It was incredible because we met for the first time on the set at Shepperton and two minutes later we were beating each other up. Other actors are introduced, say 'hello,' and start a passionate love scene in this crazy business; I just said 'hello' to Leo and started pummeling him."

Set in Victorian London, "The Adventure of Sherlock Holmes' Smarter Brother" is a story that centers not on the famed sleuth but his insanely jealous younger brother, Sigerson.

To confuse his arch-enemy Moriarty, Sherlock pretends to leave London, entrusting Sigi with what appears to be a trifling mystery but what in actuality is a case upon whose solution rests the fate of the nation.

With the aid of his companion in distress, Sergeant Orville Sacker of the Records Bureau at Scotland Yard, Sigi sets out to prove there is more than one genius of deduction in the Holmes family.

This he does after many twists and surprises that are far from elementary.

Wilder began work on the script of "The Adventure of Sherlock Holmes' Smarter Brother" in June 1974, immediately after finishing "Young Frankenstein," and expressly created characters for the specific talents of Madeline Kahn, Marty Feldman, and Dom DeLuise. "When you find people whose talent you love," he says, "you can create characters their talents would lend themselves to. It's wonderful to write a part especially for someone because when they act it they already feel at home."

The film also utilizes the combined talents of composer John Morris and choreographer Alan Johnson whose inspired zanyness were important ingredients of "The Producers," "Blazing Saddles," and "Young Frankenstein."

At Shepperton Studio Centre, Victorian London was recreated by production designer (and double Oscar-winner) Terry Marsh and his cohorts. The many impressive sets include the interior of the Tivoli Music Hall (a nostalgic piece of Victoriana, this, largely based on the now decrepit Wilton Music Hall in Mile End Road); the interior of an opera house which includes a fascinating tour backstage through a weird and wonderful "prop" room, and a huge outdoor set that is a composite of many London streets from the sinister to the swell.

Costume designer Ruth Myers adds much to the period atmosphere by her creations which range from the highly romantic and the very theatrical to the amusingly pert and sometimes deliberately tawdry.

Gene Wilder makes his directorial debut backed by a production team headed by producer Richard A. Roth and associate producer Charles Orme. Gerry Fisher is director of photography and Jim Clark is editor.

Gene Bledsoe Wins Talent Search

Gene Bledsoe, singing two original compositions while accompanying himself on the piano, was the winner in the UNCW Bob Hope search for Tops in Collegiate Talent Competition held on campus last Thursday. The junior music major will represent UNCW in the area competition next month.

James Burke received second place for his original piano composition. Debbie Early, accompanied by Ivey James, received third place for her vocal rendition of a recent top 40 hit. Mark Vick, singing a blues song and accompanying himself on the guitar, Ricky Adams, singing a recent pop hit, Emily Cooper, playing the guitar and singing a folk song, and Cindi Hamilton, singing a showtune while accompanied by Ivey James at the piano, completed the field of seven contestants.

Judged by Mr. Doug Swink, UNCW Drama Department and Mrs. Beverly Cobb, Lower Cape Fear Council of the Arts, the acts were rated on a five point scale for showmanship and professionalism, technical excellence, and treatment and interpretation of material. Although five different talent categories were represented, each act competed against all the others on the sole basis of displayed talent.

If Bledsoe's talent withstands the test at the area competition next month, the sectional competition in December, and the national competition in January, he will appear on a TV special in February, hosted by Bob Hope himself. A recording contract is a possible bonus for the national winners, along with exposure to a number of talent agencies and buyers.

A Deluxe Be Bop A Lula

Despite some fine albums Be Bop Deluxe has managed to escape the public's eye here in America. Following some heavy touring by the group Capital has decided to give them a deluxe promotional push. With Be Bop's new album, LIVE! IN THE AIR AGE, Capital has pulled out all the stops. It seems like every current record gimmick has been used on this lp. First is the album itself: the first 50,000 copies of the album has been pressed in white vinyl. Colored plastic seems to be the big thing now among record companies. Along with the lp is included an ep. Eps are relics of the past. They are records with three or four tunes and usually come in the size of a 45. This idea of giving the public a little extra is another advertising device.

To capitalize on the disco phenomenon (12 inch singles, not the type of music), the ep looks like a regular lp, but has only three short tunes on it. The idea of putting out a live album seems to be another promotional device. Ever since the success of Peter Frampton's live lp there has been a surge in live lps. It use to be that one released a live lp to fill up some contractual obligation. Topping the whole thing off is the cover of the lp. It has some nice shots from the silent classic, "Metropolis," a sort of primitive Star Wars, sci-fy thriller. All in all LIVE! IN THE AIR AGE is a pretty nice package.

Be Bop Deluxe is a four man group from Britain that centers on the talents of Bill Nelson, lead guitar. Bill also handles lead vocals and writes the group's material. On this lp most of the songs come from Be Bop's past albums. "Mill Street Junction" and "Piece of Mine" are the only new cuts. This is where the basic problem of LIVE! IN THE AIR AGE lies.

While the music on it is fine the original studio tracks are superior. "Fair Exchange" still has an exciting sound, but on SUNBURST FINISH it is much better. This lp is worthwhile from the standpoint that it gives a newcomer an overall picture of how Be Bop Deluxe sounds, from both their good and bad sides. As I mentioned before the lp is unique in its form so it will be a collector's item someday. Still I would suggest newcomers check out SUNBURST FINISH first before purchasing this one. Steve Harvey

Piedmont Orchestra Presents Concert Sponsored by Music Series

The Piedmont Chamber Orchestra will perform in Kean Auditorium Monday, October 31, at 8:00 p.m., sponsored by the University Music Series. The concert is free to UNCW students with valid ID's.

The concert program will include Haydn's "Notturmo," "Suite in E Major, Opus 63" by Arthur Foote; "Concert Piece in C Major for Violin and Orchestra" by Beethoven; featuring violin soloist Vartin oogian; and Brahms' "Variations and Fugue On A Theme by Handel, Opus 24."

The Piedmont Chamber Orchestra was established in 1968 by the Rockefeller Foundation and the Foundation of the North Carolina School of the Arts as a professional ensemble utilizing the artist faculty of the North Carolina School of the Arts. Also supported by the National Endowment for the Arts and the Mary Duke Biddle Foundation, the orchestra was created to serve audiences primarily in the southeastern United States.

The musical excellence of the Piedmont Chamber Orchestra quickly received national recognition with performances at the inauguration of the John F. Kennedy Center in Washington, D. C., at Lincoln Center in New York City, and on major concert series from Detroit to Miami. Claude Frank, Erick Friedman, and Janice Harsanyi - have toured extensively with the ensemble. Jorge Bolet, Lili Kraus, Paul Doktor and Seth McCoy have also appeared in concert with the Piedmont Chamber Orchestra.

Unique institutional advantages nurture both the North Carolina School of the Arts and the twenty-two member Piedmont Chamber Orchestra. The performing faculty "showcase" their artistry as featured soloists with the ensemble and share musical and organizational responsibilities with the Music Director and the Manager.

Among these notable musicians are concertmaster Vartan Manoogian, former concertmaster of the Orchestre de la Suisse Romande; violinist Elaine Richey, winner of the prestigious Naumberg Competition; Sally Peck, formerly principal violist of the Utah Symphony; Denis Brott, winner of the International Cello Competition in Munich; Lynn Peters, bass, formerly with the Detroit Symphony; and Manager, Emile Simonel, former violist with the New York String Sextet and Claremont Quartet.

Principal winds, members of the internationally-known Clarion Wind Quintet, are Philip Dunigan, flutist with the Royal Ballet and New York City Opera; Joseph Robinson, soloist and principal oboist with the Atlanta Symphony; Robert Listokin, former principal clarinet with the Columbia and RCA Recording Orchestras; bassoonist Mark Popkin, a frequent performer with the Chamber Society of Lincoln Center and Casals Festival; and Fredrick Bergstone, former principal horn of the Kansas City Philharmonic.

The orchestra draws from the rich legacy of solo and concerti grossi literature from the seventeenth and eighteenth century greats as Bach,

The Piedmont Chamber Orchestra

Mozart, Haydn, Handel, and Vivaldi and from the ever growing number of twentieth century composers joining Stravinsky, Bartok, Hindemith, Britten, Copland, and Porsichetti.

At a time when the beauty and flexibility of the small orchestra are recognized and in great demand, the Piedmont Chamber Orchestra is being acclaimed as one of America's finest ensembles.

Nicholas Harsanyi, the Hungarian-born conductor of the Piedmont Chamber Orchestra and Dean of the School of Music of the North Carolina School of the Arts, has made distinguished contributions to American musical life. He was the Music Director and Conductor of the Princeton Chamber Orchestra; Trenton, New Jersey Symphony; the Bach Aria Group and served as Music Director of the Interlochen Arts Academy Orchestra until he came to the School of the Arts in June, 1971.

A graduate of the Budapest Academy of Music, he came to the United States in 1938 on a teaching fellowship at Westminster Choir College in Princeton, New Jersey. After service in the American armed forces, he returned to Princeton to resume his duties at the Choir College and on the faculty of Princeton University.

Convinced of the importance of superior music-making and determined to create this awareness in ever-expanding areas of the Southeast, Maestro Harsanyi is dedicated the reality that performance of quality are a source of profound pleasure to all who come under their spell.

Pro Musica Opens 1977-78 Season

On Sunday, October 30, the Wilmington Pro Musica will present its first concert of the 1977-78 season, at 4:00 p.m. at St. Mary's Catholic Church. Frank Wiley is musical director. There will be no admission charge for this program.

Opening the program will be the Trio Sonata in C by William Boyce, performed by Gaile Zack and Holladay Worth, violins, Mary von Herrmann, cello, and Patricia Wiley, harpsichord. Next, Gaile Zack and Jane Tierney, violins, Holladay Worth, viola, and Peter Danilowicz, cello, will present the premiere performance of String Quartet by Marc McFayden. McFayden, a native of Wilmington, composed this piece in 1977.

A group of brass ensemble pieces, composed of Motet Absalom fili mi and Royal Fanfare by Josquin des Prez, Canzona I "La Spiritata" and Canzona II by Giovanni Gabrieli, and Sonata from "Die Bankelsangerlieder", will close the first half. The group is directed by Christine Burkholder, a member of the UNCW music faculty. Other performers in the ensemble are Bill McAdams, trumpet, Steve Skillman, horn, Jack Pindell, trombone, and Levy Gaillard, tuba.

Canzon Prima by Girolamo Frescobaldi will begin the second half of the program. Performing this piece are Gaile Zack and Holladay Worth, violins, Mary von Herrmann, cello, and Frank Wiley, harpsichord. Next on the program will be Vivaldi's Concerto in D, featuring Sam Dorsey, guitar. Dorsey is the guitar instructor at UNCW. Other performers will include Gaile Zack, violin, Holladay Worth, viola, and Mary von Herrmann, cello. The final piece on the program will be the aria "Let the Bright Seraphim" from G.F. Handel's ORATORIO Samson. Featured in this work are Sheila Marlowe, soprano, and Christine Burkholder, trumpet. They will be joined by Jane Tierney and Gaile Zack, violins, Holladay Worth, viola, Peter Danilowicz, cello, Jay Meyer, bass, and Patricia Wiley, harpsichord.

Chemistry Club

The next meeting of the Chemistry Club will be Thursday, October 27, at 4:15 pm. Funky Fright Night to be held Monday, October 31 at Legion Stadium at 4:00 pm will be discussed. All members are encouraged to attend.

Wilmington Foursome Play Major Role for Seahawks

There's more "Wilmington" in this year's highly successful UNCW soccer squad than just the name.

Four former high school performers from Wilmington are listed on the Seahawk roster, and all have been instrumental in the excellent season the team has enjoyed this year. Coach Calvin Lane's club entered Saturday's important clash at William & Mary ranked eighth in the South with an 8-3 record.

Junior Eddie Brock and three freshmen—Doug Powell, Charlie Ingold and Rusty Russ—comprise the local delegation on the UNCW team; it is a foursome in which their coach holds great pride.

"Some awfully good players have come out of the Wilmington area in recent years," Lane says, "and we feel we have four of the finest. Three of these young men have started during the current year."

Brock, being the eldest of the group, has given the most to UNCW soccer. After serving as a parttime starter his freshman year, he has become a first-string forward the past two seasons. Utilizing his speed at a wing position, he has scored two goals and assisted on five others this season.

"Eddie is a true competitor," Lane emphasizes. "He is perhaps the best hustler on the squad and will literally do anything to win. At times he becomes a human projectile out there, hurling his body at the ball."

The sacrifices he makes, though, are considered worthwhile by Brock himself.

"I think the program we have here is as good as anywhere else," he says. "I didn't start playing soccer until my junior year in high school, but Coach Lane talked me into coming to UNCW and I'm real glad I did."

Doug Powell, a freshman in his initial year in the Seahawk soccer program, couldn't agree with Brock more.

"I like the school and my teammates," he says. "There is a real good attitude on our team, one of hard work and seriousness but still having fun."

"We have a quality team, but even a player with slightly above average ability can play some. At a school like Carolina, he might not have that chance."

Powell was the beneficiary last year of the first-ever Leon Brogden Scholarship, presented to a local senior who best exemplifies the high standards of the award's namesake. His soccer skills are also quite admirable.

"Doug has unlimited potential," his coach states. "He has good size, excellent ball skills and a real cannon in his right foot. He could be one of our best ever."

Although sidelined for some midseason games by illness, Powell has contributed two goals and a pair of assists to the Seahawk offense from his halfback position. As a prep player, last year, he was named the most valuable player on the New Hanover High team which finished second in the state.

Two of Powell's former teammates at New Hanover have also joined the Seahawks this year. Rusty Russ, the goalkeeper on that state runner-up squad, and Charlie Ingold, his predecessor in goal for the Wildcats, have both seen action at that position for the 1977 UNCW team.

"Both Rusty and Charlie were outstanding keepers in high school," Lane notes. "Rusty was hampered by an early season ankle injury but has tremendous quickness and shows great promise."

"Charlie, who attended Southeast Community College last year, has gained the respect of every player on our team with his hard work this year. He took a real trouble area for us—in the goal—and has made it one of our stronger positions."

The duo agree that they enjoy playing soccer at UNCW and that the sport itself has been a prime factor in their happiness at the school. "I wasn't even sure I was going to college," Russ says. "Soccer was one of the reasons I came here. I just enjoy the good feeling of being on the team."

Ingold, who was a first-team all-state goalie in high school, also appreciates the comradery on the Seahawk team.

"I was away from soccer all last year and really missed it," he says. "I had planned to come to UNCW all along, but wasn't sure about soccer. But Eddie (Brock) talked to me and said if I was coming to school here, then I should definitely play soccer—and I'm glad I did."

Ingold has allowed but 10 goals in 10 contests, recording 79 saves in the process. He has registered two shutouts single-handedly and combined with Russ on four others.

With his four Wilmingtonians still available for another season, and two more years after that for the three freshmen, Coach Lane is understandably high on the caliber of soccer now being played in the Wilmington area.

"Interest and skill in the sport of soccer is an ever-growing part of athletics in our area," Lane says. "More and more young people are playing soccer, and playing it better, than ever before."

"I am proud to say that I believe we here at the university have developed a program that is attractive to our local athletes. We play a quality schedule and our team has demonstrated it can play with the best teams in the South."

A Swat At Glory

As sports editor of the Seahawk, it is indeed my privilege to announce the first (and hopefully last) International Fly-Swatting Contest.

Yes, all you sports fans out there in newspaperland, here's your chance to gain international glory and win fabulous prizes, besides. Negotiations are underway with ABC Sports to carry on their Wide World of Sports, right alongside such sporting classics as the International Tobacco-Spitting Contest and the World Hair-Pulling Championship.

The rules are very simple—come by the Seahawk office and leave your name and telephone number. At a time and date to be announced later, all entrants will report to the Seahawk office with the latest edition of the Seahawk. The paper may be rolled, folded, or used as is (however the contestant desires) to swat at the flies. The person who kills the most flies in 15 minutes is declared the winner.

Here are some of the prizes the winner will not receive: an autographed nude picture of Linda Ronstadt, a trip for two to Las Vegas, a 1977 Corvette, and $100,000 a month for the rest of your life.

Here are some of the prizes the winner will receive: a year's subscription to the Seahawk, one dead roach, an autographed nude picture of Steve Harvey, a wet cigarette butt, and 1 cent for the rest of your life.

Register immediately, because entrance is limited to the first 5,649 people. Don't miss your chance at capturing the glory of being the first International Fly-Swatting Champion.

The Still Point

I recently returned from the "Congress on Science and Ethics" held at the University of Denver (Colorado) and it was a good experience, both professionally and personally. The conference was supposed to be four days but the scheduling had to be changed and twenty-two (22) papers were presented in three days (that's right—7 a day.) The three major segments of the congress were "Life Control, Social Control, and Death Control" with a series of papers in each category. Let me share some of my personal reactions and observations.

A woman Roman Catholic theologian presented an excellent paper on abortion which cut through the emotional jargon of the "pro-life" and "right to control my body" groups, dealt with the underlying assumptions of the abortion issue and suggested that one critically important key to resolving the abortion issue is to reassess our current understandings of human sexuality. There was also very competent and diverse discussion on the issue of genetic experimentation and the current work in the area of recombinant DNA.

One paper and person I looked forward to was "Two Interrelated Value Systems: The Genetic and Somatic; Man Unfolding" by Dr. Jonas Salk.

However, there was disappointment in two areas for most conference participants. First, Dr. Salk did not attend the Congress and someone else read the paper (quite ineffectively!). The paper itself was the second disappointment. It was ambiguous and presumptuous with very little clear articulation of apparent assumptions in the paper.

Another unusual paper spoke to the problems and ethical issues in space exploration and control. What kinds of guidelines should there be; what will the ramifications be for weekly space shuttles and the establishment of space colonies? Very little social science or ethical investigation has been accomplished in this field because it is relatively new, very secretive, and attended to by a relatively small core of highly skilled technologists.

Much time was devoted to behavior control and personal freedom with regard to human experimentation, medical treatment, and patient/physician responsibilities as well as my own paper which called for a personal re-acquaintance with death and a responsibility to allow the death encounter to be a constructive, growth-producing experience. Finally, a section on "life after life" and "life after death" sparked a renewal dialogue as differing value systems came into focus and humanistic, religious, psychological, sociological, and intellectual definitions of immortality collided at the rostrum.

Two major threads of thought seemed to entwine themselves throughout most of the presentations without any pre-arrangement. There seemed to first be an awareness and agreement on the part of the philosophers, theologians, scientists, technologists, and practitioners alike that our venture into an "etho-science" as one put it is a responsible necessity. In other words, "What are the possible ethical implications of our scientific ventures?" is a question which must be asked.

There was also a consensus that this task of being involved in an ethical science (and technology) cannot merely be a peer back-scratching process. The call from ethicists and scientists alike was for establishment of an interdisciplinary, interprofessional approach to ethics in scientific research and application including unmanipulated input from the general public. We all have a responsibility to work together.

"Wrong Show" Has Two Winners

Gwen Cude, a local high school student, and Lela Henderson, secretary of the Department of Modern Languages, were co-winners in the second annual "Wrong Show" sponsored by VICE and S&E-X.

Ms. Cude sang a folk tune accompanying herself on the guitar. Ms. Henderson presented a comical song routine, accompanying herself on the piano.

Steve Harvey served as host for the evening. Judges were Patrice Vaccaro, and Lew Gitlin of WECT-TV, Shirley Gilbert of WWAY-TV, and Doug Swink of the Department of Drama and Speech.

Several acts were presented during the evening, many receiving the fate of the infamous song.

Clubs Will Not Get Athletic Funds

binos said that the club could raise $150,000 to $200,000 a year through local businesses which would be the approximate amount needed to finance a varsity team.

Until the SGA reallocation of $1470, the club members themselves paid all their expenses including uniforms, expenses on road trips, referee fees and medical supplies. Referee fees alone for five home games is about $380, and uniforms cost each player about $26.

Zerbinos said that the club would still exist if there was a varsity team for "non-varsity players" but would be financed by the money raised for the team and "not be a burden to SGA. Even if nothing else comes, I want the club."

Zerbinos went on to say that Brooks would still have to back the team since the club would have to go through him to get into NCAA competition but even "if the team fails, the Athletic Department wouldn't be out anything."

Cooney Wins in Poetry Contest

Gerald Cooney, a perennial winner in UNCW literary contests, captured the $50 first prize in the 1977 University Poetry Contest. The awards were presented Thursday in the SRO Theatre.

Cooney won for his poem "An Anthology of Night People (The Prostitute)".

Ellen Honeycutt won the $30 second prize for her poem "Guest Fantasia." Ms. Honeycutt also captured an honorable mention for "Southbound Dreams," receiving $10. Other winners were Carolyn Renager, third place ($20), for "The Hero," and Trena Gourley, honorable mention ($10), for "Illicit Affair."

The awards were presented by Mrs. Jane Hubis of the North Carolina Junior Sorosis, the financing organization of the contest. English Club President Bill Rapp gave introductory remarks.

Judges for the contest were Dr. Sally Barton of the English Department, Mrs. Marjorie McGovern of Laney High School, and Dr. Victor Zullo of the Earth Sciences Department.

Dr. Barton gave brief remarks at the awards presentation, telling of what the judges had looked for in the poetry.

Approximately 125 poems were submitted to the contest this year.

Poetry winners Trena Gourley and Gerald Cooney

UNCW Republicans Attend State Convention

Eight UNCW students (Ray Warren, Charles Balser, Beth Maney, Sonya Holden, James Scoggins, Patsy Warner, Mark Beanblossom, and Harry Pilos) attended the fall convention of the North-Carolina Federation of College Republicans last weekend. The convention was held at Meredith College in Raleigh.

Among actions taken at the convention, was the adoption of a resolution regarding the State Ports Authority. The resolution, sponsored by the UNCW delegation, cited the "neglect" of North Carolinas two ports by the legislature and called for the "appropriation of the necessary funds to make the ports of Wilmington and Morehead City competitive with those of our neighboring states." The resolution also called for "the prompt allocation of funds to improve the highways connecting these ports to the piedmont to lifted access four lane status."

Another resolution, adopted by the federation, cited the importance of tobacco to the North Carolina economy and condemned President Carter's plan to eliminate the present price supports for that crop.

The UNCW C.R. club will meet this Thursday night at 6:00 p.m. in room 118 of the Chemistry building. The club will hear reports on projects and fund raising plans. All interested students are invited to attend.

Crime Watch-

By Tim Bass

Do you hitchhike much? Do you ever give that type of travel much thought? If not, and if you never intend to take up thumbing then turn the page—this likely will not interest you, the bulletin boards are full of rides. But for those of you who can identify with standing on a roadside, with moving on your mind, trying to turn your thumb into transportation, be it in the past, present, or future, the words scattered along this area might be—and hopefully will be—of some use to you.

First thing, hitchhiking is illegal in most places, so check the situation out with someone (a policeman or highway patrolman would be the best and most reliable source) before taking off. Along N.C.'s interstate highways, where the illegality is strongest stressed, try using the on-ramps for cars headed your way.

Avoid hitchhiking alone. It's usually just as easy—and always twice as safe—for two to get picked up as one. Thumb-ing at night is a high-risk form of transportation, and desertion areas can leave you beside the road for quite a while. Plan your route along busier highways, even if it is more out of the way.

Stay back from the road a bit while thumbing. In many places sidewalks line the roads, and they provide greater safety than the drainage alleys beside the pavement.

One UNCW student stated he doesn't thumb because there are "too many looks" on the road, and nowadays these words are seemingly ringing truer and truer. While being choosy can result in lengthy roadside visits, it is advisable to accept rides only from older couples, if possible. Never take rides from speedsters, drunks, or anyone who you feel looks suspicious.

Signs stating your destination or your identification as a student are always helpful. An ace hitchhiker from San Francisco often adds some comedy into his roadside routine, spicing up his signs with alliteration or artwork and bouncing lightly up and down watching the on-coming driver intently and chanting to him enthusiastically. Not only do these things keep him awake and from being bored or discouraged, they have also netted him quite a few rides mainly because the driver got a laugh out of this break from the usual thumbing scenes. And one of my hometown hitchhikers emphasizes that neat appearance aids in getting rides.

Before getting in, ask the driver's destination before telling yours. Sit next to the door—be sure the inside handle works. While riding, stay awake and alert—be ready to exit if trouble develops.

Give the driver adequate notice of where you want to get out.

APO Pledges Take Tests, Activities Planned

Pledges have taken two tests thus far in the pledging period. After the meeting last Thursday, a pledge fellowship was held out at the beach house of Ray Warren.

Alumnus Robert Dubo represented the Upsilon Nu Chapter at the APO District Meeting last weekend at Charlottesville, Va. He conducted a seminar on chapter presidency. Chapters from three states were represented.

All APO Alumni, brothers, and pledges are asked to be present at the Governor's Square Clubhouse, 7 p.m., November 1 for an alumni meeting. Such meeting and organization will affect all

APO brothers. Mixers will be provided. BYOB.

Any brothers and pledges interested in the canoe trip on November 5 are asked to please contact Fellowship Chairman Pat Armstrong.

"Funky Fright Night" for Circle K

The members of Circle K Club will participate in "Funky Fright Night" on Halloween Night as their October project. This event is sponsored by the Wilmington Youth Council and is designed to give kids a safe place to go and yet have fun on Halloween. Circle K-ers will be responsible for setting up a booth, having a game, and providing prizes for all children. Any interested member should participate.

The Circle K Club is also selling tickets for Kiwanis Pancake Day, to be held on Saturday, November 5, at the National Guard Armory on Carolina Beach Road next to Legion Stadium. Tickets may be purchased from any Circle K member for $1.50. For more information, contact Dr. Ned Martin in the Chemistry Department or Connie Butner, 623 Galloway.

TKE Wins First Game

The intramural season started with the brothers of TKE winning our first game. The first half was a standstill, as no one could cross the goal because of the defensive abilities of both teams. In the second half the TKE offense finally broke through to score two touchdowns and our defense kept the other team from scoring.

The game ended 14-0 with the best team winning. We have held several practices since then, in hopes to improve our team. The TKE's are looking forward to do good competition this season.

P.E. Majors Meet in Cafeteria

The P.E. Majors Club will meet Thursday, October 27, at 11:30 a.m. upstairs in the cafeteria. The cost of the meal will be $1.30 without a meal ticket. Convention plans and fundraising projects will be discussed. Dues should be paid at this time.

The club's picture for the Fledgling will also be made at this time.

Club Constitutions Needed

The SGA needs the constitutions of all campus clubs and organizations who wish to be chartered by the Student Senate. Also needed is a list of current officers.

Each club is asked to bring this information to the SGA office, upstairs in the Pub, open from 1:00 to 5:00 daily.

Literature By and About Women Is New Course Offered in Spring

by Robert S. Brown III

Have you ever read a play by William Shakespeare's sister? Of course you haven't. But the latest rumour (which I start here) is that she had a whole dresser drawer full of plays and old Will would confiscate one whenever he ran out of ideas.

Though seemingly absurd, the thought is valid, in light of the suppression of women writers during that time period.

William Shakespeare's sister could be a member of the constant movement which has gone on for hundreds of years by women to see how many dresser drawers they could fill with their poems and short stories before they got caught by some dominating male person.

However, recent centuries have brought a slow but steady stream of top drawer publications into the public awareness; many of which have wrought important and lasting changes on society.

This Spring semester you will have a chance to discover what some American women have been hiding in their dresser drawer by registering in an experimental course offered by the English Department called, Literature By and About Women.

The course will consist of reading poems and short stories by American female writers, to discover how they reflected their time and how they affected the students.

It will be concerned with the new growth in women's poetry which is often outspoken, honest, autobiographical and angry.

The readings will also be looked at to find what the authors are saying about their lives and other peoples lives.

It is hoped that men and women from all fields of study will participate in this course so that there will be a richer discussion of the readings with insights coming from all points of views.

Dr. Margaret Parish, an interesting woman herself, will teach the course and is especially looking forward to the class discussion. She commented that "Everyone can make a valuable contribution to the class."

Of the reading material in general she commented that the feminist movement in recent years has brought a new perspective to women's literature. Every day new works are being uncovered and old works are being rediscovered.

Feminism has brought a new awareness and reappraisal of women's rights to produce literature and consequently women are writing more, sharing more and publishing more.

Dr. Parish prefers to keep her poetry in her dresser drawer.

However, she makes up for this in other ways.

In 1963, Houghton Mifflin published her first children's book, David McCheevers - 29 Dogs, which was used as a textbook in the I Can Read library series.

She is also one of four authors of an anthology soon to be published by Heath Publishing called, Women: An Affirmation, which presents positive images of women in traditional and non-traditional roles, with an affirmative focus on stereotypes.

Her three colleagues on the project are professors at the University of Miami of Ohio.

Dr. Parish also edits a column which reviews adolescent literature in paperbacks called Pick of the Paperbacks for English Journal, which is one of four publications of the National Council of Teachers of English.

Finally, Dr. Parish has a degree as a librarian and mixed with that a basic belief about teaching. She says, "There is no better way to empower a student than to teach him or her to use the library. In that way the student becomes an active learner instead of a passive receptor."

Don't forget to pre-register for Literature By and About Women.

New Bookstore Opened

By Tim Bass

The wide white ribbon was snipped in two, and at about 10:10 a.m. on October 31, Vice Chancellor for Student Affairs Dr. William M. Malloy unlocked the doors, officially opening the new UNCW Bookstore. Some thirty spectators, including faculty members, administration personnel, a television camera and students, showed up in the chilled mist to witness the opening and to check out what was inside of this long-awaited facility.

Vivan Martindale, Campus Minister, opened the ceremony by giving the invocation. Dr. Malloy then gave opening comments before Chancellor William Wagoner, who presided over the event, spoke to the crowd. Dr. Wagoner introduced the ceremony's special guest, former Bookstore Manager Pat Gaskins, and bestowed on her the Honorary Doctor of Bookstore Management Degree. Mrs. Gaskins assisted with the ribbon-cutting.

Once the doors were open, the guests moved inside, where the roomy, well-stocked store awaited arrival. Book bags and combs were distributed to the visitors of the building all day, and special prizes were later given as purchase receipts were used for the drawing. Free Pepsi and cookies were available on the steps of the bookstore all day.

Located across the street from Parking Lot E (beside the cafeteria), the new bookstore will be open Monday-Friday from 8:00 a.m. - 4:00 p.m.

Probably the most striking, and pleasing, aspect about the new campus bookstore is variety. Naturally, the heart of the store is textbooks, but they make up only a portion of the store's contents. The new facility is stocked with everything from sketch pads to sweatshirts, from pencils to posters; it has rugby shirts, magazines, glue, gym shorts, paperback novels, and maps. And room. Room in which to walk, in which to browse freely, in which to breathe. Long lines may be becoming an endangered species around the campus.

The store has the solution to most of the student's merchandise needs for school, except, perhaps, food; and the special sales being offered in conjunction with the grand opening are kind to those limited student budgets.

The location of the store, in being close to yet not directly in the center of the classroom areas and in being directly across the street from a large parking lot, makes use of the store convenient for those who don't want the hassles of crowds or of looking for a parking space. Also, since the bookstore is the sole occupant of its building, there is no stair-climbing or squeezing through unknown crowds--once inside, you're there.

And, while the computerized cash registers click up your cash count, symphonic strings sing soothingly in the background.

Chancellor Meets With SGA President to Discuss Fee Situation

By Bobby Parker

SGA President Karin Whaley met with Chancellor William Wagoner last Thursday and Friday at the Chancellor's request to discuss the repercussions of an editorial which appeared in the October 26 issue of The Seahawk. Whaley said that the Chancellor's "extreme distress" over the matter was due to his concern that "the image of the administration both on and off campus" had been damaged.

Whaley stated that Chancellor Wagoner was particularly upset by the reference in the editorial that the Chancellor and other administrative officials have neglected the needs of students, especially in regard to fees.

At the three-hour conference on Thursday, Whaley said she was "continually reminded of (the Chancellor's) ultimate authority over the SGA that comes with the Office of Chancellor."

Criticism had earlier surfaced over the increase in the portion of student fees which goes to the Athletic Department as opposed to the portion which goes to student government. The Athletic Department, Physical Education Department, and Intramurals received an $18 increase in fee revenue this year, while no other area--including SGA--received an increase. At the same time, the SGA is continuing to fund athletic clubs on campus.

Whaley pointed out that the SGA "understands that club sports can not be funded through the Athletic Department" according to current state regulations. However, she noted that the SGA can not continue to meet the rising costs of these clubs in addition to its other activities.

As a solution, the President offered two courses of action: (1) make at least one of the athletic clubs a varsity sport, thus placing it within the

Minority Affairs Committee Uses Unfair Pressure

The Minority Affairs Committee is putting unfair pressure on the Student Senate and the Finance Committee in its quest for more funds by projecting the attitude that anyone who disagrees with the committee's proposals has racial motives. Luckily, both

This Newspaper's OPINION

November 2, 1977 THE SEAHAWK

Senate and committee have withstood these pressures, issuing a stern, yet well-put, letter which outlines their questions and concerns about the Minority Affairs budget request.

Nobody likes to be called a racist. But every time the Minority Affairs Committee is refused funds, the committee's representatives issue implications of bigotry and prejudice as reasons for the refusal. Nothing could be further from the truth.

As chairman of Minority Affairs, Ron Coley presented a budget request last spring for $10,000. The committee actually had the audacity to present this amount as a reasonable and fair request.

It would indeed be nice if the SGA could spend $10,000 on the program. It would also be nice if The Seahawk (or any SGA-funded group) could operate with such a budget.

The fact is, of course, that the SGA can not afford to give the Minority Affairs Committee much more than the $2000 it already has been given. Unencumbered funds are now below the $10,000 mark for the remainder of the year with new reallocation requests coming up at every Senate meeting.

The most recent reallocation request from Minority Affairs is in the amount of $4800. Some of this—such as $200 for a trust fund and $350 for art exhibits—will be well-spent, according to the budget outline. The other plans for spending the money are ill-defined, questionable estimates and include duplications of other SGA groups.

For example, the Committee wishes to spend $500 on dances and $250 on conferences. The Dance Committee has a $2600 budget that hasn't been touched so far this year—why not go through that committee? "Conferences" is a vague term that needs clarification before expenditures are approved.

Other committee plans call for $1000 to be spent on an Indian art exhibit. This is apparently Minority Affairs' answer to recent charges that it only represents black students. That inflated figure would become negotiable when it is cut in half.

Minority Affairs has also requested $2500 to bring in Gil Scott-Heron and $1500 for Nikki Giovanni. Surely these two would benefit not only minority students but the entire campus. But has the committee considered going through the Concert or Lecture Series Committees to explore the possibilities of sponsoring these programs? If it had consulted the latter, it would have found that Ms. Giovanni's lecture fee begins to be negotiable at $2000-2500.

The Minority Affairs Committee brought this budget request before the Senate several weeks ago. It was then referred to the Finance Committee meeting, at which no representative of Minority Affairs was present to support its case.

Members of the Minority Affairs Committee have displayed blatant unconcern for parliamentary procedure at many Senate meetings. At least one black student only comes to Senate meetings if it is known that Minority Affairs will be discussed.

As originally intended, members of the Minority Affairs Committee are supposed to work through other SGA committees to insure that the interests of minorities are represented. Thus far, there has been no indication that this is being done to any significant degree.

It is indeed unfortunate that Minority Affairs representatives have resorted to such practices as using unfair racial pressure against the SGA officials. The committee's job is too important to be hindered in this manner.

Letters to the Editor:

To the Editor:

There is an old saying, "when it rains it pours." With my life beginning to look like an adaptation of the Book of Job, I can see the truth in that proverb. Nonetheless, for all of you who have been holding your breath in anticipation of my next Rightline column—relax. Lord willing, it should appear next week. In the meantime, I shall whet your appetite by taking my editor to task for his comments on the Bakke case (Byline, October 19 Seahawk).

Almost all ancient societies thought of men in terms, not of individuals, but of social factors. The ancient laws of the Sumerians, Babylonians and Hebrews all recognized the lex talionis—an eye for an eye. That, if a member of your family was killed by one from another family, you could kill a member—any member—of the killer's family—or demand a payment in cash. The death of the original victim was not considered a denial of individual rights, but merely a loss of one of the society's resources.

The 18th century enlightenment and the American Revolution saw the triumph of a new idea which completely destroyed the moral basis of tribalism, feudalism, and absolutism. This idea, enshrined in our Declaration of Independence, was the concept of individual rights. Men and women were no longer seen as mere slaves, laboring for the good of society, but as beings possessing certain inalienable rights by the mere fact of their humanity.

Bobby Parker asks us to return to the days of tribalism and to make our entire Bill of Rights, the 14th amendment, and the 1964 civil rights act merely conditional guarantors of liberty.

The 14th amendment denies the states the power to abridge "equal protection under the law" for the reasons of "race, creed, color, national origin. . . ." By the 1964 civil rights act, this protection was extended to include discrimination by individuals. Allan Bakke was rejected for a place in medical school. Sixteen other people were accepted despite lower grades. There was but one factor which eliminated Mr. Bakke from admittance—his race. A clear violation of the 14th amendment.

Bobby Parker says that the needs of society override Mr. Bakke's constitutional rights. In other words, people enjoy constitutional freedoms only so long as these freedoms promote the social schemes of society, as defined by some great liberal god in Washington. This is a retreat from the enlightenment and a return to feudalism.

Yes, we do need more doctors of black and Hispanic background. There are many moral ways to achieve this goal, but setting up a new system of discrimination is not one of them.

It is sort of sad that Bobby chose to rely on emotionalism to carry his argument. The emotional triad reprinted from the Daily Tar Heel failed totally to deal with the issue at hand. Yes, Mr. Plessy was (See Letters, Page 3)

Little Controversy on Upcoming Ballot

There is very little controversy involved on the ballot for the November 8 elections. Therefore, there is very little voter interest in the constitutional amendments and bond issues which will be decided by those who take the time to get out and vote.

Perhaps the most controversial decision will be made on the question of succession for the governor and lieutenant governor. It was initially expected that there would be much greater interest in this issue than has so far been expressed by the general public.

The major reason that this amendment has not stirred up more voter interest is that it is generally assumed that this amendment will be approved. (And it will.) The most widely known opponents to the succession amendment are former Senator Sam Ervin and Lieutenant Governor Jimmy Green—two good reasons to vote for the amendment.

Those who try to portray this issue as one tailor-made for Governor Jim Hunt are really hard-pressed for an argument. This issue is, in Hunt's own words, "larger" than Jim Hunt. It shouldn't be confused as a referendum on any politician.

North Carolina governors are severely handicapped by the restriction to one term and by their lack of veto power. The state's chief executives become virtually ineffective often after two years in office, and if they do manage to implement any major programs they are not around long enough to see them put into action.

The result of the one-term restriction is that the General Assembly is left with a great deal of the leadership role in state government. If ever there was a more incompetent bunch—as a whole—I haven't seen them yet.

Senator Ervin has said that our state can produce 25 good men (he makes a point of saying "men") to be governor over the next 25 years. His succession would be limited to perhaps 13 of those "good men."

Senator Ervin would do his state a great favor if he'd tell us where he is hiding those "25 good men." In the last 18 years, only two out of five governors could be considered "good" (Terry Sanford and Hunt.)

One of the state's most popular governors was Luther Hodges, who served a complete term and the unexpired term of his predecessor, who died in office. Probably one of the main reasons for his popularity was that he was able to establish a sense of leadership in the office with the benefit of being there a decent length of time.

Support for the succession amendment has come from both Republican and Democratic leaders alike. Jim Holshouser and Terry Sanford approve it, as do the other recent governors.

Succession will give the voters of North Carolina the right to approve or disapprove of a governor's performance in office. We are capable enough to make that decision for ourselves and live with it.

Another of the constitutional amendments on the ballot is one requiring a balanced state budget. For years, Tarheel politicians thought this was already a constitutional provision. Jim Hunt campaigned on the issue. In actuality, a balanced budget is required by state law, not by the constitution.

And that's how it should remain.

The constitution is not the proper place for such an amendment. It will not change anything to have this spelled out in the constitution. True, the state will probably never face the prospect of deficit spending. But just suppose it does—such as in the case of a repeat of the Great Depression.

The state would be required to go through the process of passing another amendment to repeal this one. Budget matters are best left to the General Assembly, who could change the balanced budget requirement in event of the need, if it remains a provision of state law.

This amendment, however, will be passed without question, because anything that mentions a balanced budget is instantly appealing to the public. As usual, though, my vote will be on principle, so there will be at least one "no" vote on this amendment.

The $300,000,000 highway bond issue should definitely be approved. It will take more than tar and gravel to improve our state's highways. As with anything to do with government, money is paramount. (They'll get it sooner or later anyway.)

The amendment that will allow North Carolina cities to form electric membership cooperatives and jointly own electric systems. Under present regulations, each city must operate its own entire system. The amendment would decrease wasteful duplication and hold down increases in utility rates. Vote for it.

The final issue on the ballot would give a married man the right to receive the homestead upon the death of his wife. Current law grants this right to married women only. Vote for it.

Letters Continued

Linda Brown fought discrimination. Can we really expect the victims of the new discrimination to do less? Would not a ruling against Bakke only give credence to the (until now) doubtful claims of the Ku Klux Klan that white people are being discriminated against. Already the Klan has sought to enter the case and gain publicity for their sad theories of race. For God's sake let's not give them any help!

Let's face facts. Discrimination is wrong. Mr. Parker's illicit love affair with sociology and statistics cannot change that fact. If that be "oversimplifying" the issue, then perhaps the issue should remain simple. Allan Bakke is not a number or statistic. He is an individual who asks for nothing more than the right to be considered for his merits, not his race. Such is the birthright of every American of every race and creed. Therefore, in a very real sense, it is the Bill of Rights itself that is on trial in Washington. Should Bakke lose, we will all lose—and come a step closer to 1984.

Football Club Coach Seeks to Outline Problems of Division III

To the Editor:

After talking with Curtis Ward last week, I had the opportunity to spend an hour and a half in discussion with Athletic Director Bill Brooks. The topic, of course, was the UNCW Football Club. Coach Brooks outlined some of the many problems facing a prospective Division III football program. Some of the items mentioned were:

1. The difficulty involved in convincing the Board of Trustees to approve the formation of a Division III athletic organization when all other aspects of the athletic program are in the highly competitive Division I.

2. The difficulty in getting public support for an athletic program less than Division I.

Without the public support and attendance, a football program would surely become a financial burden to the Athletic Department and to the school as a whole;

3. The great costs involved. While no scholarships are granted in Division III, all of the other costs involved are there. Equipment, insurance, officials, travel, guarantees, and coaching salaries are still necessary;

4. The doubts that UNCW could compete in Division III. This was based on his statement that most Division III teams are from privately-funded colleges and while no athletic scholarships are given, players get financial aid for other reasons;

5. The difficulty in getting games. There are no Division III football teams in North Carolina or South Carolina. There are a few in Virginia, Georgia, and Florida. The bulk of the Division III teams on the East Coast are in New York and Ohio. There are teams to play but travel expenses would be high.

The opinions were from a man who has spent his life in athletics. The clothes on his back, food on his table, and possessions of this world are all the result of his work in athletics. This is not to say that he is perfect and can make no mistakes.

What I am saying is that I have a tremendous amount of respect for Coach Brooks. He has guided a small junior college athletic program to major college competition. And he has done it without the vast monetary support available. (See Letters, Page 4)

Committee Told to Clarify Budget Request

by Bobby Parker

The Finance Committee of the SGA presented a letter addressed to the Minority Affairs Committee at the regular session of the Student Senate Thursday night which said that there will be no recommendation on the Minority Affairs budget request until further clarification is made on specifics of the request.

SGA Treasurer Paul O'Bryant, Finance chairman, presented the letter which told Minority Affairs chairman Ron Coley that the Finance Committee does not feel "that we can responsibly recommend for or against the requested reallocation" until certain conditions are complied with.

The conditions state that Minority Affairs "needs to explore the cooperative funding for Black Culture Week events with other SGA agencies." The letter suggests that the Dance, Lecture, Concert, and Fine Arts Committees be consulted about possible "co-operative funding." It also suggested that academic departments such as drama, art, music, and English be approached by Minority Affairs.

The letter further says that "evidence should be presented...that this committee has endeavored to exercise its empowered authority to protect and promote minority affairs through the interaction of other SGA committees and academic departments."

The second condition calls for "exact costs for the proposed events" to be given to the Finance Committee and the Senate "in keeping with budgets submitted by all SGA agencies seeking funds."

O'Bryant outlined the current request from Minority Affairs, which showed the committee plans to spend $200 to begin a trust fund for the children of Robert Robinson, a student who recently died. Additional costs for the fall semester included $500 for dances and $250 for conferences.

For spring expenditures, the committee requested $1000 for an Indian art exhibition. For Black Culture Week, expenses were listed as $350 for an art exhibit; $500 for a talent show; $2500 for an appearance by Gil Scott-Heron; and $1500 for a lecture by poet Nikki Giovanni.

The budget totalled $6800, but since the committee has already been allocated $2000, it is now requesting $4800.

O'Bryant called for "more exact figures," noting that the costs listed were all estimates and that no contact has yet been made with the agents of Scott-Heron or Ms. Giovanni as to their normal fees.

Atlantis editors Lance Smith and Bill Rapp announced the time and date of a meeting to be held Tuesday, November 8 at 4:30 p.m., in the Seahawk office. The purpose of the meeting was stated as to form an advisory board "to encourage a more diverse student interest" in Atlantis.

The Atlantis staff also presented the petition which has been circulated for the past three weeks and was signed by 827 students. Rapp added that more copies of the petition had not yet been returned.

Sophomore Senator Jack Allen represented the Biology Club, asking that a request for $130 for slide lectures be referred to the Finance Committee. The Senate voted to send the matter to that committee.

The Senate also allocated approximately $250 to cover costs of the student handbook. The Senate had agreed to pay half of the costs for the book, which as in previous years, ran over the projected budget.

Investigating Committee Chairman Herman Smith said that the committee is currently looking into several questions, including whether food service can be offered to dorm students on the weekend of the Wake Forest basketball game (during Thanksgiving holidays), pool hours for students in the gym, and parking signs for the Belk lot.

Director of Student Activities Linda Moore and Vice-Chancellor William Malloy also attended the meeting.

Absent were Shirley Bryant, Steve Bowen, Tom Hunt, Wayne Bryant, Chris Aldridge, and Mark Beamblossen.

The next meeting is tomorrow night at 7:30 p.m. in Room c218. All students and faculty are invited to attend.

(Continued from Page 3) able to major state universities through strong booster clubs (i.e., Wolfpack Club, IPFAY (Clemson)). I feel very proud to be a physical education major at a university with the excellent facilities and athletic program that UNCW has. I hope that each of you will support the Seahawk program to the fullest.

As for football at UNCW, you have it already. The Football Club offers the students, faculty, and staff a chance to see UNCW students play football. And please, don't let the term "club" fool you. Members of this "club" hit as hard and play as tough as any other team. The players on the team never quit and have given me 110 per cent when I have asked for it.

And how many of you students, faculty, and staff have even ventured out to Legion Stadium to show your support for the program? Maybe 100-150. Please don't misunderstand me. The rest of the team and I would like to shake the hand of each of those 100-150 and express our most sincere appreciation for your support. One hundred to one hundred and fifty people at a game does nothing to those critics to show them that UNCW students are interested in football.

To illustrate the lack of support, I was assured and reassured by head cheerleader Mary Beth Hickman as well as other cheerleaders that they, the Cheerleading Club, would come out and give their support at home games. They never came. The cheerleaders are normally the group at a college or university to promote school spirit and give support to athletic functions. Obviously each group is in a world of its own, never venturing out to assist another.

As far as a varsity football program at UNCW in the future, it is quite doubtful.

There are too many negatives and not enough positives (support) to balance the scales. The UNCW Football Club will attempt to schedule some Division III teams for the 1978 season, but as a club outside of the Athletic Department.

In conclusion, I would like to address each of you, the students, faculty, and staff, and challenge you all to come out to Legion Stadium on Friday night, November 18 at 7:30 p.m. and see what club football is all about. See if it isn't the same game as played on TV and in major stadiums. The talent may not be the same, but the game is. And finally, Coach Brooks, the Football Club wants your vocal support. A word from you will mean so much to all of us. Frank Zerbinos

High Times in Augusta

By Campus Digest News Service
Think lobsters are the high point in Maine? Not quite—at least in Augusta. There, local pushers have proven that "high times" are everywhere in the U.S.

Forty-nine bales of marijuana was confiscated there last week with a street value of some $1,500,000.

A 22-year-old student, Jeffrey Boylan, from the Virgin Islands, had the pot in a truck he was driving.

And apparently, this was not all the pot that was going to be pushed in Maine. Boylan's arrest was prompted by the seizure by the Coast Guard of a sailboat and 30 more bales of pot at docksides in an unidentified point on the Maine coastline.

Looks like "fish and chips" might be replaced by "the evil weed" as the Maine heartthrob.

Profile: English Instructor Favors 20th Century

By Robert Douglas

With this issue, the Seahawk begins a series of profiles on new faculty members. The subject of this week's profile is Dr. Steven Ray Carter, Assistant Professor of English.

Born in Indianapolis, Indiana, thirty-five years ago, Dr. Carter moved to Ohio with his parents at the age of five. He is a recent immigrant to North Carolina, having moved here two months ago from Sardinia, a large Italian island in the Mediterranean, where Dr. Carter served as a Fulbright-Hays (after the senators who originated this foreign exchange program for university faculty) lecturer at the University of Sassari. It was also in Sardinia that he met his wife of one year, a native Sardinian who is currently expecting a child. Prior to that, he taught at the University of Akron, Ohio State University and Youngstown State University (also in Ohio). Presently he teaches General Fiction, Modern American Literature and two sections of composition.

Dr. Carter stated that he decidedly has a favorite type of literature: 20th century fiction by both American and foreign authors (African, Oriental, Latin American). Hesse, Dostoevsky and Faulkner number among his favorite authors. In the fall, Dr. Carter will teach two recently-approved courses: Contemporary Fiction and Detective Fiction.

When questioned about special interests, Dr. Carter said that he and his wife enjoy attending the theater. In addition, he is currently writing a book about Loraine Hansberry, author of Raisin in the Sun.

UNCW Art Instructors Have Paintings Chosen

Three of the eight works of art selected for purchase in the Wilmington phase of the R. J. Reynolds Industries-North Carolina Artists Competition were those of Ann Conner and Claude Howell, both of whom are art instructors at UNCW.

The two works by Miss Conner were, "Shell" and "Beach '77". Both pictures deal with definite shapes and angles done in a style devised by Miss Conner which she calls "prismacolor".

The subject of Claude Howell's oil painting is several shrimpers at Wrightsville Beach. The painting presents nearly life sized figures in closely related, muted colors.

The other artists whose works were selected are: Jean Wenner of Jacksonville, Elizabeth Stoll of Wilmington, Thomas Cowan of Rutherfordton, Shun Endo of Wilmington and Georgeann McNeill Hass of Wilmington.

When deciding which works would be chosen from the 225 entries the judges looked for quality artwork which introduced an original concept done well.

The judges for the competition were: Ted Potter, director of the Southeastern Center for Contemporary Art in Winston-Salem; Mousa Domit, director of the North Carolina Museum of Art, Raleigh; Lida Lowrey, director of Piedmont Craftsmen Inc., Winston-Salem and William K. Stars, director of the Duke University Museum of Art, Durham.

R. J. Reynolds Industries is building a collection of art that will contain 125 works. Thus far, 60 have been chosen.

Miss Conner also has a prismacolor entitled, "Hote villa" which will be shown in the North Carolina Museum of Art as part of the Fourtieth North Carolina Artists Exhibition that will take place during December.

After December the exhibition will go on a national, one-year tour.
